JOTTINGS.

—The Railway firemen will parade on October 14th.

—"Hamlet," is booked for Music Hall for October 7th.

—"Captain Swift", the Madison Square success will be played at Music Hall to-night.

—The Y. M. C. A. reception to the members to this evening promises to be a great success.

—The young Crescents, of Plainfield and the Young Americans, of Dunellen will play a game of base ball next Saturday afternoon on the Evans grounds.

—Every effort ought to be made to push the Watson liquor case, in Justice to the people in his section, whose families are effected by his place in their midst.

—A meeting of the Chautauqua Circle of the Congregational church is called for this evening at eight o'clock in the church parlor, to organize and arrange for the year's work.

—Chief Carey yesterday afternoon took Richard Elwood, a tramp, to Elizabeth to serve out a five days sentence imposed by Judge Stillman for being drunk and disorderly.

—Elsewhere Schwed Brothers, the clothiers, have a word to say to our readers about Fall and Winter clothing. This enterprising firm are always awake to the needs of our people in their line, and are sure they can always please those who favor them.

—Charles Smith, "Dutchy", of the Middlebrook Club, and one of the most popular members of that organization, was among those who attended at the shooting grounds at Marion yesterday and should be among the winners to-morrow.—Perth Amboy Herald, Sept. 30th.

—Such of our citizens as are engaged in the liquor business and are disposed to defy and particularly to inspect the laws are not included in any strictures we may have to make on those who willfully violate them. The violators are the same as any other class of criminals. They are even worse, since they humanity laid many others to crime. The laws for regulating the liquor traffic, are altogether too lenient to the saloon-keeper, considering the amount of harm he is continually doing, in the destruction of human life and happiness. But of late, the laws have been made, and since the business is declared by our law makers a lawful one, those who respect the laws are entitled to some consideration over those who defy them. It is against these who defy them we array ourselves to help our law officers to do their duty.

WESTFIELD WHISPERS.

Interesting Items Concerning Prominent Neighbors.

Ruth Mae Morse has presented the Sunday school of the new M. E. Chapel at Locust Grove, with a library for the Primary Department.

The Union Sunday school at Locust Grove will be continued at the school house as before, under the efficient superintendence of R. Pearce Gronow.

About the darkest public road crossing on the Central Railroad, is at Broad street. The lamp on the south side is hidden behind the trees, and just a little way down Clark street too far away to give light at the crossing, making it difficult for strangers to drive over the track on a dark night.

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

Frederick Mayer, the Bayonne agent and collector for Mentz, Rothstein & Bro., had been missing since last Wednesday. He is a popular citizen and about thirty-five years old. He is a bachelor and lives in Jersey City.

Marcus R. Richards, the Republican nominee for Mayor of Newark, yesterday sent the letter of acceptance to the chairman of the committee notifying committee. He pledges himself to give his entire time and best ability to the duties of the office if elected.

County Health Inspector Salstonstall has made a complaint against Charles Henning, a veterinary surgeon of Elizabeth, for violating a New Jersey Union Bill, it is alleged, has been practicing medicine without a diploma. Henning has a remedy for consumption, which he prescribes to patients.

John Smith, a shoemaker, who somewhat resembles the picture of General Boulanger, made a spectacle of himself on Newark avenue, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon. Mounted on a horse he was arrested on a charge of intoxication and disorderly conduct. He was taken to the police station, where he was locked up.

Yesterday upon the information of two women he was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. The girl, Elizabeth Abbey, age fifteen, a half-witted girl who lives with her widowed mother at No. 69 Poplar street. The girl was sent for treatment to the Police Justice, and Smith was committed for trial.

Colonel Charles A. de Arnaud, a wealthy resident of Rutherford, who was arrested on Saturday, charged by Michael Brady, a former servant, with assault and battery, was released from jail yesterday, the case being dismissed by Justice Haywood. Brady testified that Colonel de Arnaud had assaulted him because he had given information against a neighbor who had been an accused of arson. The Colonel denied the charge.

George Offer, the Union Hill tailor who attempted to kill his wife and then committed suicide, from jealousy, was buried yesterday. The funeral expenses were paid by William Peters, the wealthy brewer, who is Mrs. Offer's brother. Mrs. Offer is gradually gaining, and it is thought that she cannot recover. Mrs. Peterling, a neighbor, who has been caring for some time, died suddenly yesterday morning. It is believed that the fright caused by the tragedy hastened her death.

THE FRAZEE LEE WILL.

To Be Contested Before a Struck Jury.

The Frazee Lee will contest, which is probably promises to rival the famous case of Jaradyce versus Jaradyce, is to come up next Tuesday in the Union County Court, when a struck jury will try the case. The will was between the Scotch Plains Baptist Church, to whom the miser and hermit, Frazee Lee, of Plainfield, bequeathed the bulk of his property, worth $200,000, and the hermit's natural heirs, Ezra and Daniel Hatfield, who claim that the bequest to the church was made under his will. The claimants are uncles of the deceased and are respectively eighty-nine and ninety-two years old. Residents of Plainfield and Scotch Plains were excluded by mutual consent from the jury, which has been picked out from the other townships of the county.

R. V. Lindabury represents the contestants, and Jackson & Codington, of Plainfield the church. Mr. Lindabury says that his clients made a perfectly square offer of settlement by dividing the estate, but the church authorities refused.

Local men of our readers may have forgotten the details of this case, we repeat the story below:

Frazee Lee, an aged hermit and miser of Plainfield, died leaving hoarded wealth amounting to about $200,000, which he bequeathed to the Baptist church in Scotch Plains, better known as Fanwood. When the hermit's uncles, Ezra and Daniel Hatfield, aged respectively eighty-nine and ninety-two years, and who are his sole heirs, learned of their riches and the disposition made of them they filed a suit with the Surrogate of the Union county against admitting the will to probate. Then began the taking of testimony for both sides before a special Master in Chancery. At one period the taking of evidence was discontinued, as the parties to the suit indulged in a deal of corporandi, but these efforts came to naught and the fight was resumed more bitterly than ever.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. John Limbarger and Lewis Kline of this city spent yesterday along the banks of the Raritan and returned last night with several fine bass.

Harry, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Keyes, died at the residence of his parents on Richmond street Sunday afternoon, of membraceous croup. The funeral services were held at his late residence this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Interment was made in Somerville.

Mr. A. C. Baldwin and wife and son, of Park avenue, returned last evening from a two months' outing, spending part of the time at Wilburton-by-the-Sea, and part among the Berkshire Hills, in Massachusetts, where Mr. Baldwin met his brother from Chicago. Both became boys again among their native hills. Mr. Baldwin returns with renewed health, but although essentially retired from active business has large interests which keep him active. He is much interested in the proposed water works scheme for Plainfield. He is opposed to any scheme calculated to load us down with debt, and says we can get all the water we want for a million dollars, and pertinent thereto quotes the following parody on an old rhyme.

"Broad is the road that leads to debt,
And thousands walk together there.
Proper water is the road to health,
And but few there be who are found there."

Mrs. Otto Fullgraff, of New York, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Henry Stanton, of Prospect place, North Plainfield. The Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Discovery, to the building up of which he gave twenty of the best years of his life and thousands of dollars from his own private means. Dr. Fullgraff's book of blank death certificates always in danger of mildew from now on. To mention writing he is a bachelor. He will put an electric light down your throat locate a laryngeal difficulty, and effect a cure by topical treatment with incredible celerity. He is artistic in his practice, as well as thorough."

The Jersey Coast is Slowly Sinking.

The late Prof. Cook, the eminent State geologist, in a statement made a short time before his death, gives little comfort to those who desire to make their Summer home on our New Jersey coast. He shows by facts and figures to prove that the ground is gradually sinking and the sea is surely encroaching upon the land. Within a short period of geological time there has been a sinking of the coast or a rise of the water level to an extent of from ten to twenty feet. If this keeps on Long Branch, with Asbury Park, and many other Summer resorts will have to move inland, for the places that know them now will soon become a playground for the gray old sea.

Collided at Highland Park.

Last evening about 8 o'clock, a colic to which Mr. Wallace Rolfe was driving collided with Mr. Hughes' horse and wagon at the residence of Mr. R. W. Hughes by the latter's light wagon containing five drunken New Brunswickers returning from the Florida Avenue ball parks. The axle of the colic was broken and one wheel was knocked off the New Brunswick wagon. The occupants of the latter were very profane and abusive, threatening Mr. Walker with a terrible conspicuous. They were, however, bewildered to go home thus disturbing the neighborhood.—New Brunswick Home News.

A New Club Organized.

"The Batchelors Club" is the name of a new club organized in the Fourth ward. The rooms, which are very neatly furnished, are situated over Stelle's drug store. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—David J. Carney.
Secretary—John L. Force.
Treasurer—Adam C. Blair.

Saturday's Trot.

John Chandler's "Rambo", Henry Hayes' "Andy", and William Vandyckhoff's "Pat Whalen" trotted a heat each back of the Gentleman's Driving Park, on Park avenue Saturday afternoon. The best was won by "Rambo".

THE PROPOSED STREET RAILWAY.

Another Meeting at Citizens Last Night to Advance the Best Electric Storage System.—A Company to be Organized.

A meeting was held last night at the Association room, over the City National Bank, with a view to interesting the legal number of stockholders in the Electric Railway project so that if possible the company might be incorporated before the next meeting of the Council and then be ready to make formal application for the franchise, which cannot be granted to an individual under the laws of New Jersey.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. J. B. Coward, and Mr. John W. Murray was elected Chairman, Mr. Coward acting as Secretary.

After some preliminary remarks Mr. Murray called upon Mr. Daft to explain the proposed method of working in detail, together with the estimated cost of construction and maintenance, with probable earnings.

In reply Mr. Daft described at length how the road would be operated, giving the cost of each item and stating the probable earning capacity as estimated from a large number of similar instances elsewhere, concluding with an explanation that the route selected was the result of patient canvassing and appeared to be the only practicable one to start with, though after the road was in operation other branches would doubtless be required, particularly the Somerset street spur which he regarded as a necessity of the immediate future.

After remarks by Mr. Vanderbeek, Mr. Crane, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Thompson, Mr. J. W. Morrison, Mr. Elias Pope and others, the following resolution proposed by Mr. Marsh was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this meeting is heartily in favor of the project for an electric railway in Plainfield, and believes that the best interests of the city will be subserved by carrying out the project.

The meeting was then adjourned without date.

It is probable that the requisite number of incorporators will be obtained this week and the papers filed without delay.

Petitioning for Clemency.

George Sanders, of North Plainfield, is having a petition circulated asking for the clemency of the Somerset county court in passing sentence upon him for robbing his employers, Messrs. Rice & Co., the grocers, corner of Dover and Emily streets, of large sums of money.

The robbery was systematic, and extended over a period of several years, during which time Sanders used religion as a cloak for his villainy, and, even while he was posing as a moral young man, was deliberately robbing his employers. The saloons may be responsible for much of the crimes we have to contend with, but this is not one of such cases, since he was understood never to frequent saloons at all. Chief Carey, who had so much trouble to unearth Sanders's rascality, and put him where he stays calculated to defeat the ends of justice and to prevent adequate punishment. People are generally disposed to be charitable when they are not themselves the victims, even though their thoughtless sympathy may sometimes disgust the officers of the law.

Hurlbut Chautauqua Circle.

A public meeting of the Hurlbut Circle, C. L. S. C., for organization and election of officers, will be held in the parlor of the Young Men's Christian Association, on East Front street, Thursday evening, Oct. 3d, at 7:45 o'clock.

The original Hurlbut Circle, the first in Plainfield, was organized by Dr. Hurlbut at his home Sept. 27th, 1883, with 45 members. Sept. 1st, 1884, circle No. 2 was formed by him with 40 members. The two were united in the Fall of 1889 as the Hurlbut Circle.

The circle has always been strictly yet independent, and it is the desire so to keep it.

We will be glad to welcome, at this meeting, all friends or strangers desiring to join with us in the readings for the coming year.

ROBERT GORTON, President.

The Union County Republican League.

The Union County Republican League has been called by its executive committee to meet Friday evening next, at the district rooms, Arcade, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, and to take such action as may be necessary in fully organizing for the coming campaign.

It is urged that every member of the League be present.

There will also be some action looking to a full attendance at the Republican League convention to be held at the Temple Opera House in Elizabeth Oct. 15th.

The League did splendid work last year, and there is now abundant opportunity to do as well or even much better.

Accidents at Ponds.

John Whalen, a young man employed in the foundry of the Pond Machine and Tool Works had his left foot badly crushed yesterday afternoon by a large core falling on it. The limb is badly swollen and Mr Whalen is unable to walk.

Patrick Mack, another young man employed in the foundry of the same works was painfully burned Saturday by falling on some hot castings.

To Beautify the Depot Park.

The trees in the park at the North avenue depot are being cut down. A new and improved fence will be erected around the park and flowers and plants will be set out. It is the intention of the railroad company to make it one of the prettiest along the line of the Central Railroad.

To Go to Bayonne City.

At a meeting of Saplyr Hook and Ladder Company, held last evening, the members decided to accept the invitation of the Bayonne fire department to participate in the firemen's parade, at that place next Tuesday. The Plainfielders will leave on the 12:07 train.

Mr. Marsh Dissents from the Counsellors' Imputations.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—On behalf of the plaintiff, permit me to dissent from the remarks concerning the county court in yesterday's report of the Watson trial. Whether revenue in the county courts were frequent or frequent, the imputation of the court's sympathy with violators of the law, or lack of impartiality in administering the law, is wholly unfounded and deserves censure. As an officer of that court, and as counsel for this city, I denounce the imputation as utterly groundless and call upon you to make this statement as public as the article referred to.

Furthermore, the fact is that city court judgments have been as a rule, affirmed; reversals have been the exception and have generally resulted from the spiriting away of witnesses whose evidence secured the conviction below. CRAIG A. MARSH.

Dated October 1, 1889.

[We are obliged to Mr. Marsh for the explanation. We intended rather to convey the understood confidence of the counsellors who violate the law that they were certain of acquittal in our county courts rather than to convey any reflection on the officials, except so far as the confidence of the counsellors is justified. Mr. Marsh is a prosecuting officer, and explains that the "spiriting away of witnesses" is "the spirit in away of the witnesses". He's there any law to guard against that? We believe we heard that very thing spoken of in the Watson case and are glad that Mr. Marsh explains the matter so as to set us and our courts right.—Ed.]

—Charles Smith, "Dutchy", of the Middlesex Gun Club, and one of the most popular members of that organization, was among those who attended at the shooting grounds at Marion yesterday and should be among the winners to-morrow.—Perth Amboy Herald, Sept. 26th.

—Such of our citizens as are engaged in the liquor business and are disposed to fully and particularly respect the laws are not included in any strictures we may have to make on those who willfully violate them. The violators of the same as any other class of criminals. They are even worse, since they necessarily lead many others to crime. The laws for regulating the liquor traffic, are altogether too lenient to the saloon-keeper, considering the amount of harm he is continually doing, in the destruction of human life and happiness. But of all evils choose the least, and since that is considered by many by law tolerated, is lawful one, those who respect the laws are entitled to some consideration over those who defy them. It is simply those who defy them to arm themselves to help our law officers to do their duty.

WESTFIELD WHISPERS.

Interesting Items Concerning Plainfield's Neighbors.

Ruth Mae Morse has presented the Sunday school of the new M. E. Chapel at Locust Grove, with a library for the Primary Department.

The Union Sunday school at Locust Grove will be continued at the school house as before under the efficient superintendence of E. Pearson Greaves.

About the darkest public road crossing on the Central Railroad, is at Broad street. The lamp on the south side is almost hidden behind the trees, and the one on the corner of Clark street too far away to give light at the crossing, making it difficult for teamsters to drive over the track on a dark night.

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

Frederick Mayer, the Bayonne agent and collector for Monroe Eckstein's brewery, has been missing since last Wednesday. He is a married man of about thirty-five years old. He has a wife and two children.

Marcus B. Richards, the Republican nominee for Mayor of Newark, yesterday sent his letter of acceptance to the committee of the nominating convention. He pledges himself to give his entire time and best ability to the duties of the office if elected.

County Health Inspector Sabrosatall has made a complaint against Henry Hemsley, a veterinary surgeon of No. 430 Palisade avenue, Union Hill, who, it is alleged, has been practicing medicine without a license. Hemsley has a remedy for rheumatism, which he prescribes to patients.

John Smith, a shoemaker, who somewhat resembles the picture of General Boulanger, keeps a shop at No. 160 Orange street, Newark. Yesterday upon the information of his wife, Smith was arrested on the charge of secreting and grossly abusing Minnie A. Abbey, age fifteen, a half-witted girl who lives with her widowed mother at No. 46 Borden street. The girl narrated her treatment to the Police Justice, and Smith was committed for trial.

Colonel Charles A. de Arnaud, a wealthy resident of Rutherford, who was arrested on Saturday, charged by Michael Brady, a former servant, with assault and battery, was released from jail yesterday, the case being dismissed by Justice Hayward. Brady testified that Colonel de Arnaud had assaulted him because he refused to make a statement incriminating a neighbor who had been accused of arson. The Colonel denied the charge.

George Offer, the Union Hill tailor who attempted to kill his wife and then committed suicide, was buried yesterday. The funeral services were paid by William Peters, the wealthy brewer, who is Mrs. Offer's brother. Mrs. Offer is gradually sinking, and it is thought that she cannot recover. Mrs. Feberling, a neighbor, who has been ailing for some time, died suddenly yesterday morning. It is believed that the fright caused by the tragedy hastened her death.

THE FRAZEE LEE WILL.

To Be Contested Before a Struck Jury.

The Frazee Lee will contest, which for probability promises to rival the famous case of Jarkedyne versus Jarkedyne, is to come up next Tuesday in the Union County Court, when a struck jury picked out will try the issue between the Scotch Plains Baptist Church, to whom the miser and hermit, Frazee Lee, of Plainfield, bequeathed the bulk of his property, worth $500,000, and the hermit's natural heirs, Ezra and Daniel Hatfield, who claim that the testator was insane when he made his will. The claimants are uncles of the deceased and are respectively eighty-nine and ninety-two years old. Residents of Plainfield and Scotch Plains were excluded by mutual consent from the jury, which has been picked out from the other townships of the county. R. V. Lindabury represents the contestants, and Jackson & Codington, of Plainfield the church, Mr. Lindabury says that his clients made a perfectly square offer of settlement by dividing the estate, but the church authorities refused.

Lest some of our readers may have forgotten the details of this case, we repeat the story below:

Frazee Lee, an aged hermit and miser of Plainfield, died leaving hoarded wealth amounting to about $300,000, which he bequeathed to the Baptist church at Scotch Plains, better known as Fanwood. When the hermit's uncles, Ezra and Daniel Hatfield, aged respectively eighty-nine and ninety-two years, and who are his sole heirs, learned of their riches and the disposition made of them they filed a caveat with the Surrogate of Union county against admitting the will to probate. Then began the taking of testimony before Elder Stillman, a special Master in Chancery. At one period the taking of evidence was discontinued, as the parties to the suit intimated a desire to compromise, but these efforts came to naught and the fight was resumed more bitterly than ever.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. John Limberger and Lewis Kline of this city spent yesterday along the banks of the Raritan and returned last night with seventeen fine bass.

Harry, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kenyon, died at the residence of his parents on Richmond street Sunday afternoon, of membranaceous croup. The funeral services were held at his late residence this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Interment was made in Somerville.

Mr. A. C. Baldwin and wife and son, of Park avenue, returned last evening from a two months' outing, spending part of the time at Wilburton-by-the-Sea, and part with friends at Marion. Yesterday and to-day Mr. Baldwin met his brother from Chicago. Both became boys again among their native hills. Mr. Baldwin returns with renewed vigor and although ostensibly retired from active business has large interests which keep him active. He is also a leading advocate for the proposed water-works scheme for Plainfield. He is opposed to any scheme calculated to lead us into debt and increase our taxes, and pertinent thereto quotes the following parody on an old rhyme.

"Broad is the road that leads to debt,
And thousands walk together there.
Prompt payment is the narrow rut,
And few there be that ever find there."

Mrs. Otto Fullgraff, of New York, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Henry Stanton, of Prospect place, North Plainfield. The Woman's Cycle, has the following to say concerning another sister: "An amateur of exceeding promise is Florence Auld, of No. 6 Lexington avenue. She is the young daughter of a remarkably successful doctor, Otto Fullgraff, the founder of the famous old Bond Street Dispensary, to the building up of which he gave twenty of the best years of his life and thousands of dollars from his own private means. Dr. Fullgraff's book of blank death certificates always in danger of mildew from non-use. To musical artists he is a benefactor. He will put an electric light down your throat locate a laryngeal difficulty, and effect a cure by topical treatment with incredible celerity. He is artistic in his practice, as well as thorough."

The Jersey Coast is Slowly Sinking.

The late Prof. Cook, the eminent State geologist, in a statement made a short time before his death, for the benefit of those who desire to make their Summer homes on our New Jersey coast. He shows by indisputable evidence that the ground is gradually sinking and the sea is surely encroaching upon the land. Within a short period of geological time there has been a sinking of the coast or a rise of the water level to an extent of from ten to twenty feet. If this keeps on Long Branch and Asbury Park, and many other Summer resorts will have to move inland, for the places that know them now will soon become a playground for the gray old sea.

Collided at Highland Park.

Last evening about 8 o'clock, a sulky in which Mr. Walters, of Plainfield, who was riding through Highland Park, was run into opposite the residence of Mr. R. W. Hughes by a light wagon containing five drunken Negroes driven by another Negro. The horse in the wagon was the property of Mr. Harris Grove clam baks. The axle of the sulky was broken and one wheel was knocked off the wagon. Walters had a shaking of the nerves, but was not injured. The occupants of the wagon were very profane and abusive, threatening Mr. Walters, but, with a horrible countenance. They were, however, to drunk to do more than disturbed the neighborhood. —New Brunswick Home News.

A New Club Organized.

"The Bachelors Club" is the name of a new club organized last evening. The club rooms, which are very neatly furnished, are situated on Somerset street. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—David J. Carney.
Secretary—Joseph Lee.
Treasurer—Adam C. Blair.

Saturday's Trot.

John Chandler's "Bamby," Henry Hayes' "Andy", and William VanBrekin's "Sag" will trot a mile heat on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon. The heat was won by "Bamby".

THE PROPOSED STREET RAILWAY.

Another Meeting at Chimney Rock Night to Advance the Bath Electric Storage System.—A Company to be Organized.

A meeting was held last night at the Association room, over the City National Bank with a view to interesting the legal member of incorporators in the Electric Railway project so that if possible the company might be incorporated before the next meeting of the Legislature, so as to be ready to make formal application for the franchise, which cannot be granted to an individual under the laws of New Jersey.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. J. B. Coward, and Mr. John W. Murray was elected Chairman, Mr. Coward acting as Secretary.

After some preliminary remarks Mr. Murray called upon Mr. Daft to explain the proposed method of working in detail, together with the estimated cost of construction and maintenance, with possible earnings.

In reply Mr. Daft described at length how the road would be operated, giving the cost of each item and stating the probable earning capacity as estimated from a large number of similar instances elsewhere, concluding with the opinion that the route selected was the result of patient canvassing and appeared to be the only practicable one to start with, though after the road was in operation other branches would doubtless be required, particularly the Somerset street spur which he regarded as a necessity of the immediate future.

After remarks by Mr. Vanderbeek, Mr. Craig A. Mastb, Mr. Thompson, Mr. T. W. Morrison, Mr. Elias Pope and others, the following resolution proposed by Mr. Marsh was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this meeting is heartily in favor of the project to establish an electric railway in Plainfield, and believes that the best interest of the city will be subserved by carrying out the project.

The meeting was then adjourned without date.

It is probable that the requisite number of incorporators will be obtained this week and the papers filed without delay.

Petitioning for Clemency.

George Sanders, of North Plainfield, is having a petition circulated asking for the clemency of the Somerset county court in passing sentence upon him for stealing his employers, Messrs. Rice & Co., the grocers, corner of Duer and Emily streets, of large sums of money.

The robbery was systematic, and extended over a period of several years, during which time Sanders used religion as a cloak for his villainy, and, even while he was posing as a moral young man, was deliberately falsifying his accounts. The saloons may be responsible for much of the crime we have to contend with, but this is not one of such crimes. He was understood among his frequent saloons at all. Chief Carey, who had so much trouble to unearth Sanders's rascality, does not relish any steps calculated to defeat the ends of justice and to prevent adequate punishment. People are generally disposed to be charitable when they are not deceived in the victims, even though their thoughtless sympathy may sometimes disgust the officers of the law.

Hurlbut Chautauqua Circle.

A public meeting of the Hurlbut Circle, C. L. S. C., for organization and election of officers, will be held in the parlor of the Young Men's Christian Association, on East Front street, Thursday evening, Oct. 3d, at 7:45 o'clock.

The original Hurlbut Circle, the first in Plainfield, was organized by Dr. Hurlbut at his home Sept. 27th, 1883, with 45 members. Sept. 17th, 1884, circle No. 2 was formed by him with 40 members. The two were united in the Fall of 1889 as the Hurlbut Circle.

The circle has always been friendly yet independent, and it is the desire so to keep it.

We will be glad to welcome, at this meeting, all friends or strangers desiring to join with us in the readings for the coming year.

ROSSEY GORTON, President.

The Union County Republican League.

The Union County Republican League has been called by its executive committee to meet Friday evening next, at the district court room, Arcade, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, and to take such action as may be necessary in fully organizing for the coming campaign.

It is urged that every member of the League be present.

There will also be some action looking to a full attendance at the Republican League convention to be held at the Temple Opera House in Elizabeth Oct. 19th.

The League did splendid work last year, and there is now abundant opportunity to do as well or even much better.

Accidents at Ponds.

John Whalen, a young man employed in the foundry of the Pond Machine and Tool Works had his left foot badly crushed yesterday afternoon by a large core falling on it. The limb is badly swollen and Mr Whalen is unable to use it.

Patrick Mack, another young man employed in the foundry of the same works was painfully burned Saturday by falling on some hot castings.

To Beautify the Depot Park.

The trees in the park at the North avenue depot are being cut down. A new and improved fence will be erected around the park and flowers and plants will be set out. It is the intention of the railroad company to make it one of the prettiest along the line of the Central Railroad.

To Go to Bayonne City.

At a meeting of Sophyr Hook and Ladder Company, held last evening, the committee decided to accept the invitation of the Bayonne fire department to participate in the firemen's parade at that place next Thursday afternoon. The Plainfielders will leave on the 12:07 train.

Mr. Marsh Dissents from the Rumsellers' Imputations.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—On behalf of the plaintiff, permit me to dissent from the remarks concerning the county court in yesterday's report of the Watson trial. If better reversals in the county courts were frequent or infrequent, the suggestion of the court's sympathy with violators of the law, or lack of impartiality in administering the law, is wholly unfounded and deserves censure. As an officer of that court, and as counsel for this city, I denounce the imputation as utterly groundless and call upon you to make this statement as public as the article referred to.

Furthermore, the fact is that city court judgments have been as a rule, affirmed; reversals having been the exception and have generally resulted from the spiriting away of witnesses whose evidence secured the conviction below. CRAIG A. MARSH.

Dated October 1, 1889.

[We are obliged to Mr. Marsh for the explanation. We turned to Mr. Craig to convey the understood confidence of the rumsellers who violate the law that they are almost sure of acquittal in our county courts rather than to convey any reflection on the officials, except so far as the confidence of the rumsellers is justified. Mr. Marsh is a member of the bar, and explains that the trouble is due rather to "the spiriting away of the witnesses". Isn't there room for law to punish that? We believe we know what the general opinion is in regard to these cases, and are glad that Mr. Marsh explains the matter so as to set us and our courts right.—Ed.]

Prospects for a busy fall and winter trade are still active almost everywhere, so far as boom.

The greatest gas well in the world has been struck in Ohio. This is what might have been expected.

Col. W. F. Cody and his great Wild West show will leave a permanent trace in Paris. Boss Bonheur has been industriously making studies from his Indians and elk and buffalo for future great animal paintings.

The inconvenience to which the public was subjected by the great strike in London will have the effect of making the city itself buy and run the docks. It was almost as if a gas or water company's employes should strike and leave a city in darkness or without water.

And now they say that we, the people of the United States, own the fastest man-of-war afloat in the gallant new cruiser Baltimore. Under not particularly favorable conditions she made 20.2 knots an hour on her trial trip out to sea from the Cramp shipyards at Philadelphia. Well, we have the Baltimore and the Vesuvius anyhow.

Wyoming.

A very interesting point has come up in Wyoming. In this territory women vote at all elections. Contrary to the popular supposition that the sex do not want to vote, the Wyoming ladies do vote enthusiastically, and early and often. A convention met in Cheyenne not long since to prepare a state constitution. This winter Wyoming, with a constitution all ready for statehood, will ask congress to admit her to the Union. But the interesting point is this: It is said a majority of the men of the territory are opposed to woman suffrage. It, however, they put a clause in the new constitution restricting suffrage to male citizens, the women will be up in fight against adoption of the constitution, and will overthrow it. So that if Wyoming comes into the Union it must come with woman suffrage, as matters stand now.

Business Prophecies.

Samuel Benner, an Ohio farmer, many years ago wrote a curious book entitled "Benner's Prophecies." It reflected good and bad business years, and was based on the principle that events of all kinds follow each other in cycles. There were regular periods of advance and depression in prices. Benner's book contained tables showing the periods of rise and fall in the prices of corn, cotton, pork, iron, etc., with indications for the future. The number of times the prophecies hit the mark was noticeable.

Mr. Benner still survives and has published a new edition of his book. He says that 1889 and 1890 will be booming years, years of great speculative and business activity, followed in 1891 by a panic. Then depression will set in again and last from 1892 to 1897, the century to close with a tremendous trade boom, and go out in glory.

Common Sense in Education.

A teacher writes to The Philadelphia Times asking, apparently in some surprise, whether a teacher is expected to teach pupils manners. Judging from the manners of school children in the streets and elsewhere the question is not out of place to answer. The Times says decidedly—yes, and proceeds to tell why:

If the object of a school education be to fit children for useful and successful lives when they become men and women, we can think of no part of their instruction upon which more stress should be laid than upon that which relates to deportment. When there are a dozen applicants for a position in a business house, the best mannered boy or youth of the lot is invariably selected. Well mannered boys rarely remain long in the messenger service in our cities, for the reason that business men find it to their interest to secure their services. The best mannered salesmen and salswomen sell the most goods, and are in greatest demand. Good manners have made their way in politics, in the professions, in business life and in society to a far greater degree than the learning of the schools, though the latter may be equally efficient and quite as competent in all respects save that of deportment.

Then The Times proceeds to remark, very justly, that the behavior of many school children in public would lead an ordinary observer to the conclusion that good breeding was a lost art.

In the old fashioned school days it was not uncommon for the teacher to set apart Friday afternoon for teaching deportment, "manners," as it was called. Children were at least taught there how to address their elders properly, and how to enter a room and make a bow. If we are ever to have decently mannered children among the masses we must come back to the old custom in some shape.

It is a teacher's place to instruct children in politeness, to teach them to be gentle and courteous and thoughtful of others. For good manners are a part of good morals. It is really far more important that our children should be polite, honest and kindly than that they should know what a participial adjective is. If we can't have both let us have the politeness and let the technical grammar go. At least, any teacher alive has time to instruct her pupils that the cardinal principle of politeness is the golden rule.

MORNING NEWS.

ANOTHER PAGE TURNED.

Sheriff Flack and Others Have Been Indicted.

THE GRAND JURY HAS REPORTED.

The Crime of Conspiracy Is Said to Have Been Committed by the Alleged Conspirators—Grave Charges of Fraud, Collusion and Deceit Are Made.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—As heretofore removed the grand jury has reported indictments for conspiracy against Sheriff James A. Flack, William Flack, his son; Civil Justice Ambrose Monell, Joseph Meeks, the referee; George D. Hart and Max Raymond, in the notorious divorce case of Flack vs. Flack, in which Mrs. Flack is alleged to have fraudulently obtained a divorce from his wife. In presenting the indictment the foreman of the jury read a remarkable document, copious extracts from which are given below:

The Laws Defied.

This alleged action for divorce, from the first step to the final decree, was characterized not only by great, inexplicable haste, but by fraud, deceit and collusion. That such an action could be so conducted, facilitated and concluded in one of our highest courts of record, in the very shadow of public censure, and it behooves the judges and officers of our courts and all officials charged with the administration of justice to see to it that the practices do not prevail in other cases. We call the attention of the legislature and the courts to the fact that the present facilities of collusion as to the commission of adultery is expressly prohibited, yet an action of divorce may be instituted and consummated by the consent and collusion of the parties thereto.

The Referee Evil.

We consider that the practice of appointing referees in divorce cases is most pernicious, and is conducive to the very dangers and abuses which the Flack case has exposed. In public many should be heard by judges in open court, and all proceedings had under the immediate supervision of the judge, and the duties of calculating the records of the proceedings should be open to the public. While we recognize the reason of the rule requiring the filing of such records, yet we are of the opinion that there is less danger from the publicity of such records than there is from the secrecy.

More Judges Needed.

The sacredness of the family tie and the morals of the community are of paramount importance, and should, through judicial favoritism, nor judicial negligence must they be imperilled. If there are not enough judges to transact the business of our courts of record, we need more; but it is judges and not referees who are elected and obligated to discharge judicial functions.

We call the attention of the judges of the court of common pleas to the system of entering minutes and filing papers observed in the office of the clerk of that court. Such system has, in the Flack case at least, shown itself susceptible either of gross negligence or wilful falsification. Such a system of the keeping of public should be as reliable and truthful as human skill and integrity can make them.

Hard Raps for Attorneys.

We call the attention of the bar to the dangerous practice of attorneys allowing their names to be used by others in which they have not been retained, and which in reality are conducted by other attorneys; and in this connection we find that Benjamin Max Steinhardt has permitted his name to be used, and while his whole conduct in the case shows an absence of professional honor, yet, though he may have been imposed upon, he is deserving of censure. We also call the attention of the general terms of the supreme court of the department to the unprofessional conduct in this case of two of the officers of that court, Ambrose Monell and Joseph Meeks.

Judge Bookstaver's Part.

It is obvious that the decree of divorce could not have been obtained without sanction of Judge Bookstaver. That sanction was obtained partly by deceit and imposition, and partly by either judicial negligence or judicial collusion. If by negligence, such was inexcusable; if by collusion, such was criminal. We have not yet determined which. His acts were the acts of a judge, performed in his judicial capacity. The law, we are advised, does not permit the impeachment as well as from private out for acts performed by him in his judicial capacity, of matters until acts be committed which are criminal. If he has instituted a proper tribunal, where judicial acts, if corrupt or criminal, may be inquired into.

The Crime Was Conspiracy.

We do not impute to Judge Bookstaver corrupt action in the sense of profit or gain—such action, a stone age or the only manner in which the bench has been shown in the Flack case, show a wicked and criminal conspiracy to be carried on and consummated under apparent sanction of law. This investigation has been laborious, complicated and full of intricacies. We are of opinion that among others the crime of conspiracy has been committed. The conspirators, from their position in life, their knowledge and experience have known that to so shape the facts that an understanding and discovery were made exceedingly difficult.

Papers Secured at the Action.

Bench warrants were issued for the sheriff and the others indicted with him and all will appear in court today except Civil Justice Monell, who is too ill to leave his bed and who will furnish bail for his subsequent appearance. The indictment charges the prisoners to be surprised at the action of the grand jury.

Booth and Modjeska at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—The first joint appearance of Edwin Booth and Mme. Modjeska as stars, and also the opening of their season took place at the Grand Opera house before a large and fashionable audience. The play selected, "The Merchant of Venice," Mr. Booth as Shylock and Mme. Modjeska as Portia, gave the actor opportunity of display in their talent as Shakespearian impersonators. The sale of seats for the engagement is, with one exception—that of Patti—the largest ever known in this city.

To Prison for Life.

DES MOINES, Oct. 1.—The Leader's Waterloo (Ia.) special says: M. E. Billings, who was convicted of murder in the second degree, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. He is a young man of display in their talent as Shakespearian impersonators. The sale of seats for the engagement is, with one exception—that of Patti—the largest ever known in this city.

The Cardinal Has Declined.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 1.—The dispatch from Ottawa, Ont., stating that Cardinal Gibbons declined the offer of the papal legate status to the memory of Monsigner Guigues, first bishop of Ottawa, on Oct. 8, in Ottawa, is erroneous. Cardinal Gibbons has declined the invitation to be present on account of pressing duties at home.

The fire entails a loss of $10,000.

He Pleaded Not Guilty.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—David Harf-ld the Richmond (Va.) pawnbroker, who was brought to this city on an indictment for bigamy, pleaded not guilty, and his default of $1,500 bail was sent to the Tombs.

EMPIRE STATE DEMOCRATS.

The Hill State, So Called, Will Probably Be the Ticket.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Democratic state convention bids fair to be as harmonious as was the Saratoga convention of last week. The delegates are all here, and the city presents a lively appearance. The state committee has heard the arguments of contestants, and the indications point to harmonious action in the convention. It does not appear to be any doubt but that the Hill slate, so called, will be nominated, viz.: For secretary of state, Elliott Danforth; attorney general, Charles F. Tabor; judge of the court of appeals, Denis O'Brien, and the renomination of State Engineer Bogart and Comptroller Wemple.

A hard fight is being waged by local Democrats and Republicans in behalf of William A. Beach for state treasurer, but the leaders say nothing can defeat Danforth for the office. In fact, the ticket may be said to be cut and dried. As a prominent leader puts it:

"We are going to show Mr. Platt that we are as united and as solid as was his convention."

The water supply of Syracuse is the thorn in the side of the local politicians, and it is with a view to allaying this wretched evil that the fight is being made for Beach.

It was a curious sight to see Gen. Curtis elbowing his political opponents at the Lafayette hotel. Mr. Curtis is probably rather the most conspicuous figure in the political lobby recalled that witnessed at conventions of the opposite party, so numerous were its followers among the Tammany and Irving hall braves. The state platform will thoroughly indorse Governor Hill's administration; reaffirm the national Democratic platform; declare that revenue reform is the paramount issue, and probably reiterate the last plank on that subject. The state committee has decided to recommend the selection of Lieutenant Governor Jones for temporary chairman of the convention.

A FRIGHTFUL COLLISION.

Fifty Persons Killed and Injured Between Naples and Tonzia.

ROME, Oct. 1.—Two express trains running in opposite directions, between Naples and Tonzia, collided with terrific force, resulting in a high rate of speed through a tunnel.

Twenty carriages were wrecked and fifty persons killed and injured.

An Alleged Perpetual Motion.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 1.—Richard Robillard, night engineer at one of the Pillsbury mills in this metropolis, has a very precious machine locked up in his house which he guards jealously. This piece of mechanism is, so Robillard says, the result of the problem of perpetual motion. At 2 o'clock the machine had been running for seven weeks. It required no fuel, and a little oil is all that is needed to keep it in shape. "The machine I have running now," said the inventor, "has a fly wheel ten inches in diameter. It will run two sewing machines. I will have completed by the end of the week a machine with a twenty-four inch wheel which will elevate 900 pounds. The machine requires a governor to regulate the speed, and can, of course, be stopped and started at will. I am now busy in taking steps to have his machine patented. He thinks he has made the discovery of the century."

A Syndicate After the Mills.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 1.—There seems to be no longer any doubt that Chicago capitalists are relative to the big financial deal regarding the mills and elevators is founded upon fact, and that ere long the property will be transferred to new purchasers. Investigations show that the syndicate held options on all the Minneapolis property mentioned. C. M. Harrington, the manager of the Van Dusen and Star elevator systems, says Mr. Mayer is right. I have signed an option contract, and he representing the syndicate, has put up a cash forfeit. No, I would not like to say when the deal will be closed. When consummated, which will assure you that the property has not yet been transferred.

Died from a Snake's Bite.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 1.—At Titusville, Fla., H. H. Adams, a postal clerk, accidentally stepped on a rattlesnake as he was walking on the public highway about midnight. The snake buried its fangs in Adams' leg. He twisted a handkerchief about the wound and hastened to a physician, who cupped the wound and administered antidotes. His efforts proved of no avail, and Adams after intense suffering died. He was originally from Montreal.

Grave Charges Against Munson.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—The Union charges that the superintendent of the Soldiers' Home, and compelled the veterans to turn the money over to him and helped defraud the institution. The article is based upon information furnished by a late inmate of the home, who said he was discharged because he refused to give up his check to Superintendent Munson.

Republican County Conventions.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Madison county Republican convention nominated A. D. Kennedy for county judge, H. M. Aylesworth for district attorney, and S. B. Morse for member of assembly. The Republicans of Genesee county, N. Y., have nominated Francis T. Miller, of Byron, for assembly, and Edward S. Wood, of Batavia, for district attorney.

A Sheriff Shot by Horse Thieves.

WAVERLY, Ia., Oct. 1.—Sheriff Hoxis, of Waterloo, was shot in the head at 7 p. m. by one of the horse thieves who were confined in the county jail at that place awaiting trial. The sheriff had just entered the jail to give the prisoners their supper, when one of them struck him down with a billet of wood. *All of them escaped and a large posse is in pur*suit.

ACCUSED OF PLAGIARISM

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's Reputation Attacked.

WHO WROTE "LORD FAUNTLEROY"

A Famous Book by a Famous Woman Alleged to Be a Plagiarism from Mrs. Winthrop's Novel "Wilfred"—Mrs. Burnett Says It an Advertising Scheme.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The savage scribes who are always after some famous author's scalp have at last got a grip on that of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett. They flatly accuse her of stealing the entire plot and most of the dialogue of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" from Mrs. A. C. Winthrop, an aspiring American lady who had appealed to her for advice and guidance. This startling accusation is based upon a letter dated Baltimore, July 1, which has been discussed during the past week at the Garrick and Athenaeum clubs, and which has just been published all over London on the authority of Mr. Saville Clarke, one of the best known literary reviewers and playwrights in London. He says that he received the letter from Washington from Mr. A. A. Hayes, to whom it was originally addressed.

"Wilfred" Was the Novel.

The review writer who makes this letter public says that it was sent to a literary paper in America, but it was suppressed through the influence of friends of Mrs. Burnett. The name of the novel from which "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is alleged to have been stolen is called "Wilfred." It was published in New York. The hero, Wilfred, is a very engaging boy; the son of a Capt. Ferrars, an officer of the English army, who made his father furious by marrying a French woman. Capt. Ferrars was disinherited by his father, and he and his wife, leaving their child, Wilfred, to be brought up by a benevolent woman, the sister of the nurse at the hospital, to which Mrs. Ferrars had gone to be confined. Through the agency of philanthropic member of parliament Wilfred is restored to his grandfather, the Earl of Chatteran, and goes to live with him. The old man is very rich.

Many Similar Passages.

Numbers of passages are quoted by Mr. Clarke from both "Wilfred" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" showing the same ideas presented in exactly similar language, and her treatment and sequence of every important incident in both novels. Mrs. Burnett, who is at present stopping in London, was quite unaware of the storm gathering about her head until a correspondent called upon her and informed her about the matter.

Mrs. Burnett Does Not Know Her.

"I have not the least idea who Mrs. Winthrop is," said Mrs. Burnett, "and not the slightest recollection of ever having given her any advice or of reading her books. I receive loads of letters every week asking for advice, some of which I try to answer, and I get scores of books asking for opinions, most of which I never even think of reading, because I have not the time.

A Shrewd Advertising Scheme.

"Everybody who knows me and my boy Vivian, knows that 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' is based upon his personality, that the dialogue is the reproduction of his actual chatter. Somebody named Winthrop may have written to me for advice and have afterwards sent me a book, but I have no recollection of it. Whoever she is, I congratulate her upon her shrewd scheme for getting an advertisement for her revised edition at my expense."

Cowhided by an Editor's Wife.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—William C. Young, floor walker for a Broadway dry goods house, was cowhided in the aisle of the store by Mrs. Baron, wife of Abraham Baron, the telegraph editor of The Westliche Post. Young's offense seemed to be in engaging himself to marry Miss Kellogg, a daughter of the indignant lady, while he still had a wife in England. Mrs. Baron plied the lash repeatedly, while a circle of undersiders gathered around to witness the fun. Young finally dashed from the store and escaped.

MINISTER DOUGLASS SAILS.

The Oaxipee Trouble Cleared Up—There Was No Race Prejudice.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Hon. Frederick Douglass and Mrs. Douglass sailed at 2 p. m. on the Kearsage for Hayti, where Mr. Douglass will officiate as United States minister.

A dispatch from Washington says: The report that Commander Kellogg was relieved from command of the Oaxipee at his own request, because Minister Frederick Douglass and party were to proceed to Hayti on her, and that Commander Evans, who succeeded him, reported the vessel's boilers in bad condition to prevent the voyage, is authoritatively denied. Commander Kellogg was relieved from the command of the Oaxipee Sept. 21, three days before it was known that Minister Douglass would proceed to Hayti on her. It was not Commander Evans, but Chief Engineer Robie, of the Norfolk navy yard, who reported the Oaxipee's boilers in bad condition. Commander Kellogg was relieved from command to proceed to Hayti and Robie took an opposite view. Secretary Tracy approved Chief Engineer Robie's views.

Secretary Tracy also denies the published statement to the effect that Commander Kellogg's relief from the command of the Oaxipee grew out an unpleasant personal interview at the department. Commander Kellogg asked to be relieved from active sea duty simply because he had been on sea duty nearly four years as commander, and desired to be passed on shore duty.

Leaving the Knights of Labor.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—The tin plate and sheet iron workers of Taunton, Mass., have decided to leave the Knights of Labor and organize an independent union. The immediate cause of the withdrawal is said to be the suppression of Jerry Collins, master 37 and the general officers to Cigarmakers' Local assembly 30. A mass meeting will be held at once to act upon the question of applying for membership in the Amalgamated Building Trades Council.

Preferred Death to Moving.

NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 1.—Daniel F. Raggles, of South Norwalk, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. Men were packing his furniture preparatory to moving to another house when a shot was heard and he would rather die than move. Shortly afterward a shot was heard in an adjoining room, and the old man's body was found in a pool of blood.

A Prohibitionist Nominee.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 1.—The Prohibition city convention has nominated Elias F. Morrow, a lawyer, for mayor. The platform urges the extermination of the liquor traffic in the interest of workingmen, and denounces the Republican and Democratic parties for the non-enforcement of the Sunday laws.

FATAL PISTOL DUEL.

An Editor and a Sheriff Shoot Each Other to Death.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 1.—The Times-Democrat's special from Robelline, La., says that C. McAlpin, sheriff of Vernon parish, was shot and killed by A. C. Poole, editor of The Vernon News, in a duel with pistols at 7 o'clock this morning. A newspaper controversy between the two men led to McAlpin being challenged by Poole to a duel. The sheriff paid no heed to the challenge and it was repeated.

Poole then entered the sheriff's office and uttered a verbal challenge. Both drew pistols, Poole firing first. McAlpin emptied his pistol into Poole's breast, killing him instantly. McAlpin died in a few hours from a wound in the abdomen.

Texas Fever at Erie.

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 1.—The Texas fever has broken out in the southwestern part of Erie with fatal effect. That section of the city was infested by a herd of Texas steers shipped here by Armour & Co. He could not extricate himself clear the rails the pilot of the engine struck and instantly killed him.

NEWS FROM OVER THE SEA

Ex-Queen Natalie's Home Coming.

KING ALEXANDER IS JEALOUS

It Is Stated That He Will Not Call Upon His Mother Without Ex-King Milan's Consent—Other Interesting Foreign Matter.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The enthusiastic welcome given to ex-Queen Natalie by the populace of Belgrade astonished—if, indeed, it did not dismay—the government officials, who sought to accentuate their displeasure at the persistance of the royal lady in discregarding their wishes respecting her visit to her son. The extent of the popular ovation was so great as to render the lack of courtesy on the part of the officials of the government unnoticeable and to move the ex-queen to tears. The houses along the principal streets, as well as the residences of the nobility and inhabitants of the better class, were profusely and beautifully decorated, and in all respects the reception surpassed anything of the kind that has ever been seen at the Servian capital.

Mme. Christich Did Not Decorate.

The most notable exceptions to the rule of decoration of private residences was that of Mme. Christich, the wife of the late Servian minister to Germany and mistress of ex-King Milan. This omission can be regarded by Natalie in no other light than as complimentary, since it is a matter of Servian court notoriety that the ex-queen took occasion to publicly express her detestation of Mme. Christich and her appreciation of the king's lack of decency in bringing his mistress into the presence of his wife that both were compelled to meet with confusion.

The Young King Is Jealous.

It is stated in official circles in Belgrade that the young king, Alexander, has become excessively jealous of his mother's popularity, but the courtesy shown to her by the Russian minister and others not over friendly to the present governing power of Servia will undoubtedly check any such manifestations from counseling him to resent the demonstration or to treat his mother with any marked lack of filial attention.

It is announced that King Alexander has refused to call upon his mother, ex-Queen Natalie, until he receives permission to do so from his father, ex-King Milan.

Rotterdam's Strike Failing.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 1.—The attempt of the Socialists to cause the strike of the Rotterdam dock laborers has failed utterly, and the strike itself is likely to take a similar turn, partly owing to their interference. The disturbed condition of the town is to be thoroughly guarded by troops and effectually overawed by the guns of war vessels moored in the river, under which armed forces can be landed at a moment's notice to prescribe any idea of success on the part of the strikers by violent means, and the ranks of the men who have taken the strikers' places are filling fast. Another batch of 2,000 arrived from London for the relief of the strikers, but aside from this the contributions to the strike fund have been surprisingly small.

The Cotton Ring Smashed.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A large number of operators and others interested in the cotton speculation in the United States Exchange at much earlier hour than usual, expecting the greatest crisis of later years owing to the corner in the September options expected to occur at noon today. The market for that option opened quietly at a decline of one point. Prices immediately dropped two points more and then steadied. The ninth settlement, thirty points under the highest price for that month. Mr. Steenstrand holds from 70,000 to 100,000 bales of cotton bought on that option, which on the day will be 5d. below the price obtained on Saturday. It is the general opinion that the cotton ring is utterly smashed.

England and the Conference.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A largely attended public meeting was held at Cambridge to what prospect interested in the fate of the debt gate to the maritime conference to be held in Washington. In a speech Mr. Hall said he trusted that the conference would result in the working of much needed reforms in international law. The fact that England, the mistress of the seas, attended a conference abroad to discuss matters showed her anxiety to further those reforms.

After Tanner's Vacant Seat.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Commissioner C. E. Brown of Ohio, who was appointed by Representative Butterworth, called on *Secretary Noble to dis*cuss the vacancy at the head of the pension bureau. Mr. Brown is probably the strong est candidate now in the field. Mr. C. Campbell, of Kansas, is actively pushing his claims, and Deputy Commissioner Smith is looking after his own interests. Mr. Noble is pretty well determined that Mr. Smith will not receive the appointment. In fact, Mr. Smith's transfer to some other government office is now freely discussed.

Chang Bade the President Good-by.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Chang Yen Hoon, the retiring Chinese minister, presented his successor, Li Hung Fang, to the president this morning. He was accompanied by Secretary Blaine and Shu Cheon Pon, first secretary of legation, and Liang Sheung, as interpreter. The new minister, who arrived in Washington last week, will be presented at an early date.

Representative Butterworth's Reception

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The reception tendered Representative Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, by Ohio Republicans and others was a great success and amounted to an ovation. Fully 3,000 people were present to welcome the Ohio congressman after his safe return from abroad.

A Militia Man Shot.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Oct. 1.—During target practice, Matthias Gruber, of Company B Fourth regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, was shot through the back and abdomen by Private Hunsicker. The coroner's jury exonerated Becker.

Steele Mackaye's New Play.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The first performance of Steele Mackaye's new play, "An Arran Knave," was given at the Chicago Opera house by Robert Robson and his company to a large audience.

More Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The president has appointed the following fourth class post masters: New Jersey—Succasunna, Josiah Meeker; Chatsenqay, Charles L. Bentley. Pennsylvania—Martinsburg, John May.

Young Blaine's Strange Call.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—It is said that James G. Blaine, jr., has called upon Miss

ELECTRICITY VERSUS HAYSEED.

Dr Baptist Cravens and His Ride on a City Car.

"Er I plead guilty, squire, kin I explain the circumstances?"

"The law allows you to make any statement you wish in your own defence, without pleading guilty."

"Thank ye. Well, squire, I'm Nahum Cravens from Hicksville, Miss. Jest got to town last night on the seven year. I'm a Dry Baptist, too, squire."

"You are charged with disorderly conduct, Mr. Cravens."

"Oh the gentleman down stairs see afore I come up. 'Twas this a-way, squire: I wanted to see them things an' animals at the Bloomin place, an' a policeman told me take a car car at Fifth and the postoffice. I seen a car astanding' thar without no mules or hosses to it, an' I sez:

"'Is this the' garden's car?'

"'Yes, sir; step aboard.'

"'What's your hosses, friend?' sez I, thinkin' I should have ter wait.

"'Don't have hosses,' sez the feller in blue clothes.

"'Mules, I reckon?' sez I, thinkin' he was jokin'.

"'No mules neither. Hurry up; it's a-goin to start,' sez he.

"'S'pose you work oxen on this line, eh?' sez I, because I was gittin' riled.

"'No, your old jay,' sez he, 'we don't work no oxen,' an he snappish like. 'You've got one second to get on.'

"I got aboard, squire, an' had hardly time to look about when the consarned thing gave a jump an' went allyin' along. By Jude, I didn't know what ter think. Whiz-e-e! whirr! ding-ding! I staggers out an' sez to the feller:

"'For land's sake, how do she go?'

"'Electricity,' sez he.

"'What is it?' sez I.

"'Up on the hill,' sez he.

"'How on airth does she get down hyar?' sez I.

"'Oh, rats! Go set down!' he sez.

"Just then I ketched sight of a pole reachin' up from the top of the car to a clothes line stretched along, and I sees into the trick. They were pullin' the dinged thing along with a sewin machine. Then sez I: 'Young man, I'm Nahum Cravens, a township trustee for seven year, an' I don't allow no city whippersnapper to fool with me, sir.'

"'Mister,' sez he, 'I know the rest. You fought like a pugilist and howled "Murder!" You are behind the march of civilization, and I'm afraid hopelessly so. Pay the man with the large diamond here $12, and go home and cultivate cabbages. Next!'"

When the township trustee called on the old soldier for his valise and umbrella afterward that battle scarred patriot offered the following sage suggestion:

"Mr. Cravens, don't be surprised at anything nowadays. These electricians are just rarin' loose. Between me an' you, Mister Cravens, it wouldn't surprise me a bit to wake up some morning an' find a whitaggin fuckin' up people in the cells I've been attendin' to for nine year last Thanksgiving. Give my compliments to Missus Cravens an' the family. Good-by, sir; good-by."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

My Pretty Typewriter.

My office of late has seemed brighter,
More cheerful by far than it was;
It may be the pretty typewriter
Who sits near my desk is the cause.

A radiant, dazzling young creature;
In typewriting circles a belle;
Although I'm unable to teach her
To punctuate rightly or spell.

Her mouth like a half opened rose is,
Her hair rivals gold in its hue,
Tip tilted her dear little nose is,
Her eyes are a heavenly blue.

I really should feel lost without her;
For, while there's no cause for alarm,
There's something attractive about her;
A thrilling, intangible charm.

Her typewritten letters are fearful,
With errors they thickly are strewed;
I scold her, and she becomes tearful,
And thinks I am awfully rude.

She breaks into silvery laughter
As soon as forgiven, and I've Rewritten no end of them after
She's gone—she leaves promptly at five.

My wife, who is somewhat suspicious,
Dropped into my office today,
And found—well, I thought it judicious
To send my typewriter away.

I really shall feel lost without her.
For while I decided no harm,
My wife noticed something about her
That filled her dear soul with alarm.

What the Other Girl Gets.

One of Denver's leading and wealthiest citizens has just built an elegant residence on Capitol Hill. It is intended as a wedding present to a daughter who is to be married soon. The gentleman who owns two lots adjoining those on which the house is erected. The younger daughter of the gentleman, upon being spoken to about the fine present her sister would receive, remarked:

"Yes, and we are going to put a sign on the two adjoining lots with these words on it: 'These lots go with the other girl.'"—Denver Times.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS.

Diamond half hoop rings find admirers.

New and pleasing patterns are out this fall in bar pins.

Silver belt buckles are worn not only on silver and leather belts but on ribbon ones as well.

Bracelets and bangles are in greater demand than ever, owing to present fashions in dress sleeves.

Very artistic enamel brooches simulate a spray of dogwood blossoms, in coloring as well as in form.

Many of the patterns seen in brooches are reproduced greatly enlarged in belt buckles and chatelaines.

Silver trimmed leather goods remain fashionable. Black leather is the standard, but all colors are employed.

A very striking belt buckle seen, simulated a large cluster of daisies with white enameled petals and gilt stamens and pistils.

The quaint and old-fashioned, the Victoria cluster, represent the most fashionable watch chains now in the market, for ladies' wear.

There is always more or less demand for initial and monogram jewelry, which is out this season in rustic, floral and other patterns.

Enamel brooches and scarf pins are produced which imitate to perfection the size, shape and color of nature's blooms. Nothing is wanting but the fragrance.

The fancy for wearing silver rings, which has been indulged in for some time past by men, it appears, still prevails. The snake rings, with jeweled eyes, are popular sorts.

A ring recently seen, very quaintly, and wrought in Greek style, consisted of a twisted gold circlet surmounted by two lions, one at either end of the circlet and united by a gold chain.

The wood violet is a favorite flower in jewelry. Wood violet brooches that represent a bunch of violets so arranged as to form a nearly round pin, come in three sizes, small, medium and large.—Jeweler's Circular.

PARIS FUR NOTES.

Muffs will be very large this winter.

Gray astrakhan and chinchilla will be much worn.

Long shoulder capes will be in great request.

Long haired furs, sable, fox, etc., will be favorites.

A flattened boa, in preference to the round, promises to be stylish.

Bronze is being received and is made up in many garments for evening wear.

Natural furs are in great favor, and sable, marten and beaver will have a great run.

Combined furs will be fashionable. Seal skin will be trimmed with Persian lamb and astrakhan.

White furs will undoubtedly be seen more or less this winter than for some time.—Cloak, Suit and Ladies' Wear Review.

WOMAN'S WEAR.

The box tartleu hat turns up all around the crown.

Some skirts for autumn will be slightly trained.

The majority of the short jackets shown have the vest effect.

Irish poplins in light evening colors will be worn for dressy occasions.

Combinations of gros grain dresses and goloshines are all in high favor.

A striking novelty of the cold season will be embroidered fur garments.

Silk, voile and mousseline de laine look very well when made up into trained dresses.

Some of the newer recent plaids are six inches square, and the stripes are equally loud.

Steel gray is the favorite alpaca; though it is pleasantly varied by black shot with pale gray.

Dresses of camel's hair and velvet have the draperies of the camel's hair and the skirt of velvet.

Petticoats of white embroidery and batiste will soon give way to colored silk, lined with batiste.

The "Artilleur" coat, with jacket fronts revealing a vest, is an extremely natty little basque waist.

A very stylish ladies' topcoat is of plain beaver, with a rolling shawl collar of fine mink or astrakhan.

Very few foot plattings are used on skirts. Borders, bands of ribbon in velvet and fac lings, are the rage.

Chocolate, plentifully tinged with cream, is a favorite fall shade, and combines harmoniously with green.

Wide circular collars nearly covering the shoulders vary the monotonous yoke that has for so long been in fashion.

Sprays of gudelier roses tied with white satin ribbon are jauntily arranged in the left side of many new bonnets.

Striped silk petticoats with an adjustment of colors to correspond with any nationality form a fad for fall and winter.

The first dark dresses are trimmed with finely cut velvet, velvet ribbon, feathers, fur, passementerie and braiding.

Traveling dresses are to be ornamented round the edge of the skirt with broad strips of black, gray and brown leather.

For bonnets and bonnet trimmings, for wraps and for parts of dresses, shot velvets, both figured and plain, will be in order.

The most attractive jackets are of cream in white cloth, either with a waistcoat in revers trimmed with tinsel or silver passementerie.

Round waists have but few seams; may be either full or plain on the shoulders, and have no darts, but are delicately pointed front and back.

A decidedly chic fair weather topcoat is made of fine barsey in a light corn shade, with large white pearl men's overcoat buttons, the sleeves and lapels heavily stitched. The front is made double breasted and hangs loosely. The pockets have flaps.—Cloak, Suit and Ladies' Wear Review.

EMMONS ELAINE'S MARRIAGE.

McCormick Cottage at Richfield Springs, The Presents.

The marriage of Emmons Blaine to Anita McCormick, who is said to be as lovely as she is rich, has called forth a host of descriptive articles upon the groom, the bride, the Blaine and the "cottage" selected for the ceremony. The latter is located at Richfield Springs, N. Y., was built in 1881 by the late Cyrus McCormick, and is beautifully located.

The grounds are as attractive as nature and well directed work can make them. There is a large number of evergreen and handsome foliage trees about the lawn, and the whole is bordered with a carefully tended hedge. The drives are smooth and artistically laid out. The mansion is not of the fancy pattern, but rather of substantial and enduring beauty. It is a three story building and finished on the exterior in a manner which presents the appearance of natural wood.

EMMONS BLAINE.

On the south, south and west sides is a broad veranda, which is double on the southwest. From this a good view of the town and surroundings is obtained. The first floor of the house contains a spacious parlor, finished in natural wood and furnished with the richest drapings; a reception room, a dining room and an elaborately finished hall. Nothing that wealth can furnish is lacking to make these rooms beautiful and attractive.

The bride's trousseau has been described as a marvel—a symphony in white. Everything is snowy even to the hose.

THE M'CORMICK COTTAGE.

Emmons Blaine himself, who is described as a "good fellow," said thereof: "It's something white. It is glossy, and I guess it is satin; but, mind you, I don't say that I know. It was merely a guess then that I had a glimpse of a sample of the fabric, anyhow, and I won't warrant you that there hasn't been an entire change of plan."

After due persuasion he plaintively said of his own clothing for the momentous occasion: "Well, the trousers are middling drab, the vest is the same cloth as the coat and the necktie is a shade or two lighter than the trousers—and there you really are, aren't you?"

DR. FERNANDO CRUZ.

The New Guatemalan Envoy and Minister to the United States.

Great preparations have been made by the state department at Washington for the congress of nations, which convenes there on the 2d of October. The conference was first suggested by Mr. Blaine when secretary of state under Gen. Garfield's brief presidency. It will be one for conference and debate only, and the deliberations will be published in three languages—English, Spanish and Portuguese. Seventeen republics and one empire will be represented in the congress—the United States, Mexico, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Salvador, United States of Colombia, Bolivia, Ecuador, Venezuela, Peru, Chili, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Paraguay and the empire of Brazil, a very formidable one. It will be composed of sixty-five to seventy delegates, the United States appointing ten, the largest number.

One of the first delegates appointed to the congress was Dr. Cruz, the recently accredited envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Guatemala to Washington. Dr. Cruz is a progressive diplomat, equally so as his popular predecessor, Senor Sanchez. Senor Cruz is on the shady side of 40, and first saw the light of day in Guatemala city, the capital of the republic, in 1845. He was educated at the University, where he graduated in law with the degree L. D., and was afterwards a professor in the law department. Dr. Cruz has filled important positions in his own country, having been secretary of the interior several times, and more recently secretary for foreign affairs. As might be expected, he is a diplomat of varied accomplishments and linguistic attainments, speaking, besides his own native tongue, Italian, Latin, French and English, so that he will be enabled to read nearly all of Mr. Blaine's authorized state department reports without the aid of copies of "Ollendorf's Without a Master" and "Lemprieve's Classical Dictionary," for he excels all the other republican envoys in his particular at Washington.

A New York farmer fired a shot at the reflection of a burglar in a mirror and shivered the glass. When he came to replace the mirror he found a hole in the wall back of it wherein his grandfather had secreted $15,000 in cash.

An amusement of British officers: "After the military ball at Dover a party of officers proceeded to the sea. A wager was arranged and one of the party went into the sea, and in full evening dress and with a felt hat remained there for three hours around one of the mail packets. The officer was in the water an hour."

A native of India residing in London expressed a wish lately to send by parcel post to India the ashes of his deceased brother to be dropped into the sacred Ganges. He was informed that unless he could limit the weight of the parcel to eleven pounds the postoffice could offer him no facilities, and he sadly withdrew.

Two German athletes have arrived in New York whose feats of strength, it is said, will be a revelation to the strong men of this country. One can lift 545 pounds with his middle finger and can pass a weight of 200 pounds slowly over his head with one hand. The other is credited with being able to force a six inch nail with his bare hand through a two inch plank.

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM.

William Wilkinson, of Putnam county, Fla., killed a 600 pound bear in Wet Bay swamp, near his home. The bear had killed a hog the evening before, and Mr. Wilkinson faced him to his den next day and silenced him with a load of buckshot.

While Mrs. Chambers, of Frostburg, Md., was absent in the kitchen her little babe was attacked by a large rat. The crying of the babe attracted the mother's attention, and on entering the child she found the animal had bitten it on the eyelids, which were bleeding.

Mr. Jones, of Cisco, Tex., got the idea that there were too many rattlesnakes on his farm. He quit his farming and went gunning for them. Under the edge of a large rock he discovered a nest, and began firing at them. He kept it up until he had shot twenty-one large snakes. Scores of young ones got away.

As a passenger train thundered along near Allegron, Newaygo county, Mich., recently a large baldheaded eagle arose from beside the track and tried to fly across the rails ahead of the train, but in so doing the wing tip was caught and lodged against a cylinder head. The engineer then went forward and captured it. The bird measured six feet from tip to tip across the wings.

A steamer arrived at Philadelphia recently with a cargo of fruit and a number of fatalities on board. Members of the crew were often obliged to keep watch at night and sweep the creatures into the ocean as fast as they crawled on deck. The vessel was loaded to its hatchways. At times the deck was literally covered with them, and some were as big as a man's hat. Only six escaped alive.

John German recently shot a carp at Evans' Lake, N. J. It measured thirty inches long and twenty inches around the body. The weight of the fish was fourteen pounds and twelve ounces. German has since been patrolling his pond and Thursday discovered another carp nearly as large as his former capture. He succeeded in capturing it and took it to Philadelphia, where it will be placed on exhibition.

Wm. C. Smith, mason and builder, in repairing the damage done to the arch of the rear under the Stillman Music Hall, discovered the large hot-air furnace of Messrs. Carney Bros., which was lost in the ruins of Tuesday, July 30, after having fallen in the gulch in front of the store; it would seem almost impossible for such a large furnace to be carried such a distance but perhaps it had a clue that Dockstader was shivering from fright and thought it would take the chances of having Jeaffer Manton's fire fly up and show the public what a powerful heater it was.

—Says a physician: Good health demands that the mouth be kept closed while asleep. We have known instances where a man's health would have been materially improved if he had kept his mouth closed while awake. —Madison Eagle.

—Two distinct issues of the Summit Record made their appearance on Saturday last. One was issued by D. M. Smythe and the other by Thomas F. Lane. Mr. Lane says he has bought the right and title in a bill of sale given by the assignee of W. H. DeForest, who had a mortgage upon the paper. The courts will be called upon to decide the legal ownership.

—A mathematician has estimated that a couple waltzing six times around a moderate sized ball room travel 89 yards each time, or 480 yards during the dance. Allowing one turn to each yard, this gives the distance traversed during a waltz as three-quarters of a mile. This is 14 miles in 15 waltzes. Who will presume now to say that Americans do not exercise?

—A paragraph is going the rounds to the effect that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has given official notice that the Morris canal will be abandoned as a water-way this year and for all time. This is just as officially denied by officers of the company. Mr. W. L. Powers, the superintendent of the canal, says that it will be in operation for three or four years to come.

—The losses in the battle of Gettysburg, were, in proportion to the number engaged, enormous; amounting, on our side, to twenty-seven per cent.; and, on the side of the Confederates to thirty-five per cent. The number of dead on the official reports represents but about half of those slain. On the Union side, for instance, there are but 2,834 reported killed; while in the National Cemetery alone, there are 3,575 bodies interred. The names on the official return only include those who were shot dead in action, but takes no account of the vast number who died of wounds ten days after the battle. If you want to get at the whole number of men who lost their lives in the Union Army, you must add to the 3,575, interred in the National Cemetery, at least 400, buried in different parts of the field, and who were never after transferred to the Cemetery; 400 more were taken home by their friends, immediately after the battle, and several hundred died soon after, of wounds, in the hospital, at Carlisle, Harrisburg, and other adjacent points; making in all, about 5,000 Union men, who lost their lives at Gettysburg—or, as the result of the battle.

Little Clarence Francis Nearly Looses His Life in a Tub.

An accident which almost resulted fatally occurred a la West Second street residence yesterday afternoon. Clarence Francis, a thirteen months old child was left alone for a while, and while playing around the house fell into a tub of water, which had been left on the floor. Doctors Boone and Manning attended him, and it is now thought that he will recover.

PERSONAL.

Miss Grace Howard, of First place, has returned from a tour of Europe.

Mr. Willis Anderson, of this city and Miss Elizabeth B. Young, of Elizabeth, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents, on Clinton street, at six o'clock last evening.

Mrs. Marian Schell, widow of the late E. C. Schnell, died at the residence of Mr. John Philpott, on Mountain avenue yesterday, aged 69 years. The funeral will take place to-morrow at ten o'clock a. m.

Mr. A. B. Darby, of Grove street, and Mr. J. S. Cutter, of West Front street, accompanied by their wives, will start Saturday morning, weather permitting, on their annual driving tour through the land of buckwheat cakes and honey. The trip includes the northern counties of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Mrs. J. R. Truell, and daughter, of Central avenue, have returned from the "Kenwood" at Asbury Park, N. J. They have been at the sea-shore all Summer. The terrific storm of last week Saturday morn "It seemed like a blizzard, the sand was piled up as high as the fences, resembling snow, houses were crushed by the waves like eggshells. The sea was terrible in its might. It was a scene never to be forgotten, to see, among other things, about 100 feet of the board walk, seats, houses and all, rising and falling with the ebb and flow of the waves."

Dr. W. E. Stodwell, of Dunellen, writing to THE NEWS from Denver, says: "The Rocky Mountains with their snow capped peaks, Pike's peak towering its lofty head far above the rest, may be seen from a great distance. They present a scene of magnificence and grandeur far beyond the power of man to describe. To be fully realized they must be seen. The view compensates for the trouble taken to journey here. Denver, where I am located, is the only place in Colorado that has come up to my expectations. It is now passing through one of the greatest "booms" in its history. It has been booming for some two years past. This time property has more than doubled in valuation. I have never seen so much building going on in any city. Whole blocks go up as if by magic. Houses are mostly brick and are taken about as fast as they are built. There has been about 20,000 increase in the population, during the past year. Rents are high, but living is as cheap as in the East. Houses of four or six rooms, can be had high, rent for from $25 to $30 per month, according to the location. The city has about 125,000 inhabitants. It contains many fine public buildings. The public school buildings are elegant structures—an ornament to the city. Churches are numerous. Many buildings now being constructed will add to the beauty and magnificence of the city when completed. Among the buildings now being erected are the State Capitol, the Government Building, the Masonic Temple, etc. Denver has many beautiful, tree shaded streets. The trees are supplied with water by irrigation ditches put along each side of the street, through which water is constantly flowing. The water supplied to the lawns is taken from the hydrants. Each lot has one. For health, pleasure and wealth Denver is unrivaled, and well deserves the name of the Queen City of the West."

"Captain Swift."

It seems that when a good play is booked for Plainfield, the elements must have full sway. When Frederick Warde presented "The Merchant of Venice" a week ago, a rain storm prevented a large attendance, and again last evening, when the Madison Square Theatre Company played "Captain Swift", the stormy weather undoubtedly prevented a large number of people from venturing out, who would have been present otherwise. But those fortunate enough to brave the weather enjoyed a splendid play, well rendered.

The gentleman in the gallery with the contagious laugh—on some occasions—should carry a cork with him to cork it up when its owner starts in counting out at the wrong time, as it did last night.

—An old gentleman who gave his name as Stephen E. Boughton and his residence as Plainfield was injured in Elizabeth Monday. He spent the night at the Elizabeth police station and returned to Plainfield yesterday.

—The Y. M. C. A. classes in mechanical drawing will be resumed Tuesday evening. Another class will be organized at Oct. 8th. A new class will be organized at 7:30 o'clock and commence work Oct. 15th. Information given and names enrolled at the rooms.

A RECEPTION TO YOUNG MEN.

A Pleasant Entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Rooms.

Not withstanding the unfavorable weather a goodly number of young men attended in response to the invitations of the association, the reception tendered last evening to the young men in the shops engaged in mechanical construction. They were kindly received by the Reception Committee and were made to feel entirely at home by the hearty speech of welcome by President Murray. Mr. A. J. Gawett explained the object and aim of the classes in Mechanical Drawing. These classes were very successful last year and there is no doubt will be equally so during the coming year.

The principal part of the entertainment of the evening was furnished by Mr. Chas. H. Little, the humorist, of New York. It certainly was a treat to hear him. His witty remarks and really good jokes kept the audience almost continually convulsed with laughter, while his excellent character delineations were received with uproarious applause. Mr. D. E. Titsworth sang two solos in a charming manner much to the delight of the young men. It is regretted that the storm kept many away from this really enjoyable reception, but there will be others at intervals during the season.

THE CONGREGATIONAL C. L. S. C.

Organized Last Night and Officers Elected.

The Congregational church circle of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle met in the church parlors last evening and reorganized for the coming year. The following officers were elected:

President—Rev. C. L. Goodrich
Vice President—Mrs. W. B. Wadsworth.
Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Nellie Davis.

It was decided to hold meetings on the second and fourth Monday evenings of each month. The next meeting will be held Oct. 14th.

Roselle the Champions.

The deciding game of tennis, in the Central tennis league, was played Saturday at El Mora, between the El Mora and Roselle tennis clubs, the latter club easily defeating the former by the scores of 6-4 and 6-1.

Messrs. White and Lavery represented El Mora, while Messrs. Warner and Smith did the honors for Roselle.

This decides the championship for this year, and the pennant now flying at the West End club will next year go to Roselle.

The record to date is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Roselle	4	0
El Mora	3	2
West End	2	3
Westfield	0	5

The Roselles have one more game at the West End grounds and the Westfields one more at El Mora, the only change resulting from these games would be to allow West End to tie El Mora for second place.

Two New Bridges.

Monday afternoon the Bridge Committee from the Union county Board of Freeholders met in this city and awarded two contracts to the Wrought Iron Bridge Company, of Canton, Ohio. One of the bridges is to be placed over Cedar brook on Arlington avenue. It is to be an iron girder bridge 59 feet wide with a 20 foot roadway and will cost $1,060. A similar bridge will be placed over the same brook on Randolph road 25 feet wide at a cost of $737.57.

Bound Over to keep the Peace.

A few days ago Daniel O'Connor, of "Bull Frog City" went before Justice Hardy, of North Plainfield and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Patrick McDrummell, charging him with assault and battery. The case was tried in Spencer's Hall, Monday afternoon, at four o'clock. The testimony in the case was so conflicting that it was impossible for the Justice to tell which one was in fault, so he held both men under $100 bail each, to keep the peace.

The Verdict Set Aside.

Judge Van Syckle, of Elizabeth, yesterday set aside the verdict awarding ex-Speaker John T. Dunn $400 damages in a libel suit which he brought against the Central New Jersey Herald. Cook & Hall, proprietors of the newspaper, took an appeal to the Supreme Court from the Judge's charge. The appeal was sustained and a new trial ordered.

A New Time Table.

It is reported that the Central Railroad Company will issue a new time-table to take effect next Sunday. Dame rumor has also sent forth a report to the effect that hereafter a number of extra trains will be run over the road.

A Letter to the Public.

The Ballot Reform Association has sent us the following, which explains itself:

TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW JERSEY.—Although the immediate interest in their efforts to procure the enactment of the ball for the secrecy of the ballot, the friends of electoral reform are not disheartened: they have enlisted for the war. They lay down their arms to victory, never to defeat.

The struggle at the Spring Election last Winter was but the preliminary skirmish. It drew out the fire of and located the opposition, while enabling the friends of reform to develop their own sources of support. Believing the moral sentiment of the community was behind us nothing only to be voiced, we commenced the struggle. Now were we mistaken. From every quarter came the voice of popular approval and support. Originating with a few unknown and uninfluential men, the measure introduced by this association became at once the center of a great popular movement for reform. It soon outrivaled, in the general interest and attention it excited, all other measures before the legislature.

The antagonism the bill speedily developed, came from but one source—the professional politicians, those who gain a living or derive power and consideration from the business or politics; and who recognized in the bill, the downfall of their power.

The bill withstood every test of honest criticism. It received the hearty endorsement of all friends of reform. And yet better for of its thoroughness and effectiveness could have been desired, than the opposition it excited. Had it been weak and ineffective, it would not have been opposed. They, who opposed it, did so in recognition of its merits. They dreaded it because they well realized that its enactment would stamp out corruption and intimidation—their dearest allies—the source of all their strength.

Political corruption is the evil of American life; the danger threatening its institutions. In this emergency year of our national existence it may, with truth, be said, that we have no longer a Democratic Government. The will of the people is not supreme. Under the forms of democracy a tyranny has established itself, a tyranny more degrading, and galling than any before. Rule, in every city, in every petty hamlet, irresponsible, self constituted cabals rule supreme, regardless of the public weal. We are delivered up to the tyranny of oligarchies, actuated only by their own petty schemes of selfish aggrandizement. Debased by the ballot reform laws of the form, we fail to see that the essence of freedom has departed. Tyranny is often best perpetuated under the forms of liberty.

This loss of liberty comes from the degradation of its great conservator—the ballot. The tyrant owes his establishment to the voter, every where so prevalent, are the means whereby the rules of political rings and cliques are established, it is the seat of their power; the source of their strength. And this corruption and intimidation are made possible by a system of voting which permits the voter to be watched and his vote to be known.

Under the system now in force, the ballot is not a secret ballot. Voters are marched like sheep to the polls to deposit, under surveillance, the ballot already given them.

The ballot must be made secret. The voter must be free to vote as he will, and that the manner in which he votes cannot be ascertained. This will stamp out intimidation and corruption. Intimidation will be useless, corruption a waste of money, if the voter cannot be watched. The bill introduced last year in the Legislature of this State, by this association, aimed to defeat bribery and intimidation at the polls by so secluding the voter that a watch could not be kept upon him. Wherever tried, this system has worked successfully. It has rendered bribery and intimidation impossible. The corruptionist will not purchase unless he can watch the delivery of the vote.

The same bill will be introduced at the coming session of the legislature. The evil men who defeated it last year will again oppose it with equal force and persistency. Shall they, again, be allowed to triumph?

The issue, fellow citizens, is with you. No combination, however strongly entrenched, can long resist a popular demand. The cause for which we are fighting is your cause. Make it your own. Let there come up to Trenton from every quarter, from every class, a universal demand for the purity of the ballot. We ask you to circulate petitions, to agitate among your friends and neighbors, to hold public meetings, to interview your legislative nominees and pledge them to support the measure. We ask you to support no person as a candidate for the legislature unless he is in outspoken sympathy with the measure. For be assured that no man is a good Democrat, no man a true Republican who is not in favor of ballot reform. Be assured your first duty is your party, is to support it to the utmost and by your vote, purity in elections.

We appeal to all good citizens every where, to all true patriots, to all believers in popular government to hasten to give of their time, their influence, their pens and their money to aid in this great fight for freedom. "He that is not with us is against us." Indifference is equivalent to opposition. It is upon the inertness of the public that the corruptionists count. If vigilance be the price of liberty, remember, that indifference is the opportunity of its loss.

Gleanings from Our Exchanges on Political Topics.

"General Grubb, having no definite ideas on temperance," etc.—Elizabeth Herald.

He must have been reading the temperance plank in the Democratic platform.—Elizabeth Journal.

An old veteran at Lake Hopatcong writes us: "The hotels are about all closed and the natives of this place are now wondering what they will do for something to eat. I am telling them they will get plenty of Grubb this fall. Burd Grubb is good."

The Newark Journal still harps on General Grubb's citizenship. General Grubb is a better Jerseyman than Leon Abbett, and the more The Journal and other Democratic newspapers call attention to the matter the worse it will be for Abbett.—Burlington Enterprise.

Leon Abbett is now trying to curry favor with the old soldiers of New Jersey. It is only necessary to refer to his record in the Legislature during the war to show that at that time he was a rank copperhead, that he opposed all measures tending to help put down the rebellion and that his sympathies were altogether with the other side. Mr. Abbett will do well to keep away from the reunions of old soldiers. They have long memories.—Burlington Enterprise.

Weather and Crops.

The following are extracts from the weather crop bulletin of the State Weather service for the week ending Sept. 28th:

During the first seven days the rainfall has been slightly above the average in the counties of Union, Mercer, Essex, Middlesex, Gloucester, Monmouth, Bergen, Atlantic, and Burlington, falling on from three to five days out of seven. The amount of sunshine has again been greatly deficient, while the temperature has been about the average for the last week in September. Light, harmless frost occurred in a few localities on the morning of the 22nd and 23d. These conditions have been very unfavorable to all maturing crops. Potatoes, tomatoes and corn suffering most. The cranberry bogs are flooded and picking has been retarded; some rot is also reported among the berries.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORTS.

Trenton—Farm work very much retarded, little seeding. About half of the corn has been cut. Vegetables are very scarce. Clover and grass excellent. Rainfall 1.77 inches.—E. R. Cook.

Piscataway—Very little improvement in the weather conditions of the week. The very little sunshine, with rain on four days, has prevented the maturing of crops and retarded farm work generally.—J. M. Dudos.

Ben Butler says the way to begin to get rich is to go in debt for a house and lot, and let the rent of it pay off the mortgage. At that rate, however, the man who rented the house might just as well buy and own a house of his own on the same terms.

Boulanger, safe in England, can amuse himself as long as he likes, firing manifestoes at France. Manifestoes are harmless, which is more than can be said of the other ammunition Bouly would have brought to bear on his country if he had been allowed to go on.

The American working men and women who are making the tour of Europe express themselves shocked at the irreligion, the unmindfulness, the immorality and the lack of domesticity in Paris. But numbers of their richer fellow countrymen get used to this state of things in Paris, and like it.

At a press banquet to an honored newspaper man, John B. Wright, of Boston, both men and women journalists were present and both took part in the speech making. The innovation of having also the "soprano squeak" along with the bass and baritone voices at banquets seems to be taken up rapidly. For some time women have made after dinner speeches occasionally in England, and there are several ladies of title who do the thing very creditably.

Women in the Civil Service.

Women have a long way to travel yet before they establish their equal footing in the civil service. It is a rugged, up hill road in the bargain. Miss Mary Alexander, of Philadelphia, last spring passed the best civil service examination ever recorded in this country of anybody, male or female. Her name went on the list for appointment; it is on the list still. But Alexander has no appointment. Women are not in demand for anything higher than typewriters and stenographers, and the lower paying places in the civil service department, the places paying $600 to $900 a year. If now and then a woman gets a better office, it is the exception. For the higher paying clerkships the chiefs want men and voters, no matter how good an examination a woman has passed.

Learning from the Japanese.

Rev. Arthur M. Knapp was sent by the American Unitarian association to Japan. He has returned, and, in a sermon, reported his experiences. He found the Japanese gentle, childlike and trustful, with the faults of children.

Mr. Knapp goes back this month to Japan. He will remain there four years. If the progress as he has already done among the Japs, he may return to America full fledged in the Buddhist faith as so many of his fellow countrymen already are. In Europe, too, it is a fad at present to take up Buddhism. Mr. Knapp made this remarkable statement:

"I have been sent to Japan," he said, "not as a missionary, to teach and convert, but to learn something of the wonders and mystery of the people, and in the interest of religious reciprocity. I want to report, that not only is this faith of yours practically identical with that of Japanese have, but that we have well nigh as much to learn from them as to teach."

The preacher evidently agrees with that Japanese nobleman who, having traveled all over this country, was asked if he would not like to live here. His reply was:

"What has America to offer to a Japanese gentleman?"

Southern Progress.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat annually performs a very valuable work for the south. It gives every autumn a summing up of the industrial projects of the south for the past year. The progress made in the last year has been the greatest The Times-Democrat has yet reported. According to assessors' reports, the taxable property of the southern states is now $3,750,033,367. Since 1880 it has increased nearly 75 per cent., a fact better showing than many parts of the north can make.

Manufactures have increased over 100 per cent., and now amount to $601,202,000. The south has now 36,386 miles of railway, also more than twice what she possessed in 1880. Even with the low prices in the last few years for almost everything that grows, agricultural products have increased 42 per cent. in value.

So much increased wealth will have a cheerful, revivifying effect, not in the south alone. The whole country will rejoice in this grand prosperity. Southern representatives and senators cannot much longer call attention in congress to the poverty of "our section." Go to! Let us not hear it more. Even Virginia can in time pay off her debt with her surplus revenue. The south will, before the close of this century, be one of the richest divisions of the Union.

Perhaps the most gratifying part of the report is the story of the more than doubled expenditure for schools since 1880. This year there will be spent for education nearly $14,000,000. Truly the south has a splendid future.

DEMOCRATS IN COUNCIL.

The Empire State's Convention Meets at Syracuse.

THE TICKET THEY NOMINATED.

Rice for Secretary of State, Wemple for Comptroller, Danforth for Treasurer, Tabor for Attorney General, O'Brien for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 2.—In the Democratic state convention Lieutenant Governor Jones was chosen chairman and addressed the convention at length. His remarks were enthusiastically received. His reference to ex-President Cleveland, reverses reform and the administration of Governor Hill brought out strong applause. The resolution of Hon. Daniel Magone resolutions indorsing New York city's claim for the world's fair of 1892 were indorsed. Mr. Ridgway, of Brooklyn, from the committee on resolutions, submitted the following report, which was adopted with a hurrah:

The Platform Adopted.

First—The Democratic party of the state of New York in convention assembled renews the pledges of fidelity to Democratic faith and re*affirms the doctrines of the national platforms of* 1888, adopted at St. Louis. We hold that while we favor a tariff act adequate for revenue only, we absolutely adhere to the principles of tariff reform, believing that the abolition of all forms of taxation is itself the certainty of triumph. We heartily indorse the honest and fearless administration of the national government by Grover Cleveland.

Second—We charge that the Republican party at the last federal election debauched the nation by corruption and false pretenses: by intimidation and coercion of voters; by promises unperformed and pledges dishonored; by shameless trafficking of cabinet and other offices in its gift to the highest bidders; and, though its candidate by popular suffrage received several hundred more than half the votes of the electoral college, its doctrines and principles were repudiated by a majority of the people of the country. We arraign the chief executive of the United States for a disgraceful violation of the pledge contained in his letter of acceptance, that he "will not appoint to any grade said department Stones and not party service should be the essential and controlling test of fidelity and efficiency only sure course of office," in that, not in exceptional instances, but with sweeping hand removed hundreds of honest and capable officers before the expiration of the terms for which they were appointed.

Against Trusts and Combinations.

Third—Maintaining, as heretofore, that im proper combinations of capital which limits production, fix the price of commodities, increase the cost of production, reduce the wages of labor and crush out the smaller independent dealers and their fellow citizens into competition are conspiracies. We demand legislation to prevent such combinations. We point to the fact that while the last two Republican legislatures have defeated all additional legislation desirable for their complete suppression, the legal department of the state under Democratic administration has instituted and carried to a successful issue litigation having the destruction of such conspiracies as its aim.

Fourth—We arraign the late Republican legislature for imposing the heaviest state taxes, in both rate and amount, ever known in peace times, as reckless, improvident and unnecessary, the increase in taxes from $9,603, 00 to $12,500,000 at a time when the people are poor and the burden of taxation are especially oppressive. We commend the vetoes of a Democratic governor which have saved to the taxpayers of the state $2,000, 000, and we pledge that the Democracy if entrusted with the control of the legislative branch of government will, if elected, follow the lead in frugal economical expenditures. We believe that unnecessary legislation is unjust taxation.

The Liquor Question.

Fifth—We do not favor the unrestricted sale of intoxicating liquors on the one hand nor prohibition on the other. We believe that the liquor traffic should be restricted and regulated by just and equitable excise laws, rigidly enforced, which laws, in their operation, should be uniformly uniform throughout the state. We believe that excise revenues, whether called license fees or taxes, should be used for the benefit of cities and localities under whose authority licenses are issued, to be applied in reducing the burden of local taxation. We are opposed to all sumptuary legislation that needlessly interferes with the personal liberty or reasonable customs of the people. We favor the largest liberty for individual action consistent with the public welfare. We oppose the passage of the prohibition amendment upon which the next legislature is required to act, and we denounce the hypocrisy of the Republican party of the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut in submitting or proposing to submit prohibition amendments, only to defeat them at the polls. We arraign the Republican party for its dishonest treatment of the temperance question.

The Excise Commission Bill.

We point to the fact that an excise commission, in its majority largely Republican, was, upon the recommendation of a Democratic governor be first appointed, and we challenge fair comparison of its work with the work of the commissioners appointed by any Republican governor to revise the excise law, and thereby secure a just and proper solution of the temperance question; that the excise commissioners, both Democratic members, five of whom were Republicans, reported a measure known as the excise commission bill, which, after measure was passed by the Democratic members of the legislature, but was repudiated by the Republican legislature, which in the senate passed a bill extremely vicious in character, illiberal in its provisions, and unjust in its discrimination, and which, for the express purpose of securing executive disapproval in order that the temperance question should continue to be an issue in political contests, was a dishonest and hypocrisy we denounce as a breach of faith with the people.

The Democratic party proclaiming itself as favoring higher license fees designedly ignores the fact that the excise boards in the cities of Brooklyn and Buffalo, and in other localities of the state are under Republican control and that, with the sanction and approval of the Republican leaders, boards have been imposed by not-third of the amount of fees permitted under existing laws. We believe that in this matter the Democratic boards have acted well we denounce their utterances as inconsistent with their acts as additional proofs of the dishonesty with which the Republican party treats the question.

Electoral Reform Measures.

Sixth—The Democratic party renews its declaration in favor of such electoral reforms as will secure changes in our election laws as will secure of the ballot, the honest canvass of the votes, stamping out corruption at the polls, and prevent the intimidation and coercion of electors. The Republican majority in the legislature, by its defeat of these measures at the last session of the legislature, has instead thereof, passed a bill containing provisions which, if enforced, would be unjust, oppressive, clearly impracticable and otherwise objectionable, and which property met with extensive opposition from all parts of the state. We denounce the unnecessary refusal to enact any different measure for securing ballot reform. We earnestly invite the co-operation of all citizens, without regard to the accomplishment of that end will favor any reasonable and practical measure which is free from partisan bias and which will secure to every man the free and honest purpose the secrecy of the ballot and the confidence of the vote in the honest counting and returning thereof.

The Republican Party Arraigned.

Seventh—We arraign the Republican party for treason to the constitution. The last legislature, Republican in both branches, adopted the four-year clause legislature, passed to provide for an extraordinary session of the legislature for the purpose of the election and assembly districts of the state, and has thus perpetrated the control of the legislative branch of the state in the interests of the government in defiance of the will of the people, and in contempt of the constitution which they have sworn to support. We charge that this was refused to enact a proper measure for creating a commission with which to perform the duty imposed upon the legislature by the constitution of the state, and we charge that the Republican party has wilfully refused to establish a commission of bipartisan character, as was done in the case of the commission which framed the present excise law, and which insured the enactment of a measure approved by the people of the state over whom it was passed for a constitutional convention, and which insured the enactment of a measure approved by the people of the state over whom it was passed for a constitutional convention. We charge that the Republican party has refused the holding of the convention for a year, and provided an unjust and improper basis of representation, in order that the Republican party might defeat the imposition of approval. Successive Republican legislatures have been quostly refused to pass any measure providing for a free vote and consideration of the constitutional question, or to provide for a constitutional convention upon a basis of representation founded upon the latest apportionment.

Eighth—We oppose needless special legislation and we believe in the duty of the state to secure a right enforcement of the laws enacted by the legislature for the benefit of the workingmen of the state. We favor all such laws as will best maintain its efficiency. And we condemn the last legislature for its refusal to pass any measure necessary to the protection of the ship of New York the benefits of rapid transit.

Governor Hill Indorsed.

Ninth—We heartily indorse the Democratic administration of Governor David B. Hill. He has been a consistent exponent of democratic principles and has given to the people of the state able and vigorous exercise of the veto power, whereby the people and property of the state have been protected from the effects of a partisan and reckless and improvident legislature. We commend the able and wise administrations of his various executive offices. We congratulate our assembly that the splendid record of honesty and efficiency made by them justifies a continuance of the trust reposed in the Democratic party, of which they are faithful representatives.

When the platform had been concluded on motion of Dr. Croker a resolution was adopted indorsing the achievements of Messrs. Gladstone and Parnell in behalf of home rule in Ireland.

The Ticket Nominated.

The following ticket was then placed in nomination:

Secretary of state, Frank Rice.
Comptroller, Edward Wemple.
State treasurer, James M. Danforth.
Attorney general, Charles F. Tabor.
Engineer and surveyor, John Bogart.
Judge of court of appeals, Denis O'Brien.

Tammany Hall and the Kings county Democracy supported Edward A. Maher for comptroller, and Senator John Foley for attorney general.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the state committee to change the time of holding the next state convention next year in view of the fact that there will be but one vacancy on the state ticket. Adjourned.

The New State Committee.

The following is a list of the new Democratic state committee: First district, Patrick J. Gleason; Second, John Delmar; Third, James W. Halpin; Fourth, Edward Haverly; Fifth, John Cotter; Sixth, Richard Croker; Seventh, Edward Cooper; Eighth, Hugh J. Grant; Ninth, Jeremiah W. Power; Tenth, Daniel J. Dorlan; Eleventh, John B. Voorhees; Twelfth, William T. Fitzpatrick; Thirteenth, William R. Grace; Fourteenth, Patrick Hickey; Fifteenth, Charles B. Dubois; Sixteenth, S. J. Tilden, Jr.; Seventeenth, Charles M. Preston; Eighteenth, Edward Murphy; Nineteenth, J. Sloat Fassett; Twentieth, Orris Seward; Twenty-first, Henry Gritlog; Twenty-second, D. G. Griffin; Twenty-third, S.W. Beardsley; Twenty-fourth, Edward Cornell; Twenty-fifth, W. B. Kirk; Twenty-sixth, Patrick Mooney; Twenty-seventh, Charles F. Burstall; Twenty-eighth, L. Bradley; Twenty-ninth, Frank Campbell; Thirtieth, W. Tracy; Thirty-first, P. J. Sullivey; Thirty-second, F. Sinclair; Thirty-third, John H. Wiley; Thirty-fourth, J. W. McMahon.

The committee organized with Edward Murphy, Jr., as chairman; A. J. Beardsley, of Oneida, secretary, and W. B. Kirk, of Onondaga, treasurer. The executive committee will be appointed by the chairman.

EIGHT WERE DROWNED.

Fatal Capsizing of the Schooner Erie Wave Off Long Point.

PORT ROWAN, Ont., Oct. 2.—The schooner Erie Wave, owned by Captain Alfred Stafford, capsized in Lake Erie off Long Point, between here and Clear Creek. Eight persons were drowned. George Bell, a sailor; C. Crawford, of Clear Creek; Thomas Mariatt, a sailor; Edward Soper, a sailor; Thomas Stafford, captain; James Stevens, of Clear Creek; L. Stevens, of Clear Creek, and Lewis Walker, of Clear Creek.

The schooner Erie Wave had been engaged for some days and had an extra crew aboard to assist in getting her off. A squall struck the vessel last night and she capsized. Only two were saved. These members of the crew succeeded in reaching the shore, but the other eight were drowned.

Miss Leconey's Murder.

CARMEL, N. J., Oct. 2.—The coroner's inquest into the murder of Annie Leconey resulted in a verdict that the girl came to her death at the hands of persons unknown. Edward Burroughs, foreman of the jury, is said to be a cousin of Chalifey Leconey, the uncle of the girl who is accused of complicity in her murder, and has taken no pains to conceal his interest in the suspected farmer's welfare. What his influence on the other jurors may have been is not known, but it is believed that the verdict shows a desire on the part of Chalifey Leconey's friends to thwart the prosecution to produce the evidence they are withholding for his trial.

Faulkner Would Not Answer.

BUFFALO, Oct. 2.—In the Faulkner trial the defendant occupied the stand until recess, undergoing a severe cross examination. Witness testified that he raised on notes $17,000 from the Eleventh Ward National bank of New York, but that the renewal of these notes was made by James Faulkner, who forged witness' name to them. Witness was asked why, when he knew that his brother was a confirmed drunkard, he kept on writing to capitalists for the money, stating that his brother was a reliable, safe banker, but he declined to answer.

Eloper Crotty Arrested.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Alfred M. Crotty, of Brooklyn, the drummer who eloped from this city with Minnie Bennett, 21 with Lola E. WILD TIMES AT NAVASSA

Four Men Butchered by Rioting Negroes.

DYNAMITE BOMBS WERE HURLED.

Thrilling Adventures of the Survivors, Who Were Saved from Sharing Their Companions' Horrible Fate by the Opportune Arrival of H. M. S. Forward.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 2.—The Navassa Phosphate company has just received from Acting Superintendent Dr. D. C. Smith additional particulars of the riot, among the 100 or more negroes employed about the works. Sept. 14, for reasons unknown, the negroes rebelled against the authority of their employers, and locked in a body blood four of the company's officers—Thomas H. Paine, James Fales, Jame Mahon and William T. Shea. The story is one of thrilling interest as told by the doctor. He says:

The Trouble Commences.

"Mr. Roby was the first man attacked. He was hit on the head with clubs and left for dead in a rock hole about a mile off board. He was at once removed to the house, and after having thirty or forty stitches sewed in his scalp, took part in a battle with the blacks. At noon the men congregated in front of the superintendent's house and refused to work. When Mr. Jones, by my direction, attempted to arrest one of the ringleaders and take from him a pistol which had been snatched from Mr. Roby he was knocked down, and in a few seconds a howling mob surrounded him. He managed to get to the house, where the other officers had sought shelter, running the gauntlet of volleys of rocks and other missiles. We took refuge in the upper story of the superintendent's house, and opened fire on the mob, which was now throwing stones against and into the house from every direction, as well as shooting at any one of us who happened to show himself.

Dynamite Bombs Hurled.

"The battle had lasted about three hours, when we were startled by the explosion of a dynamite bomb, which they had thrown on the front porch. This was soon followed by another, until there was a continual roar of exploding dynamite. These bombs were going off around and through the house, on the porch and in the room adjoining the one in which we had sought shelter. The negroes were behind cars drawn up in front of the house, and the trees, tanks and many buildings near by afforded them protection from our occasional shots. We had but a couple of rounds of ammunition left, which we were reserving for closer quarters, which we knew must inevitably come.

A Dash for Life.

"Shortly after 4 o'clock p. m. they broke into the magazine and got a fresh supply of dynamite. By this time the explosions of dynamite had become so frequent as to be uninterrupted, and knowing it was their intention to blow us into eternity, we decided to leave the house and endeavor to reach the Forward, which was in plain sight. Mahon and Fales would not leave without their money, but we hadn't got twenty feet away before they saw us and attacked us in every direction with axes, knives, rocks, razors and clubs, at the same time uttering fiendish yells.

Butchered in Cold Blood.

"Each man was soon overtaken and disarmed. Mr. Fales was the first to drop his weapon—a small caliber rifle. He was at *once butchered with knives and other mur*derous weapons. Mr. Joseph Fales was the next victim, and was chopped to pieces with an ax after he had surrendered his weapon, Poor Bill Shea, when last seen, was within a few feet of the cliffs, with a number of negroes in hot pursuit, each of whom was firing at him with a revolver. His body has never been found. Those of us whose lives were spared, owe them to the intervention of friendly negroes, who hid us in a little building until the excitement had somewhat subsided and while the others were engaged in looting the buildings and seizing all property owned by the officers.

Poor Mahon's Murder.

"About 6 o'clock p. m. some negroes came to the building in which we were hiding and told us that we could go to the house and get some supper, and that we should not be harmed while going to and fro. We had not gone over thirty feet before one of the devils, named Peter Key, placed a revolver within a few inches of James Mahon's face and fired, and as he fell shot him through the heart.

"God Save the Queen!"

"On the 20th inst. her majesty's ship Forward came to our assistance under orders to remain until relieved by the arrival of the Lily. Since then we have received no word nothing of the Galena whatever. When last heard from she was at Hayti. Truly, each of us, thorough Americans as we are, can appreciate what it means to be a subject. The Englishmen have treated us royally and as honored guests, and we owe our lives and liberty to the prompt arrival of the Forward. Great credit is due William Henson, the negro preacher of Navassa, but for whose intercession in our behalf not one of us would be alive to tell the tale."

Dartmouth Men Wounded.

"The object of attacking Mr. Ruby in the diggings was to remove him in order to secure possession of dynamite and his revolver. Mr. Samuel Mowry was severely hurt by being struck with rocks on the back of the head. Mr. Harry Jones was injured about the face with rocks and bruised about the body. Mr. H. Van Vall was shot accidentally through the fleshy part of his right leg."

Dartmouth Juniors May Leave.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 2.—About two weeks ago a student in the junior class at Dartmouth, charged with cribbing, nailed the door of a freshman's room, was expelled by the faculty. His classmates united in efforts to reinstate him, and submitted evidence which they claimed was sufficient to prove his innocence, but the faculty thought differently, and declined to allow him to return to the college. Over thirty of the class, which number fifty-three, have now applied to President Bartlett for honorable dismissal papers, expressing their determination to leave.

It is believed another man is buried and the rescuers are digging for him.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

She Was Disappeared.

The summer girl in beauty's pride,
No longer climbs the mountain side.

In rural lanes or meadows green
No more she beautifies the scene.

Her crimson parasol no more
Is seen beside the ocean's shore.

The russet shoes are put away,
The dress of tulle and ribbons gay.

Vacation past, her triumphs o'er,
She is the summer girl no more.

In apron white and cap of lace,
She now the restaurant doth grace.

And one may daily hear her there
Shout, hash and eggs, chops, rose and pear!

The Boy and the Match.

The boy played with the lighted match,
When all but his worst fears were gone;
The flames leaped up the cottage thatch,
And water—there was none.

Then, horror-struck, he gazed upon
The ruin he had wrought;
And thought of what his mother said—
"Don't meddle, now, with aught."

And still, as higher grew the fire,
And higher grew his torment,
The roof fell in, and with the sire
He vanished, like a dream.

Now, all you boys, before too late,
Take warning from my story—
Don't try to enter heaven's gate
In such a blaze of glory.

He Thought He Had Improved.

A little boy had a habit of saying to people whom he contradicted: "You lie."

His mother told him never to say "you lie," but always to say "excuse me," etc., etc.

The next day in contradicting a person he said, "Excuse me, you lie."

Great was his surprise when his mother informed him he had still done wrong. (A fact.)—Epoch.

John Wanamaker clings to good old fashioned dishes and rarely if ever touches wines.
Secretary Blaine likes to discuss a tender chicken or a well browned gobbler with cranberry sauce.
Senator Quay's favorite is porterhouse steak from an inch to an inch and a half in thickness, with a pint of champagne to keep it down.
The president likes a good porterhouse steak or a prime rib of roast beef, and relishes it. Buckwheat cakes and deer foot sausages with sweetbreads constitute his favorite breakfast dishes.

ROYAL FLUSHES.

The czar of Russia is fond of hunting and fishing.

Two Egyptian princes, sons of the khedive, are being educated in Vienna.

Queen Christina of Spain has composed a lullaby for her son. It is admired by the whole of Madrid.

The presents brought by the Shoan ambassadors to King Humbert of Italy were worthy of Ethiopia's most gorgeous reputation.

Prince Bismarck has given very little attention to affairs of state this summer. He has spent many hours playing the game of solitaire.

The king of the Belgians has created a supreme council to sit in Brussels for the purpose of dealing with affairs relating to the Congo Free State.

The shah of Persia had a long interview with Hadji Hassin Ghooly Khan about America, and it is understood that his curiosity regarding the United States has been roused to a feverish heat. It is rumored that he is now making arrangements to come to America next spring incognito.

Two magnificent carriages of Oriental design have just been built in London for the emperor of Morocco. One is a hansom cab of green and gold, which is to be drawn by fast mules, as there is no driver's seat. The other is a palanquin, which is to be carried by two mules instead of human bearers.

Prince Victor Napoleon is tall and dark and looks more like his Italian mother than his father. He is devoted to all that appertains to Bonaparte and the first empire, and has gathered together a valuable collection of Petit Caporal relics in his house at Brussels, including some curious love letters from Napoleon I to Josephine, written whilst she was still the beautiful widow Mme. Beauharnais.

The London correspondent of The Newcastle Chronicle says: The Prince of Wales is said to have received a somewhat novel present. I can't vouch for it, but the story, as it reaches me, is to the effect that a registered letter was delivered at Marlborough house last week, and was found to contain $10,000 in bank notes. The missive was in the handwriting of a lady, who "apologized" for the gift on the ground that her wealth far exceeds her requirements.

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

The four daughters of ex-Secretary Bayard are daring equestriennes.

One of Chicago's most eloquent speakers is a woman, the Rev. Florence Kollock.

Mrs. J. Stanley Brown, nee Mollie Garfield, aspires to a position in literary circles.

Rosa Bonheur is making studies of Buffalo Bill's Indians and ponies for a large painting.

Miss Harriet Colenso, daughter of the late Bishop Colenso, has spent more than $15,000 in the defense of the son and brother of Cetewayo and other Zulu chiefs, for alleged high treason.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett has bought a home in Surrey, England, and is likely to spend most of her time there when not in the United States. Mrs. Burnett will probably return to the United States in November.

Lady Guinness has given an order for a diamond necklace to a famous firm of jewelers, which will take several years to execute, owing to its present scarcity of stones of the first water. The design for the ornament is superb, and its cost will be about $250,000.

A London paper states that the marchioness of Bristol, the Ladies Harvey, and a few of their friends recently went through the streets and squares of Belgravia singing and playing on guitars and mandolins. They tried to suit all tastes and sang "O Bella (Italian) and "O Dem Golden Slippers" with equal vigor. The proceeds of the night's work were given to the hospital Sunday fund.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

Beware of a silent dog and a wet rat.
The sting of reproach is the truth of it.
Envy shoots at others and wounds herself.
Vows made in storms are forgotten in calms.
Zeal without knowledge is like fire without light.
Youth and white paper soon make an impression.
A goose quill is more dangerous than a lion's claw.
What we call time enough always proves little enough.
History is not fable agreed upon but truth disagreed upon.
A little seeing saves much looking; a little speaking saves much talking.
He who waits to do a great good at once will seldom do anything at all.
Remember that impertinence isn't wit any more than blackness is brilliancy.
Gratitude is the music of the heart when the chords are moved by kindness.
Fortunes are made by taking opportunities; character is made by making them.
Don't indulge in the luxury of strong opinions in the presence of your elders.
If young men will not believe in themselves no man or woman can believe in them.

LITERARY LIGHTS.

Algernon Charles Swinburne, the poet, has red hair.

Walter Besant published his first books just twenty years ago.

Robert Browning bears a striking resemblance to James G. Blaine.

One of Lord Tennyson's greatest regrets is that he has never visited the United States.

William Black, the novelist, is making a study of Mary Anderson for his next story.

The eldest son of the poet Stoddard, a promising young actor, is about to follow the example of his talented father and mother and publish a novel.

The late Maurice Sand's chief claim to literary distinction was his "History of Italian Comedy," for which he was made a knight of the Legion of Honor.

Emile Zola is one year this side of 50. Short, thick-set, bald as an egg, build and parched as to face, he wears eye glasses and a painfully sheepish expression before strangers.

Mr. Herbert Spencer has for a time abandoned his old residence in London and has taken a house in St. John's Wood, where he is as hard at work as his uncertain health permits.

William S. Rossetti has written a book on his famous brother, entitled "Dante Gabriel Rossetti as Designer and Writer," which will be sure to be a sympathetic audience. It includes a prose paraphrase of "The House of Life."

A Phenomenal Father.

Jrobinson (to Kersmith)—Here comes Kajones. He's in a big hurry to make his train. Bet you $5 to 50 cents I can keep him talking here half an hour, and I won't say two dozen words to him.

Kersmith—Done.

Jrobinson—Hello, Kajones! Fine day, isn't it? How's your family? By the way, that youngest boy of yours is a wonderfully bright little fellow.

Kajones—Just a fair average, Jrobinson. No smarter than other men's boys, so far as I know. (Hurries on.)

Jrobinson (chuckling over a $5 bill)—Made handsome note of this kind, Kersmith. First time I ever lost.—Chicago Tribune.

A CRISIS AVERTED.

Callithumpian and His Wife Exchange Domestic Grievances.

A pained expression flitted across the face of the young husband.

"It is time we understood each other, Elfeda," he said, as he drummed on the table with trembling fingers. "I think I have a right to know the cause of your dissatisfaction, your clouded looks, your fits of abstraction and gloom."

"Have I ever made any complaint, Callithumpian?" said the young wife, looking in a wistful, imploring way out of the window.

"You have not, Elfeda," returned Callithumpian. "If you would only say what it is I would see if I couldn't fix the thing up somehow," he continued, desperately, "even if it cost me $4!"

"It wouldn't cost more than—but no matter!" exclaimed Elfeda, hopelessly.

"Then you confess that it is something that might be healed by the disbursement of a little filthy lucre?"

And Callithumpian W. Magruder took out his pocket book, inscribed with the motto, "Economize."

"I confess nothing."

The young husband replaced the pocketbook with great promptness and presence of mind.

"Elfeda," he entreated, "won't you tell me what it is that ails you? I know you are not happy."

"I cannot deny it"—and a tear stood in her eye—"I don't even enjoy my gum!"

"If you can't trust me, Elfeda, whom can you trust?"

"Give it up!"

"Ay ye pliase mem!" remarked Nora, putting her head in through the doorway, "what'll ye have for dinner the day?"

"Anything that's in the house, Norah," replied the dejected mistress; "it doesn't make any difference."

"Elfeda," vociferated Mr. Magruder, as the kitchen lady withdrew, "has this trouble of yours anything to do with the victuals?"

"Callithumpian," replied the young wife, in a voice of misery, "it has! I don't know why I should keep it a secret any longer. Think of me as you will, but I cannot help it. My heart is breaking, Callithumpian," she sobbed, "for—for a—m-ess of—of c-cabbage!"

The devotest young husband took the hysterical form of his cherished Elfeda on his lap.

"Is that all?" he whispered in her ear. "My own, I have a confession to make myself. I have not always been the gay, light hearted creature I have seemed. When outwardly calm and cheerful I have many and many a time been wretched and miserable on account of an unsatisfied longing for onions! I did not dare to speak of it. I did not know how you stood on the onion question. I sternly repressed the longing. I suffered in silence. But we will sorrow no more, my darling. The shadow of domestic discord is lifted from our home. Hi, there, Norah! Norah!"

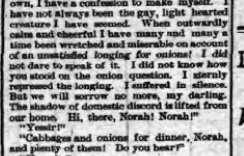
"Yessir!"

"Cabbages and onions for dinner, Norah, and plenty of them! Do you hear?"

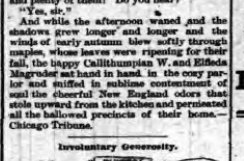
"Yessir!"

And while the afternoon waned and the shades grew longer and longer and the winds of early autumn blew softly through the maples, there were rejoicing for their fall, the happy Callithumpian W. and Elfeda Magruder sat hand in hand in the cosy parlor and sniffed in sublime contentment of mind the cheerful New England odors that stole upward from the kitchen and permeated all the hallowed precincts of their home.—Chicago Tribune.

Involuntary Generosity.



Mr. Crock (of Northport)—Can I git you t' pass me th' tomaty ketchup, friend?



—— (as the chair takes a slide)—Much obleeged. You Yorkers is blamed perlite, but th' ketchup was all I wanted.—Judge.

The Fall.

How cooler winds begin to blow,
The solar fires less fiercely glow.

The heated term is nearly o'er,
The paper collar wilts no more.

The girl puts up her bathing suit,
Their hats of straw the wealthy shoot.

The fat man laughs aloud with glee,
No more like melted lard is he.

The yachts are fast at wharves and docks,
We're near the autumnal equinox.

And people who regard their health
For autumn clothing spend their wealth.

And every merchant who is wise
Doth hump himself and advertise.
—Boston Courier.

Physico-Financial Schema.

"Look here," said Grabbinger to Slopeigh, "when are you going to pay me that hundred dollars you borrowed about eight years ago?"

"Do you mean to say that I owe you a hundred dollars?"

"To be sure. You certainly haven't forgotten it."

"My dear sir, I do not doubt that you loaned a hundred dollars to some one eight years ago; but I can demonstrate by science that I am not the man."

"I'd like to see how the mischief you are going to do it."

"Very well. It is a fact demonstrated by scientists that men undergo an entire change of being every seven years; consequently I can't be the same one to whom your money was loaned."—Merchant Traveler.

Where's the Butter?

Boarder (just arrived)—I noticed that we didn't have any butter at lunch today, Mr. Squiggs. I thought you always had such nice butter in the country?

Mr. S.—Yaas, we do, but you see Si Gass, who brings it in from the city, hasn't got round this week, somehow.—Time.

Too Much for the Governor.

Teddy (aged eight)—I say, papa!

Papa—Yes, my boy, what is it?

Teddy—Is the world round?

Papa—Yes.

Teddy—Then how can it have an end? (Papa gives it up.)—Pick Me Up.

He—Darling, will you love me when I'm gone?

Hard on the Farmers.

The continued rains of this Fall have been very hard on the farmers of this section, and very little Winter grain has been sown in this part of Union county. Many of the farmers were about through plowing when the rains commenced, and the ground has grown up so badly that in almost needs plowing again. Should there be much more rain soon there will be but very little Winter grain sown on low lands.

DISCUSSING THE CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM.

An Interesting Meeting in the S. of T. Rooms.

About seventy-five persons assembled in the Sons of Temperance rooms last evening for the purpose of discussing the advisability of establishing a co-operative grocery store in this city.

Mr. W. H. Bartlett was chosen temporary chairman and Mr. W. Thorn secretary.

The meeting was an interesting one and several persons present explained the work lings of the co-operative system and the ad. vantages it would accrue provided one was established in this city. Pamphlets bearing on the subject were read and reports from co-operative stores in other places were submitted for inspection. It seemed to be the wish of the meeting to establish one here and Messrs. Bartlett and Hoagland were instructed to appoint a committee of thirteen to draft a constitution and set of by laws to be presented at another meeting to be called in the near future. The following committee was appointed: W. H. Bartlett, chairman; Thomas Lee, A. Hendricksen, W. Moon, J. B. Higgins, Mr. Parsons, J. Hoagland, Mr. Hoagland, T. J. Gillies, P. W. Kline, H. C. Nonese, James Patterson and Frank Campbell.

The committee was also instructed to communicate with similar stores now in existence in various parts of the State and obtain such information as was possible in reference to the success of the scheme and report at a subsequent meeting.

A large number of those present availed themselves of an opportunity given to enroll themselves as supporters of the movement.

CRESCENT LEAGUE INCORPORATED.

New Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year at Last Night's Meeting.

The Plainfield Crescent League held a regular meeting at Force's Hotel last evening.

The Committee on Incorporation reported that they had had the league incorporated.

An election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President—E. C. Kieb.
Vice-President—C. C. Burnett.
Secretary—Howard S. Teel.
Captain of Bowling Team—James Davis.

Trustees, One year—Jas. K. Arnold and B. M. Stelle; two years—J. T. Fritts and A. H. Waldron; three years—F. M. Slater, C. P. Leggett and C. C. Burnett.

A treasurer will be appointed by the Board of Trustees. Mr. Joseph Haynes, the present incumbent, will in all probability be re-appointed. A new constitution and set of by laws were presented by the committee and adopted.

Two candidates for membership were elected and the meeting adjourned.

KILLED IN A DRUNKEN BRAWL.

John Devlin, of Bound Brook, a Victim of Rum.

The parents of John Devlin, who reside in Bound Brook, received word yesterday that their son had been mortally wounded in a drunken brawl at Jersey City. They immediately proceeded to Jersey City, but when they arrived the young man had breathed his last. It appears that Devlin was implicated in a street fight and when an officer attempted to arrest him he resisted and was clubbed into submission.

The West Ends Shut Out.

The Somerville West Ends went to Bergen Point yesterday afternoon for the purpose of playing a game of base-ball with the New Jersey Athletic club of that place, but before the first inning was finished the "great" and only West Ends found out that they could not play ball a little bit, and when at the conclusion of the sixth inning it was necessary to call the game on account of darkness, the score stood 9 to 0 in favor of the New Jersey Athletic Club, the Somervillians were dumbfounded. The famous Currie brothers, who composed the battery for the Plainfield Crescents, were in the condition of the last game with the West Ends at Somerville, yesterday played with the Bergen Point team.

During the game Davenport, the West Ends left fielder, was struck between the eyes by a pitcher's ball and knocked insensible. He was carried off the field. The unfortunate young man will carry a pair of black eyes for several days to come.

Middlesex County Freeholders.

The Middlesex County Board of Freeholders met at New Brunswick yesterday morning and Mr. Wills, as counsel, reported that Mr. Schenck, acting for Pleasants way township, had obtained from Judge Scudder a rule directed to the Board, to show cause why the Board should not repair the approaches to the bridge at New Brooklyn, at which there has been a washout. The Board claims that it is not the duty of the county to keep the approaches in repair in this instance, but that that duty comes upon the township. Mr. Wills said that in presenting the Board's defense to the Board it would be necessary to have the place surveyed, and a Mr. Van Deursepor Hill was appointed to do the work.

The Firemens Parade.

The annual parade of the Bayonne Fire Department took place at Bayonne city today. Equipe Hook and Ladder Company, of Plainfield, Franklin Engine Company, of South Easton, Pa., and Port Richmond Engine Company, of Staten Island.

Election of Officers.

The Independent Drum Corps of Plainfield, held a meeting last evening and re-organized by the election of the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—E. E. Vell.

UNION COUNTY COURTS.

The Famous Case of Elizabeth to the C. R. R. Co. on Trial.

The Union county Court convened at Elizabeth, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Judge Van Syckle, McCormick, Hyer and Wiley were on the bench.

The attendance was large, the court room being well filled with spectators who had been attracted undoubtedly from the fact that it was known that the famous case of the city against the Central railroad had been called for the day. On the wall back of the prosecutor's desk hung several maps of Elizabeth avenue, some of which dated to "ye good old time," and attracted considerable attention.

Some time ago the railroad company applied that the case be tried by a struck jury and a struck jury was duly drawn. The gentlemen impanelled to try this very important case are as follows:

J. Edgar Meeker, William B. Martin, Stephen S. Potter, Frank B. Bullman, Job M. Winans, B. Frank Crowell, Henry Howard, William B. Cogshew, Thomas M. Martin, D. Robert Sayre, Enoch D. Miller and Morris Spinning.

After the jury had been sworn, Judge Van Syckel discharged those not empanelled on the case, for the term. The jurors on the general panel were excused until Tuesday morning next, at 10 o'clock.

The city is represented by City Attorney Bergen and the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, while Hon. Benjamin Williamson represents the railroad company.

City Attorney Bergen, at the beginning, informed the court that counsel on both sides had agreed to change the plan somewhat from that originally presented, and that the case would be tried accordingly.

Hon. Fred. C. Marsh then opened the case for the city. He informed the jury that the case upon which it had been called to decide was a very important one, and the fact alone that the defendants had seen fit to have a struck jury empanelled was enough in itself to show to them its great importance. He then informed them that this action, brought by the city, was a suit to regain possession of a piece of land at the foot of Elizabeth avenue, which had been in dispute for many years, and to which the city had never relinquished the right of ownership.

The land in question is a piece of property at the foot of Elizabeth avenue, beginning where Front street puts out and running in the direction of the Singer factory. The city expects to prove beyond a doubt its ownership to the same on two different points. He then went into history, showing that from the settlement of the English that what is now known as Elizabeth avenue was a well-defined road, and that the same is referred briefly to the Kellogs and other names of historical importance in connection with what is now known as Elizabeth, and even spoke of the established roadway by the Dutch shortly after their settlement on the Island of Manhattan, or what is now known as New York city. Mr. Marsh's remarks were of the most interesting character.

City Attorney Bergen informed the court that the case would certainly occupy all of this week, and he could not tell as how much longer.

During the afternoon Governor Green was present and testified in regard to an old map which he had seen in Newark years ago.

Of Interest to Milkmen.

An interesting case was tried in Trenton a few days ago, under the State milk law, which was stoutly resisted in South Jersey over a year ago. The law requires the cream to be added to the milk, and a sample taken by Health Inspector McGuire from one of the cans belonging to F. B. Crosdale, of Ewing, proved, upon analysis by Shippen Wallace, the chemist, to contain only 11.62 of solids. These figures were brought out in the Justice's Court, but the defense contented itself with proving that the milk was fresh from the cow and not adulterated with water or other substance. It is said that the reason it failed to come up to the legal standard was that the cows were fed on new clover. The jury acquitted Crosdale.—Ex.

The General Convention.

The general convention of the Episcopal church of the United States, which begins its session in St. John's church, New York city, Tuesday, is the centennial meeting of that body. The first conference of the Episcopalians after the War of the Revolution was held in Christ church, in this city, in May, 1784. The churches of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania were represented. In the following October a more general meeting was held in New York, at which the delegates proposed a plan for the establishment of the "general convention of the Episcopal church in the United States of America." James Parker, then of Perth Amboy, was one of the authors of the plan.—New Brunswick Home News.

The Marsh Family Reunion.

The name of Marsh dates back in American history two centuries and a half. Some years ago a number of the Marshes, who flourish in all parts of the land, formed the Marsh Family Association of America. Yesterday their sixth annual reunion was held at the North Baptist church, Newark. There are fifty Marshes in Newark, but when the session opened yesterday only Francis H. Marsh was present. The gathering was the smallest yet held. Among the officers of the Association present were the following: President, Col. Lucius B. Marsh, of Boston; Vice-President, Riverius Marsh, of New Brunswick, and Secretary John H. Marsh, Treasurer, J. Johnston, of Greenfield, Mass. Councilman Francis E. Marsh, of Plainfield delivered an address of welcome, which was responded to by the President. In the evening a number of Marshes from Newark dropped in to see what was going on. To-day the reunion will conclude after officers have been elected.

The Costumes.

"Othello" has never been properly costumed in this country until its production last night. The stars were put to great expense in dressing the piece, and every costume worn was fresh from the hands of a celebrated costumer of New York. They were made from designs in the famous gallery brought especially to this country for Mr. and Mrs. James. In the first act Desdemona wore an underskirt heavily embroidered with pearls and white flowers. The overskirt was of white damask heavily embroidered, and the bodice was white satin cut low out of the Medici period. The shoes were pointed, turned up at the toes and heavily garnished with pearls. The second dress was of yellow satin damask, made in the form of a traveling cloak of that period, with an under-garment of white cashmere. The third dress was of olive green Turkoman silk, engossed with large silver flowers, the waist of hard-painted satin, with a collar of the same lace, with a circlet of pearls on the head. The most notable costume worn by Mr. James was in the third and fourth acts. It was a splendid dress was of scarlet embroidered in gold and silver, the material of Cashmere crepe, with a gold embroidered border. It was garnished with numerous hand-some jewels of Eastern workmanship and many kinds.

The above costumes will be worn in the play of "Hamlet" at Music Hall next Monday evening.

—It is not according to the rules for any man or boy to wear a straw hat after the first day of October, yet a few violations were observed this morning. The atmosphere had almost a touch of summer about it, and no doubt the hats felt comfortable. All the straw hats, very few are now seen, will have to be put away in camphor until 1890.—Elizabeth Journal.

Early Christian Ideas of Woman.

The doctrine that the family is the unit of the state and of civilization was never handed down to us from the early Christians. It came from heathendom if it came from any source in particular. The contempt in which marriage and women were held in the first centuries of the church is shown in a paper in The Contemporary Review by Principal Donaldson, of the Scottish University of St. Andrews.

It is the prevalent opinion that woman owes her present position, such as it is, and some call it a high one, to Christianity and the influence of the Teutonic mind. Principal Donaldson says he used to believe this himself. Then he investigated it thoroughly and found that not only Christianity in the first three centuries did not free and elevate women, but that, "on the contrary, it tended to lower their character and contract their range of activity."

Coming from a man so learned and so thoroughly Christian as Principal Donaldson, is a remarkable statement. The degradation of woman, however, does not come from anything Christ himself taught. Paul is responsible for it. The Ebionites narrate that Paul was a Greek of Tarsus; that he came up to Jerusalem and met and loved the high priest's daughter and became a Jewish proselyte. He then sought the high priest's daughter in marriage, but was rejected. This rankled in his soul ever after. So that he held a grudge at all womankind. Principal Donaldson says:

Some have thought that there is a bitterness against women in the writings of St. Paul which can be explained only by some such rejection as that related by the Ebionites.

At any rate, the writings of Paul gave a trend to the woman question in the first days of the Christian church that lowered and degraded women unspeakably, in the judgment of Principal Donaldson.

Great Columbia.

Retired United States Quartermaster General Meigs has been dipping at once into statistics and prophecy in a late number of Science. He has figured out of his head what the population of this republic will be in 1990.

Our people have nearly trebled in number in the forty years since 1870. It is to be considered that since the memory of men only now in the bloom and prime of manhood we have grown from 23,-600,000 to 67,240,000, that being the estimate which Gen. Meigs makes for the 1890 census, which is the eleventh.

The year 1890 is the hundredth anniversary of the year when the first census was taken. Then we had a population of not quite 4,000,000 all told. With what self complacency the Americans of 1890 must have looked back on the poor little 4,000,000 that our country held in 1790. Just so, if all goes well, the Americans of half a century hence will look back on us and on our insignificant 67,-000,000, for in 1940 the country will have 283,822,977, and in 1990, at the same rate of increase, the population of the United States will be 1,208,562,948. At present the total population of the world is popularly supposed to be 1,400,000,000.

Gen. Meigs estimates our growth during the next century at 4½ per cent. each decade, which is slightly less than it has been during the past century. Beyond a doubt the United States will be the head and home of the English speaking people on the globe. Russia might outstrip us in growth if she had a liberal government and a mild climate, her population being already 105,912,640. But as it is we have nothing to fear from Russia. We have only to stand fast together and march on to glory.

Thibet is a land invested with mystery and romance. There are fastnesses in the mountains that to this day have never been explored; retreats believed by some to be those of Indian adepts who have conquered the infirmities of the flesh and of mortal mind, and who live on for centuries, like Bulwer's Zanoni. It is interesting to know that a Siberian traveler proposes to explore Thibet thoroughly and find out all that he can about it. He will be accompanied by a Chinese escort and take the route along by the Chinese wall. It is to be hoped he will finally be able to set at rest the question whether there are people in Thibet 300 years old.

The cultivation of vocal music in schools is an excellent method of preventing consumption. Good, strong, well developed throats and lungs will be able to resist the consumption spore that floats through the air and is breathed in. Especially this is true if the children are made to open their mouths freely and form words and syllables with the tip of the tongue, the lips and teeth, instead of back in the throat. By this means the harsh nasal tones complained of in the American voice will be completely avoided. Using the voice and lungs in the open air is a noble exercise for strengthening the chest.

EPISCOPALIANS MEET.

The Triennial General Meeting at St. George's Church.

DR. MORGAN DIX WAS CHAIRMAN.

An Imposing Scene—The Important Questions That Are to Come Before the Convention—A List of the Bishops and Deputies Who Are Present.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Triennial General Protestant Episcopal convention was called to order in St. George's church at 3:45 p. m. by the Rev. Charles L. Hutchins, D. D., of Medford, Mass., who is the secretary of the convention. The scene presented was an imposing one. All the bishops were attired in their robes of black and white, and many of them wore their bright colored university hoods. These marks of distinction are conferred by various universities, and vary in color according to the university from which they came. Some of them worn by the bishops this morning were purple, some were cardinal, some were green and all were bright colored. Most of the wearers were elderly men, and the entire body of bishops presented a venerable and distinguished appearance.

Dr. Dix Presides.

Dr. Morgan Dix was declared presiding officer of the convention by a unanimous vote, in taking the chair Dr. Dix expressed himself as highly gratified at the honor in a neat speech. Rev. Charles L. Hutchins, of Massachusetts, was elected secretary of the conference.

The motion of Dr. Huntington that on Thursday morning the discussion relating to the proposed change in the Book of Prayer take place, and that the question be kept before the house on each succeeding day of the convention until it is settled, was adopted.

The assistant secretaries were then announced as follows: Rev. Dr. Anslie, western New York; Rev. E. Worthington, Ohio; Rev. Davis, Minnesota, and Rev. W. Frost, Albany. The convention adjourned to Oct. 5.

Work for the Convention.

The deliberations and doings of so august a body as the general convention are always important and interesting. The present convention, which marks the centenary of the existence of the united church, bids fair to be more important than any of its predecessors. Questions of the gravest import are to be discussed; and there is a possibility of most radical action being taken in several directions. The question of the basis of representation in the general convention has long been a mooted question in church circles, and a determined attempt will be made this year by the opponents of the present system to secure a revision of the general constitution in the direction of a proportionate representation. As it now is, the smallest diocese in believing that such a measure is proper from motives of narrow and unscrupulous partisanship, and that it would be an unjustifiable violation of the fundamental principles of government, opposed to the spirit of the constitution and dangerous to the liberties of the several states: considering the great and increasing variation in the relations between the United States and Canada, and declares that the peaceable and immediate method of securing such closer relations is through a treaty of partial or entire reciprocity of trade between the two countries; favors closer commercial relations with Mexico, and endorses the arbitrary action of the treasury department in respect to the importation of Mexican ores; condemns frauds in elections, the corrupt influences and the waste of a national election law placing the local election machinery of all the states under the control of congress,

Tompkins Hill & Co.

A fat man who owns and runs several fancy farms was visiting at the office yesterday when a frumpish looking fellow, with his right thumb wound up in a rag, climbed the steps and asked for a quarter.

"Why should I give you a quarter?" demanded the agriculturist.

"Because I can't work."

"When did you work last?"

"All last week."

"What were you doing?"

"Husking corn. That's what made my thumb sore."

"Oh, that's it! Husking corn, eh! Well, here's your quarter."

The man had been gone half an hour before a sudden thought came to the farmer. Then he leaped up with the exclamation:

"By gosh! but I believe he lied! Of course he did! We haven't even cut our corn yet!"—Detroit Free Press.

Two Stories of Choate.

Now and then I run across a man who doesn't pretend to know everything, even in his own profession. Joseph Choate, the president of the Bar association, is one of this sort, although some people who have writhed under his cross-examination may not think so. At a meeting of the bar association a while ago, a lawyer who is younger than many of his fellow members made an incorrect statement of some law point. His attention was called to it by an elder brother, who decisively told him that such dense ignorance as he had displayed was unpardonable. The young fellow was completely crushed and could not reply to the attack. But the great inquisitor replied for him. Addressing himself to the elder lawyer, he asked him to repeat his statement.

"I say, Mr. President," responded that gentleman, "that a man who displays such ignorance should not be allowed to practice law. Don't you agree with me?"

"Well," said Mr. Choate, in his dry, incisive way, "I really can't say that I do. I am just beginning to see your young friend is on that point."

Choate was talking one day to a young lawyer just beginning practice, and was giving him some advice—not at regular consultation prices, though—"the truth of the matter is," said the cross-questioner, "that success in New York is greatly an affair of chance. My prospects when I came here, years ago, didn't amount to much. Why, I only had one letter of recommendation to my name."

"And who was that from?" ingenuously asked the young limb of the law.

"It was," said Mr. Choate, speaking in measured tones, "it was from Rufus Choate to William Maxwell Evarts."—New York Star.

He Drank.

In a Monroe avenue saloon yesterday a citizen who was out on a tear demanded that everybody in the place come up and drink with him. There were seven men in there and six came promptly to the bar in response to the call. The seventh was an old bum who had slept asleep, and the man with the red paint slapped him on the back and yelled:

"Do you intend to insult me?"

"Naw!"

"Then come up and drink with me!"

"Don't want any."

"But you've got to drink or fight. Which is it?"

"I—I guess I'll drink, but I've got a headache and don't want it."

"No matter! Drink it, that—get up there!"

There were six glasses of beer on the counter waiting to cause untold misery, and as the old bum got up he reached for the first and gulped it down, and then slid along down the bar and emptied every glass in rotation without hardly stopping to breathe. When he had finished the last he turned to the citizen and said:

"I don't feel well, but if you insist on it I'll take about four fingers of whisky!"—Detroit Free Press.

In Need of Reformation.

"I suppose you think, Kilfordan (puff), that as man who (puff, puff) smokes can be a Christian?"

"It depends altogether on his choice of cigars," replied Kilfordan, gasping for breath. "How are they? Is his influence strong enough to lead you, Grindstone?"—Chicago Tribune.

Ode to Tobacco.

Then who when fears attack
Bid's them accept and black
Care at the bottom of a pipe?
Peculiar accident.

Sweet when the morn is gray;
Sweet when they've closed away
Lunch, and at close of day
Possibly sweet.

I have a liking old
For thee, though manifold
Stories I know are told
Not to thy credit.

How one (or two at most)
Every man's own ghost,
Decies except to roast—
Doctors have said. H.

How dost we not discover
All grow alike decayed?
Brighest as independence,
Meager as liberty.

Go and and hoist their wives,
Tweak neighbors' noses, thieves
Steal and carving knives
Into their gizzards.

Confound such homicidal trials,
Yet know I dive or sin:
Smokers don't commit suicide
Still with their neighbors.

Jones, who, I'm glad to say,
Added insult to N. J.,
Really should be a clam
After his labors.

Once may have had their glee
Cured by tobacco juice,
But, why should they be free
Thoughtfully taken?

Weed not an inhaler be?
Smith, take a fresh cigar.
Jones, the tobacco jar
Here's to thee. Bunn!

WOMAN AND HOME.

A DISSERTATION ON THE FOLLOWERS OF FASHION.

Queer Notions Workers in the United States—Should Understand Politics—Feet of Chinese Women—Superstitions About Birthday Stones.

While there is a great deal to be said as to the folly of following the dictates of fashion into their extremes, and as to giving up one's time and thoughts to such affairs, there would be a good deal more to be said if one did not follow fashion at all. There is not, at any rate, much of the sort to be said that is new, for ever since there have been clothes at all they have been wondered at and criticised, and the "rushing" has been one of the favorite pastimes that even Shakespeare recognized in making his weak minded and his insane retain acquaintance with it. "The glass of fashion," cries Ophelia, concerning her lover, "and the mould of form, although his tailor said, 'You bid me make it orderly and well, according to the fashion and the time.'" To find fault is the oldest of all the fashions, and the habit of doing so probably occasions many of the frequent changes that the critics of the fashion so bewail. When all is urged against the fashions, however, subject to modern ridicule it remains evident that their variety is in reality an attempt to find the one proper, fit and becoming dress for humanity; that the frequent changes are but the outgrowth of failures, and that as fresh garments have to be procured with the fresh season, they may as well be in another mode as in one that has been used and found to be not that which is required.

Of course it is not to be supposed that the devotees of fashion, those who spend all their time and thought and money among the milliners and the fashion plates, who "lie ten nights awake carving the fashion of a new doublet," are thinking anything of this nature. For undoubtedly personal motives, decoration, the desire to outvie one's neighbors, the desire to keep up with the times, together perhaps with the gratifying of vanity and the exciting of envy, all have more share in the business than any philosophy has.

To another circle of people the whole thing would be obnoxious were it worth while; but as it is, and since all the rest of the world obey, how foolish it is to be singular! They follow with the crowd, not in order to be observed, but in order not to be observed. If nature had provided them with feathers, so that dressmakers and dry goods dealers, and new designs and old, could be dispensed with, and a dip in a brook, with some subsequent preening, would answer for a toilet, they would be tolerably content, not even make much stipulation as to the color of the plumage, better satisfied possibly with the gray of the dove than with the emerald sheen of the parrot or the scarlet splendor of the flamingo. But as it has been ordained otherwise, they wear the clothes that others do, making no great inquiry into the matter, adopting what is given out by those constituted as authority, and thankful to slip along in the crowd, with no questions asked.

In Paris, in Berlin, in New York, in the farthest American island, the women who study are dressed with sufficient propriety to pass, and if there is any want of chic, of knowing how to wear the garments, that is not the fault of the method of communicating the knowledge. But in Sitka, as in Boston, London or Rome, the well dressed woman will always be she who has had to carry out the mode for her own, not clung to it too late, nor been too ardent in embracing the whole of it and in carrying out its wildest and most preposterous whims. And she who is most perfectly arrayed will be she whose garments and their fashion never arrest the eye purposely, and who, if the eye by any happening, chances to fall upon her, it will be seen, neither defies the fashion nor exhibits herself as its slave, but whose dress, totally inconspicuous, is thoroughly fashionable. The woman who obeys the fashion, not as a matter of display, not altogether as a matter of dress, but as avoiding the vulgarity and rudeness of obtruding her own individuality, is in a matter to which she has not given the especial study that would entitle her to do so.—Harper's Bazar.

Birthday Stones.

Among the many amusing superstitions of women perhaps the one that does the least harm and affords any lady the greatest amount of satisfaction is the wearing of the birthday stone as a sort of amulet or charm to bespeak good luck and to ward off all those hidden misfortunes that the veil of the future would most certainly reveal were it not for this same potent talisman. A very charming woman, whose birthday chanced to fall in the month of July, insists that she never had any luck until she adopted the ruby for daily wear, and no amount of raillery or persuasion could induce her to part for a single day without having this beautiful stone somewhere about her, either in a ring upon her slender finger, a circlet upon her arm, or hidden somewhere in the folds about her throat. It may be only a fetish point of fire, but it suffices to warn the envious fates that its lovely possessor is guarded against their baleful influence. The opal is a stone of such unlucky omen that few women will wear it at all, loses all its objectionable qualities when worn as a birthday stone. When the bright stone appears to be one of the boundary stones, and therefore unsuitable to be absent the fullest used, it is often put in a seal and, mounted with the monogram or crest of the owner, it becomes a useful heirloom, not to delightly when stamping the billets-doux and dinner invitations of mankind.—Exchange.

Some Women Workers.

At Martha's Vineyard a dumb woman owns and manages a schooner and earns a living as a fisherman. Between times she polishes shells and buttons along the coast. At Cleveland there is also a boat woman who earns her living on the water. In Maine many women are farmers, working from 200 to 500 acres, and of course finding time to read The Atlantic Monthly. At Louisville a Mrs. Black is master of St. John's commandery. At Mount Vernon, Ohio, Mrs. Bebb is grand grave digger, employing ten or twelve men. In New Yersey Mrs. Gill is a shoemaker. The rest of her work is odd billing. Also in New York Mrs. Emma Yewdell gets along fairly well keeping a livery stable. San Francisco and Brooklyn have each a woman blacksmith. Miss Lena Sergeant, of New Orleans, is a kid hunter, living on her father's schooner, and able to kill, clean and prepare more birds in the hour than any male hunter along our coast. In New Orleans women in any other city we have women engaged in occupations unusual to the sex. Here are to be found women editors, merchants, florists, dairy farmers and manufacturers to the manner and of earning good sums of money.—New Orleans Picayune.

Women's Feet in China.

A native Chinese journal, discussing the practice of cramping ladies' feet, says that in 1664 the great and enlightened Emperor Kanghi issued an edict forbidding it under heavy penalties, and calling upon all local officials to suppress the custom. But four years later, on the arrival of the board of revenue, he withdrew the edict, and left the ladies free to follow their own tastes. The origin of the strange custom seems to be lost in obscurity. In the time of Yaou, one of the wife of an emperor of the Tang dynasty is said to have worn shoes only three inches long, and one theory assigns the practice to the Fourth century, A. D., "when Yu Fei danced before the last of the sovereigns of the Tsi dynasty, and every footstep made a lily grow." It is also said that it originated in the Tsuch century, when a beautiful concubine of one of the emperors "tied up her feet with silk into the shape of the crescent moon, and all the other beauties of the time imitated her." The oldest poetic allusion to the cramped foot, but making no reference to the cramped foot, but song of the beauty of the snow white feet of the women of their times, when the foot gear, when it was worn, was square toed for men and round toed for women. The native writer thinks the custom was progressive, and only gradually attained its present pitch. In the two southern provinces it is forbidden, but in most women's feet are of the natural size.—London Times.

The Wedding Ring Finger.

The origin of wearing the wedding ring upon the fourth finger of the left hand has been much disputed, even from very ancient times. A reasonable inference from the custom of wearing rings generally on the fourth finger as a matter of convenience is given by Macrobius, a Latin author of the Fifth century, who says: "At first it was both free and usual to wear rings on either hand; but after that luxury increased, when precious stones and rich inculptures were added, the custom of wearing them on the right hand was translated into the left; for, that hand being less employed, thereby they were best preserved. And for the same reason they placed them on this finger (the fourth), for the thumb is too active a finger, and is too commonly employed with either of the rest; the index or forefinger was too naked whereto to commit their pretiosities, and hath the tuition of the thumb scarce unto the second joint; the middle and little finger they rejected as extremes, and as too big or too little for their rings; and of all chose out the fourth, as being least used of any, as being guarded from any injury, and in most this peculiar condition, that it cannot be extended alone and by itself, but will be accompanied by some finger on either side."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Women Should Study Politics.

If there is one thing more than another which the average middle aged woman needs to make a study of it is in matters pertaining to politics, says an exchange. Having never had the privilege of a voice in public affairs, women have become accustomed to thinking but little about such matters, and are largely the creatures of custom. All this must now be changed, and to perfect the change we will find that plenty of hard study awaits us. Many a young girl can, fresh from her study of civil government—once untaught of in the common schools—can give many a point in political matters to her father, old politician though he may be, regarding "the government of the people, by the people," and just how the law is administered.

Ask a group of women concerning their rights and liberties under our existing laws and probably more than half the number will declare that they have never bothered their heads about such questions.

But the time has arrived when women must learn to think for themselves. Already in various cities women's clubs are being formed for intelligent study of the political questions of the day, and newspapers are read, and political works are discussed, until one wonders where it will all end.

Girls Who Paint.

I was the other afternoon in the park, and was looking at the ladies driving in their carriages. A considerable number of them had endeavored to "improve" their complexions, and, what is more curious, the young ones seem to have done it even more than the elderly ones. Now, admitting that to paint the face be desirable, it ought at least to be well done, particularly when the painting has to stand the test of sunlight. I never saw faces worse painted.

An American girl paints from her childhood upward, and by the time that she goes over to London to be presented at court and to take part in such other functions as dear to the young republican, she has acquired a mastery of her art. So again with French women. They know how to paint. But English girls know as little about it as savages. The white that they daub on their faces looks blue in daylight; their rouge becomes a pale magenta; and the line that they draw round their eyes gives their orbs a bead like, expressionless air; the red that they put on their lips assumes a brownish tint and darkens their teeth, and their attempts to better their eyebrows generally end in making one different from the other.—London Truth.

Two Girls in the Country.

Girls whose homes are in the country where summer sojourners from the cities are frequent may earn many a dollar by putting up preserves, jellies and pickles, which the city folks will gladly buy to take back with them. In a small town in Western Massachusetts the story is told of two young ladies whom necessity suddenly obliged to earn their own living. One of them started out as a music teacher and the other one placed her conspicuous position a sign announcing: say orders for canned fruit, jellies, preserves and pickles would be promptly filled. And if desired made from the customers' own receipts. Throughout the summer both girls had all the orders they could fill and talk of spring help. The business proved more profitable than music teaching, and besides earning a comfortable living enabled the sisters to remain together in their old home.—Boston Journal.

Shot the Short Hair.

Among the presents given to the Duchess of Fife we read of none "delighted with thanks" or without them, says James Payn in The Independent. This was not always the case with royal brides. Living in the days of Louis Philippe, the Princess Clementine, little fair is a matter of duty to encourage native industry, and especially to set her face against the custom of smuggling, so largely indulged in by the upper classes. She not only wore dresses of English manufacture only, but insisted that no foreign material should be introduced into them nor into those of her household by her dressmakers.

On receiving on her marriage from a high placed official an Indian shawl of the value of 5,000 guineas she returned it with the observation that a Warwick shawl of the value of half a crown and honestly procured would have pleased her better. Her popularity was as extraordinary as it was well deserved, notwithstanding a certain strictness of behavior and opposition to impropriety of all kinds very foreign to the age she lived in. The fox hunting parson, common enough in those days, was very offensive to her. In a history of England, still extant, which belonged to her very young cousin, there is this marginal note in her own handwriting opposite to the account of a churchman killed in battle: "He had no business to have been there."

Salt for Moths.

For moths' salt is the best exterminator. The cases in one of the hospital convents have tried everything else without success, and their experience is valuable, as they have so much clothing of the sick who go there; and strangers, once dying there, often leave quantities of clothing, etc. They had a room full of feathers, which were sent there for pillow making, and they were in despair, as they could not extricate the moths until they were advised to try common salt. They sprinkled it around, and in a week or ten days they were altogether rid of the moths. They are very troubled now. In heavy velvet carpets sweeping them with salt cleans and keeps them from moths, as particles of salt remain in the carpets and corners. Salt is not hurtful to any color, and has no bad smell. Here is a little hint I add, and which perhaps every one does not know: For cleaning wash basins, bath, etc., use the same thing, common salt. Rub a little of the salt with your fingers on the basin. Often a sort of scum is noticed in the basins in a washable washstand in the bathroom; the salt takes it off easily, and leaves the basin shining and clean.—Philadelphia Press.

Homemade Japanese Goods.

A woman who has many original ideas said to a reporter: "There is no earthly reason why homes should look like barns for want of pretty and inexpensive decorations. An idea popped into my head the other night after I had retired and I could hardly wait for morning to put it into execution."

She pointed to a very "Japanesy" looking portiere which hung between her sitting and dressing room. It looked as if it might have cost a snug sum, but she said it had barely covered fifty cents. It was made of small bamboo poles, sawed into short lengths, and strung upon heavy cordlike beads, every few inches was an ordinary wooden button mold which was painted in bright color as has taste dictated, the hole in the center being drilled to a size that would admit the cord to pass through it. It certainly was effective, though the expense was so small. She had a second one in progress, she said when it: be all of the bamboo beads, every other one the natural color and the ones between them colored. "Water colors may be used in the coloring of these beads," she went on to say, "but I prefer oil, as it requires no varnishing afterwards."—New York World.

A Cameroons Woman's Toilet.

So long as they are young and handsome the Cameroons women pay great attention to their toilet. The petticoat, which reaches down from the hips to the ankles, must be thoroughly smooth and clean, and the apron, which is worn under it, is as spotless as the underclothing of a European lady. Their hair is worn in fantastical hair dressing, into braids of various shapes, without grease and usually without ornaments, although a woman is occasionally found who wears a string of beads around her head. The dress is usually lasts for a week, and is bound up at night in a cloth for protection. It is also a part of the hair dresser's business, which is rather odd, to pull out from the lady's eyelashes. A string of pearls or some other ornament of European origin is worn around the neck. The shoulders and breast are covered with ornamental tattooing in red and blue. Elaborate ruffles of ivory or metallic rings are worn upon the wrists and ankles.—Robert Muller, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly.

Imperial Lady Linguists.

To many of her majesty's subjects it has been known for more than a half century past that our gracious queen is endowed with the "gift of tongues." In fact, she is one of the few most accomplished linguists among living ladies of imperial rank, the other three being her own daughter, Victoria, the widowed German empress; Maria Feodorovna, the Russian czarina, and Elizabeth, the Austrian kaiserin. The venerable sovereign of these realms is absolute mistress of the four European languages—French, German, Italian and Spanish—which are most interesting from a literary point of view. Taking into consideration her strong predilection for the "Land of Lakes" and for the Highland people, it is by no means surprising that her majesty should be "most acquaint with ta Gaelic," and we have been informed that, some years ago, she assiduously and successfully studied one of the native languages of her Indian Empire.—London Daily Telegraph.

An Overproduction of Beauty.

It is said by The New York Sun that some of the most beautiful girls in New York are employed by the dramatic agencies, and more stories and odd phases of character are to be found in these resorts than anywhere else in town. Undoubtedly the dramatic agency is the last resort of many women who are driven to desperate means, and their manner when they enter the agent's office for the first time is often indicative of the awful torment which has taken hold of an amateur who first comes in contact with anything or anybody belonging to the profession of the stage. The better agencies are now run in a business fashion, however, and, though they suggest servant girl employment bureaus on a large scale, the faces of the women destroy the illusion. Beauty is so prevalent as to be actually at a discount.

By the death of her daughter, Mrs. Julia Jackson Christian, the widow of Stonewall Jackson was left childless. Although Mrs. Jackson was twice married—the first time to Miss Junkins, a sister of Mrs. Margaret J Preston, the poetess—she has had but one child, the daughter of his second wife, Mrs. Christian was, as a child, a conspicuous figure at the ceremony of unveiling the statue of her father erected in Richmond, Va., by his Virginia admirers. She was married in that city in 1887.

It is proposed to ask the women of the country to subscribe funds to erect a monument in honor of Queen Isabella of Spain to whom Columbus was indebted for means to start on his adventurous expedition. The monument is to be an institution of a character somewhat resembling Cooper Institute, where women may have educational advantages free of cost. It is to be put forward as an early day, and put before the public in a simple time for the summer of the work.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF AUTUMN AND EARLY WINTER STYLES.

Fashions in Bonnets, Hats and Wraps. The New Long Cloaks, Mantles and Dressiest Capes Described—Hats and Bonnets to Be Seen at Leading Milliners'.

In the matter of head wear ladies will find this season a wide range for choice. There are large and effective hats of felt, with stiff brims of velvet, and small bonnets of soft felt toques. There are autumn toques of colored tulle with narrow velvet strings coming from the back, and there is no end of pretty little bonnets of velvet lace or cloth to match the dress. New York milliners, however, claim that there will be less matching of hats and costumes than heretofore, but that the fad or interest will be of harmonious coloring that may be worn with almost any costume.

The French bonnet shown in our cut represents one of the leading shapes. It is composed of green velvet and is trimmed with mauve colored ostrich plumes.

An equally great variety of styles has been brought out in outside wraps. These include long cloaks for the first of the days made of soft twilled wools, the Ursuline cloaks of camel's hair cloth, with round shoulders, capes and all sorts of short wraps.

The shorter wraps, designed for wearing over handsome dresses, are mostly in the mantilla shapes.

Some of these mantles are of plush and some of velvet. Many are quite short in the back, while their long fronts reach almost to the foot of the dress. The model shown in the cut and known as the "vest mantle" consists of a close vest made of black velvet. It is embellished front and back with a pointed trimming in beaded gimp work, framed with a box pleating of Marquise lace, which at the back terminates as a pouf, and in front extends as two long ends caught up in puffings by shot ribbon knotted with long loops and ends. A rich fringe with a gimp heading forms the basque, and the ball sleeves are entirely in lace and bead work.

A NEW MANTLE.

Small shoulder capes of cloth, velvet or fur will be worn late on in the autumn with handsome costumes.

Besides these capes are a variety of pelerines, and wraps with jacket basques and vrai many shaped fronts. There are long pelisses, with high shoulders and redingote wraps, with full sleeves. From all of which it will be seen that this season, at least, fashions favor both the lean and the stout.

Plain and Fancy Velvets.

There promises to be an immense demand for fancy velvet, and the supply is equal to any demand. Many of the patterns are large, many are thrown on arrasy grounds, many on nick nain, and some patterns are entirely in fine velvet, while others show plain and fine blended. The number of black fancy to be found is large, and these are for dresses and trains, as well as for mantels. A great novelty is a brocatelle ground and a large bat open design all over of a Persian character, the ground is in some dark shade, the pattern in a Paisley shawl mixture.

The velvet brocades for dresses are beautiful in the extreme, and the varieties are greater than I have seen in previous seasons. Many of the best are only intended to be used for the front breadth, some only for the trains. There are several rich moire velvets with satin grounds and plain narrow velvet stripes, and the floral design in fine of a lighter shade than the velvet stripes. These, again, bold velvet patterns are thrown on arrasy grounds in many colorings.

Plain velvet is extremely fashionable, both in black and in colors.

Fashion Briefs.

Large plaids and bordered materials are to be worn by children, and a good many of the knickerbocker cloth coats are trimmed with beaver.

A new coat for children has a cape which opens down the center of the back as well as the front. Sailor jackets, with gold anchor buttons, in bright red cloth, are very novel.

In the French capital plaids are produced in silk and wool, and the woolen tartans are made up with black cloth jackets. The braiding is elaborate, and feather trimming is more used than fur.

Cloth and woolen gowns generally will be worn during the winter, and the colorings are brighter and more effective than they have been of late in Paris. Bolivias and Jaros are the two most fashionable colors. Jaro is a brown, so dark as good brown,

Carney Bros., which was lost in the flood of Tuesday, July 30, after having fallen in the gulch in front of the store; it would seem almost impossible for such a large furnace to be carried such a distance but perhaps it had a clue that Doctadder was shivering from fright and thought it would take the chances of having Jenny Mantox fire it up and show the public what a powerful heater it was.

A Girl's Toilet Table.

A sensible girl will not keep a lot of cosmetics and drugs on the toilet table, but there are a few articles she should already have in a convenient place. She should have an array of glass-stopper bottles containing alcohol, alum, camphor, borax, glycerin and glycerine or vaseline. A little cologne and water may be used as a wash for the mouth and throat if the breath is at all sweet. Powdered charcoal applied to the teeth will help it from becoming very unsightly and unbearable. Insect stings or eruptions on the skin are removed by alcohol. A few grains of alum in tepid water will relieve people whose hands perspire very freely, rendering them unpleasantly moist. A few drops of the alcohol added to the water are also beneficial for this purpose, and are also desirable for those whose feet perspire freely. We should always recommend care in the use of scented soap; in many cases the perfume is simply a disguise for poor quality. A good pure cocoa or honey soap is always preferable. Of course one must rely on scented soap from a high class manufacturer, but it does more than it is worth. In addition to the above list of articles alcohol should be kept for washing the hair. Occasionally a little borax or ammonia may be used for this purpose, but it is usually too harsh in its effects.—The Evening Doctor.

A DEAD BODY FOUND.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY AT BERNARDSVILLE TUESDAY.

The Body Supposed to be that of Hugh Higgins of Plainfield Who Disappeared About Three Months Ago.—Relatives Trying to Identify the Remains.

On Monday, July 15th, Mr. Hugh Higgins, an employe of the Potter Press Works, suddenly left his home in this city, and has never been heard from since.

Yesterday The NEWS published an item stating that the decomposed body of a man had been found on the Dussey farm, at Bernardsville, near Liberty Corner, Somerset county. The description of the clothing given tallies with the clothing worn by Higgins at the time of his disappearance. Mrs. Higgins, the wife of the missing man feels positive that the body found at Bernardsville, is that of her husband, and Higgins' brother, who is a section boss on the Central railroad in this city, accompanied by Charles McCarty, a friend of the family, went to Bernardsville this morning to identify the remains.

Nothing was found in the clothing by which identification could be established, and the body is in advanced state of decomposition. At the time of the disappearance of Mr. Higgins his mind was slightly deranged.

The body was found by a party of hunters but early in July, and was in a very secluded part of the woods. Two tickets on the Central Railroad from Dunellen to Plainfield were found in the pockets. The man was well-dressed, the clothing being of the finest texture. He was of fair complexion, about five feet five inches, stout, with red mustache, one of his shoes was missing and could not be found. Coroner Jones, of Bernardsville, took charge of the body.

Friends of the family say that the last time Higgins was heard from he was wandering in the mountains and it is supposed that he died from starvation.

Bernardsville is a small village situated about nine miles from this city, in a northwesterly direction, over the Watchung mountains.

There being no other nominations the secretary was instructed to cast a ballot for Mr. Harper. The newly elected president was escorted to the chair by the honor conferred and promised to do all in his power to advance the interests of the Club. A committee of three was then appointed by the chair to look after the delinquent members and after the transaction of some routine business the meeting adjourned.

THE UNION COUNTY COURT.

The Union county court convened at Elizabeth yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, Judges Van Syckel and Wiley on the bench. The attendance was large, but not so much so as on Wednesday. The case of the city against the Central railroad to regain possession of the dock at the foot of Elizabeth avenue was continued.

The first witness called by the city was John Magie. He testified to the finding of a map of a new manufacturing town in the Essex court. He was shown a lithograph map of the city which he testified was given to him by his father, the Rev. Dr. Magie, in the year 1858.

Joseph Davis was next called. He testified to having been a resident of this city for over half a century. He was born in New York city in 1810. Before coming to live in this city he resided with his father on a farm in Westfield. He, in company with his father, often came to this city, bringing with them farm products, which they used to cart to the foot of Elizabeth avenue, which at that time was known as Elizabethtown Point. What is now known as Elizabeth avenue was the main thoroughfare to Elizabethport and led directly to the sound. The dock at that time was considered a public one and was used by all. He distinctly recollects that many people used to go there for shad and were landed at that dock or at one a few feet above it.

Constable Amos Moffet, of Plainfield, was also sworn. He testified to the fact that his father was a teamster in those days and, in consequence, used to go to the dock very frequently. He used to get shad at the dock. Elizabeth avenue was the main thoroughfare.

Lieut. Waters Furman was the next witness called. He testified to having lived in this city since 1818. That if his life was spared until next January he would be eighty years of age. He could recollect but little of the time he first came to live here. There used to be a hotel near the dock and he used to go there and play with the boys. The testimony given by the Lieutenant was very interesting.

The Rev. R. H. Reinhart, being duly sworn, testified to having been a resident of this city for forty-two years. He had preached since 1847. He recollected the dock at that time, but not so well as to say whether it was considered exclusively a public dock, although he knew that it used to be generally used when he first began to preach here. In his discoses there were about eighty houses, which contained in all about 500 people.—Elizabeth Herald.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURTS.

Case of Blackford vs. Lehigh Valley Railroad Company.

The case of Blackford v. L. V. R. R. Co., was put on trial in the Somerset county court on Friday and lasted until Wednesday noon, when the jury retired. This was a suit brought by Blackford for the use of his employer, Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Readington to recover $1,100, that being the amount paid upon a policy of insurance held by the former for the loss of his outbuildings at New Market. It was claimed that in the latter part of 1887, sparks from a Lehigh Valley train fell to the plaintiff's field, and the fire ran across the 75-acre field and set fire to some corn-stalk stacks and thence ran to the outbuildings. There was no one at home at the time but an old lady who did not learn of the fire until too late to save the buildings.

The principal witnesses for the plaintiff were a Mr. Leach and his son, who swore they saw the fire when it started. Mr. Leach, when asked upon cross-examination why he did not gave an alarm, said "he had'nt been asked to."

The defense was that the Company is using all modern known appliances to prevent the escape of sparks from their locomotives, and upon that day these appliances were in perfect working condition. Models of the spark arrester were exhibited in Court. It was insisted by the defense that the escape of sparks sufficient to start the fire was impossible, and, further, that for sparks to escape and be carried 120 feet to the field where it was claimed the fire was started and ignite the grass, would have been absolutely impossible.

The case was summed up by counsel Wednesday morning and given to the jury before the midday adjournment. They rendered a verdict in the afternoon in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount of the claim. Hon. A. A. Clark appeared for the plaintiff, and Hon. Thomas McCarter for the defense.

The next case was that of Sarah Van Felt vs. Annie E. Bennett, to recover $700 upon a note of which defendant was a joint maker with M. H. Whitford and John V. Whitford. Judge Magie after citing the principal of the law that a married woman cannot be bound for the debts of another, directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, Annie E Bennett, but to render judgment for the amount of the note and interest as against the other makers of the note, W. V. Steele for plaintiff; Hon. A. A. Clark for defendants.

The case of Veghte vs. Dixon was next moved. Counsel for defendant sought to amend his plea, but Judge Magie denied the application. Tried and verdict for plaintiff six cents.

The Dunellen Club Victorious.

On the Stelton fair Green at Dunellen yesterday, the Dunellen Bicycling Club defeated for the third season, the Middlesex county Bicycling Club by a score of 75 to 66. This victory gives the Dunellenites, the undisputed ownership of the Headron Challenge Cup, having won it three times in succession. Among the players were F. J. Bisseker, F. P. Haffner and others of Dunellen, and Messrs. Hammond and Lee of Jamesburg. L. A. Powelson, Dr. Long and others from New Brunswick. The club will play a game next Thursday and the Thursday following, and these games will be the concluding ones for the season.

AT THE STATE PRISON.

A VISIT AMONG PLAINFIELD CONVICTS.

Johnson and Jackson Dying of Consumption.—A dangerous Convict to be Released this Month.—His History.

In the hospital of the State prison there are two prisoners from Plainfield. One of these is a colored man named John Johnson. The other is John Jackson.

Johnson has served eleven years deducting time allowance of five days on each month for good behavior) of a twenty years' sentence for manslaughter. Prison walls will not hold him much longer, for he is in the last stages of consumption, and has bright's disease of the kidneys. He breathes with much difficulty, and appears to be in a dying condition.

Johnson was a coachman who was employed when arrested by a family named Lewis, on Eighth street, in this city. About two o'clock in the morning, some ten years ago, Johnson and a Mrs. Williams were discovered in a house in battle row, on West Third street, by the woman's husband, who forthwith sought to wreak vengeance on Johnson and his paramour. The latter was Williams's lover. In the fight which followed, Johnson, believing he was about to be shot, shot and killed the wronged husband. He was arrested by ex-Chief Dodd, tried, convicted, and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. A few years ago he was taken ill, and has remained in the hospital ever since, his death, as stated, being now expected daily

Jackson is in the last stages of consumption. The doctor told a News' reporter, who in company with Councilman Dunham and Chief Carey, yesterday visited the State prison, that Jackson's life might be prolonged a few months if he were released, and received proper treatment, but it is very doubtful, if in his poor circumstances, he could receive nearly as good treatment as he received in the prison hospital. Jackson, according to the doctor, will never again see the snow fly. He has aged very much during his imprisonment. He is but thirty-nine years old. His hair has become gray, and he is also slightly bald. His high forehead and full and keen bluish eyes make him appear, in point of intelligence, above the average of the 1,000 or more convicts in the prison.

We published a likeness of Jackson at the time of his capture two years ago. Even then he was a dying man looking, but he is so greatly changed that he would not be recognized as the same man. His downfall is directly traceable to the saloons, he being one of their victims and unable to resist an appetite for strong drink, which ultimately brought him to his ruin. He is very friendly after Mayor Male, desiring to know if he was still alive, and referring to him feelingly as "the good old man".

On the 7th day of October, 1889, the State prison doors will open and give liberty to John Johnson. He will wear a $2.50 cotton, diagonal, blue suit, and have $5 in his pocket. The State presents a suit and $5 to each prisoner upon being discharged. The suit makes the prisoner appear to good advantage for a few days, perhaps a few weeks, until it becomes wet, when it fades and shrinks.

Gravelores was arrested two years ago, by Chief Carey, for robbing the guests at a Netherwood boarding house, where he also was a boarder. It was the first arrest made by Chief Carey since locking, but he so greatly elects d great credit upon that officer, because of the skill and the courage he displayed.

Greatorex had been in Plainfield but three months, and immediately after the robbery disappeared no one knew where. In fact he was very little known here anyhow.

The Chief worked for nearly two weeks without any trace of the thief. Then on a very slight clue he went one night to a stock farm, twelve miles beyond Philadelphia, and three miles from any railroad, and found Greatorex among a troupe of a dozen men who were seated about a table eating. The Chief had never seen Greatorex before. The thief had carefully disguised himself in appearance and had adopted an assumed name to escape detection.

The thief knew Chief Carey by sight. That knowledge is what led to his identification. When the Chief entered the room, among the dozen men, they all looked up toward the visitor. The Chief looked at the dozen faces and saw his man. He knew one of them. But one of the men manifested sudden surprise. The Chief correctly concluded that the surprised man was Greatorex, walked over to him, as if he had known him all his life, put his hand on his shoulder and said coolly, "I am an officer of the law, and you are my prisoner," forthwith slipping handcuffs on the thief's hands.

Before the company recovered from their surprise the Chief had his prisoner in a hired conveyance outside and was being driven to the depot where he arrived in the nick of time to get his prisoner handcuffed to him to prevent escape. At the depot the driver noticed the handcuffs and for the first time knew that he had conveyed an officer and prisoner, and expressed his great surprise. By 1:30 a. m. the Chief had the thief safely in the Plainfield lock-up, and went home pleased with the result of his remarkable trip, although he had really kidnapped the prisoner into this State. He recovered all the stolen property—two gold watches and chains—except the money, which the prisoner had spent. The jewelry was found in Philadelphia pawnshops and restored to the owners. Chief Carey also traced up the Grent rex record, and found that he was a professional thief, and exceedingly dangerous, that he had served five terms as a convict in England, and had been in this country but a few months. It is a custom in England and other countries to send incorrigible criminals to this country, and it is supposed Greatorex is one of this class.

Two of the five months he was in this country Greatorex lived at Morristown, and left that place suddenly coming to Plainfield. Here he made love to a servant girl, on Broadway, and after wringing her affections, induced her to lend him money. In the three months he was here he borrowed $60 from her, and used the money to keep up the appearance of a well-to-do merchant, and pay his board, until he had got the run of the boarding house, when he robbed it as stated.

The Broadway servant girl was easily in love with him, a criminal. The Chief in tracing up the England record found that Greatorex had one or two wives in that country, and this evidence saved the duped servant girl much humiliation and probably saved her from being made a horse victim of the scoundrel's villainy than she already was.

The thief has engaging manners, is well-informed, and quite accomplished generally. Chief Carey intends to visit the State prison several times between now and the time set for the convict's release, to become well acquainted with the thief's physiognomy, so that in case Greatorex locates in this section again, he will have a poor chance of committing further robberies. It is not likely that he will locate here, but will seek his victims elsewhere. There are convicts who upon release might with proper encouragement become good and true citizens, but they are not such men as Greatorex, whom it is a pity is allowed to roam among honest, unsuspecting people at all, but ought to be shipped back to England and kept out of the country altogether. The State Prison records show that two-thirds of the convicts are foreigners, and possibly many of these are the incorrigible convicts shipped to us from other countries by the governments to get rid of them. Who knows? There are many other matters of interest revealed by this visit, which will be the subjects for future articles

Country Roads.

One thing that strikes the American traveling through the country in Europe is the excellent roads. The next feature that impresses him, if his journey is in the summer, is the absence of weeds. You may travel from one end of Holland or Belgium, in particular, and scarcely see a weed.

He is apt to come back disgusted with his own country in this respect. Our highways certainly are a disgrace to a great and rich nation like ours. The ruts, the mud puddles, with a huge stone at the bottom that breaks the axle of the wagon that goes wallowing through the mire to market or to meeting—school, those are things too familiar. And our succession crops save their souls—if they needed a hill road, laid it out straight up the backbone of the elevation, without a thought of winding gently around the side of it. Generally the road remains to this day just as they left it.

Our farmers are well to do and very intelligent. They ought now to take the improvement of American roads seriously in hand. There are books and road makers that will show them how to compass the improvement. In localities where there are stone and gravel, what so good as the turnpike, with its ditch each side, its grass bordering of living green, from which the thrifty farmer keeps the weed out? If he has an eye to the beautiful he also plants trees along the way to gladden the traveler. So it is done in Europe. In regions where there is no stone there are other well known ways of making good roads.

From Chicago to Tampa, Fla.

A route of travel has been projected by a number of western business men which will connect Aspinwall directly with Chicago, by way of Tampa, Fla. If a line were to be drawn through Tampa from Chicago to Aspinwall, it would be almost straight, and the length would be 2,200 miles. At present goods from Cuba, the West Indies and Central America for Chicago are shipped by way of New York, sometimes going to Europe first, and sometimes being shipped from Aspinwall to New York. The distance from Aspinwall to Chicago via New York is 3,300 miles.

It is a thousand miles by direct rail route from Chicago to Tampa. When the railway is constructed, steamers from the West Indies, Cuba, etc., will bring goods to Tampa, which can then be shipped direct. Beyond doubt Tampa has a fair future as a seaport.

It is the intention of a number of sugar planters to establish in Louisiana mills where the cane product can be made into the manufactured article on the spot. They say that a mill in Louisiana can pay for itself in one season and still turn it into sugar at a profit which will pay for the mill in three years. They ask northern capital which is seeking investment to look into the sugar mill prospect in Louisiana. The time will surely come when the United States itself will produce all the sugar required for home consumption.

Ferdinand Ward, the accomplished financier who engineered the famous failure of Grant & Ward, is now a first class steam job printer in the penitentiary at Sing Sing. At last he knows what it is to do an honest day's labor, and at night sleep the sweet sleep that comes to those who have rendered some equivalent during the day for their bread. May Printer Ward continue always to earn his living as honestly.

Thomas Edison has made the blood of the elegant art centers of Europe run cold by pronouncing the paintings of the old masters in the Louvre and elsewhere at Paris "grand rot." Privately there are a good many Americans who agree with Mr. Edison, though they are afraid to say so out loud.

The London Spectator has decided that American magazines are greatly superior to English both in pictures and print. This is because America read more than English people do and buy more magazines. Consequently publishers here can better afford artistic printing and engraving.

In New York there are over 40,000 Italians. They have practically possession of all the fruit stands in the city, having rooted out the old apple woman long ago. They are bootblacks, and they sell newspapers and do rough labor, and in these ways ninety-nine in a hundred make their living.

Mrs. Mary Black Clayton, a daughter of Judge Jeremiah Black, calls attention to the fact that Columbus himself inaugurated slavery in America. On his first voyage to the country he sent 500 natives of San Salvador to Spain to be sold as slaves.

Germany is going to prepare a floating exposition. A huge steamship will be filled with the products of German industry and sent to the principal seaport towns of the world, in turn. It is hoped by this means to make a market for German industries.

FORTY PERSONS KILLED.

Fatal Explosion of the Steamer Corona's Boiler.

A PARTIAL LIST OF THE DEAD.

The Accident Happened Near Port Hudson—Wreck of the British Steamship Euxemore—Nineteen of Her Crew Reported Lost—Survivors Dying.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4.—The steamer Corona of the Quachita Consolidated line, which left this city for the Quachita river, exploded her boilers at False river, nearly opposite Port Hudson, about noon, causing the loss of the steamer and about forty lives. The Anchor line steamer City of St. Louis happened near by, and her crew saved many lives.

A List of the Killed.

The following is a list of the lost as far as known: Cyrus Lee, clerk; W. Black, captain; J. V. Jordan, first clerk; Charles C. Elles, second clerk; Swimp Hanna, third clerk; Fred Dinkle barkeeper; Fred Verman, barkeeper; Pat Ryan, steward; Dick Curtis, fireman; Tom Shook, engineer; Henry Doyle, porter; James Boyle, porter; Mr. Tate, barber; Hickey Davis, dark band; Tom Cook, author; Billy Young, second mate; Sam Steel, Texas boy; both captains of the deck watch and eight roustabouts.

Passengers Lost.

Dr. Atsell, stepmother, and four negro musicians traveling with him; Mr. Scott, of Smithdale, La.; Mrs. Davis, of Stockman, Texas; Mr. Kossek, Mrs. Huff, of Opelousas; Mrs. Kaufman's nurse and eldest child.

It Was Her First Trip.

The Corona went on her first trip of the season, and had just recently been repaired at an expense of $12,000. She was valued at $30,000.

A List of the Saved.

The following named passengers were saved: Mrs. Henry Jones and two children, Mrs. Lang, Mrs. Robert Matthews, Mrs. Kaufman and children, Capt. B. G. Cornwell, Mrs. J. R. Brown, Mrs. J. J. Meredith, Mr. L. F. Mason, Mr. Baughman, Mr. Cornwell, Shreveportsville; Mr. John Carr, of Harrisonburg.

A Survivor's Story.

Mrs. E. W. Robertson, a rescued passenger, says that when the Corona arrived opposite False river landing, about sixteen miles below Bayou Sara, one of her boilers exploded, tearing the boat to pieces, when she sank in deep water in a few seconds. Mrs. Robertson was wedged in the ladies cabin with some of the debris lying across her legs, but was suddenly relieved and found herself floating in the river. She sank twice, but luckily was picked up and escaped with only a few painful bruises.

L. C. Rolling, pilot of the Corona, says he was asleep in the texas at the time of the explosion. He does not know how the explosion occurred. He was awakened by the noise it made, and was painfully burned on both hands.

Secretary of State Mason's Story.

Hon. L. F. Mason, secretary of state, who was a passenger on the Corona, states that he was in the cabin talking to Mrs. Robertson when the explosion occurred. He caught with life preservers, and assisted in saving Mrs. Robertson and another lady. There was very little time for preparation for escape, as the boat sank in a few minutes or seconds after the explosion occurred. As the steamer City of St. Louis came down she was hailed and took on board all the passengers who were on the Corona. No one seems to be able to give any explanation as to the cause of the sudden disaster.

She Sank at Once.

Capt. T. J. Bowers, one of the owners of the line, who assumed command on the death of Capt. Blank, says the explosion was not due to a too high pressure of steam. He had been carefully examining the gauges, and is positive there was not a pressure of more than 135 pounds. The boat had a moderate cargo. She was in midstream, just below the landing at Arbroth, and had just whistled to pass the City of St Louis, fortunately coming down at the time. The explosion had a downward tendency and blew out the bottom of the boat, causing her to sink immediately. The cabin was torn in two, the rear portion floating down stream and bearing a number of the dead with it. The fire happened to be forward and started at once to put out the flames, which began to burn in several places. He says the boat would undoubtedly have burned had not the steamer Quachita and City of St. Louis been so near at hand to assist. None of the books, papers or other valuables were recovered.

But One Body Recovered.

The City of St. Louis did noble work in saving lives. The Anchor liner rendered all assistance possible and took on board the rescued passengers and crew. When nothing more could be done the boat steamed to Baton Rouge, where physicians were summoned and everything possible done for the injured. The only dead body recovered was that of Fred Overman, the second barkeeper.

NINETEEN REPORTED DROWNED.

The Steamer Euxemore's Terrible Experience—Five of the Crew Found Dying.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4.—The steamship Euxemoor, Capt. Richard J. Gray, sailed from this port for Rio Janeiro, Rio Janeiro, with a cargo of wheat, foundered at sea in a gale, Sept. 5, and it is feared that nineteen of her crew were lost. A small boat belonging to the Euxemoor was picked up here on Sunday, containing nineteen men has not been heard from.

Seven of the Crew Saved.

Jos. R. Foard & Co., the Barmoor company's agents here, have just received a cablegram from St. Jago, saying that First Officer Palmer and Second Engineer Meldrum have arrived at Nassau in a boat with five of the crew.

But Five of Them Are Dying.

A later cable says the five sailors are dying. Capt. Gray and the others in the long boat may have been picked up by another vessel. Among the missing are Second Mate Stone and First Engineer Souder. The storm that wrecked the Euxemoor was the great hurricane from the West Indies which played such havoc along the New Jersey coast in the middle of September, so far as learned the crew were all English men. The cargo was valued at $70,701.

SEVEN YEARS' IMPRISONMENT.

That Is the Sentence Passed Upon Gen. Faulkner.

BUFFALO, Oct. 4.—The jury in the Faulkner case after being out all night returned a verdict of guilty, and Judge Coxe has sentenced Gen. Lester B. Faulkner to seven years' imprisonment. Gen. Faulkner will appeal.

The crime for which Gen. Faulkner was tried was the wrecking of the First National bank, of Dansville, N. Y., of which he was a director, by Henry L. Jones, the president. The bank failed in May, 1887, with liabilities of over $400,000 and practically no assets. The bank had been in a bad condition for four years or more, but by making false reports, firing the books and negotiating loans on notes of the bank the institution was floated along and so kept from closing. Jones fled to Europe, but Lester Faulkner remained at home, claiming that he was ignorant of the bank's condition and had no hand in its wreck, but was subsequently indicted.

Killed by a Dynamite Explosion.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Oct. 4.—A terrible explosion occurred in the Red Jacket pumping shaft of the Calumet and Hecla mine at noon. Twenty-six miners were working at the bottom of the shaft, over 1,000 feet below the surface. At noon a miner accidentally struck a charge of cartridge with his pick and an explosion followed. The men were huddled together, and it is remarkable that any escaped death. Two-thirds of the Calumet and Hecla mine are killed outright. Nelson Bloom and Capt. John Cameron were fatally injured, and seven others were hurt, some of them very seriously.

Woman Suffragists Meet.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The Woman's Suffrage party, of New York, held a "convention" here and the roll call was answered to by less than a dozen delegates. At a private session of the convention a platform consisting of over 2,000 words was adopted by Hamilton Wilcox, of New York, and two others. At the public session less than forty persons were present. The majority of whom were villagers, drawn in out of curiosity. The second public session was advertised for 7:30 p. m., but at that time no one had appeared at the hall.

Fifteen Lashes for a Wife Beater.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4.—Thomas Carberger, aged 35 years, a man of slender build, was convicted of brutal wife beating and sentenced to fifteen lashes and thirty days in jail. The sentence was carried out to-day, for it is most unusual to inflict punishment by the lash, but his treatment of a frail woman was more than inhuman. Ebenezer is the fourth man sentenced to the lash since the enactment of the law in 1883.

The Engine Turned a Somersault.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 4.—In a freight wreck on the Ashtabula, Youngstown and Pittsburg road, near Hankton, O., Brakeman Jacob Pringle was killed and Conductor Milner badly injured. The engine turned a complete somersault over a high embankment, but neither the engineer nor fireman was hurt. Six cars and a caboose were totally wrecked.

Leconey Mast Stand Trial.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 4.—The network which the officers of the law have been weaving around Chalkley Leconey for the past few days has closed around him upon the murder of his niece, Annie, was woven still closer by the dismissal of the writ of habeas corpus procured last week by his behalf. Judge Garrison remanded Leconey to prison for trial.

AN ACTION FOR DIVORCE.

Robert Ray Hamilton Will Sunder the Legal Ties

THAT BIND HIM TO HIS WIFE EVA.

The Proceedings Have Already Been Commenced for the Annulment of the Marriage Upon the Ground of Fraud. The Plaintiff's Complaint.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Robert Ray Hamilton has begun an action for divorce from his wife, Eva Hamilton, who is now at May's Landing awaiting transportation to the state prison at Trenton, N. J., for the crime of assaulting Nurse Mary Donnelly. The complaint in the suit was handed to Judge Patterson, on application for an order for the service of the summons by publication. This order was granted.

Mr. Hamilton's Complaint.

Mr. Hamilton, in referring to his marriage, says that his wife's maiden name was Evangeline L. Steele, and that they were married on Jan. 7, 1887. His consent to the marriage was obtained through the defendant's representations in March, 1888, that she was about to become a mother. In the same year, between Dec. 17 and Jan. 16, he received letters from Elmira representing that she was about to be delivered of a child. On Jan. 16, the day before the marriage, a female child was presented to plaintiff as his own. The relations existing between plaintiff and the woman prior to the marriage were such that her representations might have been true. But for those representations plaintiff would not have married Mrs. Hamilton.

She Had a Husband Living.

Hamilton says he has good reasons to believe that the woman's representations were false, and that the child was foisted upon him. It was in August of this year that he first became convinced of the deception practised upon him, and since that time he has duly waived any of his rights by cohabiting with her.

By way of complaint the plaintiff says that at the time of his marriage and prior thereto the defendant had a husband living.

Judge Patterson ordered that the summons be published in three papers in this city, and that a copy be mailed to defendant at May's Landing, until another addressed to her at the state prison.

The Ground of the Action.

The suit is brought for the annulment of the action on the ground of fraud.

REINTERRING JOHNSTOWN'S DEAD.

Eight Hundred Bodies to Be Buried in Grand View Cemetery.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 4.—Dr. Lee has issued thirty-six permits for the reinterment of unknown dead in the Grand View cemetery. Although permits will be issued daily, bodies will not be transferred before Oct. 15, as it is a rule of the board not to transfer bodies between Oct. 1 and Oct. 15. The bodies to be transferred number 800, and the expense will be borne by the flood committee.

Five hundred men and fifty teams were busily engaged yesterday in the debris at Stony creek. Oklahoma houses numbering 200 are to be wrecked and plastered at the expense of the flood commission. Secretary Kremer said that the final distribution will commence Friday, and that $130,000 will be paid by Saturday night.

Against the Bowling-Green Site.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The chamber of commerce elected delegates to represent the chamber at the twenty-first annual meeting of the American Institute of Civil Engineers on the 16th inst. The chamber by resolution declared itself opposed to the establishment of the appraisers' stores on Bowling Green, and recommended that a site be chosen more central for the shipping inter-sts. Resolutions were also adopted inviting the delegates of the International American congress to meet the members of the chamber and other business men at the chamber, where a reception will be tendered them.

The Swiss Must Apologize.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4.—Charles E. Coates, Jr., a graduate of the Johns Hopkins university, John Pfeiffer, of this city, and Conductor Milner badly injured. The engine turned a complete somersault over a high embankment, but neither the engineer nor fireman was hurt. Six cars and a caboose were totally wrecked.

THE EPISCOPALIANS.

Proceedings of the Convention—Changes in the Prayer Book.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—In the Episcopal convention Rev. Dr. Huntington moved to substitute for "The order how the Psalter is appointed to be read," and for "The order how the rest of the Holy Scripture is appointed to be read," the general order concerning the services of the church, including an enlarged table of proper psalms and a table of selection of psalms. The motion was adopted.

The second change was to substitute in place of the first rubric in the order for daily morning prayer the following: The minister shall always begin the morning prayer by reading certain sentences of Scripture.

On the day when the holy communion is appointed to follow the minister may, at his discretion, pass from the sentences to the Lord's Prayer, first pronouncing:

"The Lord be with you."

Answer—And with thy spirit.

Minister—Let us pray.

This change was also approved. The third change approved was made in the opening sentence in the order for daily morning prayer. Changes were also made in the daily evening prayer, and in the rubric after the prayer for the president of the United States in the order for daily morning prayer. The prayer to be used at meetings of conventions was transferred to a place immediately after the prayer for congress. The following resolution was adopted: It was ordered that the priest shall present to the bishop those who are about to be confirmed, saying: "Reverend father in God, I present unto you these persons in favor of be confirmed, saying: "Reverend father in God, I present unto you these persons in favor of be confirmed, saying: "Reverend father in God, I present unto you these persons to be confirmed to receive this laying on of hands."

The first rubric after the litany as contained in the order for daily evening prayer was changed to read: "... who, also the first catholic after the benedictus saluta mus." The proposed relegation of the nicene creed to certain occasions only, caused considerable discussion. The proposition was lost by a vote of 28 to 26 present. In the midst of the discussion the convention adjourned.

At the meeting of the house of bishops, Bishop Foley, of Maine, was appointed to assist Bishop Williams in his duties as presiding officer.

The bishops adopted the first three changes of the house of deputies, and also adopted the remaining fifteen changes.

General Order No. 5.

Crushed in a Mine.

HAZELTON, Pa., Oct. 4.—While Marcel Jandrow, miner, and Antonio Bonane Guardo, laborers, were prying down rock in their "breast" in No. 11 colliery of the L. & W. R. R. Co. at Audenried a mass of coal fell upon them, completely burying the two former, and it is thought fatally injuring the latter. It took four hours' hard work to rescue the bodies of the two men from their living tomb. Jandrow is single, leaves a wife and five children. Blinsky had been married but a few months. Guardo has a wife and two children.

Chevalier Fatso's Funeral.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 4.—The funeral of Chevalier Fatso, minstrel manager, of Boston, took place from his late residence at the Pains homestead, 16 Belona street, Olneyville. The sporting fraternity was well represented. Among those present were Jack Dexter and Harry Bloodgood, of the Rhode Island club; Edward Tinker, representing the Narragansett Gun club, and James Dennison, of the Bicycle Academy, New York. Interment was at Swan Point.

Nebraska Still in Suspense.

HELENA, Mon., Oct. 4.—The Republicans now estimate their majority in the state for governor at 100, while the Democrats claim Toole's election by 400 majority. The political complexion of the legislature is still in doubt, the returns from Silver Bow county, which elects eleven members, being still incomplete. The result in this county will decide whether there is a Democratic governor as well as the control of the legislature.

A Bank Clerk's Suicide.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Albert Miller, aged 21 years, a clerk in the United States National bank, committed suicide by shooting himself while in the bathroom at his home in Brooklyn. Despondency over the death of a brother was the cause of the act.

Stratford's 250th Anniversary.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 4.—Stratford has just celebrated the 250th anniversary of the town. The soldiers and military monument of Avalon Rock was dedicated, and thousands of visitors were present.

DELEGATES EN ROUTE.

The International Congress on Its Travels.

THE VISITORS AT WEST POINT.

Presentation of the Portraits of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan to the West Point Academy by George W. Childs. To Boston Next.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The delegates to the international congress left Washington at 8 a. m. for a six weeks' tour through the United States. The present intention is not to extend the trip west of Omaha, but it is not improbable that the delegates may yield to the solicitations of the people of the Pacific coast, existing lines of travel. Three minutes after the departure of the train ex-Senator Henderson, the temporary chairman of the conference, hurried into the station. He was left, but went on by a later train.

The Trip to West Point.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The train containing the International American congress arrived here an hour and a half, late. This was due to a hot journal and the necessity for taking off one of the coaches. Seven heavy cars proved too much for the engine, and one had to be dropped shortly after leaving Washington between the latter place and Baltimore.

At Jersey City.

Quite a crowd gathered along the platform at Jersey City to see one of the handsomest trains ever run over a railroad. On the rear car, which followed the engine, was inscribed "International American Congress." There were waiting to board the train at Jersey City Judge Horace Russell, Gen. J. R. Hawley, Judge Somerville, Jose B. Eduardt and M. W. Cooper, the new appraiser of the port, all invited guests.

Those on the Train.

On the train from Washington there came Mr. Walker Blaine, Secretary of War Proctor, Warner P. Sutton, senor Romero and Secretary Santiuenes, of Mexico; Attache M. Spargo, of Nicaragua; C. C. C. Zegers and Secretary A. Falcon, of Peru; J. Castellanos, S. Valdivieso and J. A. Rosse, of Salvador; A. Nin and Secretary B. Dauter, of Uruguay; E. A. Silva, N. B. Parana and N. B. Lavagnes, of Venezuela; J. Seteya and Secretaries E. C. Pinlios and R. Villatrazes, of Honduras; J. T. Velardo, Secretary M. Guarro and Adjucie A. Velarde and M. Velarde, of Bolivia; J. G. D. Amaral, Vaisnte L. De Mendonca and Secretaries J. A. P. Da Costa and Attache S. Martino and M. De Mendonca, of Brazil; C. M. Pinva, C. Calderon and Secretary J. Arieso, of Columbia; M. Aragon and Secretary Joaquin, Bernardo Calvo, of Costi Rica; T. Cruz and Secretary D. Estrada and Attache J. A. Machado, of Guatemala; United States Delegates C. N. Bliss, C. R. Flint, G. Studebaker, J. G. Davis and J. F. Hanson; Attaches, Capt. H. L. Da Silva, Lieut. R. E. Jenny, Surgeon G. M. Sternberg and William C. Curtis, special agent of the department of state in charge. Mr. F. G. Pierra representing Spanish American commercial relations. Mr. S. W. F. Draper represented the Pennsylvania road. There were also in the party Edmund W. P. Smith, E. A. Tresco, Fox and Silberger.

The Childs' Portraits Unveiled.

The delegates witnessed an exhibition drill and then went to the mess hall, where the Childs' portraits of Gens. Sheridan, Grant and Sherman were unveiled.

Gen. Porter's Speech.

Gen. Horace Porter made the address of presentation on behalf of Mr. Childs. The gentleman from Spain responding, Americus Vespucius Amigo, said that Gen. Porter was a hard act to follow after dinner orator and they thereon watched the speaker closely. He gave a glowing account of the character of the three generals, and at the close paid a fine compliment to the foreign delegates. Gen. Sherman also spoke. This morning the visitors inspected the academy, witnessed a cavalry drill and then embarked on the Yorktown for New York. They reached the city at half past 4 p. m. and left on the steamer Puritan at 5 p. m. for Boston.

Spain Likes It Not.

MADRID, Oct. 4.—The Spanish government is watching with some anxiety the congress of the three Americas, and the press, without exception, expresses a hope that the Spanish American republic will not let themselves be made the satellites of the United States.

TOO MUCH STYLE.

The Experience of the Old Man in a Swell Barber Shop.

Any one could see by the old man's manner as he entered the elegantly appointed city barber shop that he was a little taken back by the splendor of the place. He hesitated just inside the door and glanced around in a bewildered way at the dazzling decorations, the marble floors, the rows of chairs and mirrors and white jacketed barbers; and when a porter took his valise and hat and hustled them away to the other side of the room his eyes followed them with an anxious and startled gaze, until he saw that they were properly cared for. Then he looked around and saw that half a dozen barbers had taken positions by as many vacant chairs and stood ready to tackle him.

"Where shall I sit?" he asked.

"This any chair, sir," said an attendant, and the old man got into the one nearest him and settled back with a solemn expression of countenance, as though he had begun to wonder what this thing was going to cost.

"Shave or hair cut?" asked the barber.

"Well, I did want both," answered the old man in a voice which misgiving indicated that he was uncertain whether he still wanted both or not.

"All right, sir. I'll cut your hair first," and adjusting his chair the barber tucked clothes around the old man's neck and commenced operations.

"How'll you have it cut, sir," he asked.

"Hey?"

"How'll you have it cut this time?"

"How?"

"You want it short?"

"Yes, yes," answered the old man, as though he thought it would have been a healthy idea to have it cut long.

"Neck shaved" asked the barber, after he had been clipping for a while.

"Hey?"

"Will you have your neck shaved?"

"Well, you're goin' to shave my face, also yer? I ain't particular either way about my neck; shave it if yer wanter, though."

"Straight down, I suppose?"

"O, straight's yer can; I ain't particular."

"Shampoo?" asked the barber a moment later.

"Hey?"

"Will you have a head wash?"

"Wal, I guess so; yes, wash it out."

"Stand!" called the barber, and an assistant went over and placed a seat and towels beside the marble basin and then put a couple of eggs on a shelf in front of the barber's chair.

"Hard biled eggs for lunch?" asked the old man, who had begun to feel a little more at home.

"No," answered the barber; "those are raw eggs for the shampoo."

"Does he eat 'em raw?"

"Who?"

"The shampoo."

The gentlemanly barber explained that the eggs were for the head wash; that they were very much better than the prepared stuff for that purpose; made the hair nice and soft, and had no bad effect on the scalp. Then he took one of the eggs, tapped it gently on the corner of the wash basin, picked a little hole in the end of it and began to pour out the contents slowly on the old man's head.

"Hold on there! Hold on!" exclaimed the old gentleman excitedly, sitting up straight. "I guess this thing's gone 'bout far enough now. It's all right ter to sekin' me fool questions about whether I want my hair cut short or long, 'n' whether I want us' neck shaved 'n' m' head washed. It's all right ter try an' make a fool of an old man in that way of yer wanter, but by gosh! of yer think yurle gotn' ter send me out o' here 'th m' hair all stuck up with aig— How much do I owe yer?" he asked, standing up and trying to pull the clothes from around his neck.

The proprietor of the shop labored a long time to convince the old man that they had not been making game of him, but it was not until a good natured customer in one of the chairs ordered an egg shampoo and allowed the eggs to be poured into his hair that the old gentleman became satisfied. Then he meekly climbed back into the chair and told the barber to go ahead.

The barber rubbed and rubbed and worked up a lather, led the old man like a lamb over to the basin, squirted hot and cold water over his head and into his ears, led him back to the chair, shaved him, spatted him with wet towels, combed and brushed his face, dug out his ears, oiled his hair and combed it barber style; and through it all the old man never opened his mouth or uttered a sound; but when the boy had slapped him all over with a whisk broom, and he had paid his bill of ninety cents and walked solemnly out it was apparent that he was doing a heap of thinking.—Detroit Free Press.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA'S REPRESENTATIVES IN CONVENTION.

Eminent Spanish-Americans, with Senor Romero, Mexican Minister, at Their Head—Eminent Americans Who Will Confer with Them.

Were other noteworthy characteristics wanting, the Pan-American congress at Washington would be a notable body by the mere force of its personnel.

HENDERSON. DAVIS. BLISS. STUDEBAKER. TRESCOTT.

Most of the South American representatives are either now prominently identified with their respective governments or have accepted high official positions in the past.

Senor Matias Romero, who, with Dr. J. N. Navarro, will represent the Mexican government, is perhaps better known in this country than any of his colleagues. He is at present the Mexican minister at Washington.

Senor Jeronimo Latayn, representing Honduras, and Pelix de Zegarra, representing Peru, are comparatively new men in their relations with the United States.

Senor Alejandro Urbanejo, also named by Venezuela, is a delegate, but was over 30 years of age. His profession is the law, and in it he has already made his mark. He resides at Caracas, and there edits La Union Democratica, the organ of the Young Men's Political society, of which he is president.

Senor Climaco Calderon is the Colombian consul general at New York, and has held that position for five years past. When he was appointed he was 30 years old.

Dr. Juan Francisco Velarde, who will represent Bolivia, is the present envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of his country at Washington.

Councillor Lafayette Rodrigues Pereira, of the Brazilian delegation, is a man of about 60 years of age. He was the prime minister of his government, was a member of the arbitration court which Brazil sent to Chili, and has held various other important positions.

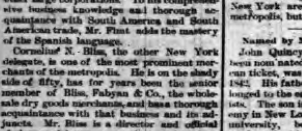
Senor Vincente G. Quesada, who is one of the three delegates from the Argentine Republic, is the diplomatic secretary at Washington. He is about 55 years old, and prior to his appointment as minister, some five years ago, had filled several high positions at home. He has just returned from a visit to Buenos Ayres.

Charles R. Flint, of New York, who is one of the two delegates on behalf of the United States, is a particularly qualified for the position. He was born in Thomaston, Me., in 1850, and early in his youth entered the Spanish-American trade, becoming a principal in his father's house on attaining his majority. In 1874 he made a tour of South America, and again in 1876 visited the west coast of that country. In 1884 he made a trip to the east coast of South America. He was appointed Chilian consul at New York in 1877, and during the absence of the Chilian minister, attended to the business of the legation. For several years he was the Nicaraguan consul at New York, and in the absence of the minister negotiated, in behalf of Nicaragua, with the concessionaries of the Nicaraguan canal.

Mr. Flint is a member of the firm of Flint & Co., which carries on a general merchandise business and also conducts the extensive ship building business established by his father at Bath, Me., in 1840. He is a director of the National Bank of the Republic, vice president of the United States Electric Light company, a director of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, and is identified with many other large corporations. To his comprehensive business knowledge and thorough acquaintance with South America and South American trade, Mr. Flint adds the mastery of the Spanish language.

Cornelius N. Bliss, the other New York delegate, is one of the most prominent merchants of the metropolis. He is on the shady side of fifty, but for years been the senior member of Bliss, Fabyan & Co., the wholesale dry goods merchants, and bears thorough acquaintance with that business and its adjuncts. Mr. Bliss is a director and official of dozens of large corporations, and up to a recent date was chairman of the New York state Republican committee.

John S. Henderson, of Missouri, is one of the oldest lawyers in the west, and is particularly qualified to frame resolutions or draft a speech for the congress. He was born near Danville, Va., in 1826, but after his admission to the bar removed to Missouri, where he has since lived. At the age of 36 he was sent to the state legislature, and in 1857 framed the Missouri banking and railroad laws. In 1858 and 1860 he was a presidential elector, and in



QUESADA. CARNEGIE. FLINT.
ZEGARRA. ESTEE. LAYAYA.

1862 was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of United States Senator Trusten Polk. He was elected for the full term of six years in 1863. In 1867 he was sent as a commissioner to treat with the hostile Indians, and in 1875 was appointed assistant United States district attorney to prosecute internal revenue frauds.

William Henry Trescot, of South Carolina, was born in Charleston in 1822. He graduated at the college of Charleston in 1840, was admitted to the bar in 1843, and in 1852 became secretary of the United States legation at London. In 1860 he was appointed assistant secretary of state, but resigned when his state seceded from the Union. He occupied a seat in his state legislature in 1865, 1876 and 1880. When John L. Pettigrew was engaged in negotiating the ratification for South Carolina he retained Mr. Trescot as his assistant, and that gentleman was likewise honored by being chosen to represent his state at Washington when the reconstructed measures were under consideration.

In 1877 he was counsel for the United States before the fishery commission which met at Halifax, and in 1880 he was one of this country's plenipotentiaries who went to China to revise the existing treaties. The following year he was selected by Secretary Frelinghuysen to go to Europe and look after the interests of the United States in the matter of the Panama canal; later on he was sent as a special envoy to the South American belligerent state, and in 1882 he accompanied Gen. Grant to Mexico for the purpose of negotiating a new treaty. Since then he has practiced law in Washington. He is the author of a number of works on diplomacy, and is considered to be better versed in South American diplomacy than any man in this country.

Andrew Carnegie is, as everybody knows, the millionaire manufacturer of Pennsylvania. He controls the largest iron manufacturing plant in the world, is widely known for his liberal benevolence, and has made a study of economics. He was born in Dunfermline, Scotland, in 1835, and was the son of poor parents. In 1848 his family removed to this country, and the son found employment at tending a stationary engine, near Pittsburg, Pa. In turn he became a telegraph operator, manager of the Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania road, the part owner of a rolling mill, and the owner of the largest iron manufacturing plant in the world operated under single control. He has interested himself in literature, at one time owned eighteen English newspapers, and has published several works on economics and travels. His public benefactions in the last decade amount to over $1,000,000.

Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, has represented that state in the United States senate, and is widely interested in various railroad enterprises.

Morris M. Estee, of California, is a prominent lawyer of the Pacific slope, and has been conspicuously identified with the Republican party for many years.

Clement Studebaker, of Indiana, T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Massachusetts, and John F. Hanson, of Georgia, are all prominent manufacturers, and respectively represent the manufacturing industries of the west, east and south.

THE SITE FOR THE FAIR.

The accompanying views of the site chosen by the New York World's fair site committee are from sketches made especially for this paper, and give a very good idea of the natural beauties of Riverside and Morningside parks respectively. Of course, the effect of the choice has already been to increase the valuation of real estate in near by parts of the big city. Equally, of course, the real value of this "boom" depends upon whether the New Yorkers are going to stop quarreling about the site long enough to raise a few dollars and go ahead and hold a fair at all or not.

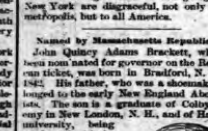
RIVERSIDE PARK.

No matter what individual opinions may be held as to which city should have the fair, all will agree that the vilification of rival cities in the fight is extremely foolish. The internal wrangles such as are going on in New York are disgraceful, not only to the metropolis, but to all America.

Named by Massachusetts Republicans.

John Quincy Adams Brackett, who has been nom'nated for governor on the Republican ticket, was born in Bradford, N. H., in 1842. His father, who was a shoemaker, belonged to the early New England Abolitionists. The son is a graduate of Colby academy in New London, N. H., and of Harvard university, being graduated with the class of 1865, and of the Harvard Law school in 1868. Since then he has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Boston. For twenty years he has been prominent in politics, and in 1877 framed the tax act of the Republican. From 1872 to 1876 he was a member of the city government and he then went to the state legislature, where he served as member of the house four terms, and in 1885 was elected its speaker. The next year he was elected lieutenant governor of the state and reelected in 1887 and 1888.



J. Q. A. BRACKETT.

Mr. Brackett is of medium height and muscular. His head is very large and covered with iron gray hair. He has a deep bass voice and is a fluent speaker.

Height of Sea Waves.

Carefully repeated experiments made by an experienced English navigator at Santander, on the north coast of Spain, showed the crest of the sea waves in a prolonged and heavy gale of wind to be 43 feet high, and allowing the same for the depth between the waves would make a height of 86 feet from crest to base. The length from crest to crest was found to be 380 feet. Other estimates of the waves in the South Atlantic during great storms give a height of 50 feet from the crown and 400 feet for length. In the North sea the height of crest seldom exceeds 10 feet and the length 180 feet.—New York Star.

That's Correct.

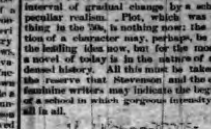
A justice of the peace in North Carolina lately fined a British captain $25 for striking one of his sailors while voyaging in the Indian ocean. The captain sicked for awhile, but had to pay or go to jail. That's correct. The American eagle should hover o'er all the earth and the waves thereof, and no American J. P. should make his sea wings for any occasion effort.—Detroit Free Press.

THE MAN OF DEEP PLOTS.

ANALYSIS OF THE WORKS OF THE LATE WILKIE COLLINS.

The Style of Novels Changes About Once in Forty Years—The Extravagant, the Wildly Heroic, the Superlatively Sentimental and the Excessively Domestic.

Wilkie Collins was the last of his school to borrow a word from another art. It was a school in which the plot was the all in all; it was preceded by a school in which high wrought portrayal of the feelings was the all in all, and has been followed without an interval of gradual change by a school of peculiar realism. Plot, which was everything in the '50s, is nothing now; the evolution of a character may, perhaps, be called the leading idea in the novel of the most part a novel of today is in the nature of a condensed history. All this must be taken with the reserve that Stevenson and the erratic Hawthorne writers may indicate the beginning of a school in which gorgeous intensity is the all is all.



WILKIE COLLINS AT HIS DESK.

By a view of the life and writings of Wilkie Collins one can easily see that his method and that of his school was a natural evolution from that of those immediately preceding them. Beginning with the early reign of Charles II we have the wildly extravagant and licentious school in which Claude Duval was a popular hero and all the fine gentlemen were libertines. After this came that era of intense sentimentality, of ardent "gush," "swearing eternal friendship" and all that sort of thing, which lasted three-quarters of a century, and was satirized nearly as much longer. In the early days of John Wesley all the reading young people were saturated with this sort of thing, and corresponded with each other under the names of "Sylvander" and "Parmelia," "Clovia," "Clarissa" and "Alonza."

Every person of sentiment had an extra name, and of course many without sentiment adopted the fashion. Queen Anne was "Mrs. Freeman" to her correspondent, and her intimate friends were "Mrs. Morley" and "Mrs. Manly." John Wesley was "Cleanthes," and wrote gushing letters to a "Melissa." About the time of the American Revolution this style of novel had reached the last phase of fordrawn and corrupt, and was satirized on the stage and in the "comics" till even kitchen girls were ashamed of it. Then sentiment ran to the exaltation of the domestic affections for a long period—the period of "Children of the Abbey," etc. The fathers were fonder than all fathers before them, the daughters "called heaven to witness" on the slightest provocation, husbands sank insensible on the graves of their wives and wives fell and expired on the coffins of their husbands, and this style still ruled when Wilkie Collins made his advent in literature.

He was the son of the eminent rustic painter, William Collins, and another painter's name being added, his full name was William Wilkie Collins. Born in London in January, 1824, and taken from school at an early age to be put in the law trade, he changed his whole plan of life on coming of age and began to study law. In 1845 he wrote an affectionate biography of his father, which was so well received that he changed his plan again, and thenceforth was devoted entirely to literature. The lawyer reading some of his productions can easily perceive the effect of law studies on the writer's mind and perceive at the same time that the study was not thorough enough to save him from some serious blunders. In "Man and Wife," the incidents of the boat race, ingeniously built up on legal technicalities, yet the points he makes are certainly "bad law." England and Scotland were at that time pretty hard and wrong on the subject of marriage, and like so hard as the novelist makes out.

That school of fiction in which plot outranks all else in importance was already developing rapidly when Wilkie Collins began to write; he soon brought it to something near perfection. "The Dead Secret" was in the highest style of the new school, and the publication in 1860 of "The Woman in White" actually seemed to mark a new era in fiction. As it came out serially the successive numbers were eagerly looked for by all reading England, and in America a million young hearts were as profoundly moved as most people were the previous year by the newspaper dispatches of the Fort Sumter war. Thereafter there appeared to be no improvement in construction of plot, though, as a matter of course, there will long be a question as to the comparative merits of his early and later novels, as it is a matter of taste. It is interesting therefore to discover how he built up such a complicated scheme, and he once explained it fully in a letter to an American lady.

His general plan was to get the central idea first. In "The Woman in White" this plan was a criminal conspiracy by people in good society, and not otherwise criminal, and the keynote was the robbing of a woman of her right to a name and title. This done, he then began to collect the details. Shirley Mrs. Glowe wrote the dying scenes of Uncle Tom first, and then built the story to it. Mr. Collins got most of his characters in mind, thought it long and hard to find the "white woman," then gave it up and was contemplating another plan when, as he says, "Anne Catherick comes in and says, 'Try me.'"

This illustrates a trick of the mind with which all writers and machinists, indeed all men who think hard, are familiar. The thinker strives long and earnestly to formulate an idea, fails and abandons the quest, then suddenly from an unexpected source a totally different and unsought idea comes pouring into the mind, and very often it proves far more suitable than the one first dimly conceived. The mental exertion brings, not what it was trying to bring, but something different and better. "The Woman in White" is his most popular novel, and, as usual in such cases, quite an army of critics have seized the public for its taste, but the author himself and Charles Dickens thought the public perfectly right. It is now of interest to find that the novelist, like other men, often failed on his first plan and had to try again. Thus, in the case he began with a striking incident and let the characters themselves state the facts which led up to it, found this to be a mistake, threw all that away and began with a new framework. Then for the development:

"The scene of my opening chapters is in Cumberland. Miss Fairlie afterwards Lady Glyde: Mr. Fairlie, with his irritable nerves and his art treasures; Miss Halcombe discovered suddenly, like Anne Catherick, any all waiting the arrival of the young drawing master, Walter Hartright. No; this won't do. The person to be first introduced is Anne Catherick. She must be already a familiar figure to the reader, when the reader accompanies me to Cumberland. This is what must be done, but I don't see how to do it; no new character can appear in the course of the quarrelsed and don't speak to each other. One evening I happen to read of a lunatic who has escaped from an asylum—a paragraph of a few lines only in the morning. Instantly the idea comes to me of Walter Hartright's midnight meeting with Anne Catherick, escaped from the asylum. 'The Woman in White,' begins again; and nobody will ever be half so much interested in it now as I am. From that moment I have done with my miseries. For the next six months the pen goes on; it is work, hard work, but the harder the better, for this easiest evidence that the work is its own exceeding great reward.

"As an example of the gradual manner in which I reach the development of character I may retain for a moment to Fosco. The making him fat was an afterthought; his canaries and his white mice were found next; and the most valuable discovery of all, his admiration of Miss Halcombe, took its rise in a conviction that he would not be true to nature unless there was some weak point somewhere in his character."

The proof that Wilkie Collins got very near to the people's hearts is in the fact that his principal works have passed through many editions both in England and America, and have been translated into French, Italian, German, Dutch, Danish and Russian. He also wrote two plays, "The Lighthouse" and "The Frozen Deep," neither of which has attracted attention in America. They appear to have been written for amateurs, and Charles Dickens acted a part in one of them, both in a private performance before the queen and in a public performance for charity. Mr. Collins has also done some lecturing, and made the tour of the United States in that line.

He was a tireless worker when he had once got his plot arranged, and no doubt aggravated his physical troubles in that way, for he was at times terribly tortured by gout and rheumatism. To alleviate the pain he began to take opium many years before his death, and soon the habit became firmly fixed.

GEN. DANIEL H. HILL.

Decease of a Well Known Southern Writer and Soldier.

Gen. Daniel H. Hill, who recently died at Charlotte, N. C., was born at Hill's iron works, York district, S. C., July 12, 1821. His ancestors came from Ireland and settled in York, Pa., and William Hill, his grandfather, established the Hills iron works.

Developing a love for military science early in life, Daniel H. entered the United States Military academy in 1838, and graduating four years later, was assigned to the First Artillery, with rank of second lieutenant, with which he served on the Maine frontier during the boundary troubles.

In 1843 he was transferred to the Third artillery, and in 1847 was made a second lieutenant in the Fourth artillery. He served as a first lieutenant in the Mexican war, and for gallant services at Contreras and Churubusco was brevetted captain, and major for his services at Chapultepec. He was a member of the storming party at Chapultepec, and another paint-he and Lieut. James Stewart had a foot race for the honor of being the first to enter a strongly occupied Mexican fort. Just after the Mexican war he resigned his commission, and in 1849 was elected professor of mathematics in Washington college, Lexington, Va.

For six years Gen. Hill remained at Washington college, and then for five years he held a similar chair in Davidson college, N. C., and thence he left to take charge as superintendent of the North Carolina Military institute at Charlotte. At the beginning of the civil war he was made colonel of the First North Carolina regiment, C. S. V., in command of which he won distinction at Big Bethel on June 10, 1861. He was made brigadier general soon after, and was made major general in March, 1862. He distinguished himself in the seven days' battles on the peninsula. During the Gettysburg campaign he commanded the defenses of Richmond and Petersburg.

On July 11, 1863, Gen. Hill was commissioned lieutenant general and placed at the head of a corps in Bragg's army. He shared the fortunes of the army of the Tennessee at Chickamauga, until he surrendered with Gen. J. E. Johnston in April, 1865.

For some years after the war he edited at Charlotte a monthly magazine, The Land We Love, and afterward a newspaper, The Southern Home. He was appointed president of the Arkansas Industrial university at Fayetteville, Ark. Gen. Hill contributed to current literature and was the author of a work on algebra.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR.
EDWARD BURD GRUBB,
OF BURLINGTON.

WHAT TO-MORROW IS TO BE SURELY WINDOW NEVER LEARNS;
GRANT OF HAND NOR WARPS NOR TURNS
WHAT TO-MORROW IS TO BE.
—Euripides.

JOTTINGS.

—Days of 1889 past, 278; days to come, 87

—Collector Johnson is busy distributing the tax bills for 1889.

—Mr. Alex Fraser has opened an oyster stand on Park avenue.

—Gazelle Engine Company No. 1, took their apparatus out for a "wash" last evening.

—As per advertisement elsewhere the Holly Grove farm milk has been reduced from 10 to 8 cents per quart.

—The fire department of this city is as fortunate as any in the country. They are not called out often.

—Mr. Lewis James will appear in Hamlet at the Music Hall Monday evening. The seats are on sale.

—The Republican Executive Committee should divide some practical plan to get the full vote out next month.

—All the schools in this city are now in good trim, and the scholars and teachers have settled down to work.

—The Boards of Registration for the purpose of registering voters will meet in the various wards next Tuesday.

—The Y's are looking about for new headquarters. A committee appointed at a recent meeting have the matter in charge and hope soon to be settled for work.

—The freight box cars on the Central Railroad are being painted. The color is a dark yellow, with the letters in black. It gives them a handsome appearance.

—It needed no Brown-Sequard to discover an elixir for business life. Generous advertising makes the pulse of trade bound and sends invigorating currents through all its arteries.

—An old horseman, speaking of pools on the race track, says that a buyer of any horse in a field of six stands nearly one chance in 150 of hitting it. He figures accident, corruption, sickness, etc. Better buy toy pistols and distribute them among the poor and deserving boys.

—First Vice-President J. R. Maxwell, General Manager Norton, General Superintendent Burton, and Chief Superintendent Olden, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, made an extended trip of inspection over the Long Island road last week, as far as Sag Harbor, in a special train.

—The Kitchen Garden school will open on Monday, Oct., 7th, in W. C. T. U. rooms, 73 West Front street. Classes will be held semi-monthly on Monday and Tuesday of each week at four o'clock. All last years scholars are requested to be present. Cooking class will open on Saturday Oct. 12th, at 9 a. m.

—There were 167 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against the preceding week and the 154, 203 and 172 for the corresponding weeks of 1888, 1887, 1886 and 1885 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 8,696, against 7,478 in 1888.

—The voters of this State are asked to decide which they will have. This is the question which is agitating the mind of the New Jersey voter, and the sooner he decides the better it will be for him. One may try to make out that the coming battle of ballots means something else, but don't be misguided—you must have either "Grubb or Wilson." The Republican party has been in power since its—for local option—for protection to our industries and our homes; and all these are summed up in the one word "Grubb." The Democrats have nominated Wisely. Will they tell you otherwise you should reply that there is one word "Grover" in their eye and you see it. They are for rum every day in the week—not even Sunday excepted—and every intelligent man knows this is true. What did they do last Winter? With the aid of misguided men they locked temperance legislation from the statute books and opened the gate that Wisely might ride rampant over New Jersey. Voters, will you have General Grubb or Leon Wisely?—Lightning.

IDENTIFIED.

The Remains Found at Bernardsville Prove to be Those of Hugh Higgins.

Mr. James Higgins, a section boss on the Central Railroad, in this city, went to Bernardsville yesterday morning and identified the remains found in the woods on the Dessey farm, near that place, as those of his brother, Mr. Hugh Higgins, who, on the 15th of last July, while demented, wandered away from his home in this city. Mr. Higgins identified the remains by the clothing worn by deceased at the time of his disappearance, and thinks that death resulted from starvation and exposure.

At the time the unfortunate man disappeared he was traced by searchers to within a mile of where his decomposed body was found.

He was about thirty-seven years old and was born at White House, N. J., where he resided until about three years ago, when he came to Plainfield and secured a position in the blacksmith shop at the Potter Press Works as a helper. He was a married man and leaves a wife and two children, who reside on Plainfield avenue.

The skeleton was found in a secluded part of the woods, where it has been lying for nearly three months.

The clothes which covered the skeleton were partly missing.

The remains will be brought to this city as soon as a permit can be obtained from the coroner, who was not home yesterday, and will either be interred in Plainfield or at White House, N. J.

PERSONAL.

Mr. G. W. F. Randolph and family have removed into their new residence on Front street, opposite Grant avenue.

Mr. Joseph H. Higgins, of this city, was on Sept 19th, married to Mis Josephene Hockenbury, of Bethlehem, Pa. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride in Weston, by the Rev. W. R. Sears.

Miss F. Walker, who formerly conducted a dress-making establishment at No. 6 West Second street, informs her customers in an other column that she has removed her business to No. 64 West Second street, the parlors formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. A. Humphrey.

John Lisbarger of Plainfield caught 16 bass below the dam last Monday. They were beauties, and after he had shown them at Hotel Geddis the hardware stores were besieged for tackle, and a promiscuous procession of anglers made a wild rush for the river.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

The Elizabeth Presbytery.

At a meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery, at Union, N. J., last Tuesday, to discuss the revision of faith, question 60 was taken up for consideration. Previous action for some time past had it was a big general surprise that it was found that of the large body of assembly present, including representatives from all the towns, within thirty miles of Elizabeth, over forty-fifths were in favor of revision. It shows that the younger element of the church are pushing ahead. The next meeting of the Presbytery will be held at the First Presbyterian church, of Plainfield, of which Dr. K. P. Ketcham is pastor, next Spring.

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

The Road Appropriation Nearly Expended.—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in regular session last evening. It was 8:30 o'clock when Mayor Cooley called the meeting to order, and in response to roll call Councilmen Bettman, Buckle, Emmons and Smalley answered present. Councilmen McGee and Needham were absent.

The minutes of the last meeting were approved as read.

A communication from the residents of Summit avenue requested the Council to enforce the ordinance in reference to the laying of sidewalks on that thoroughfare. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

A communication from Warren Engine Company No. 1, stating that Henry Vosh had been elected a member of the company and requesting Council to confirm the election was read and referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

A similar document from Chief Engineer Martin stated that the fire engine had been taken out for a "wash" and found to be in excellent working order; that at a recent meeting of the Company twelve new members had been sworn into the department service by the Mayor; that since the last meeting of the Council a small fire had occurred in "Bull Frog City", and called the attention of the members to the inadequate supply of water in that vicinity and also to the necessity of procuring more hose and several lanterns.

Petitions from John Emmons, Samuel Moore, William Band, Levi Bird and Fred Bird for curtman's Houses were referred to the Committee on Licenses and subsequently granted.

Claims were presented from

Thos. McDonald	37.50
Jas. K. Arnold	75.00
W. M. Pangborn	12.00
H. E. Taynor	6.00
M. Reed	12.00
Horace Martin	50.00
Times Printing and Publishing Company	5.50
N. J. Globe Gas Light Company	999.36
S. Tyler	2.25
Charles A. Reed	75.00

All the above were referred to the Auditing Committee and subsequently ordered paid.

An amendment to an ordinance relating to the sale of gas and morals of the borough was read for the first time, and passed to its second reading.

Mr. Smalley from the Street Committee reported that the Street Commissioner had finished scraping the road in east of Grove street, at a cost of $23; that Green brook, Grove and Somerset streets, Madison and Clinton avenue, were in a bad condition and needed to be repaired immediately; that a crosswalk was needed on Grandview avenue and two were needed on Jackson avenue; and that the sum of $90 remained to the credit of the road fund.

Mr. Bettman complained that the Street Commissioner had attempted to scrape the gutters in the vicinity of his residence and had left them in a worse condition than they were before.

The Street Commissioner was given an audience and he denied the statement and said that the gutters in that vicinity were in a good condition.

The report of the Committee on Streets was finally accepted and ordered filed.

The Fire, Water and Lamp Committee reported that they had ordered badges for the fire department.

Mr. Bettman claimed that Orchard place crosswalk was too high.

The ordinance relating to the peace and morals of the Borough was read for the second time and laid over for thirty days preparatory to its third and final reading. It was amendment to Section 11 and provided that a penalty of $10 be imposed upon persons who unnecessarily obstruct the streets and sidewalks of the borough while building houses or making repairs thereto, after they has been notified by the street commissioner or any borough officer to remove such obstructions.

Mr. Bettman offered a resolution that the Committee on Streets be instructed to comply with the instructions of the Council and have side crosswalk on Orchard place lowered.

Mr. Smalley stated that he had carefully examined the crosswalk in dispute and had found that it was the road and not the crosswalk that was in fault.

The resolution was lost by a vote of 3 to 1.

Mr. Smalley offered a resolution that the Committee on Streets be instructed to have the crosswalks on Somerset street, Clinton ave. nue and Greenbrook road filled up; and that the crosswalks asked for in the Street Committee's report be granted.

Mr. Emmons amended the resolution so as to read "provided the cost of same does not exceed $100," and it was adopted.

Mr. Buckle's resolution that the request of the residents of Summit avenue in reference to the laying of sidewalks on the south side of that thoroughfare, be granted and that the Street Commissioner be instructed to notify the property owners to attend to same was carried.

The same gentleman made a motion that Mr. Jeremiah VanDeventer be given permission to macadamize Clinton avenue at his own expense, and that he be given the privilege of declining the cost of the same from his taxes.

The option of Borough Council Reed was called for and he said that such a proceeding would be illegal.

A resolution to the effect that the Street Commissioner be instructed to notify property-owners not to unnecessarily obstruct the sidewalk while building, under a penalty of $10 for each day the obstruction remained after notification, was passed, and the meeting adjourned.

The Epworth League Meeting.

The Epworth League, connected with the M. E. church, held a meeting in Vincent chapel last evening. After the transaction of the routine business, the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, entertained the members with a brief description of his European tour and exhibited several relief cards—stereoscopic views of scenery, of Plainfield, of which Dr. E. P. Keschan is pastor, near Spring.

UNION COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

Greenbrook in this City to be Restored to its Natural Course.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met in Elizabeth Thursday afternoon.

The transactions were mostly routine in character. A bill of Sheriff James Carey, constable, for $22.50 was referred to the county attorney, who reported that Carey was appointed by one of the judges of the county court. He had no doubt of the validity of Carey's claim, but was of the opinion that the bill should be approved by the court before it could be passed. Under this opinion the bill was referred.

The committee to settle with the county collector reported that they had examined his books and accounts for the quarter, and found them correct.

The report of the committee on county road bonds relating the result of the sale of the issue of $150,000 worth of bonds to George A. Boswell and the Union County Savings bank was approved.

A communication from R. L. P. Colemen, clerk of the city, was read, stating that under a new law the charter election was separated from the State and county election, and that as the November election only State and county officers would be elected. It was therefore unwise to ask the county to furnish the clerks and election boards with books and stationary.

Mr. West said this was an unusual incident. There were no local offices elected in Elizabeth and the question was whether the city was liable for the expense.

On motion the communication was referred to the legal committee and county attorney.

The recent fire-bats in Plainfield have changed the course of Green brook so that the water washes against the parapet of one of the bridges, and Mr. Vanderbeck offered a resolution giving the Plainfield bridge committee power to restore the course of the brook. The resolution was amended by directing the committee to confer with the Somerset county freeholders.

On the desk of each member was lying a bound volume of the laws of 1889, with compliments of County Collector Wood, and Freeholder Jones offered a resolution of thanks to the donor, which was unanimously adopted.

Ex-Judge Gilhooly was present, representing John A. Morrow in the matter of the dam at Vreeland's mills, and a resolution by Mr. Van Sam was adopted as follows:

Is appearing that the attorneys of the township of Scotchplains and of John A. Morrow have agreed that the appeal taken by the said Morrow to this board was taken.

Therefore, that this board find his appeal from the action served on him by the township committee, which was set down for this day, be dismissed, and that said notice be in operative and void.

After the passage of a number of claims the board adjourned.

The Dunellen W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. of Dunellen held a delightful parlor meeting at the lovely home of Mrs. Runyon, one of its members, to which several of the friends of the cause invited. An account of the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union from the time of the Ohio Crusade was given by Mrs. Tomlinson, Superintendent of parlor meetings, and many expressed at the close of her remarks an ardent interest in the cause. "Next and entertaining story". Refreshments of cake, fruit and lemonade were served, and the good-byes which followed were mingled with the wish that these opportunities of hearing such earnest work might be of more frequent enjoyed.

Yom Kippur.

The fast of Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, the most solemn observance in the Jewish ritual, commenced at sunset last evening and continues for 24 hours.

During that period the Hebrew who observes the day in accordance with the orthodox ritual abstains neither food nor drink to pass his lips, but this strict observance of the fast has fallen into disuse among the reformed Jews.

All the Jewish places of worship were open last evening and all day to-day, and the services are of a very solemn and impressive character, ending with the blowing of the shofar, indicating that the annual fast is over.

Hydrophobia in Piscataway.

An epidemic of hydrophobia is prevalent among animals in Piscataway. John Daily has lost a number of hogs and Brundage Brothers several heifers. Other animals are showing symptoms of the rabies. The animals were bitten some months ago, by a mad dog.

Complaint and Answer.

The following, written by a bright and witty Plainfield lady [—and where have we ever met bright and witty [—is sent to us for publication:

UNDER HER LATTICE.

(BY R. R. JOHNSON.)

Under her lattice I stood and wept,
The man in the moon grew tired and slept,
And a feeling of dampness over me crept,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice when all was still,
The breeze was blowing as breezes will,
The dew dropped down and gave me a chill,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice I tried to sing,
To a buisted riddle that had one string,
But it got so cold I dropped the thing,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice a week ago,
I caught a cold that may ye me so,
I'll never catch another thing
Under her lattice.

ANSWER TO "UNDER HER LATTICE".

(BY MRS. S.)

If under her lattice you caught such a cold,
I trust you will not need me to be told,
Never in future to be quite so bold
As to linger "Under her lattice".

Behind a lattice where maidens dwell,
Is no place for habitues while with loaf you to—well,
A place whereof I don't like to tell,
Under my lattice you'll never be!

You'll not catch cold, but will be quite hot,
And, if stories are true, will nicely as not,
Be in greater hurry to leave that spot,
Than to flee from "Under her lattice".

The "Ghost of Benjam n" will play on the fiddle,
While you will be trying to marvel the riddle,
Why you should be doomed to roast on a griddle,
Just for loitering "Under her lattice".

So take wholesome advice and now stay away,
From a maids who are grave, and maids who are gay,
They will lead you to mischief my boy alway,
So tarry not "Under her lattice."

A Little Rum Struck.

New Jersey is Gubb struck. But she isn't hungry for a Republican Governor.—Shore Line.

Well then, if what you say is true, New Jersey is rum struck and hungry for a Democratic Governor. Leon Abbett is the man both the Liquor League, and Brewer's Association.—Lakewood Times-Journal.

—The contest for the silver watch between the children of St. Mary's Parochial school was decided on Thursday in favor of Mary McCoe, a daughter of Policeman Thomas McCoe.

—"Where did you get that hat?" asked Leon Abbett of Gov. Grubb, as the latter appeared wearing a shabby felt headgear. When the General replied that his hat was an old army hat, Leon replied, "He was brave in the army and he didn't know how to appreciate such a matter.—Mt. Holly Mirror.

It is probable that figures will not lie. In the hands of a politician or a reckless newspaper number-slinger they can be made to do the tallest lying of modern times. They are like the accounts of the trusted cashier.

Brown, hanged in Minnesota, sold his body to physicians for dissection for $10, and directed that the price be given to a young woman to whom he was attached. It would be interesting to know what sort of a keepsake she will purchase with the money.

At last there is a place where it is a disadvantage to have a white skin. At last the white man is going to get a little of his come-up-ance for his impudent discriminations against other races. The Chickasaw Indian nation has resolved to disfranchise its white voters. Shall the Caucasian submit to this outrage?

Labouchere, of London Truth, is the only Englishman who can write editorials that are not dull, and that is probably because of his French blood. He is now making terrific war on the high silk hat. He begs the Prince of Wales to give it its final leave. Labouchere has also this to say about the British nation: "It strikes me that we should, as a nation, show to much better advantage in the eyes of the world if there were a little less prudery in our public morals, and a little more humanity and consistency—if we did not strain at gnats while we are swallowing scorpions."

Not till the Wild West show visited Paris did the artist Meissonier conclude there was anything worth painting in America. He has decided now to visit our country. Meissonier lost most of his great fortune in the copper syndicate crash last spring, and he will try to win it back off the Americans. Like most foreigners, Meissonier doubtless imagines Indians and buffalo roam at will through our cities, and dashing cowboys lasso wild cattle in our fashionable avenues. How disappointed he will be to find that all the Indians for him to paint are the tobacco signs and those ferocious savages with a suspicious Hibernian brogue who perambulate our streets between two board advertisements.

About Farm Mortgages.

When a writer wishes to print a statistical "whopper" he has only to begin his paragraph with "It is estimated." In this manner the editor of Bradstreet's, estimating the farm mortgages in certain of the western states at about six times the value of all the farms themselves. The extravagant story passed up Michigan to endeavor to arrive at something like accuracy in this matter, as far as that state was concerned. It is manifestly impossible to get at the exact truth, since so many mortgages are not recorded.

Michigan ascertained that within her borders only 3 per cent. of the recorded mortgages were foreclosed. Thereupon The Nebraska Journal remarks that this is an infinitely better showing than other branches of industry, no matter what they are, can make. Or newspapers started, for instance, half of them die. So that farmers are not so bad off, after all.

A Five Cent "Hello."

In 1884 the "Society General of Telephones," as the French call their telephone company, received a charter from the French government. One condition of the charter was that it at any time the government itself should decide to take possession of the telephone system it could do so by paying the company a proper value.

Now, though it is a republic, France is a paternal republic. This summer the government decided that the telephone business was too vast a monopoly to be in the hands of a private organization, and notified the company that it must give up possession. Two million dollars were appropriated for the purchase. It was as if President Harrison and his ministers should order the Western Union Telegraph company to vacate all its offices and hand over all its wires to the United States. To say that the Society General of Telephones was displeased would be too mild. It was furious. It declined to give an inventory of the property and paid no attention to the commission.

Then the government sent officials, accompanied by police, on a given day, to all the telephone offices in the country, and quietly took possession of them. The thing was done on a Sunday. A bloodless revolution was effected, and though there were loud French sputtering and wrath, only one arrest was made. That was the capture of a luckless artist who was caught caricaturing a fat policeman for a funny paper.

The government immediately reduced the price of an annual telephone subscription from $125 to $75, and the price of a short conversation over the wires in Paris itself from 10 cents to 5 cents. And now the French belle girl must flirt under government surveillance. That is how they do things in Europe.

THE DAY'S WORK.

Third Session of the Episcopalian Convention at New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—At the Episcopalian convention Rev. Wm. D. Langford, D. D., general secretary, read the triennial report of the board of missions. J. N. Brown, of Providence, and Gen. S. S. Marvine, of Albany, were elected members of the board. The board has secured in Washington a building for the education of colored candidates for holy orders, the money being contributed by Rev. Dr. Langford.

Bishop Pierce, of Arkansas, missionary bishop of Indian territory, spoke, regretting that the insufficiency of the sum appropriated for that territory, and the rapidly growing white settlement, were likely to result in the Indians.

Rev. H. D. Paine, representing the missionary bishop of Japan, next spoke. The establishment in Japan of constitutional government and the presence of a treaty granting most favored nation privileges, had been gratifying changes in the situation which looked good for the work of the future. Progress has already been made, greater progress is expected.

Right Rev. Dr. Spaulding, missionary bishop of Colorado, spoke encouragingly of the progress of the cause in that state.

The report of the committee on the Colored people made its report through Bishop Dudley, of Kentucky, to the effect that some progress had been made, but owing to unfulfilled pledges of the church the condition of the work had not advanced so far as had been expected. The report was referred as a committee consisting of the bishops of Minnesota and of East Carolina, Dr. Elliott, Rev. Dr. Carey, Mr. Woolworth and Mr. Tolly.

Bishop Garrett, of Texas, said the work in Texas was getting on satisfactorily. There was difficulty, however, in getting clergymen to go to Texas, even at good salaries. Right Rev. Dr. Brewer, missionary bishop of Montana, said the work in that territory, with the growth of the state, but more workers were needed. The work was hard, and no idlers need apply. The convention then adjourned to Monday morning.

ST. JOHN'S POISONER.

Protestant Clergymen's Lives Attempted. Arrest and Speech of Confession.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 5.—The city has been horror stricken over an attempt to poison the families of three Protestant clergymen, and which in the case of one lady was successful. On Wednesday the wife of Rev. Donald Macrae died suddenly, having been poisoned, it is believed, by confectionery coming in a little white box through the mails, addressed to her husband and delivered by the postman that morning. An analysis of the candy shows that each piece contains enough strychnine to kill a man. An autopsy disclosed sufficient strychnine in the stomach of the deceased to have caused death.

It has subsequently become known that several packages were delivered at the residences of the Rev. J. Desoyres and the Rev. F. J. Deinstadt. The boxes were addressed in a copperplate hand, which is thought by some to be a woman's. Mr. Desoyres tasted the confectionery, but detecting a bitter taste did not swallow it. The Deinstadt package was delivered by a little girl, who handed it to the clergyman's wife.

Mr. Deinstadt suspected that the sender might be seeking to dose him with some sickening medicine, and took the box to a druggist. The confectionery in all three boxes contains strychnine. No satisfactory reason for the attempted assassination can be assigned although the city is full of rumors. It is understood that the Protestant clergymen here had been warned against packages of confectionery sent them through the post.

Dr. Hostetter, of Plainfield, N. J., delivered the annual address of the Sunday School Union and Tract society.

A RAPID TRANSIT SCHEME

The Toboggan Slide Principle to Be Used.

DISTANCE AND TIME ANNIHILATED

From City Hall Park, New York, to City Hall Park, Brooklyn, in One Minute. A Scheme That Takes Away One's Breath.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The Press says: A scheme simple in its principles, accurate in possibilities and indorsed by engineers whose very countenance to any undertaking is a guarantee of worth, is again before the people of this city. It is one singularly simple, though considered in the possibility of development it is one of the greatest advances in modern engineering. The plan is the invention of Maj. Benjamin B. Henning, of this city, and was patented on Aug. 13 last. It is a plan for a system of transportation between cities separated by water, such as this city and Brooklyn and this city and Jersey City. The system is an application of the principle of the toboggan slide, and, it will be remembered, was broached some years ago, when Maj. Henning had organized the idea of utilizing it between city hall park on this side and the city hall in Brooklyn.

He relows Speed Can be Attained.

At the time, owing to the misfortune of capital, he demonstrated the feasibility of the scheme as well as the marvelous rate of speed which it would attain, landing passengers at the city hall in Brooklyn within one minute after they had stepped on board at this side. But with opposition from those who were wedded to another scheme, and many objectors to the destruction of the park for the purpose. Now, however, things have been changed. People have grown to understand. Brooklyn is growing in other directions than toward Gowanus, and a company of very prominent and thoroughly practical men have taken up the affair with a view of building the new rapid transit from the foot of Grand street to some point in Brooklyn.

The Plan of the Scheme.

The principle on which the patent has been granted consists of an exceedingly rapid motion created by gravity on a sharp incline which carries the cars down the grade on an increasing momentum until a level is reached, and then a similar incline on the opposite side will be reached, where it will be supplemented by cable power, to which cars are attached by automatic grips so that there will be no loss of motion. Nor will there be any noticeable change in speed. The speed of the trains can be governed by the depth or steepness of the incline and can be regulated to suit any requirements.

For Use in the Streets.

It is not alone under and over rivers, however, that it may be utilized. It is equally serviceable for all purposes of street transit. With stations at the foot of Fulton avenue, on a moderate grade the time would be twenty seconds, or, in other words, at an average of twenty-two miles an hour. At the present speeding which might at first seem inseparable from such a great rate of speed, that would be entirely absent. The seats would be suspended and the cars dark, so that there could be no suggestion of moving at all scarcely to the passengers.

The darkening of the cars would act similarly to the shutting of one's eyes in an elevator, when it becomes an impossibility to tell whether a person is ascending or descending. In addition to affording the facilities for the transit of cars the plan contemplates would do so by way of the tunnel without having the streets of the city either obstructed or disfigured.

Ready for the Fair in 1892.

Gen. Henning, with the inventor states, is enthusiastic over the project, which he declares to be perfectly feasible, and the idea a most excellent one, as has every practical engineer who has looked into the matter. The element of danger is wholly eliminated from it. The tunnel proposed to Brooklyn will be about fifty feet below the river, and for the unpleasant feeling which might at first seem inseparable from such a great rate of speed, that would be entirely absent. Mutrie says New York will play the three scheduled games in Cleveland. He added that he didn't care personally about winning the pennant, but the New Yorks wanted the money that a series with Brooklyn will bring in, having lost money by knocking about between Jersey City, Staten Island and the new grounds.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5.—Warrants was issued by Judge Bond, of the United States circuit court, for the arrest of the negroes concerned in the Newark Island murders. The island being out near the West Indies, United States Marshal Wilkinson has been unable to find them as the warrant that he was powerless to make the arrests without Judge Bond issued by Justice Harrison Judge Bond at once, and they will be laid before the president for his action. The island comes under the jurisdiction of the United States in consequence of its discovery in 1856 by Capt. Peter Duncan, which took the proper action whereby the United States secured his protective power over the island by the revised statutes of the United States. The arrest and protection of the negroes on the island is the same as if committed on a vessel on the high seas.

Breakfast
Cocoa

Is Absolutely Pure,
and It Is Soluble.
To increase the solubility of the powdered cocoa, various expedients are employed, most of them being based upon the action of some alkali, potash, soda or some alkaline salt. Cocoa which has been prepared by one of these chemical processes, can usually be recognized at once by the distinct alkaline reaction of the infusion in water.
W. Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa is manufactured from the first grain to the last by strictly mechanical processes, no chemical being employed in its preparation. By one of the latest inventions of modern mechanical processes the greater excess of fixation is secured without the sacrifice of delicacy and beautiful red color which is characteristic of an absolutely pure and unspiced cocoa.

BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY.

WHEN SHE TO MEDDLE AT.

Metropolitan Manager—So you want to join the theatre and learn to act something, do you, Maynard, dear? Very well. Ever—Mr. Maynard, dear? Very well, George, before we take you on you'll have to act as though you could learn something.

A PROFESSIONAL VIEW.

The good wife of Mr. Tompkins, the shoemaker, has presented him with twins. He looks at the cherubs critically and asks: "Are they right and letter?"

A CRITICAL ASSESSMENT.

Indignant Contributor—I sent you three stamps at different times for the return of my poem, and never got it—not even a thank you. Editor—Thanks—for you—I know; I remember; I got the stamps, but I couldn't think of your middle name. Prahl there might be another man of the same name to your poem.

WHERE TO BE FOND OF TAKING WATER.

"Truth lies at the bottom of a well," we all know, but when she dives into the slime of Thames a plain lie won't do; she makes efficient to it. But we're on to her caste-rachet.

GOOD MATERIAL.

Mrs. Rudder (to new school teacher)—About this boy of mine, now. I want you to bring him along, bring him along; he hasn't got away about of the class 15 will be George Smith; he's an easy boy to teach; he'll believe anything you tell him.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

The elaborately dishes in a delicatessen. The prices are cheerful and long boarded hires. The delicatessen lady is particularly stylish. And the delicatessen gentleman adjusts the weight of the cheese with the ease and grace of the theatrical ballet dancer. And how the women lady presses steps by to advertise the wares on the outside. While the woman they wait upon goes about town in a plain suit, brown Berlin wool made goods.—Mrs. George Architect in Puck.

Inexcusable.

Customer—I have here a work—

Master of the House—I can't read.

Customer—But your children—

Master of the House—I have no children (brokenly).

Customer—But you want something to throw at the cat. (He took it.)—Life.

The Borrower.

"But you are surely mad. How can you think of borrowing money on those terms and from people of that stamp?"

"My dear fellow," replied Gontran, "better go to a scamp who lends you money at 15 per cent than to an honest man who refuses you sou."—Le Figaro.

Monetary Advice.

"But you are surely mad! How can you think of borrowing money on those terms, and from people of that stamp?"

"My dear fellow," replied Gontran, "better go to a scamp who lends you money at 15 per cent, than to an honest man who refuses you a sou."—Le Figaro.

Impossible.

Guest—I judge from your talk that the summer has not been a very profitable one for the summer hotels.

Proprietor—Well, we might have done worse.

Guest—Not in the dining room.—Judge.

Quite a Relief.

Miss Jones—How good of you, doctor, to come to talk with me!

Doctor—Oh, not at all. I have listened to so much clever talk this evening that it will be quite a rest to listen to you, Miss Jones, I assure you.—Glasgow Citizen.

His Chance for Life.

Sympathetic Citizen—Is he fatally wounded, do you think, officer?

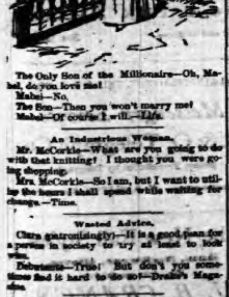
Policeman—Two av the wounds is fatal, sor, but the third is not, for if we can lave him rest for a while I think he will come around all right.—Grip.

Overheard at the Newspaper Club.

Bibbs—Let me see, didn't Squibbs make an offer of marriage to the editress of some paper-Boston or other?

Dibbs—Yes, and the offer, like his latest manuscript, was respectfully declined.—Detroit Free Press.

The Answer She Gave.



The Only Son of the Millionaire—Oh, Mabel, do you love me?

Mabel—No.

The Son—Then you won't marry me?

Mabel—Of course I will.—Life.

An Industrious Woman.

Mr. McCorkle—What are you going to do with that knitting? I thought you were going shopping.

Mrs. McCorkle—So I am, but I want to utilize the hours I shall spend while waiting for change.—Time.

Wanted Advice.

Clara gastronimically—It is a good idea for a person in society to try at least to look wise.

Detestable—True. But don't you sometimes find it hard to do so?—Drake's Magazine.

Needed Help.

First Shooting—What are you looking for?

Second Shooting—A straight tip.—New York Sun.

Night Have Felt Worse.

"How did you feel after taking the Brown-Sequard mixture?"

"Rather shaken."—New York Sun.

Up to Date Shop.

First Clerk—I believe I am getting away.

Second Clerk—You mean getting married.—New York Sun.

Not Noticeable.

"Deacon is half witted."

"Indeed! As much as that?"—Harper's Bazar.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Bleaching the Hair—A Curious Statement
About Dark Hair and Mental Disorder.

Recent researches have shown that the preparations for bleaching the hair to "the delicate golden shade so much admired by the court circles of Europe and the best society of the United States," to quote from a label on one of the bottles, all depend for their action upon the decolorizing and corrosive influence of nascent oxygen or nascent chlorine.

Medical Chemistry states that the tones used in the various nostrums for this purpose are peroxide of hydrogen, aqua regia and bromine acid. A combination of the first and last, saltbreus and scald head. The two acids are equally vile. They attack and rot the hair and skin alike. The former they partially bleach and partly turn to a hazardous gold color; the latter they stain to about the same hue as does a light application of iodine. Besides the dermatologic troubles named, they cause maladies hardly distinguishable from eczema and erythema.

One curious disease that they cause is an inflammation of the cells of the hair follicles. The cuticle or scarf skin dries up into scurf, and often blood is extravasated in appreciable quantities. All three bases produce falling out of the hair and premature bald ness.

A fact both interesting and agreeable to people who are by nature light haired or red headed, is also stated in the journal already mentioned. It is that one of the patterns in a certain asylum, only one has red hair, and only four have light hair and complexion. It used to be supposed that a pale complexion specially marked a tendency to mental derangement and brain disorder. Statistics, however, show this to be an error. What is true of men is also true of women. They are, with one exception in fifty, dark haired and dark hued. It is sometimes the case that the hair turns white with insanity. Probably the error arose from this fact. The reason why people are more inclined to mental disorder has not been explained.

The Noon Lunch.

Perhaps the doctor is right who says that a great portion of the sickness in this country is caused by the unpleasant habit of eating too rapidly. It is interesting to watch the average citizen when he goes into a restaurant for his dinner. He devotes more time to regard the meal with any degree of fondness, but acts as though the eating of it is one of those disagreeable duties which compel a man at every step on the highway of life. He attacks the meal savagely, and you can hear his knife and fork rattling a furlong away. He shovels the food into his mouth as a hired man shovels corn into a shelling machine, and swallows it without chewing it. He pours down a lot of ice water when the meat is cooked with a fiery fluid enough to make it as indigestible as possible, and when the last and rites are over he rushes to the cashier's desk and settles with an expression of relief equalling his radiant countenance like a rainbow after a storm. The stern physician says that people should eat very slowly, and while away the time between bites by conversation about the weather, the crops or any other cheerful subject. In this way the days of their years of their pilgrimage may be many Morphine Eating.

A German authority affirms that the children of women addicted to the morphine habit are pretty much morphine eaters from birth. During the first few days of life, unless morphine is given them, they are very apt to suffer collapse, and this condition may end in death, the child being too weak to withstand the violent symptoms which are similar to those which follow the sudden withdrawal of the drug in adult opium eaters.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

The Gentle Manners and Fine Breeding That Make the Model Guest.

"Not one person in ten is gifted with that amount of tact which renders one who is to some extent a stranger a pleasant addition to the private life of a family where there are many members of diverse dispositions and habits, likings and dislikings." So affirms Harper's Bazar, and then gives some friendly warnings as to the behavior befitting one who desires to maintain to the close of a visit the cordiality of feeling that gave her a welcome at the beginning.

In the first place, the guest who wishes to remain a welcome guest should put curiosity entirely out of her head. She may have any amount of interest in the people about her, and give it all expression wherever their affairs are presented to her, but she is never to ask a question about these affairs or make them the object of her extended remark, either before the faces of or behind the backs of the family. Even if the most remote approach to the inquisition will seem like prying, and will not only close the avenues of further knowledge in that direction, but will make the questioner uncomfortable. In the same spirit, she will not, it need hardly be said, look at the addresses of letters, at the inscriptions in books or inscribed much alert in relation to parcels and packages, will show no interest in telegrams not referred to her, and never give a glance at incoming bills; she will keep, in fine, no more of the secrets of the household than it is very plainly and explicitly demonstrated that she is desired to know.

She will also perceive that the old saying concerning too much of a good thing may apply to her as well as to any one else. A little observation of the behavior of the family will show her when it is time for her to go. As soon as it is the custom of the family to leave together, which once like a taste of solitude, at what hours all like to congregate, and also will then become aware of the fact that every one letter writing, to her own room, or in some sheltering corner of house or grounds for comfortable intervals of time.

She will also be especially particular to ask her bed at a comparatively early hour, not waiting for every one else to be gone, and never, under any circumstance, allowing herself to be the last person up in the house, recognizing that the hour before sleep is one often of great value to master and mistress, to sister and brother, or to mother and daughter for necessary and confidential talk.

Again, the guest who is to survive [illegible] who takes advantage of the privilege of guestship to order to occupy the most comfortable seat, to appropriate the wic low with the view, the best corner of the fire, the first and best of anything. If the hosts know their duty all this will be offered to her; but even she must see the folly of accepting too much.

On the other hand, the guest may rest comfortably assured that the more she is inclined to make [illegible] of herself with dignity, the more her hosts and all their circle will magnify her. It will be their part to see that she has the most luxurious chair, the choicest morsel, the chief honours, the place and post of honor in everything.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

THINGS SAID AND DONE IN THE WORLD OF TODAY.

A Pocket Watch of the Same Class as the Clocks That Consist Only of a Glass Dial and Hands, with Machinery Hid in the Hands.

The watch depicted in the cut here reproduced from La Nature is even more mysterious than the clocks seen in jewelers' windows, as the hands do not even conceal the hidden machinery, and the dial being entirely of transparent glass, there seems to be no possibility of any connection with clockwork, and yet the watch goes and keeps good time.

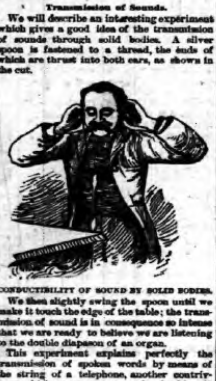
A CURIOUS TIMEKEEPER.

A study of the engraving will solve the mystery. In Fig. 1 the watch, with its transparent dial, is shown, and in Fig. 2 the clock work concealed in the polygonic rim. In Fig. 3 a side view in section is given, from which it will be seen that a wheel of transparent glass, the periphery of which is provided with a metallic gearing, serves to transmit the motion to the hands. The minute hand is directly attached to it, and the slower motion of the hour hand obtained by small gear wheels (Fig. 2) concealed by the ornamentations around the centre of the dial. There are, in fact, six plates of glass composing the watch—the two outside ones for protection, the dial plate on which the figures are painted and two other plates which support the moving glass plate and the accessory machinery. When in position in the watch these different plates cannot be seen, and the mirror of the power which moves the hands is completely concealed.

As a practical use for a watch of this sort, it has been suggested that it may be placed in a magic lantern and its image projected on a screen in any suitable locality, thus taking the place of the more expensive illuminated clocks, and showing the time at all hours of the night.

Transmission of Sounds.

We will describe an interesting experiment which gives a good idea of the transmission of sounds through solid bodies. A silver spoon is fastened to a thread, the ends of which are thrust into both ears, as shown in the cut.



CONDUCTIBILITY OF SOUND BY SOLID BODIES.

We then slightly swing the spoon until we make it touch the edge of the table; the transmission of sound is in consequence so intense that we are ready to believe we are listening to the double diapason of an organ.

This experiment explains perfectly the transmission of spoken words by means of the string of a telephone, another contrivance which any one may make for himself without any trouble whatever. Two pieces of cardboard are fitted to two cylinders of tin plate as large round as a lamp glass, and four and a half inches in length. If the two rounds of cardboard are connected by a long string of sixteen to eighteen yards, we can transmit sounds from one end to the other of this long cord, the speaker pronouncing the words into the first cylinder and the listener placing his ear against the other. It is easy to demonstrate that sound is conducted in this manner, for we can hear a carpenter driving in a stake, we find that the sound produced by the blow of the hammer against the wood only reaches the ear a few seconds after the contact of the two objects. We see the flash at the firing of a gun before hearing the sound of the report—of course on the condition that we are at a fairly considerable distance, as already remarked upon.

Resistance of Pigments.

Engineering tells of an interesting series of experiments carried out by the Dutch state railways for the purpose of ascertaining exactly the relative resistance of various pigments to atmospheric changes and to the corrosive action of sea water. The results have proved that the red lead paint is far less affected by atmospheric influences than those which are composed of the brown oxides of iron, on account of their adhering more closely to the metal, and of their possession of greater elasticity. It was also discovered that any sort of paint afforded an increased protection if the plates were pickled in hydrochloric acid before the application. The presence of corrosion by salt water was found to be possible by the admixture of the oxide of some electro positive metal, such as caustic lime and soda, but the effect of such a mixture is greatly diminished when its alkaline properties had been neutralized by the absorption of carbonic acid. Magnesia, however, was proved to be the most serviceable, owing to it does not absorb carbonic acid; and not only does it protect the iron from galvanic action, but it also does not affect the antifouling qualities of the paint.

Transportation of Sulphuric Acid.

There has been patented in Germany a process by means of which sulphuric acid for manufacturing purposes can be safely transported. The inventor of the process, taking advantage of a property of certain salts—of which alkaline sulphates are representatives—by which they give up their water of crystallization when heated and take it up again when cold; and he does so by mixing the salts in an anhydrous condition with a calculated quantity of sulphuric acid. The whole mass becomes granular, or may be formed into cakes, and when heated the whole liquefies and may be used as if it were sulphuric acid, for the presence of bisulphates of soda does no harm.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

Who Paul Revere Was—Grandsons in the Civil War.

Paul Revere, the hero of Longfellow's poem, was born at Boston, Mass., on Jan. 1, 1735. He served in the campaign on Lake George as lieutenant of artillery in 1756, and then became a goldsmith, and afterward a copperplate engraver. He was a prominent narrative of the repeal of the stamp act, of the Boston massacre and the landing of the British troops at Boston. He was a member of the Boston committee of safety, and his midnight ride rendered an important service to his country by secretly leaving Boston at 10 o'clock on the night of April 18, 1775, and riding through Charlestown to Concord to announce the British expedition of the following day, which was resisted at Concord and Lexington.

In the same year he engraved the plates and printed the bills of the paper money of Massachusetts; afterward set up a powder mill; became lieutenant colonel of artillery; participated in the Penobscot expedition of 1779; established a foundry of cannon and church bells; erected extensive works for rolling copper at Canton, Mass., still maintained by his grandsons as the Revere Copper company, and became grand master of the Masonic order, in which capacity he assisted in laying the cornerstone of the Boston state house in 1795. His death occurred at Boston on May 10, 1818. In his honor the town of North Chelsea, Mass., took the name of Revere on March 4, 1871. His descendants have been quite as famous for valor, one grandson, Paul Joseph Revere (born at Boston on Sept. 19, 1809, graduated at Harvard in 1830, and becoming a soldier in the Army of the Potomac, died at Westminster, Md., on July 4, 1863, of a wound received at Gettysburg; and another, brother of Paul J., who was born on Aug. 30, 1812, fought as a gun in a Massachusetts regiment, and was killed at Antietam on Sept. 17, 1862.

What is Ambergris?

Ambergris, or gray amber, is a fatty substance of an ash gray color, with yellow or reddish streaks, like those of marble, which is found in lumps of various weight from half an ounce to one hundred pounds and upward floating on the sea or cast upon the sea shore in different parts of the world, and is also taken by the whale fishers from the bowels of the spermaceti whale. Much ambergris is obtained from the coasts of the Bahamas islands; it is also brought from different parts of the East Indies and of the coasts of Africa and Brazil. It is possible that all of it is produced by the spermaceti whale and that it is a morbid secretion in the intestinal canal of that animal, derived from the bile. It is highly valued on account of its agreeable smell, and is much used in perfumery. The price has been from $4.86 to $5 an ounce. It has been occasionally employed for medicinal uses. It is not much used in Europe. In some parts of Asia and Africa it is much used as a medicine and in cookery as a condiment. The specific gravity of ambergris is less than 0.9. It is almost always contains black spots which appear to be caused by the presence of beaks of the "sepia octopodia," the substance of which the cuttle fish is formed. It consists in great part (80 per cent.) of a peculiar brilliant white crystalline substance called "ambrein," which is obtained from it by treating it with alcohol.

Absurd Scalps.

During the French and Indian war in 1754 the French offered a bounty for British scalps. In the same years a bounty of £100 was offered by the colonies for Indian scalps. In 1755 Massachusetts granted a bounty of £40 for every male Indian over 12 years old, and £20 for every woman and child's scalp. In July, 1756, John Penn, the grandson of William Penn and governor of Pennsylvania, proclaimed that for every male Indian above the age of 12 who was captured a bounty of $150 should be paid; for every male killed and scalped, $134; for every one thus served under 10, $130; for every female killed and scalped, $50.

Obiter Dictum.

"Obiter dictum" is a remark or suggestion made by a judge or a court in disposing of a question which is not necessary to its decision, sometimes termed a dictum. Such a suggestion is not regarded as authoritative when the point comes up for positive decision. A dictum may, however, have much influence from its reasonableness or from the high reputation of the speaker. The plural is obiter dicta. Much law is generated in this manner, one court uttering "dicta," and another, at a latter date, embodying them into decisions. It is not enough, however, for a judge merely to call attention to "dicta" in the abstracts made by them of the substance of judicial opinions.

Proclamation of the German Empire.

The proclamation declaring the foundation of the restored German empire was made on Jan. 1, 1871, and on the 18th, William, king of Prussia, was saluted as emperor of Germany in the Palace of Versailles by the representatives of the sovereigns of Germany. The first diet of the empire assembled at Berlin on March 21, 1871. The present German empire comprises twenty-six states. Of these twenty-two are monarchical and three (Hamburg, Bremen and Lubeck) are republican. One (Elsace-Lothringen) is an imperial province under the sovereignty of the German empire. The other states are kingdoms, grand duchies and duchies.

Big Stock Farms and Snakes.

The largest breeding establishment in America for thoroughbred horses is the Belle Mead stock farm, in Sumner county, Tenn. It contains 4,000 acres. The richest stakes ever won in America, namely, the Peyton, run at Nashville in 1845, and the Futurity, run at New York in 1888. Each was worth $61,000 to the winner. The Futurity was for 2-year-olds, and the Peyton for 3-year-olds, owned by Bryant & Scroggins, of Kentucky. This horse won the largest stakes of that season, the sum reaching $69,730, which is the largest amount ever won by a 2-year-old in a season.

Snow Flakes.

The lightness of snow flakes is the result of their surface being so great when compared with their volume. This is occasioned for in some degree by the large quantity of air amid their frozen particles. Snow flakes contain about nine times as many volumes of air, compressed, so to speak, among their crystals, as they contain water. Very fine and lightly deposited snow occupies about twenty-four times as much space as water, and is from ten to twelve times lighter than an equal bulk of that fluid.

A Big Valley.

The valley of the Amazon is larger than that of the Mississippi, the former river draining 2,330,000 square miles and the latter 1,244,000 square miles. The Amazon drains a greater area than any other river on the globe.

United States Population.

The present estimated population of the United States is 51,000,000. The annual growth by natural increase and immigration is placed at about a million, and the foreign population is put for [illegible]

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

An Effective Portiere, Inexpensive and Easily Made—Timely Recipes.

Burlap has held a certain place among materials for house decoration for several years, but never has it been so beautifully used as for hangings. The coarse threads and soft color offer a good foundation for effective embroidery if desired; heavy wools and silks are the materials often used, but although the serial and wool are coarse, much time and patience are required to complete a pair of hangings.

Decorator and Furnisher describes a most effective portiere of burlap, both inexpensive and quickly made. The material should be twenty-four inches wide, and to obtain the length it must be spread on the floor and firmly tacked at the corners and occasionally along the edges. It is then painted with large leaves and berry designs, bokay paint, which comes in cans, costing from twenty-five to thirty cents a can. The paint must be spread on thickly, as the burlap absorbs it in an astonishing manner. The vines first allowed to turn over at the top must be painted in the same way.

Nine inches were fringed out top and bottom, the fringe being very coarse and long; better, strands of coarse cotton rope, such as sailors use, were tied in at regular intervals. Each one of these strands was ornamented with colored balls, which can be done cold answering to the American cent, and which may be bought at any of the Chinese stores for $1 a hundred. The cash has a hole in the centre, through which the rope is first inserted and a large knot tied to hold it securely; the fringe at both top and bottom was finished in the same way.

A broad band of brown plush was placed above the fringe across the top and bottom. A row of fancy braided straw disks—otherwise Chinese table mats—was fastened through the middle of the band, from the center of each one of these disks hung a long heavy tassel made of the coarse rope, fringed out, or rather untwisted, and securely fastened to the wooden sides.

Instead of the rings which are commonly used for securing the portiere to the poles, long loops of the heavy rope were used, each one having a tassel made similar to those on the bottom. The length of three feet turned over at the top was trimmed with a narrower band of plush, smaller disks and lighter weight tassels.

As both sides of the portiere were in use the reverse side was lined with unpainted burlap and trimmed with bands of olive cloth upon which was embroidered a bold design of trailing vines and flowers.

Popular Cottage Furniture.

Bamboo furniture is in high favor, and a pretty style of cottage furniture is the new bamboo, which, as Good Housekeeping tells, is not bamboo at all, but white maple. It is finished in its natural color and elaborately decorated with rods of the same, in the shape of bamboo, which are simply moulded in the wood. Its joints, burned brown with a hot iron when the rods were in the turning lathe, make a pretty decoration and the whole appearance is strikingly natural. The maple is as nearly white as a natural wood can be, with the exception of the white wood, and takes a beautiful polish. A complete set in this wood, which is very light and durable, and finished throughout, is not an expensive purchase, and the shapes, mostly Eastlake patterns, are very graceful and pleasing. Even a writing desk is included in the set.

Delicious and Satisfying Sweetmeats.

Sweet apples and mellow, dead ripe pears, baked down in a mild oven till they are jellied in their own juice and sugar, make a sweetmeat that will keep with less care than anything else, and satisfy every taste, says Mrs. Susan Power in American Garden. Line the bottom and sides of your stone ovens with common bricks, laid in loosely; set the fruit in close stone jars, and let it cook all day and night. No fear of burning, but the steady, moderate heat turns out a lucid, deep flavored mass which is something what food ought to be. Boil jam fast; let this preserve bake its time and don't stir it. It is an insult to a pear to preserve it any other way. The delicate looking canned pears are very insipid eating beside it.

Apple and Quince Jelly.

Quinces and apples together are usually thought to make a much pleasanter jelly than either alone, the apple being tasteless by itself and the quince rather too strong by itself. Use an equal weight of tart apples and quinces; wash and slice them whole, carefully removing all wormy spots. Boil the quinces till soft in just enough water to cover them; then add the apples, with sufficient water to cover, and boil the whole to a pulp. Strain and measure the juice. To each pint of boiling juice add a scant pound of sugar, which should be put into the oven to become hot before it is needed for use; cook ten minutes and turn into glasses.

Peach Preserves.

Miss Parloa tells of an easy way to remove the skins from peaches. Put them into a wire basket and plunge them into a kettle of boiling water for a few minutes; take them out and the skins will come off easily. Drop the fruit into cold water to keep the color. In making preserves [illegible] to every three pounds of fruit one pound of sugar, and one pint of water for three pounds of sugar. When the syrup is boiling hot take the fruit from the water and drop into it. Put but a few in at a time, as they cook very quickly. Take from the syrup with a silver fork, fill the jar and fill up with strained syrup.

An Attractive Ornament.

An ear of corn, beautiful in itself, may be utilized for decorative purposes as follows: Choose a large, well ripened ear, lift the husk from the end, cut off the stem, leaving it and pull off the silk, then braid the leaves of the husk at the top and fasten in a loop by which to hang up the ear, or a part of the parcel may be trimmed off to show some of the grain. When the ear of corn is dry paint it with liquid gold or silver, covering the whole husk and ear, and attach one of the fancy bows sufficiently large and for such purpose and ornament with a pretty ribbon bow.

Origin of the Phrase "Blue Blood."

The phrase "blue blood" used in the sense of aristocratic descent, is familiar to all. A correspondent in Boston Transcript claims that the following explains its origin:

"After the black Moors were driven out of Spain—or much of them—the were too high spirited to become Christians on compulsion—the aristocracy of Spain was held to consist of those who traced their lineage back to the time before the Moors came. Such persons people were whiter than those who had been mixed with Moorish blood; the veins upon their white hands were blue, while the blood of the former, contaminated by the Moorish infusion, showed black upon their hands and faces. So the white Hidalgos of old race came to be known that their blood was "blue," and that of the Moorish people was black. The phrase passed to France, where it had its [illegible] and was, in fact, quite as [illegible] here, and so on to England and America.

Bovine Hydrophobia.

Cases of bovine hydrophobia are becoming alarmingly frequent in Middlesex county. A valuable young Alderney heifer owned by Warren Brundage, of Piscataqua town, was seized with the disease last week and crawled about a field on its knees moaning and bellowing piteously. The animal frothed at the mouth just previous to being killed. A rabid dog roamed by it several times, all of which have died of the disease or been slaughtered in the vicinity of Piscataqua town. Several hogs owned by Patrick Lally in the same neighborhood have been similarly afflicted.

Interesting Items Concerning Plainfield's Neighbors.

W. W. French owns 160 acres of coal lands near Dover, Col. A specimen of coal from his property was recently analyzed and found to be unusually hard and brilliant. Mr. French's brother Ed. is in Denver, getting together mining machinery.

A reward of 50 cents has been offered by the Town Committee for every dog not properly muzzled, found running in the streets of the town. A number of enterprising boys have taken advantage of this offer by catching every dog that shows his face on Broad street and delivering him to the pound keeper. It is claimed that the boys even take dogs from private yards.

Westfield now has a small army of Italians at work on its portion of the county roads. Contractor Mahon has about 100 Sons of Italy encamped on the road bed of South avenue. Twenty-five or thirty carts are kept busy hauling stone from Huffman's quarry on the mountain. The Italians are quartered in a frame building on North avenue about half a mile from town. The building is thirty feet long and ten wide. Tiered along either side are two tiers of bunks not unlike the bunks on a ship. One end of the place is partoned off and will be used as a mess-room for provisions, etc., and the men will cook their own meals with their clothes and other wax provide for themselves.

Louis R. de Castro, a young man, about eighteen years old, accidentally shot himself at the residence of his grandfather, Mr. Benjamin Bonnell, on Scotch Plains, Saturday evening, while attempting to extract a cartridge from a revolver.

The young man went to his room at about eight o'clock Saturday evening and after dressing himself, preparatory to going out for the evening, was endeavoring to extract a cartridge from a revolver, when it exploded, as above stated.

Persons in the house heard the shot, but thought nothing of it at the time, and when a member of the family went to the young man's room about an hour afterward he was found sitting in a chair, unconscious, with a bullet hole in his temple. The revolver lay near him on the floor.

Doctors Wescott and Oliver were summoned but they could not save the young man's life. He died about eleven o'clock.

Deceased was a Cuban by birth and had lived with Mr. Brittin since he was ten years old. About a month ago while fooling with a revolver he shot himself in the hand.

A report to the effect that the young man committed suicide is indignantly denied by his friends.

THE LIQUOR SELLER DECAMPS.

White Caps Threatening Chief Carey.—Anxious to Rent Them.

Michael F. Watson, convicted of illegal liquor selling and fined $400, has decamped without paying the fine. His counsel is the chairman of the State Democratic Committee.

Watson's wife has also disappeared. Chief Carey expects to recapture Watson. He received a postal Saturday from some of Watson's friends, and signed "White Caps", threatening the Chief's life, or person, when ever they can get him in a suitable place. The Chief says, if the "White Caps" will say where they want him to be, he will try and be on hand to accommodate them. Just the same, he means to make it hot for Watson, and illegal liquor sellers generally. Watson has left his place in charge of his brother. Watson ought to ask Abbett, as counsel for the State Saloon-Keepers' Association and their candidate for Governor, to help him.

Union County Ballot Reformers.

A quiet meeting, at which the preliminary steps to form a ballot reform league in Union county were taken, was held during last week at Elizabeth. Among those present at the meeting were Assemblyman Voorhees, Republican, and Assemblyman Marsh and Alderman Brown, Democrats. Reed Gordon, of Roselle, President of the State Ballot Reform League, was present and presided by order. Attorney Bergen was elected temporary Chairman, and a committee was appointed to prepare by-laws for the Association. Speeches in favor of the adoption of the Australian system of voting were made by Messrs. Bergen, Gordon and Marsh. City Attorney Bergen and others. Those present seemed enthusiastic over the matter, and expressed confidence of the formation of a strong ballot reform organization in the county. Permanent officers will be chosen at another meeting, to be held this week.

Shooting Tournament.

The Middlesex Gun Club will hold its annual tournament at Dunellen, on Oct. 8, 9, 10 and 11. About $2,000 will be guaranteed. This will be the largest purse ever guaranteed in the State.

Free Singing Class.

The young men's singing class will be taught by Mr. E. O. Embury at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening at nine o'clock. The instruction is free, and it is believed that the session will give great pleasure and satisfaction, as every effort will be made to make them thorough and useful.

Look Out For This Man.

It is stated that an impostor is in this part of the country, who is making the rounds, robbing old soldiers. The man is known as Joseph Green or "Buckskin Joe," and is a veteran of the Mexican war. He is short, heavily built, weighs about 160 pounds, is 5 feet 6 or 8 inches in height, is aged somewhere between 40 and 60 years, and has long dark brown curly hair slightly sprinkled with gray and running to his shoulders; he wears a slouch hat, a blue coat, square fore and is smoothly shaved generally, wearing a light moustache. His outfit includes a wide brimmed, light felt hat and a suit of blue clothes, which are rather a relic.

The offender represents himself as just coming from Washington, D. C., where he was formerly a scout and spy in the government service, and that he now is a pension officer, a secret service man, and a pension detective employed by Commissioner Tanner. He operates as old soldier representing himself as the authorized agent to collect back pensions, bounties and arrears, and invariably gets a sum of of money for "traveling ex-penses".

The fellow will be divided up among the Freshmen class, and kept by them as mementoes of the occasion. On the night of the rush a grand celebration was held in Bethlehem by the victorious party and on Saturday morning every Freshman appeared with a Sophomore cap in the form of the defeated Sophomores.

News From the County Seat.

The mother of School Commissioner George P. Matthews died suddenly of a paralytic stroke on Saturday.

It is rumored that a movement is on foot to bring out ex-Postholder William M. Oliver as the Democratic candidate for Mayor.

Cards are out for the marriage, on October 15th, of Miss Mary Warner Graham, daughter of Oscar B. Graham, of Elm street, to Mr. Wm. Smith Rose. The wedding will be a fashionable society event. Over one thousand invitations, it is said, have been sent out. The ceremony will take place at Westminister Presbyterian church.

The ninety-sixth birthday anniversary of Rev. Father Matthew, the apostle of temperance, will be appropriately celebrated Oct. 15th, by the Young Men's Father Matthew Temperance Society of Elizabeth. There will be an oration by the Rev. Father Sullivan, of Newark, an address by Past Worthy Patriarch George Henry, of Lincoln Division, and a number of literary and musical programmes rendered by local talent, assisted by a chorus of twenty voices from St. Ann's Female Temperance Society.

The Public Dock Case.

The trial of the ejectment suit of the city of Elizabeth against the Central Railroad company to recover the possession of the public dock was continued in the Union County courts to-day, and it is possible will occupy several days of next week.

Friday afternoon the only witness examined in behalf of the railroad company was a civil engineer and surveyor, Mr. Clark, who described the several large offered in evidence. The witness was then taken up by Judge Stevens in reading the deeds of conveyances and in tracing the title of the ownership of the land since it was deeded to Jonathan Dayton and Aaron Ogden, by John Stiles, in 1797, to the date of its passing into the possession of the Elizabethtown and New York Ferry company.

There were a large number of old residents in attendance who are to be sworn, among them Samuel L. Moore, Abraham Long, Peter L. Coles, Col. James Moore, Jr., Daniel Clark and others. Much interesting testimony was given to-day.

Court of Special Session.

Court of Special Session convened at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Judge McCormick, Byne and Wiley on the bench.

The attendance was small and the business transacted very brief, the only matter of public importance being the granting of a license to the Linden Park association between Rahway and Elizabeth.

—The Young Men's Catholic Association of Morristown will visit this city next week with other organizations, on that occasion to enjoy an excursion for target practice.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Desire for a New Street.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—"Coming events cast their shadows before." Unless the North street merchants see to it that an avenue is opened through to Front street, from North avenue, opposite the railroad station, the rapid development of a competing business centre on the South side is inevitable.

It can easily be foreseen that the new stores corner of Front and Somerset street, can not fail to be profitable, if properly conducted, and are likely to be followed by the erection of many more within a few years, both on Park avenue and Fourth street, because they are more convenient to the large and increasing population south of the railroad.

How preposterous that Park avenue should be the main artery of travel between North avenue and Front street. It is a scant in width that, as a street, it resembles an alley more than an avenue, particularly so when lined on either side with business wagons, when there is barely room for a passage between. It is astonishing that influential residents and business men of North Plainfield have not long ago and repeatedly entered an emphatic protest against the constant annoyances, and the certain injury done to their property. Citizens residing south of the railroad have felt the daily inconvenience of driving through Park alley to the stores and post-office sufficiently to be depended on to endorse the opening of the long needed avenue, which can be done at less cost and ease, than hereafter.

It is quite evident that if this relief is not granted, expected developments of the near future will cause a just demand for the removal of the post-office to some more accessible and convenient location than on Front street. PAID BOARD PUBLICO.

Young Plainfielders Rushing.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Oct. 5, 1889.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Thinking that some of your readers might be interested in reading an account of a college cane-rush, I send you the following account of the yearly rush which took place between the classes of '92 and '93 on the athletic grounds of Lehigh University last Friday afternoon. The rush was conducted by the Senior and Junior classes in the following manner: The grounds being laid out as in foot-ball. The three strongest men from either class were placed on either side of the cane, a large hickory club about five feet long. At a time was had to do, was to hold on to the cane, and their class-mates would do the rest.

The Sophomores were lined up in the form of a rectangle, which was composed of 64 men between their goal and the cane. The Freshmen were also stationed in the form of a triangle composed of 110 men, and a reserve force on either side of the triangle of 15 men.

At the firing of a pistol, both sides rushed together each bent on forcing the other across their goal-line. In 11 minutes after the signal the Freshmen had the cane well behind their goal and then holding them their for five minutes longer, were declared the winners. This is the first time in ten years that the cane-rush has been won by the Freshmen. The first class being 1893.

The cane will be divided up among the Freshmen class, and kept by them as mementoes of the occasion. On the night of the rush a grand celebration was held in Bethlehem by the victorious party and on Saturday morning every Freshman appeared with a Sophomore cap in the form of the defeated Sophomores. Louis James as Hamlet.

Of the many actors who have graced the stage in the past twenty years as Hamlet, it is safe to say that the Hamlet of Mr. Louis James at the Windsor, Thursday night, will bear comparison. It was as flawless a piece of work as any one could wish for. Intelligently conceived, evidence of close study was apparent in every bit of business and in reading the lines. Grace of carriage and nobility of face, aided by a clear and musical voice and an enunciation so distinct that there was no guessing at words, or loss of meaning, gave additional hope to his conception of Hamlet. The subtle and complex character of Hamlet has seldom had so expert an exponent.—N. Y. World, Sept. 8th, 1889. The above play will be presented at Music Hall to-night.

—The Improved Order of Red Men will hold a meeting in the R. of T. rooms Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

Triumphs of Modern Surgery.

In the October Harper, Dr. W. W. Keen narrates some of the achievements of modern surgery that read like a story of magic. At the same time, it is saddening to recall that the most marvelous progress has only been made within the last fifteen years, since the close of our civil war. If our army surgeons had known the modern operations, the life would have been saved of many a gallant fellow who went to join the army of the invisible.

The remarkable progress of recent surgery dates from the liberal application of antiseptics. An antiseptic is, in brief, a chemical preparation which counteracts the tendency to putrefaction. Earth, air and water are full of microbes, billions upon billions of them. Wherever there is a scratch or abrasion of the skin, these fasten like fiends upon the unprotected flesh; and like fiends destroy it. They cause inflammation, suppuration, gangrene. Antiseptics destroy the microbes. A modern surgeon cleanses his instruments, his bandages, his hands and nails, and the wound itself, in antiseptics, before he undertakes an operation.

The difference between the new and old processes is this: Under the old the patient had surgical fever after a serious operation or amputation, and did not recover under a month, if he recovered at all. By the new process the operation is performed under ether, there is no "surgical fever," because the putrefaction germ spores are excluded, and in from five to ten days the patient is well. Dr. Keen says the world is indebted perhaps to Sir Joseph Lister more than to any other for improvements in the treatment of wounds. Since these improvements have been introduced the per cent. of deaths in amputations has been reduced from 58 to 5.

Reading carefully Dr. Keen's account, it almost looks as though in time our surgeons would be able to remove any part of a man's body, perform an operation on him and put the part back and have him sound and well, better than before, in a few days. They can chisel out a piece of a human skull one or two inches in diameter, remove a tumor from the brain beneath it and then put it back in place, where it will grow fast and be sound as ever. While the surgeons are removing the tumor the piece of skull bone reposes in a cup filled with a warm antiseptic, whose temperature must not fall below 100 degs. to 105 degs. The bone may even be kept from its place so long as two hours with safety.

The cases of persons afflicted with gallstones and kidney disease are no longer hopeless. A whole kidney, the gall bladder itself, has been removed, and the patient has lived and recovered. The greatest progress, Dr. Keen says, has been made in the operations of the head and abdominal cavity. If a man received a gunshot wound in his intestines the old fashioned surgeon gave him opium and let him die in peace. The modern surgeon opens the cavity, removes the ball, uses the antiseptic dressing and lets him get well. To American surgeons belongs the credit of improving greatly the treatment of wounds in the stomach and bowels.

Yet a more magnificent field than all is gradually opening before our scientific medical users. To illustrate: A patient will be stricken with paralysis of an arm or hand; he will, perhaps, have convulsions. The surgeon will examine his case critically. He will presently decide that the trouble is owing to a tumor or derangement of a given part of the brain. The patient is etherized, his skull is trepanned and the brain found to be diseased just where the man of science predicted.

Science has decided that particular portions of the brain control particular portions of the body. Exact knowledge of this branch of physiology is in its infancy. For the next generation it will be an absorbing and wonderful study. It is called localization of the functions of the brain.

Our modern surgeons can successfully remove goitres. A tumor has even been removed from the spinal cord. Only a few of the triumphs of modern surgery are here named. Yet, wonderful as they seem, it tempers our self gratulation to reflect that a century hence skillful surgeons of that day will look back with pitying contempt upon the clumsy, ignorant operators of our time.

In his new novel W. D. Howells makes one character express the opinion that $5,000 a year is about as much as a man can honestly earn. Another character makes the remark that not the most gifted person who ever lived could honestly earn a million dollars in the practice of any art or science. But Patti has earned more than that sum, and it can hardly be said that she got it dishonestly or ever robbed the poor.

HIS FRIENDS FAIL HIM.

Boulanger Said to be Dead to France.

ELECTION FUNDS FOR HIS OWN USE

The Rebellots Cause No Excitement in France—Ex-Queen Natalie Said to be Losing Ground in Belgrade—Mayor Issaes' Peculiar Dilemma.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The second ballots which took place in 126 constituencies in France Sunday excited the least possible interest in England, and appeared to be regarded throughout France and in Paris itself with nothing approaching the usual election excitement. The ballotings have become general that the republic is now firmly established for many years, and whatever may be the result of the balloting, France will maintain her existing form of government intact.

Boulanger Out of the Fight.

Boulanger is no longer a factor in any French political problem. Those who have heretofore been his warmest political friends are today ready to accept an explanation of the general's disappearance or absence at the polls which in anything but creditable to their former chief. Utterly unable to comprehend that the French people should have deliberately repudiated themselves and their revolutionary schemes, they now insist that their defeat is due entirely to the failure of Gen. Boulanger to get the election funds of money which had been given him to aid in carrying the elections for the purposes for which they were intended.

Has He Deadened His Vest?

It is openly charged that the general has been quietly stowing away the millions of francs which his wealthy dupes poured into his coffers while he let the elections take care of themselves. Boulanger takes pains to create the impression that he is impoverished, but his disgusted allies make no secret of their belief that he has deadened his vest, his bank account at the expense of his own and their political prospects.

Republicans Carry 106 Districts.

The returns from the provincial district come in slowly. The latest figures give a total of eighty-four deputies elected by the Republicans and thirty-six by all shades of their opponents. M. Tonlouse, M. Constans, minister of the interior, defeats M. Susini. In Birdeux ex-Minister Raynal has defeated his Conservative opponent.

The latest returns give the results in 153 districts. Of these the Republicans have been successful in 108, and the Boulangists, or other opponents of the Republican, in forty-five.

Deserted by Laguerre.

The followers of Boulanger appear to have deserted his standard quite generally, and it is estimated that only two of the forty-five seats contested for have gone to the Republicans. Even the hitherto stanch Boulangist Laguerre no longer uses the name of his former chief in electioneering, but calls himself a Revisionist. In this course he is followed by many of the general's former supporters.

In the French cabinet changes M. Guyot, minister of public works, is elected, and in the Eleventh M. Hoquet, the ex-premier. M. Lefaivet, the Boulangist, is elected in the Eighteenth. In Bordeaux two Boulangists have been returned.

The Vote in Paris.

The totals for Paris give the Republicans 20 and the Boulangists 14 deputies elected. Among the Republicans elected are Max Lockroy, Millerand, Dreyfus, Raspail, Lanessan and Marmottan. Among the Boulangists elected are Dr. Mery, who defeated M. Basly, and M. Somier, who defeated Herpelin. In the Eighth Seine district M. Marin, Conservative Boulangist, defeated the well known Deputy Passy, and in the Ninth Emile Ferry defeated M. Jacques. Cornelet-Lavalle, the Belleville district the Socialist Dumay defeated M. Hochefort. Lyons returns three Republicans.

The Mayor of London's Dilemma.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—London's lord mayor elect, Mr. Isaacs, is brought face to face with what seems an insurmountable difficulty. Nov. 9 is the date for the lord mayor's show, and this year it falls on a Saturday. Custom, who is a devout Jew, cannot on that day either ride or walk in the procession, and as a lord mayor's show without a lord mayor would be regarded as an innovation the outcome is watched with much interest. A compromise of some sort, in which religion and custom will each be called upon to yield something is probable.

The fair American, Miss Beaumont, while descending in her parachute at an exhibition, fell into the river Tyne, but was fished out without serious injury.

A Commoner's Suicide.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Sir William Tindal Robertson, a member of parliament for Penrose for Brighton, committed suicide at his home in Brighton by cutting his throat with a razor. Sir William had shown symptoms of insanity for some time. The statute of lunacy is supposed to have been committed while he was insane. He was elected to the house of commons as a Conservative in November, 1886, being unopposed.

Natalie Is Losing Ground.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Queen Natalie appears to be losing something of her popularity in Belgrade owing to her absolute refusal to listen to any proposals of the regents looking to an amicable settlement of the vexed questions raised by her arrival at the Servian capital.

Driven from a Theatre by Fire.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Fire, originating in the basement of Johnson, Kellogg & Co.'s hardware establishment, entirely destroyed the buildings, Nos. 108 and 110 Randolph street, and caused a loss of about $200,000. The fire caused a small scare in the Grand Opera house, and the audience was dismissed half an hour before the regular time because the building was becoming filled with smoke. The audience behaved splendidly under the circumstances, and although the flaming fire engines with clanging bells nearly drowned the voices of the actors.

SIR KNIGHTS AT WASHINGTON.

Order of Exercises for 15th Grand Masonic Encampment the Coming Week.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Preparations for the twenty-second triennial conclave of the grand encampment of Knights Templar in the national capital during the coming week are complete. If the number of visitors in the city indicates an occasion of unusual importance. Many streets are in gala attire and the decorations used are probably the richest ever displayed. Handsome arches are stretched across the streets, while everywhere is seen the "Maltese cross." The first advance guard of Sir Knights have begun to arrive and by the time the last special train bearing incoming train came laden with plumed knights to attend the great conclave. Scores of commanderies, many of the most famous encampments in the land, have arrived and invited guests have already arrived, and are safely and comfortably quartered at various hotels and boarding houses.

The programme in brief for the week is as follows:

Monday—Reception of visiting commanderies.

Tuesday—Grand parade; escort of grand encampment to Masonic temple; excursion on Potomac.

Wednesday—Exhibition and drill; excursion to Mt. Vernon; reception by President Harrison.

Thursday—Visits to public buildings; excursion to Mt. Vernon; banquet at Willard's hotel.

Saturday—Closing ceremonies at encampment.

Devotional services were held in many of the churches of the city Sunday, to which Sir Knights were invited. The day was generally invited, and as a result many of the churches were crowded with the visitors.

LEE HING HAD PLUCK.

Novel Methods of Torture Used by Chinese Highbinders in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Lee Ghig, Lee Ling and Lee Hing entered the laundry of Lee Lang at 207 Fifth street, and, finding Lee Hing, an employe, alone, set upon him, began to smash things around and talk with him. Suddenly the three visitors pounced upon Hing and ordered him to show them where Lang kept his money. Hing refused, whereupon he was bound hand and foot, gagged, and tickled about the nose, lips and ears with feathers and slips of paper. They also tied Hing's head to his back by his long pig queue. Though suffering greatly, Hing still refused to betray his employer. The three visitors finally left him and hunted the shop until they found a chest, which they broke open, securing $100 and some gold ornaments. Giving Hing a few parting kicks, they departed.

Hing lay in his helpless and painful position seven hours, when he was discovered and released by an early customer in the morning. The police obtained his story and sent him to the hospital under arrest. Some of the money and ornaments were found in their possession. Hing is quite ill from the effects of his maltreatment. He is hear to three highbinder pals, who, he says, it allowed to go the highbinders will wreak vengeance upon him for informing against his countrymen.

Railroad Men Meet.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—A secret meeting of the Steam Railroad Men's Protective union was held here to-day. Delegates were present from all parts of the United States and Canada. The treasurer's report showed the order to be in a flourishing condition. In executive session committees were appointed to draft resolutions regarding the questions of railroads employing inexperienced men and minors, shorter hours for employes and the adoption of the Australian ballot. It was resolved to support the anti-Pinkerton bill. The employers' liability bill was warmly debated and a law was proposed for each state, making railroads liable for all damages, and that such legislation would do much toward forcing railway corporations to provide safety appliances. It was decided to enter the effects of the order in every state that was re-elected, the executive board being made advisory and increased to seven members. The legislative committee's report proved to be exemption. It showed that there are but few laws in behalf of railway employes. What have generally been supposed to be laws are simply recommendations from railway and warehouse commissioners. The meeting then adjourned.

Mr. Powderly's Plans.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Mr. Powderly has left here for Hamilton, Ont., where he will speak to-night. The original programme included a series of speeches in the west, but these have been abandoned. After his address in Hamilton the Knights of Labor chief will go to Scranton for a few days to work upon his report for the General assembly, which meets in Minneapolis in November. On the 14th Mr. Powderly will go to Philadelphia to hold a conference with the chiefs and secretaries of the Federation of Labor unions and the Knights of Labor clubs. The remainder of the executive board is yet in session in St. Louis.

IMPORTANT CAPTURES IN INDIANA

The Crimes of a Single Day—Fatally Assaulted by His Blind Brother—A Boston Man Arrested for Murder—A Bath Lawyer's Suicide, Etc., Etc.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 7.—The Orange county farmers who were arrested for counterfeiting have been brought here. The leader of the band is Henry Orem, an itinerant Baptist preacher. He admitted his guilt and made a full confession, implicating all the men under arrest except two. The gang has been making counterfeit coin for two years, and confederates in half a dozen states have been regularly supplied with it by express.

The counterfeiters have a complete outfit, consisting of two presses, moulds, files and other implements. It was not circulated in the immediate vicinity of the operations except by one man named Walsh, who traveled through the country as a huckster. One of the gang, Robert Williams, is 82 years old. QUAKER CITY GERMANS.

They Commemorate the Landing of the German Pioneers in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—The 200th anniversary of the landing of the German pioneer settlers in Philadelphia was celebrated here by a large meeting at the hall of the German Society, No. 27 North Seventh street, Sunday afternoon. Dr. Gross, of the German hospital, presided, and spoke in German and English. Addresses were also made in German by Professor Rickenbach and Dr. Collins, and in English by City Solicitor Warwick. Over 1,000 people were present. The musical portion of the programme was rendered by a large orchestra under the direction of Prof. Sentz, and a chorus of 300 male and 150 female voices, representing the three principal musical societies of the city.

The celebration was the most elaborate which has taken place since the grand bicentennial jubilee in 1883. Steps have been taken by the German society here to appropriately celebrate the 300th anniversary next year, and a subscription has been started for the purpose of erecting a grand memorial monument on the banks of the Wissahickon, overlooking the spot where the first pioneer families settled on the banks of the river in that portion of the city still known as Germantown.

All religious and political features were excluded, and no flags except the German and the United States flag were permitted. In the evening there was a fine display of fireworks upon the river, followed by excursions and balls on steamers. The parade was reviewed at the Music hall, Exposition building, where patriotic speeches were made and a musical programme rendered by the German singing societies of the city.

ST. LOUIS' SENSATION.

A Well Known Citizen Assaulted Under Peculiar Circumstances.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—About 1 a. m. there occurred in the Third district police station, Ed Klosterman, saloon keeper, of 2,602 Cass avenue, and Alexander Hunt, a friend of Klosterman's, bearing the unconscious body of Dept. D. F. Slattery, one of the best known business men in the city. Klosterman told a most sensational story as follows:

About 1 o'clock, he said, he started to shake to the rooms occupied by himself and wife over the saloon, accompanied by Hunt. His wife ran from her bedroom crying out that there was a man in her room. Slattery followed the woman out and attempted to pass the two men, but was without coat, hat or vest. Hunt struck him and he fell downstairs. Klosterman and Hunt then, as they claim, went down, and, finding Capt. Slattery unconscious, immediately took him up and carried him to the police station, some two blocks away. A short time after they arrived there Slattery's wife and young man came in with a gold watch and chain and $1 in money, which he had found in Capt. Slattery's vest. The captain's friends say that he had some $200 worth of jewelry on his person and think it a case of attempted robbery. The captain states that he was out of his head from the effects of medicine he had taken and did not know what he was about.

TO VISIT THE HOLY LAND.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Given Leave of Absence for Two Months.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 7.—Dr. Talmage opened his sermon in the Tabernacle Sunday with these remarks: "With the hearty consent of the elders and trustees of this church, I leave on Wednesday morning, from the city of Paris, for the Holy Land, Palestine, there to be gone about two months. I am sure all my congregation will unite with the officers in giving their consent when I tell you why I go. First, my object is instructional to my self and congregation. I want to see the places associated with our Lord's life and death. I believe I can make my pulpit work far more efficient if I have seen with my own eyes Bethlehem and Nazareth and Jerusalem and Calvary and all the other places connected with the Saviour's ministry. Those places cannot be visited healthfully in the summer and in time of usual vacation. What I learn and see you will learn and see with me when I get back. My second reason for going is that I am writing the life of Christ, and I can be more accurate and graphic when I have been on my self-appointed tour."

Among the places at which Dr. Talmage will probably preach during this extended trip are Beirut, Jerusalem, Nazareth, Bethlehem, Bethany, Samaria, Joppa, Athens and Corinth.

AN EX-PRIEST TO HANG.

Conviction of Father Boyle on A Grave Charge.

A DRAMATIC SCENE IN COURT.

The Prisoner Bitterly Denounced the Prosecution's Attorneys, and with Careless and Defiant Mien Heard the Sentence of Death Pronounced.

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 7.—The absorbing sensation here is the result of the trial of the ex-Catholic priest, J. J. Boyle, which was concluded here at midnight, resulting in Boyle's conviction and sentence to be hanged on Nov. 29. The case has created intense interest all over the state. Boyle came to this city last December as assistant to Father Riley, then in charge of the Church of the Sacred Heart, who was in failing health and unable to attend to all the duties of his charge. Boyle is a native of Pennsylvania and was educated in New York. Since his trouble here there have been rumors that he was sent here by friends with the hope that being placed among strangers would have a good effect upon him. Before he had been here long, however, he made a reputation for convivial and unpriestly conduct.

The Story of the Crime.

The crime of criminal assault upon Miss Geneva Whitaker, of this city, of which he has been convicted, was committed on the afternoon of May 21. He had just returned from a visit to Fayetteville and was considerably under the influence of liquor. On arriving at the rectory he found Miss Whitaker and another young girl named Bowers to decorate the altar for Sunday. According to her testimony he decoyed her into his room and assaulted her. His story is that she consented to all that occurred. She is rather attractive and is 17 years of age. Boyle is 30 years old and is a man of extraordinary intellect and high education. He is described as a fascinating talker and refined. The evidence in the case was strong on both sides and a wide difference of opinion exists as to the justice of the verdict. The jury were out but an hour.

His Bitter Speech.

When the prisoner was asked if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced a remarkable scene ensued. He arose and faced the crowd, and appeared to be as cool and unconcerned as if the matter at stake was of the most trivial character. He only spoke a few words, bitterly denouncing the prosecuting attorney who had acted as counsel on the other side, and saying that the prosecution had been unfair and bloodthirsty from the beginning. He did not refer to the crime in any way, or assert his innocence.

Strong Prejudice Against Him.

He spoke rapidly, eloquently and in an impassioned manner. He seemed prejudiced to make his speech of defence. He said that he was aware that able lawyers had conducted the prosecution, but there was a strong prejudice against him, and counsel, which had worked against him powerfully, and that counsel had unfairly roused this prejudice by making statements respecting the power of priests which were not properly put in argument. He said that it had been unfair against him that he was a drunkard, whereas he was not addicted to liquor, and had merely on one occasion become somewhat lively at a champagne supper in a hotel here.

He said he had all his life played cards, and would continue to play them so long as God spared him his reason.

How He Received His Sentence.

In conclusion he turned to the judge and said: "I am now ready to receive the sentence of this court." He stood with his arms folded, his head bent, and took in a most careless and defiant manner. While the death sentence was being pronounced his countenance did not change, and he did not seem to be affected by it in the slightest degree. After the sentence was pronounced he turned and spoke to his counsel and smiled.

Boyle is Still Hopeful.

There is a great diversity of opinion about the verdict and feeling was high over his death sentence. Boyle is in good spirits and says that he will not be hanged. He has thirty days in which to prepare his case for the supreme court, to which an appeal has been granted. His counsel will try to get a new trial and will argue that side issues and illusions to Boyle's appearance will be used to affect the jury. It is thought that Boyle's own evidence, which was certainly in many respects unreal and improbable, did more than anything else to convict him.

INSURANCE
Isaac Brokaw.
REAL ESTATE
and
Fire Insurance,
20 DUER STREET, NORTH PLAINFIELD.

HE WOULDN'T READ THE PAPERS.

He didn't like baseball;
And he wouldn't read the papers,
They had nothing at all
To say, but such papers;
They had nothing at all
About murders and balls;
And he frequently vowed in a manner quite loud,
That he wouldn't be bothered with papers at all.

He didn't like to hear
Of each criminal debate,
He couldn't have his ears
With their scandal and rude;
He wouldn't have 'em near,
For he didn't like to hear
Such abominable news as the newspapers use!
He wouldn't have a newspaper near!

So he sat all his hops
At a dreadful reduction,
And the price of his crops
Brought a dreadful reduction;
He sacrificed crops,
He corn, wheat and hogs—
He hadn't read of their rise in values and prices,
And he actually slaughtered his crops.

And he caught the smallpox—
Though most well intentioned,
He called thro' the blanket
All the papers had mentioned;
He caught the smallpox
And he called thro' the blanket
Where the newspapers said forty-seven men were
And he pretty near died with smallpox

And he sank in a mire;
Thirty-nine thousand dollars,
And was left with but nine
Cents and two paper collars;
And the papers had done
Second times, I s'pose,
Came and went and found and exposed the whole
Fraud,
I don't know but also finished and nine!

He was killed by a shot
From a crazy man's pistol;
In the old Maynard list
By the corspiler in Bristol.
But the papers had
Had described how he shot,
Given three columns' space to a map of the Spot,
So died in the old Maynard list!
—S. W. Foss in Yankee Blade.

No Rest for the Weary.

Bessie the Rover—Miss me, but I'm tired.

He Was a Parent and Knew.

"You advertised for a boy?"
"Yes. Do you want a place?"
"Yes, sir."
"Do you whistle?"
"No, sir."
"Do you carve your name on desks and benches?"
"No, sir."
"Do you play ball during office hours?"
"Oh no, sir! Never."
"I'm sorry. You won't do. I wanted a boy, and individuals who do not behave as I have indicated are not boys."—Harper's Bazar.

A Victim to His Wife's Extravagance.

Mr. Chugwater looking at his wife's last millinery bill:—Fifteen dollars' worth of bonnets and ribbons in six months! Do you want to drive us all into the poorhouse, Samantha!

Mr. Chugwater name day at his grocer's—See, here, Mr. Goldspink, I'm paying you too much for this tobacco. I used $25 worth of it last year. If you keep on charging me fifty cents a pound for it I'll be goshdinged if I don't trade somewhere else.—Chicago Tribune.

A Possible Case.

First Actor—The chances are we shall be required to appear only at matinee performances in the near future, you think, eh?

Second Actor—It looks as if such an arrangement were not among the impossibilities. I understand a rival manager has petitioned for an injunction to restrain the company from playing "After Dark."—Detroit Free Press.

His Subterfuge.

Mr. Oldboy—You'd better swear off smoking, old man; I see it's affecting you.

Mr. G. O. Young—Oh, no. I've acquired that cough; it's such an easy way to become interesting. You see the girls think it's vigorous, and they're all trying to persuade me to give them up.—Judge.

Must Have Had a Tough Time.

"Hard work has done Charlie Barrett good. Just see what huge muscles he has on his wrist."

"Yes. He wasn't so last year. What was his work on the ranch?"

"He did the carving at meals."—Harper's Bazar.

At the Catskills.

Newcomer—What is the highest point reached here?

Old Sojourner—Oh, don't bother yourself about that just now. You will find it out when you get your bill.—Boston Budget.

She Was Inexperienced.

Policeman—Do you have to take care of the dog?

Nurse Girl—No. The missis says I'm too young and inexperienced. I only look after the children.—Life.

Can't Be Overlooked.

"Her great fault is her devotion to large theatre hats."

"Well, can't you overlook that?"

"No; if I could I wouldn't mind it."—Harper's Bazar.

The Real Rled.

Miss Forraway—I see that prize fighters fight in a ring. Mr. Spar. What kind of a ring is it?

Mr. Spar—An engagement ring.—Harper's Bazar.

Knows His Business.

Consumptive—I'd like to see the proprietor of the sanitarium.

Clerk—He's gone away, sir, for his two weeks' vacation.

Consumptive—Dear me, but I'm tired.—Harper's Bazar.

OF THE EPISCOPALIANS.

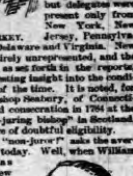
IMPORTANCE OF THIS YEAR'S TRIENNIAL CONVENTION.

It Is Practically Their Centennial Reorganization of 1784-89—Growth in the Church—Important Issues Before the Last Two Conventions to Be Settled Now.

In this age of centennials not the least interesting is the regular triennial convention of the Episcopal church in America, now in session in New York city, as it recovered just a hundred years from the time when the church completed its official organization in America. Not only will it be historically interesting, but many questions will be discussed which show the progress of the church government towards a democracy, and their solution may result in still more radical changes.

Like other church bodies then in existence the Episcopalians suffered much disorganization during the American Revolution, and were engaged for some time after in completing the separation from England and organizing on an American model. The first general convention was held in Philadelphia in 1785, but delegates were present only from New York and New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. New England was entirely unrepresented, and the reasons therefor, as set forth in the journal, give us an interesting insight into the condition and ideas of the time. It is noted, for instance, that Bishop Seabury, of Connecticut, had received consecration at the hands of a "non-juring bishop" in Scotland, and was therefore of doubtful eligibility.

BISHOP STARKEY.



BISHOP LEE.

And what is a "non-juror?" asks the average American of today. Well, when William of Orange was made king, a few bishops and priests of the established church, headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, William Sancroft, refused to take the oath of allegiance to him on the ground that he was not the legitimate king, and were therefore "deprived," as they believed that they were the only true church, and maintained a regular succession for over a century. And this sort of thing was still of consequence in the American Revolution! It is like taking one back to ancient history in a century.

The convention met again in October, 1786, adopted a constitution and slightly revised the Book of Common Prayer to make it applicable to the United States. They also arranged with the British bishops for a perfectly regular and undisputed consecration, and accordingly Bishops William White, for Pennsylvania, and Samuel Provoost, for New York (the same who officiated later at Washington's inauguration), went over and were consecrated Feb. 4, 1787. On their return the entire Episcopal body was consulted, and after thorough discussion the reorganization on an American basis was completed in October, 1789. In that year there were in the United States seven dioceses, 3 bishops, 190 clergymen and about 7,500 communicants.

The present convention represents fifty dioceses, fourteen missionary jurisdictions, seventy bishops, fourteen missionary bishops, and in round numbers 3,500 clergymen and 450,000 communicants. It is the highest body in the church, and is organized like the American congress, in two houses, each with the power of originating measures and of amending or nullifying those of the other. The house of bishops, like the senate, has secret sessions, but the sessions of the house of clerical and lay delegates are always open to public inspection. The latter house consists of four clergymen and four laymen from each diocese, and therefore contains many 400 members. The delegates from the missionary jurisdictions have seats, but no votes.

Among the members of both houses are many eminent men. In the upper house is Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, the venerable presiding bishop of the church, takes high rank as a theologian. Bishop Doane, of Albany; McLaren, of Chicago, Littlejohn, of Long Island, Whitaker, of Pennsylvania, and Galleher, of Louisiana, are men of national note, and Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, is known throughout the BISHOP NEELY.

Christian world for his labors in behalf of the Indians. Bishop Grafton, of Fond Du Lac, was once prominent among the "Cowley Fathers;" Bishop Thompson, of Mississippi, was formerly rector of Christ's church, New York city, and Bishop Seymour, of Illinois, was also a former dean of the General Theological seminary, of New York. Noted among the clerical deputies in the lower house are Dr. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, Dr. Henry A. Coit, of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of New York, and many others.

Among the lay delegates are many whose names look a little odd in a religious body; as the public knows them well as politicians or men of scientific or literary fame, such as ex-Mayor Seth Low, ex-Postmaster Pruyn, Corning, of Albany; Hamilton Fish, Dr. Shattuck and Columbus Delano. The last meeting of the convention was in Chicago in 1886, so it is a triennial body, and there many exciting issues were introduced and postponed to this session to give time for thorough discussion. After the preliminary work is done, therefore, important legislation is expected. Most important of these will probably be on the proposition to radically revise the liturgy and prayer book.

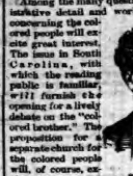
The Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington brought the matter forward several years ago and produced a great impression in Episcopalians generally. Six years ago a committee on revision recommended several changes, some of which became law at Chicago three years ago. The whole matter was then referred to a committee of fifteen to report at this convention. The report is already in print and no doubt has been eagerly read by every earnest churchman. In a general way it may be said that the changes proposed are not those on vital doctrine, but tend in popularize the book. The committee has also provided a book of offices for every occasion not provided for in the prayer book, and it is to be expected that the convention will authorize the provisional use of this book.

A hymnal committee was also appointed at the last convention, and has ready for this one to consider a compilation of six hundred and fifty hymns. While the hymn book language is so flexible and capable of so much ambiguity, and words in themselves literal often have meanings so different from those by which they have come that it is not surprising that many critics have found much dubious passages in the proposed hymns and a very lively controversy thereon is in progress. But the question of most interest to the world is that of changing the name of the church, and quite naturally, for religion is the conservative force of society, and this is the most conservative of churches. To a change of name may open very much.

BISHOP TALBOT.

A small but very energetic section of the church maintains that there is something to be gained, if not by dwelling, in the phrase "Protestant Episcopal," and that the church should by its name announce its catholic or universal character. It has had general condemnation the resolution for a change of name lacked but few votes of passing the lower house, and has been introduced in this convention will certainly be a debate on the origin and use of the terms "Protestant" and "Catholic," which will be of intense interest.

Among the many questions of mere administrative detail and working methods, that concerning the colored people will excite great interest. The issue is South Carolina, with which the reading public is familiar, will furnish the opening for a lively debate on the "colored brother." The proposition to separate church for the colored people will, of course, excite earnest opposition, and the practice of ignoring all race lines, which practice is Episcopal the world over, has already created a schism in South Carolina. These are, perhaps, the most exciting questions the convention will have before it during the month it will sit.



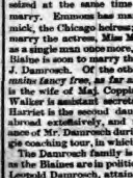
BISHOP CLARK.

WALTER DAMROSCH.

The Talented Musician Who Is to Wed Margaret Blaine.

Secretary James G. Blaine has six children, and it appears that they were nearly all seized at the same time with the desire to marry. Emmons has married Miss McCormick, the Chicago heiress; Jarvis G., it is to marry the actress, Miss Marie Nevins, and is as a single man once more, and Miss Margaret Blaine is soon to marry the musician, Walter J. Damrosch. It was stated slightly at first that Mr. Damrosch was a Jew, but as reported; another is the wife of Maj. Coppinger, U. S. A., and Walter is assistant secretary of state. Miss Harriet is the only one who has not married, although extensively, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Damrosch during the noted Carnegie coaching tour, in which both participated.

The Damrosch family is as noted for music as the Blaines are in politics. The father, Dr. Leopold Damrosch, attained a high reputation in Europe and endeared himself to many in New York by his virtues and genius. His family consisted of Frank, director of the chorus of the Metropolitan opera house and president of the New York Teachers' Musical association, Walter and three daughters. One of these is already noted as a pianist, Walter Damrosch was born Jan. 30, 1862, and showed the family talent at a very early age. At the age of 15 he went on a concert tour with Wilhelmj, furnishing the piano accompaniment.



WALTER DAMROSCH.

In 1881 he was elected conductor of the Newark Harmonic society, and in 1881 bore a conspicuous part with his father at the musical festival held in the Seventh regiment armory. In 1884, immediately after his father's death, he was called to fill his place as musical conductor at the Metropolitan opera house. As a musician he is a devoted "Wagnerian," and has given much time to lecturing on and teaching the symbolism and musical significance of Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelung." It is said that his profits on these lectures amounted to $17,000.

In 1888 Mr. Carnegie invited him to join the coaching party, which consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Blaine and the Misses Blaine, Mrs. Dodge ("Gail Hamilton") and Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie. There could not have been a more favorable field for a young lover who had only "go" in him. It is said that the preliminaries were settled while the young couple wandered alone over the grounds of Cluny castle, Mr. Carnegie's place, and that the final arrangements were made at Bar Harbor the past season. Mr. Blaine was favorably impressed at the start with the young musician.

The sudden death of Dr. Damrosch at the comparatively early age of 53 saddened all lovers of music in the country, as he was looked upon as a sort of martyr in his art. He died of overwork. It had been his ambition to see German opera thoroughly naturalized and presented in a fitting manner to the American people, and when he made Bar Harbor the past season, Mr. Blaine was favorably impressed at the start with the young musician.

He was a native of Posen, and studied surgery at his alma mater in Berlin, but meeting by accident the great Abbe Liszt, he at once changed his plan of life and became a musician. It was he who brought Adelina Patti to New York for twenty nights, at $1,000 a night and expenses to and from the country. His wonderful success at the Metropolitan is still fresh in the public memory, and his son appears to have inherited all his talent and energy.

A Valuable Box.

Mr. Thomas Goodall, of Sanford, Me., has an ingenious invention made by a native of Germany, explains the Boston Herald. It is a box about three inches long, two inches wide and three-fourths of an inch deep. This box is full of machinery, and when a key is applied a portion of the top will open and a small blue mouse with darting, clipper, flutter its wings, turn about and retreat out of sight. The work beneath is of solid gold, and very finely wrought. This year Goodall and Mr. Goodall will make a lot of such more, for it has been impossible to duplicate it. The inventor died after making this one, and although he had the machinery of several others made, no one could ever be found able to put it together and make it work. Once Mr. Goodall had occasion to have it repaired, and he was obliged to send it to Boston for that purpose.—Boston Herald.

How a Sagacious Horse Helped Himself to Water When Its Owner Refused to Furnish It—Prince Bismarck and His Favorite Dogs.

The owner of a great many cart horses for trade his men to give them water on coming home hot after their work. This order was greatly resented by the horses, who would go with very a pump with a long handle that stood in the upper end of the large yard where they were driven.

BLOSSOM PUMPING WATER.

One day, shortly after the return of the horses from work, pumping was heard from the large yard. The owner ran to ascertain who was the culprit, and was astonished to see Blos om, a tall bay mare, trying to obtain the forbidden water herself. She had put her head beneath the pump handle, and raising it with some difficulty as high as possible, immediately hurried to the spout of the pump only in time to quench her thirst by the stream that was the fruit of her labor. This done, she would again lift the handle and again hurry to the spout. It is needless to say that her sagacity was duly admired, and she was permitted to have all the water she could obtain in this manner.

The Story of a Tame Rabbit.

A New York reader of Golden Days relates this amusing anecdote about a rabbit:

Bunny was black and white, and was purchased by our young friend for five cents from a needy compatriot. The seller delivered the rabbit as ordered, and the buyer promptly turned him loose "to see if he was tame." He was tame, and during that session calmly ate all the luncheon offered to him by any of the pupils. His new master lugged him home at noon, and built him a pen and called him Dick.

In the afternoon the boy returned to school, and the exercises had just begun when there came a rapping at the door. It was opened, when in came Dick, hopped on to a desk, scratched his ear once deliberately and sat down near the fire, as far as reported; another is the wife of Maj. Coppinger, U. S. A., and Walter is assistant secretary of state. Miss Harriet is the only one who has not married, although extensively, and made the acquaintance of Mr. Damrosch during the noted Carnegie coaching tour, in which both participated.

"Frightened mouse color" is the latest fashionable shade. It is probably a little darker than the ordinary mouse color.

Lemon juice is a good thing for removing tan. It is also excellent for taking stains from the hands, and applied to the hands at night will keep them soft and white.

English shopkeepers are complaining that American shoppers are exceedingly troublesome. They say the Americans turn over everything in the shop, "shove" nothing, and remind you every now and again that they really don't mean to buy now." One shopkeeper, whose business is not far from Bond street, refuses to take American orders. This is unfortunate—for the shopkeeper.

Make all kitchen aprons of seersucker, and so avoid quite as item in the weekly ironing, as it requires none. If work dresses are made of the same goods they need ironing only when lined.

Housekeepers generally will be glad that tea kettles are in high fashion. They are light, dainty, painted in pretty colors, trimmed with brass, and are most easily kept clean. A wonderfully pretty iron and brass has no footboard at all, this being a revival of an old European design of several centuries ago.

In Italy women are employed as bed-carriers. On all buildings in process of erection, women are employed. They carry all loads on their heads and work barefooted. Their wages are one lire (twenty cents) a day. In Germany, also, all girls, even those of the richest, are taught to sew, and are made to work in the fields.

In the high art circles where the love of the beautiful reigns supreme it is considered the best taste to have table linen and bed linen in all white without any hint of color, and all monograms worked in white silk floss. Heirlood towels are also for art's reasons preferred to those with fringed borders.

The beautiful embroideries on muslin with cotton by the East Indian and Canadian women are for sale at the Arts and Dry Goods Chronicle. The embroidery practiced by the latter is curious enough; they work with their own hair as well as that of animals, with which they make splendid representations of flowers, foliages, etc. They also insert the skins of eels, serpents, banshees, mermaids, and other outlandish kinds of fish.

When She's Engaged.

Have you ever noticed what a difference there is in a girl's manner when she gets engaged to be married? writes one of the fall correspondents. She flirts as much as ever, of course, and even a little more, for it seems as though a semi-appropriated damsel has more charms for the male flirts than those whose hearts have not capitulated. The difference lies in the manner to other girls of the engaged one. Even the gentlest and most seamus slight airs of superiority, as though the problem of settlement in life having been settled for them they were now competent to guide and advise all other young women.

If the fiance be rough and handsome, they are generally too much absorbed in him to pay much attention to any one else; but if he be middle aged and very rich they find time to quietly patronize the whole lot of their friends. This they employ principally in discussing their own prospects, settling what color their liveries shall be and in arranging what style their new coach shall fashion. But a little egotism is pardonable at such a time, and they are seldom so wholly occupied with their own concerns as to forget to quietly patronize their girl friends. "You must marry well, Lucy. You shall come and stay with me, and we will see what can be done." Or, "Mary, you must give up young Browne. He will not be able to give you a carriage for years and years, if ever. I shall have dark, tan colored liveries, picked out with crimson, etc."—Philadelphia Press.

Hair Dressing.

It is bad for a woman to soak her hair in water in her daily bath, and yet she may do it with impunity, provided she attends to it purpose the proper after treatment. The daily wetting of the hair of the head favors parasitic growths on the hair, and unless the hair is well dried before it is coiled up it will become sour, much to its injury, and give an offensive odor. The hair may be wet daily with impunity, provided after it is wiped as dry as possible it is rubbed with alcohol and briskly rubbed with the hands. The alcohol stops the parasitic growth, and in evaporating carries off the last of the water, thus preventing all sourness and soaking into the hair to be put up promptly.

The disease of the scalp which produces dandruff eventually produces baldness and frequently quickly. Persons who want to preserve their fine heads of hair have to give them the same good attention they give other valuable possessions. If there is much dandruff the head should have a thorough dressing twice a week. A dressing should commence with the careful use of a small tooth comb until all dandruff in sight is removed. This should be followed with a thorough washing with warm water and white castile soap. Every portion of the scalp should be well rubbed and afterward every trace of the soap should be washed away with repeatedly warm water.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Women's Literature.

According to a writer from London to The Book Buyer, what is called ladies' literature is becoming the most lucrative of journalistic speculations. Some of the proprietors of ladies' newspapers have made large fortunes. This speaks well for the fair sex. If, as is occasionally asserted by pessimistic observers, their favorite literature is the worthless novel, how can they find time to read the dreary filled columns of the many ladies' journals that are published here and in England? If magazines devoted to the care of house and children continue to succeed as they increase in number, it is safe to say that the worthless novel is not doing much harm.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

A Professed Cook.

The latest anecdote about the incompetence of the professed cook is that a cook recently engaged, with a number of testimonials of efficiency, was told by her mistress the day she left the kitchen, "to the sand glass, which has always been used for boiling eggs in this house. In a quarter of an hour later the mistress, changing to enter the kitchen, saw the six eggs boiling away merrily, in the sand-glass, the round glass bobbing about in the middle of them as merrily as could be.—Exchange.

—An exchange remarks that people who love basswood cakes, and are annoyed by what is popularly known as "basswood bait," are advised that a teaspoonful of Rochelle salts, dissolved in the liquor for the use of a family of several persons, will prevent annoyance. The quantity may be diminished for a small family.

—Dairymen are now confronted by a serious and unlooked for difficulty. The percentage of solids in milks demanded by the law is too high for such weather as we have had the last few months, during which time the pasture and the cows have both been parched by the heat. The standard is down and cannot be brought up. The milk dilution which the inspectors find sow comes not from the pump, but from the subsequence pasture and too amphibious life the cows have had to lead.—Ex.

—"Hamlet," with no able an actor as Mr. Louis James in the leading role, attracted an audience which filled about one-third of Music Hall last evening. CHINESE LAUNDRYMAN'S REVENGE.

Went for a Friend's Laundry and Got a Clubbing.

About a week ago Joseph Bloom titled a large rat on Somerset street. He carefully wrapped it up in a paper and sent it into the Chinese laundry, telling the Celestials in charge that it was his laundry and received a check therefore. He left the check with John Haberle, and a few days ago, a customer from the rural district visited Mr. Haberle's store and presented the check. While the customer was waiting for his package, Mr. Haberle handed him the check and asked him if he would be kind enough to go and get his laundry. The unsuspecting countryman took the ticket and forthwith proceeded to the laundry and handed it to Sing Wah. The almond-eyed Chinaman's time had arrived. It was what he had been waiting for. In the first place he had been duped and now he had a chance to get square. And he did. He picked up a club which he had laid aside for the happy moment, and before the young man from over the mountain became aware of the Chinaman's intention the River of opium began to belabor him with the club, and it was not until he had driven him from the place that the Chinaman desisted. The result of the pugilistic job victim then explained matters and a more sheepish looking countryman it would have been hard to have found.

A Barber Scared by a Threat of Suicide.

Shortly after one o'clock yesterday afternoon a man who gave his name as James Shylock went into Lalor's tonsorial parlor and inquired for his friend Brown. Alonzo Hill, was the only barber present at the time, and he informed the visitor that Mr. Brown was not in.

The stranger thereupon informed Mr. Hill that he would do just as well as he came in the barber shop to commit suicide, and wanted some one as a witness.

Mr. Hill in conversation with a News reporter said "I then saw that the man was either drunk or crazy and I was frightened: I tried to persuade him not to commit the rash act but he seemed bent on killing himself. He exhibited a new pad and lead pencil and said he had purchased them articles for the purpose of explaining in a brief note the reason why he had taken his life. As he was on with that they I became more and more frightened and when he attempted to show me the revolver he had purchased to commit the deed with I started for the door. Then I thought probably if I ran he might shoot me in the back so although I was scarcely frightened, I stood my ground, all the time praying for assistance to arrive. I told the man that he had better keep the revolver in his pocket until he got ready to use it, and I finally got him to sit down on the sofa, where he fell asleep. Then I did not want to leave for fear he would awake him. Finally I saw the boss coming across the street and I never was so thankful for anything in my life. I told him all about the trouble and he started to fire him out, but when I reminded him that the man had a revolver he stopped short and turned white too. The man awoke for a moment, but in a few minutes Policeman Lynch arrived and arrested the man. I felt when I first when I saw the door close behind him. Any time if he had shown me the revolver, I would have run, and have taken the chance of his hitting me."

When Policeman Lynch got the man in the station-house he searched him, but the only article he found in the shape of a weapon was the lead pencil.

Mr. Hill had turned several shades lighter since his adventure with the drunken man and he has not yet fully recovered his usual composure.

Yesterday afternoon while Shylock was locked in a cell he attempted to hang himself with his suspenders, but was discovered before he succeeded. This morning Justice Sullivan sent him to the County Jail for thirty days.

A Peculiar Accident.

The fore-finger on Mr. Thomas Worth's left hand was amputed at the first joint yesterday afternoon by being caught by the door of a safe in his place as it was slammed shut. The accident was a painful one. Mr. Worth was standing with his left hand resting on the safe at the time and an employe closed the door. The pain that Mr. Worth declined unusually hard, and amounted to $90. Mr. Worth's finger was promptly over the wound, and the safe, and was closed by the door, and amputated as above stated.

Louis de Castro's Funeral.

The services at the house of mourning were conducted for an hour after the accident occurred in the street, by Mr. Bristle heard was prayed for the departed soul and ran to the young man's room immediately.

The Weather Crop Bulletin.

The official weather bulletin for the last week states that the weather conditions of the past seven days have been most favorable to all late crops. The cutting of corn is about completed and husking is now quite general. The bright weather of the past week has unfavorably affected this crop. Late potatoes are all dug, and excepting those in low fields, are turning out well; sweet varieties of fair size and quality are now being marketed. The cabbage and other crops continue to be in a most favorable condition and promise well. Cranberry growers report that the season has been a most unfavorable one, the yield light, and the berries badly affected by mold. Great progress has been made in fall plowing and considerable winter wheat and rye have been sown. The temperature in all sections of the state is excellent. The temperature has been about the normal with more than the average amount of sunshine. Light frost was quite general on the morning of the 28th.

This bulletin completes the series for the season of 1889, and the officers of the service extend thanks to the observers and crop correspondents for their valuable aid and highly appreciated services.

The Public Dock Case.

The Union County Court re-convened at Elizabeth at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and the case of the city of Elizabeth against the Central Railroad for the recovery of the ferry property at the foot of Elizabeth avenue was resumed. The morning's session was occupied in proof of titles and the verifying of maps. The city objected to the map of 1871 made by a partner of Mr. Meyer, but the railroad company claimed the city had recognized it and by resolution of the council on May 23rd, 1871, the city clerk was ordered to procure a number of the new maps. The court allowed the map in the case. It shows Elizabeth avenue as ending at corner of South Front street, and the ferry property is indicated as belonging to the Central Railroad Company.

A Blessed Record.

Charles Bayard, alias Harry Forrester, who is at present in the Union county jail, Elizabeth, awaiting trial on a charge of bastardy, has another record. Mr. Plainfield, will soon be brought to trial. He will very likely be convicted of the charge, and upon the expiration of his sentence he will be brought to this city and tried for bigamy. Miss Annie Van Houten will prove the bigamy. She has in her possession sufficient to send him to State Prison for a long term. Seaward, according to all accounts, has a wife in Plainfield and another in this city, who have yet to settle with him. The man has traveled extensively, and under different names. He has served several terms for robbery.—Newark Press Register.

The Coming Convention.

The Convention of Republican clubs, to be held at Sinnett's, Oct. 15th, will be likely to give the general cause a great boom. This is to be, in fact, a grand assemblage of the membership of the State Republican League, the representation of each individual club being large enough to secure a large convention. Club members throughout the State should bear in mind the fact that the meeting of the league, coming as it does, in the midst of the canvass, is an event of prime importance to the Republican party.—Newark Daily Advertiser

NO STRADDLE.

The Position of the Republican Party this Fall.

While our Republican friend will never be honest enough to give the Republican party credit for doing anything for temperance reform, the Democrats are not dodging the question. The Newark Evening News, a staunch Democratic paper, speaks thus of the matter—"There is no eloquent stand. The party by its platform has already declared in favor of liquor saloon restrictions. The High License Local Option law of 1888 was a practical expression of its sentiments on this question. In the platform the party reasserts its pledge of fidelity to such legislation. It goes much further than this. The declaration, "and pledges itself" to such legislation as will most speedily and thoroughly eradicate the evil of intemperance," is lately strong language but the inference to be drawn is stronger than the sentiments expressed. The meaning of this clause is that the Republican party of New Jersey regards existing law touching the liquor question as against public good. It means that the saloon is a public evil. The "evil of intemperance" is in no wise checked. It means that if the Republicans carry the Governorship and the Legislature, the Worts law will be expunged from the books, and the evils which the party [illegible] themselves to undo will be speedily "eradicated." That's what it means. It isn't a straddle, and it isn't an exhibition of cowardice."

FATHER FLEMING SPEAKS OUT.

Strong Truths, Powerfully Stated, for Voters of the Twelfth Ward.

We clip the following letter from The Newark Sunday Call of Oct. 6th. It is from the pen of Father Fleming, the well-known temperance advocate, of Orange, N. J.:

To the Editor of the Sunday Call:—Many men, women and children of the Twelfth Ward ask you to help me, next Tuesday, the united request of candidates for Freeholder to thank you for your earnest effort in the past, and beg you to continue said effort. All these bad men who are now running riot. These men live on rum and is rum, and home-made and model women shun them. These men are taking the blood of the widow and the orphan. They want no license, no order, no law. They run the primaries with rum; they run their so-called ratification meetings with rum, and they run their elections with rum. They are not always drunk; but some of them are, save when asleep, almost every moment. They may not be liars or thieves, but few will either trust or believe them. They may not be bigots, but men of honor leave them. They are unfit to govern their own houses, and they should, in no way, be entrusted with the government of a good, sober, truthful men. Should not even every ward officer be a sober, truthful and honest man?

Are they sober men?
Are they truthful men?
Are they honest men?

If they are, re-elect them again and again. If they are not, and many are condemned, bar-tha-mi deem, deep, next Tuesday.

If there be in this a work or thought of any worth, do with it what you will.

W. M. A. FLEMING.

—The idea of publishing marriage notices and death notices in local papers is to give an authorized statement of the events for the use of friends who could not attend or for future reference. It is important, therefore, that the date should include the day of the week, the date of the month and the year in which the event occurred.

—The objection against making lead pencils out of paper instead of wood has been overcome. The difficulties has been the toughness of the paper covering and its consequent resistance to the action of a knife. By a new process the molecular cohesion of the paper is modified in such a manner that it can be cut as easily as cedar wood.

It is the strangest thing in life that the White Czar still fails to see what is plain to every other civilized human being, that attempts to blow him up with dynamite or otherwise destroy him will constantly be made until he gives his people a constitutional government. No power on earth can stand in this age of the world.

A writer in the New York Evening Sun suggests a distinctive feature for the world's fair of 1892. We cannot have an Eiffel tower, for the French have had that already. The only thing left for us is therefore to dig a hole in the ground, the deepest that ever was dug. Then we can lay the defeated candidate of '92 crawl into it so the music of brass bands.

An English genius has applied a fresh idea to the nickel-in-the-slot machines. An electric lamp for reading is affixed to the copper cover of railway cars. If you put a heavy English copper penny in the slot, and at the same time press a knob, an electric lamp will suddenly light itself. When you have read half an hour the lamp concludes you have got your penny's worth and automatically extinguishes itself. If you want to read more you must feed the slot with another copper cart wheel. There is, however, one feature of this lamp that stamps it as distinctively un-American. If the lamp fails to act the penny is automatically returned to the owner. No American machine would ever do that.

Statistics of the drygoods importing trade for the past twenty years are interesting. They show that while our imports in other directions have largely increased, in textile fabrics, except those made from jute and flax, the growth has been very small. It is not that our brides and dames are less gorgeous in their apparel than of old. On the contrary, they never before reveled in such luxury as they do at present. It is that our cotton, silk and woolen looms have become so skillful that we can make the most of what we want at home.

Cremation in France.

First a law was passed permitting freedom of burial. Then the municipal council of Paris built a crematory with the city's money and presented it to the city. The building is in Pere la Chaise, the famous cemetery of Paris. It is a handsome building, with well kept grounds. It is not far from the tragic spot where the French communists were stood up in a row and shot by order of the French government of the time.

The first incineration in the crematory took place in January, 1889. During two months in the winter there were thirty, which is a larger number than the establishments in America can show. But those who were incinerated at Paris have been mostly cranks and philosophers. The first person of any distinction whose body was reduced to ashes was a member of the French assembly, who died in August.

A Bit of History.

S. G. Ross, a modest printer in New Mexico, has written a letter in The St. Louis Republic which recalls one of the most unjustifiable political perils in our civil history—the time when Andrew Johnson, the only American president ever impeached, was on trial before the United States senate. There were seven Republican senators who voted against the president's conviction and thus saved congress from what would have been recognized afterwards as a lasting disgrace.

The vote on the impeachment was taken twenty-one years ago last May. It was known, beforehand, that six Republican senators would vote for acquittal. The vote of the seventh one was in doubt.

After the ballot was taken the vote stood: For conviction, 35; against, 19. The count only fell short of the constitutional two-third majority required by one vote. The seventh Republican was Mr. F. G. Ross, then senator from Kansas. He was recently governor of New Mexico. What would have happened in case Andrew Johnson had been found guilty is summed up by ex-Governor Ross in his modest letter:

> My great hope, for the past twenty years, has been to see the country relieved of the political scourge by the American people, and that hope seems now likely to be realized. I have always felt a pride in what I did in that trial, and I feel that I transmit it to my children as an honorable heritage.

I was in a number of mild fought battles during the war of the rebellion, and had many very personal encounters, but never during that war did I have death so near. I was in more danger, than in the senate chamber when I arose in my seat to give my vote for the acquittal of President Johnson. I never was in more danger of republican form of government during the entire war by an open enemy than I was by the secret enemies of that form of government.

Very few persons realize, I realize them, and a great many fail to realize now, the dangers of that hour to our institutions of civil liberty. The assassination of the president would have been merely partisan accomplice, as that was, would have been followed by a peace commissioner, whereby the president would have been deposed and placed with the presidency would immediately be transferred to the supreme court, and thus the essential condition of confederation in the three departments of government would have been destroyed. Then would have come the struggle between the states and the federal government, which would have been anarchy.

THE KNIGHTS Ttemplar.

They Parade 20,000 Strong at the Capital.

REVIEWED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Where Will the Next Grand Encampment Be Held?—Cincinnati and Denver Are Both Seeking the Honor—The Iowa Grand Commandery's Fault.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—This city was in gay feather today, the streets were thronged with handsomely attired and dignified Sir Knights Templar, the departments and public schools closed at noon, and the sensation of the day was the imposing parade of the visiting knights. It is estimated that at least 20,000 knights with plumes waving and accoutrements glistening in the sun marched in line through the broad streets and avenues of the city. The main body of the great Templar procession was formed on the grounds about the capitol at 11 a. m., and soon after that hour moved over the usual inaugural parade route.

Reviewed by the President.

At the executive mansion the magnificent line passed with stately tread to review before President Harrison, who expressed himself as being much pleased at the imposing spectacle formed by so many faultlessly drilled and handsomely uniformed men. Grand Master Gen. Charles Roome, who came here last Saturday, has, owing to his health, confined himself to the hotel constantly since his arrival. The exercises in which he took part personally were made as brief as possible.

Grand Master Roome's Address.

The parade it is thought will postpone the opening of the conclave at Masonic temple until late in the afternoon. Grand Master Roome's annual address being the first thing in order, will then probably consume the remainder of the day. Discussion of the breach of discipline on the part of the Iowa Grand commandery will undoubtedly take considerable space in his address and lead to the most important controversy in the conclave business meetings.

One of the officers of the Grand encampment in speaking of the Iowa case said that it would not create a ripple at the present session. The grand commandery of Iowa, he said, had raised the question of the legal right of the grand master to issue a dispensation. This question would be brought before the encampment and decided. There was no doubt, he thought, that a solution satisfactory to all parties could be reached.

Where Will the Next Conclave Be?

There is considerable speculation here about the next place of meeting of the Grand encampment. Cincinnati and Denver are mentioned, and one or the other is likely to secure the honor. Cincinnati and Hanselman commanderies from the Queen City are both well represented at the parade here, and feel confident that Cincinnati will be selected as the place of meeting in 1892. They will go before the Grand encampment with a handsome invitation that all the money needed to entertain the '92 triennial will be forthcoming; in fact, more than $50,000 of the $50,000 needed is already pledged by business men of that city.

The Libel Suit Against Bishop Ryan.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 8.—Judge Dykman has denied another motion for a bill of particulars in the libel suit of Father Dent against Bishop Ryan, of Buffalo. The bishop wants the names of Father Dent's witnesses. Father Dent, who conducts his case himself, says that he would give an opportunity to put the witnesses out of the jurisdiction, or to corrupt or intimidate them. He stated the places where the alleged libel was made, namely, at the bishop's palace, Buffalo; St. Anthony's church, New York, and the Cathedral, New York. The court thought this was sufficient, and declined to order the witnesses' names to be revealed.

Faulkner's Writ of Error.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The application for a writ of error in the Lester B. Faulkner case came up before Judge Wallace in the United States circuit court here. A stay of proceedings was granted pending the continuance of the case at the next term of court, which falls upon Nov. 26, and Faulkner was required to give $20,000 bail. Lester Faulkner, Joshua Healy and Elias Riesbaugh, all of Dunville, were in the city ready to go on Faulkner's bail bond; but it will be necessary for them to go before the commissioners at Buffalo.

PITTSBURG'S $300,000 FIRE.

Firemen Driven From Their Work by Fame Whirled Into a Mill Engine.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 8.—The three story brick building, 400 feet long and 100 feet deep, comprising the machine shops, car shops, blacksmith shops and paint shops of Oliver Brothers' Tenth street mill, South Side, was totally burned. The fire started alongside the engine, and catching some old waste thrown around. The blaze caught the belt rope controlling the governor of the engine and burned it away. With its controlling power thus gone, the engine started to run at a terrific speed, and three large air fans used to drive air through the works revolved at a rapid rate, and the dense smoke and flames were driven all through the building, compelling the firemen to get out. Their attention was then turned to saving the puddling mill and other buildings in the vicinity.

The firemen had several narrow escapes from falling walls, but none were seriously injured. The firm will rebuild the works at once. The loss is $300,000, fully covered by insurance, most of which is placed in eastern and foreign companies.

An Attempted Abduction Frustrated.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 8.—A daring attempt was made to abduct Don Guadalupe Valle, a rich man of this city, in the Colonia de Indugria, by two men named Manuel Marquez and Victoria Normalta. By an anonymous letter Valle was warned of the attempt would be made to kidnap him, and with the aid of two police and two large dogs the men were arrested soon after they had entered the house of Valle at his residence. Two villainous knives were found on their persons, with which it is believed they would have killed Schmidt if he had offered any resistance.

Admiral Porter's Illness.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 8.—A reporter who called at Admiral Porter's residence in Jamestown found the admiral sitting in an easy chair before a white fire. In response to a query as to his health the admiral said he felt better than for a long time past, and expected to return to Washington soon. The admiral's son, Rodman, also at the house who had been feeble all summer, had improved of late. There was no ground for the alarming reports current as to his condition.

NEWS FROM OVER THE SEA

Ex-Queen Natalia Proposes to Live in Servia.

THE WILLIAM TO VISIT ATHENS.

Gen. Boulanger Leaves London for Jersey—Great Britain and Ireland Storm Swept—The Coast Strewn With Wreckage and Many Disasters Reported.

BELGRADE, Oct. 8.—Queen Natalie has given her final answer to the regents and the cabinet and is determined to remain in Belgrade. She has resolved, she says, not only to face all the consequences of a defiance of Servia's rulers, but will decline to accept any decision of the skupshtina restricting her stay in Servia. She stoutly maintains that it is beyond the province and the powers of the ordinary skupshtina to interfere in the matter.

Great Britain Storm Swept.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—A terrific gale prevailed throughout Great Britain and Ireland. It was particularly severe along the River Mersey. Much damage was done at Blackpool, in Lancashire, and at Blackpool, a gale blew with tremendous force in the Irish channel. A large number of shipwrecks have been reported. The telegraph wires in many places have been thrown down by the gale. The British ship Prince Louis, Capt. Page, from Quebec, Aug. 24, has been driven ashore in the Mersey.

Coast Strewn With Wreckage.

The storm destroyed a hundred yards of the Holyhead breakwater and isolated the lighthouse. The coast is strewn with wreckage, and shipping is everywhere reported in distress. A large steamer is ashore off Aberdeen.

Boulanger's Desperate Game.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A cable dispatch to The Sun states that Boulanger has planned a desperate coup d'etat and intends to land in France and raise his standard at once. When he arrives he will meet the chief of his trusted military adherents and the plan of campaign will be arranged. This conference has been in process of arrangement for a week past. The military members of the party have held out to the general the inducement that several regiments will join his standard directly it is raised. Their contention is that if they can get within five miles of Paris the victory is won, for Paris would go for Boulanger, and what Paris thinks today the whole of France thinks tomorrow.

Treasurer Burbe Talks.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Mr. B. A. Burbe, ex-treasurer of Louisiana, says he trusts he will succeed after his return to the United States in discovering how the illegal bonds got afloat. He declares that the attorney general of Louisiana and others directing the present inquiry are animated by political authority, and he eagerly awaits the moment when he will confront them in New Orleans. Mr. Burbe says he will not make any sensational terms to his anxiety to face his assailants at the earliest possible moment. He is fretting under the delays of the extradition proceedings and is confident of his enforced absence from America.

Boulanger Leaves London.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Gen. Boulanger has left London for Jersey, accompanied by his secretary and his mistress. The party go to Jersey, where rooms have already been provided for them at a hotel. The general's horses and carriages were shipped in advance. The Boulanger party left London by the mid-day train. Two villainous knives were found on their persons, with which it is believed they would have killed Schmidt if he had offered any resistance.

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—It is officially announced that Kaiser William will arrive here on the 20th instant. He will stay five days and go direct to Constantinople; afterwards he will visit Olympia in Greece. His proposed visit to Rome has been abandoned. The new powerful German fleet that ever sailed in the Mediterranean will escort the kaiser to Athens. The Italian permanent and Levant squadrons will soon assemble at Genoa.

Score One for Gladstone.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—At the election in Peterborough to fill a vacancy in the house of commons, Morton, the Gladstonian candidate, was elected, receiving 3,852 votes. Burns, the Unionist candidate, received 1,642.

Mutterings Against The Rush.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—The Toronto Globe says: "The Rush is an insignificant little country. There is no doubt sealers acting in combination against her might easily capture her, bring her crew into port and demand their trial for piracy." As has already been stated, the crew of the sealing schooner Pathfinder, which was seized by the Russian Behring Sea sealers contemplate some sort of retaliation if the Rush puts into Victoria to dry dock, as is reported she will soon do. The government has sent out a detachment of the militia force be detailed for duty, to prevent any trouble if the Rush is docked at either Victoria or Esquimalt.

Present Bible Criticism Discussed.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The Geneva Baptist ministerial conference met at the Second Baptist seminary chapel, with Rev. H. G. Peebles in the chair. Rev. E. T. Fox, late of Pittsburg, led the devotional exercises. Reports were listened to from Professor Buchanan's recent visit to Rome. Professor Fattison of their visit to Europe. The conference was then addressed by Dr. Osgood on "The Present Criticism of the Bible." Dr. Osgood said: "It is the duty of the hour to discriminate between the true and the false in criticism, and to man the duty of deciding for himself his reasons for believing the Bible. The conference adjourned to Nov. 4.

WORK OF THE BISHOPS.

Oregon Admitted as a New Diocese. Other Proceedings by the Session.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The Episcopalians resumed their session at St. George's church. A motion to admit Oregon as a new diocese, made by Rev. Mr. Hawkes, of Virginia, resulted overwhelmingly in the affirmative, and the diocese of Oregon was admitted. It was also unanimously voted to approve of the election of Bishop Morris as bishop of Oregon.

The great need of the church in Dakota, Bishop Hare said, was full blooded Christian ministers and adequate funds. In his report of the committee appointed to examine the state of the colored man, he said that in no quarter was there a greater field or greater responsibility. He asked for means to carry forward the work. He said he had received from each southern diocese as an itinerant evangelist to win the colored man into the bosom of the church.

The board of missions then requested its board of managers to appropriate in addition to special offers $40,000 for the work of the commission the coming year.

Bishop Walker, of Wyoming, attributed the spirit and shriveling up of the territory partly to the blizzard and partly to the filling up by a foreign population. The church, however, he reported, was growing perceptibly. The Rev. Mr. Locke, of the China mission, spoke of native evangelization as the only method of evangelization. If 40 millions is to be converted it must be by the Chinese.

The Rev. Paulus Moork, the colored delegate from Cape Palmas, Liberia, urged a strong effort for the evangelization of the United States and Liberia. He thought this country should subsidize a line of steamers to take advantage of the great commercial relations that will grow up. He viewed it also as a safety valve to let off some of the race troubles in the south.

A DIFFERENT NEVASSA STORY.

The Negroes Say the Rescue Fired Upon Them—Two Refugees Arrive.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—W. G. Allen, of the United States consul at Kingston, Jamaica, has made a partial report of the circumstances connected with the riot at Navassa. The report is dated Sept. 30 and made up principally of correspondence relating to the affair. The principal letters reproduced are those of acting Superintendent Smith, whose statement has been published heretofore, and of William H. Henson, the negroes' "spiritual adviser," who tells a very different story.

According to his statement the negroes were fired upon by the bosses for refusing to work after being scandalously ill treated. An appeal is made from "one hundred and forty-six souls, all American citizens," asking that a vessel be sent to bring them to the United States.

Shot His Wife, Then Himself.

LA GRANGE, Ind., Oct. 8.—Mrs. Warren, of Wolcottville, keeps a hotel of more or less unsavory reputation. She recently returned from Toledo, bringing with her a Mrs. Driscoll, who was installed as a dining room girl, and with them came an unknown man. Mr. Driscoll arrived here, and an attempt to induce his wife to return to his home led to a quarrel, in which, it is alleged, he shot her and then put a ball through his own brain. Both will die. Mrs. Driscoll is a former resident of Columbia college, entitled "The Tweed Regime," in the course of which Mr. Hall is referred to as having been a member of the "Tweed ring." The book was brought in London, and it is expected will come to trial about the middle of the month.

Verdict on the New York Central Accident.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., Oct. 8.—A verdict was rendered here by the jury which has been investigating the accident on the New York Central and Hudson River railroad near Palatine bridge. The verdict censures the railroad company for gross negligence in running the section of the road altogether, which arrangement does not give sufficient time to stop in case of an accident, and makes traveling dangerous. The employes of the railroad company are held entirely free from any blame.

Floods in Vermont.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Oct. 8.—The most severe rain storm of the season has prevailed here for a whole day. The streams in this vicinity rose rapidly, and a large portion of the abutment of the Vermont end of the toll bridge here gave way, sliding into the river and severing communication between here and New Hampshire. A few small bridges on other streams are reported carried away and other damage done by high water.

Silvers' Fatal Illustration.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 8.—John Silvers, aged 25, committed suicide near McMinnville. He asked a friend how he would hold a pistol if he wanted to use it. The friend raised the pistol in the usual way. "I would not hold it that way," said Silvers; "I would hold it this way," and taking the pistol behind it to his breast and fired, dying instantly.

WAVERLY, Ia., Oct. 8.—A large barn belonging to John Cox, a farmer living near this city, was burned. CONNECTICUT BALLOTS.

Result of the Elections in That State.

PROHIBITION WAS DEFEATED.

How the Secret Ballot Law Worked for the First Time—The New Law Caused Some Confusion, but Everything Passed Off Smoothly.

HARTFORD, Oct. 8.—The practical workings of the secret ballot law, passed by the last legislature, were tested in the town elections. With the exception of New Haven and Bridgeport, all the towns elected officers for the coming year. The prohibitory amendment to the constitution and the local option question of license or no license and the time of closing saloons were also voted on, but these did not come under the provisions of the secret ballot law. The new law caused more or less confusion on account of the novelty of its machinery, but as a general thing the voters speak well of the secret booth and sealed envelope, which have caused the army of ticket peddlers to go out of date.

How the Voting Was Done.

Each of the eight voting places in this city was provided with a booth for every 150 voters, from eight to seventeen being used in the different precincts. These were arranged in rows between the entrance door and the ballot boxes. As a voter entered a polling place he procured his ticket from the ticket booth and then passed on to the envelope booth, where he was given one of the official blue lined envelopes bearing the seal of the secretary of state. Passing a double barred booth about four feet square, the voter placed his ticket in the envelope, sealed it, and, passing out of the opposite door, found himself in an inclosure in which the boxes and the checkers. Here the envelope was dropped into the slot in the ballot box, and the voter then passed out of another door to the street.

Prohibition Was Defeated.

The vote was only about half the full vote, and the envelope system caused little delay in obtaining returns from wards and the towns. This city gives 2,956 votes for license to 3,070 against, and 3,007 votes for and 3,020 against the prohibition amendment to 1,010 in its favor. Returns from 160 town, including Hartford, New Haven, Middletown and Bridgeport, give a majority of 18,667 against the prohibition amendment.

The Election at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—The election in this city passed off very quietly. The citizens were called upon to vote on the prohibition amendment alone, and but one-third of the registered vote came out. Of the 8,700, New Haven gave 3,500 majority to offset the prohibition majorities in some of the country towns. The voters had no opportunity to test the merits of the secret ballot law here or in Bridgeport, as there were no offices to be filled in either city.

How the New Law Worked.

The secret ballot worked admirably in the Naugatuck valley. The Waterbury people from the factories seemed to have no difficulty in understanding the law. The entire Democratic ticket was elected in Birmingham. The vote in Ansonia, the vote in Ansonia was close, but was cast against prohibition. The new ballot law caused no trouble here, and the workingmen are satisfied with it. Derby, Shelton and Naugatuck also report that the new law worked well. Southampton last year voted 225 against license, and yesterday went against prohibition by 175 majority.

Middleton's Strange Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—Joseph R. Middleton, of the firm of Middleton & Co., well known Kensington carpet, leather importers, No. 427 North Third street, shot and killed himself in a room at the merchants' hotel. Middleton was a widower, having married on Thursday to Miss Lillie Sparks, the daughter of the proprietor of the hotel. No cause can be assigned for the act, as his accounts were all correct, and the young lady to a lovely girl, to whom Middleton seemed devotedly attached. He left two letters in his pocket, but gives no reasons for a desire to end his life.

Electric and Cable Roads for Buffalo.

ALBANY, Oct. 8.—The Buffalo Electric and Cable Street Railway company, formed to operate street surface roads on about fifty miles of streets in the city of Buffalo, filed a certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital is $1,500,000. The incorporators are Daniel G'Day, Daniel N. Lockwood, James G. Goodell, Lang, Henry Altman, Thomas T. Ramsdell, James Adams, J. P. Dudley and George F. Southard, of Buffalo, and William L. Ekins and Peter A. S. Weidner, of Philadelphia.

4,000,000 More Acres for Settlement.

BRAINERD, Minn., Oct. 8.—Word has been received at Mille Lacs reservation that Indians have signed the treaty, which will open some of the richest lands in the country to settlement. The result of the commissioner's labors adds about 4,000,000 acres to the public domain, in addition to that secured by the Sioux commission.

A British Warship Aground.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 8.—While her majesty's ships Icarus and Acorn were coming to Esquimalt from Sitka the former, the Icarus, ran hard aground on Mayne Island, in the Gulf of Georgia. The Acorn made several attempts to tow her off, but failed. Warships have gone to her assistance.

SOME EXTRAORDINARY BULLS.

And Very Few, Not All Made by Irishmen Either.

Every one knows the story of the Irish peasant who boasted that he "wouldn't be his family to have no children," and the Irish mother who refused baptism six years after his adversary than the latter did to him. But it is a cruel injustice to poor Paddy to speak of these as "Irish" bulls. Many apparently Irish, when countless examples of the same kind of blunder, not a whit less startling, have be found elsewhere. Milton himself erred as grossly as any one in this way when he wrote the famous passage,

"Adam, the goodliest man of men since born,
His sons—the fairest of her daughters Eve."

A member of a book society from the interior of Ireland at Africa speaks of a modern novel which was "entirely roamed by women." It was a Scotchman who described a very square man as "just as broad as he was lang"—just as broad as he was narrow." It was a Scotchman who, at a public meeting, gravely propounded a scheme for increasing the British revenue by "laying a big tax on cats." It was an Englishman who said of Napoleon that he might have been a better man if he had not been quite so bad, and it was also an Englishman who declared that the best way to walk down the Thames to London was to go in a boat.

The French school teacher who, in a fit of rage, threatened to send all his pupils to the foot of the class, was fully equaled by the school boy who after correctly stating that the customary mode of saluting an ancient Persian king was to prostrate, "O king, live forever!" added, on his own authority, "And immediately the king lived forever." But even these "prize bulls" are completely eclipsed by other which have come within the range of my own personal experience. I have seen in an English provincial newspaper the announcement that "the collision who stabbed last Thursday is dead." I once heard a man speak of having watched a haunted house all night, "expecting every moment the appearance of an invisible spirit;" and not long after this another man remarked in my presence—alluding to his own sufferings while wedged in a crowd at the door of a concert hall—that he would much rather walk fifty miles than stand five.—David Ker in Harper's Magazine.

Sandying Compliment.

Mr. and Mrs. Grundy went to a little reception the other night, and Mr. Grundy met there a good looking widow of uncertain age. She was not young enough to be mercenary, but not old enough to make Mrs. Grundy jealous. Mr. Grundy kept a safe distance from Mrs. Grundy, so he said to the widow, because she was short sighted. The widow didn't see it that way, however, and she sweetened down by Mrs. Grundy. Mrs. Grundy didn't like the widow, anyway, so she asked: "What was that homely old man you were flirting with?" "Honestly, my dear? Why, that was your husband." "My husband! Go right back to him, my dear. You are the first woman who has paid him any attention for five years."—San Francisco Chronicle.

She Was Rich.

A little girl of the Italian race is in the habit of visiting certain houses in Boston quite regularly, and receiving from the cook, servants, food and sometimes other articles which she stows snugly away in the basket which is her constant companion. In her round of visits one day she was accompanied by another little girl who had no basket. The good lady of the house, after supplying the little girl, as usual, remarked:

"Does not your companion want something, too?"

"Oh, no!" was the reply. "She's rich! Her father works."

Thus we see what riches consist of in the eyes of the poor.—Boston Times.

Conclusive.

Cordial Papa—But which loves Clara most—Brown, or Smith?

Observant Mamma—Why, Mr. Smith, to be sure.

"How can you make that out? Last night Brown asked and pleaded with her to sing; when she finished Jones was enthusiastic in praise; but Smith didn't say a word!"

"No, but to-night he asked her to sing again."

"Poor Smith, he must indeed love her!"—Light.

Just as Good.

"Any fried oysters?" he asked of the keeper of an eating stall on the corner.

"W—no, not exactly fried oysters," she answered.

"What is it?"

"Oh, stewed beef."

"Oh, that's near enough; and you may slice me off some. I expect it's all in the same, anyway."—Detroit Free Press.

More Appreciative Anyway.

Mr. Winter (aged 67)—Make me happy, dearest! Tell me that you can care for me enough to marry me!

Miss Spring (aged 17)—Well, I'm not so sure about that, but I can marry you enough to care for you. Won't that do just as well?—Time.

Not to the Odd Enough.

John—By the way, that was quite an original joke you were telling me the other day—about the countryman in the city, you know. I wonder why they don't use it on the stage in the ridiculous trouser?

Jack—It probably isn't old enough.—Yankee Blade.

A Season of Humiliation.

"Do you are going away for two or three months? Going for health?"

"Oh, no. My health is all right, but I'm going to keep out of sight while I am raising a beard."—Boston Herald.

A Suggestion.

First Bull—Here comes a man. What shall we do?

Second Bull—Let's toss up.—New York Sun.

He Was Going Far Away.

"Good by, Miss Gillyflower. I am going far away—I will not return."

"Then you will write to me often, won't you, Mr. Mosky?"

"Oh, nay I! I did not dare to ask—Oh, Miss Gillyflower! Your feelings toward me must have changed that you permit it."

"Oh, no. You are aware of as girls are to get a hundred dollars for the Patagonians if we raise a million postage stamps, and you know will help, you know."—Life.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

A Timely Wail.
The autumn zephyr grows apace,
The winds begin to roar;
Oh, when you come into this place,
Please, sister, shut the door.

It's most too warm for fires as yet,
They'd spoil every piece;
But frost has certainly started in to fret,
You minter, shut the door.

Don't leave it swinging while we season,
And chatter you a piece;
Unless you want to see us freeze,
Why, bless it, shut the door!

Don't make us never tell we've him,
And hanker for your gore;
Lest now, we've said all we're going to on this subject, and the next thing you know we'll be some more asking the door as with you
Shut you shut that door.

DON'T BE DULL OR STUPID.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE SOME KIND OF OCCUPATION.

All Women May Be Attractive and Noble, but They Must Become So Through Their Own Efforts—Beware of Absolute Idleness—There Are Three Courses Open.

Some writer, a woman presumably, advises other women not to be "stupid." Webster's definition of this word is "a dull, stupid person," and in view of this fact it would almost seem that such advice is unnecessary to most women. It may reasonably be supposed that no woman wants to be considered dull or stupid. To be sure, we cannot all be brilliant geniuses, but there is no occasion for being thoroughly uninteresting. We all know women who are inclined to scope, but why do they do it? In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, I believe, it is because they do not know what to do with themselves.

WOMAN'S NATURAL CAPACITY.

The average woman is not stupid—far from it—but she allows herself to become so for want of a healthy occupation for mind and body. And this is the fault of her education and training. She has no special taste for any particular study or for any pursuit, and so after her school days are over she settles down to mope. She is not very strong perhaps, and she has not sufficient energy or perseverance to undertake anything; so she folds her hands, shuts her eyes and her mind to the beauties of life and mopes.

And when she has reached this point she takes to novel reading; the lighter the fiction the more suitable it is to her frame of mind. And every one knows the prevailing tone of the light novel. Some things are rather pure, but many young married women lead such aimless lives. The mind becomes deteriorated and frivolous; from gossip the tongue leads to scandal, and the fair reputation of woman's fife are frittered away in doing nothing and leaving nothing.

It is not necessary to be priggish, nor to have a learned air. These things are rather proofs of an uncultivated and narrow mind. And begin now. Do not wait for something to turn up. I have little patience with those who take for their motto the fatalistic idea that "Everything comes to him who knows how to wait." It is not true; everything comes only to those who know how to go and get it. Every woman has within her the making of as attractive and noble person, but she must help in the making; she can never become noble and attractive by moping. The present is the only future that we know, and we must utilize it to the utmost before it becomes the past.

And I do not mean that only plain women should cultivate their minds; a handsome woman usually has as much intellect as a plain one, and it requires quite as much cultivation. Who has not met elderly women who could talk of nothing but the ever-failing who died last week, or who is to be married next week? Events of importance in the lives of those immediately concerned, but to young people there will be a feeling that unless we know them personally their marriages and deaths have not the slightest interest for us. It would be well for such persons had they learned to be selective in their youth, so that in their old age they might have an occupation that would unless them to some one, and yet compel them to be silent.

DON'T HOARD YOUR SERMONS.

If you have no taste for music, do not torture the piano and the ears of your relatives and friends; but cultivate it. If you have no taste for painting, do not make hideous daubs and call them pictures, and if you have no eye for color, let fancy work alone, unless it be of a kind that requires no eye. If you feel the need of occupation, which you ought to feel, find out what you can do and do it with all your might. You need not put your wares in the market. You need not take up such work as typewriter, clerk or salesperson, and so keep some other poor woman from earning an honest living, unless you need the money as much as she does. There are other ways of occupying one's self, and a woman who really wants an earnest occupation will find one; it may be an occupation that gives pleasure to herself only, or it may be one that will benefit others; it will depend upon the woman, but whichever it is, she will be happier and nobler for occupation.

Our stores of energy are given us for some purpose; they are not to be hoarded forever, but carefully expended on worthy objects, and the object to be selected lies with our selves.

Many women find their happiness in husband and children, and many others in the home of their childhood, in rearing a home for themselves. Others find their energies in profession, for which they have prepared themselves since they were children, having shown a decided taste for one study or art, and their parents had the good sense to cultivate.

It is not to these women I speak, but to the larger class of girls who have not had this special education. Doubtless every woman expects her daughter to marry, and marry well, between the ages of 18 and 22. Some girls fulfill these expectations and some do not. The girl who does not, after the novelty of freedom from school duties and the excitement of society have worn off, longs for some steady occupation that shall employ her mind and time. If she has no one to advise her when she has reached this period, she is to be pitied. It is a turning point in her life, where she makes a choice for good or for evil. There are three courses open to her: the excitement of society, the taking up some serious work or the inactivity of moping. Many women have not the energy for either of the two first, and they dive into the latter habit, only to be roused some years later to regret misspent hours and wasted energies.

Which of the three alternatives will you choose?—Miss Palfrey in New York Star.

Industry of Welsh Women.

Among the mountains in Wales the hat used in regions is made of a strong, coarse straw, with a very large, rather shallow crown, and narrow brim, which is the most convenient shape for carrying loads. On the top of the head is placed, for a cushion, a kind of pad made out of a stocking stuffed with wool. Over this the hat is fastened, and it is a usual thing for the women to walk five or six miles to the nearest town, buy their grocories or other necessaries, and carry them home on their heads, walking up and down the rough mountain paths with a baby tied to their backs, while their hands never cease knitting, without which no true Welsh woman is ever perfectly happy.—London Queen.

A Successful Woman Lawyer.

The State Social Science club of Kansas numbers over 400 women as members. The president is the assistant attorney general of the state—Mrs. J. M. Kellogg. Mrs. Kellogg was her husband's former law partner, and the first woman admitted to the bar in Kansas. She was also the first woman elected to any official position, which she has been appointed assistant attorney general. Not only is she to prepare all opinions, briefs and legal papers, but she will also try cases, and very charming in her manner.—Detroit Sun.

THERE'S A BOY IN THE HOUSE.

A gun in the parlor, a kink in the hall,
In the kitchen a hook and a bait and a ball;
On the stairway debris, as the house-maid finds,
And a hat for which no one seems ever to mind,
And out on the porch, gallantly preaching to newborn,
A spirited bobby hour after the dinner,
And a veil of dust pervades the room
Fear the tall jolly jar which a mischievous
Emptied as shy and silent as a mouse,
Make it only to be filled with—There's a Boy in the House.

A racket, a rattle, a rumbling shout,
Above and below and around and about;
A whistling, a panting, a clattering of nails,
The building of houses, the making of mails;
Entreaties for paper, for scissors, for string,
For every conceivable, bothersome thing;
A bang of the door, and a dozen of glasses in the cupboard of the dining-room shiver;
And an elephant hunt for a bit of a mouse,
Which is only to hear That There's a Boy in the House.

But oh, if the toys were not scattered about,
And the house never echoed to racket and rout;
If forever the corners were all tidy and neat,
And one dared not whistle after the street;
If no one laughed out when the morning was red,
And with kisses went tumbling all tired to bed;
What a cemetery, what a place for dull quiet you are,
For all is the love wild little rabbits would be;
And I'm happier to think, though I shrink like a mouse,
From disorder and din—There's a Boy in the House!
—Kate R. Cleary.

CHEATING THE TYRANT.

How Servants Circumvent the Harriest Fashion Tyrant Up and Get What She Wanted.

"What tyrant?" Amongst as many one may well ask. "What tyrant?" This time it was the tyrant of fashion, and all his jathers in vein of West End milliners, dressmakers, etc. We are often blamed—indeed, I, being a woman, might say we are always blamed—for submitting to the tyrant Fashion, or, rather, we ourselves are the tyrant, and set him up ourselves, to rule and govern us like King Stork, who devoured all his subjects.

My old school girl watch had seen its best days, and after many months of scraping and working, gaining little odd jobs, over and above my regular pay, I had saved enough to buy myself a real good gold lever watch, self winding, minute hand, and all the rest of it. I went to the shop and they strove and requested an suitable young man behind the counter to show me some watches. He brought out a case of ladies' watches.

I have a feeling against small watches and wanted something sensible and useful, so taking up the largest one I said, "I want one a day larger than this." He replied: "That is the largest size we make for ladies." "Well," I said, "show me your smallest size of gentleman's watches." A look of intense disdust passed over his face, as though I had been guilty of an impropriety in asking for a man's watch. After considerable argument and pressure he stooped down and brought out a case of men's watches. I chose the one I wanted, which was, of course, rather dearer than the largest of the ladies' watches. So strong was the young man's prejudice that, although it was to his interest to sell me a watch, he would not do so. With a look of annoyance and disgust that I, a woman, should refuse the articles made expressly for the inferior sex, and should provide myself with one made and intended for the use of the member of the superior male being. He felt perceptibly aggrieved and insulted, and he showed it.

My male watch goes very well.

Some time after this a friend in the country asked me to get for him an extra strong clasp for a locket and chain which he always wore, containing his child's portrait. I went into the shop of one of the first jewelers in Bond street and said: "Show me some extra strong clasps for locket and chain." Plenty of trumpery clasps were shown me, but nothing really strong enough for the work. After a long search through the clasps, I rose and said, half to myself: "I am sorry I can't find one, the gentleman will be disappointed." The gentleman cried the man, "you never told me it was for a gentleman. I've got the very thing he wants." Whereupon he went straight to a drawer and showed me, to my surprise, a quantity of strong, solid clasps, made for the superior sex again. Now, these two incidents set me thinking; in both cases I had stated the use for which I was to object, and that ready money would be paid. What, then, did it mean?

It means that women are, and are to be, slaves of changing and, therefore, ephemeral fashion; that the solid good things of earth are not for them, and that their pretension to a preference for what may be solid and good every other day of the week is a presumptuous and subtle form of women's rights. I pondered deeply; then men are not far wrong. Women's rights have taught me many, many things; amongst others they have taught me how to cheat the tyrant.

Last year I wanted to go to Scot and in a hurry I required strong, large, comfortable boots. Passing by some that fitted me, as I went toward T——n, in Regent street, I mused—the boots I required must be wide soled and double soled to take iron nails; so ladies' boots are usually wide soled in my musings I concocted a deep laid scheme.

I found myself at the bootmaker's, walked in, and said: "I want a pair of strong, ready made boots." "Yes, madam," bowed the gentlemanly attendant, "for pleasure." Visions of the narrow soles and high heels and thin kid of the "ladies' department" flashed before me. I said to myself, "I must dissemble," so replied, curtly, "Boots—for country wear." "Yes, madam, this way, if you please." Forward they went. I chose one pair, tried and said, "These might do." "Can you please as your boy's size, madam?" I replied, "They are as near as possible the same size as mine." "We only make boots to order for gentlemen, madam!" "No," I said, "not at all." So, in my son's name, I, a lonely spinster, bought myself a capital pair of boots, which neither man nor boy had the impudence and cogent argument could have procured for me as a woman.

Once more, and I have done.

I needed a hat that would meet certain simple requirements—first, to keep its place on my head without elastic or strings; second, that it should shade my eyes from glare; third, that it be not ugly.

A fashionable hat in Regent street, Bond street and South Audley street, produced not one hat that would answer even the first requirement.

So I again dissembled. I walked into the shop of a man's hatter in Oxford street. "I want a soft, brown felt hat with a wide brim." "Yes, madam; ladies' department, third door on left." "No," I said, "gentleman's hat." This time it was my husband's fictitious hat that was being bought.—English Woman's Penny Paper.

The Jewels of Italy's Queen.

There is a pretty little story of a necklace that Queen Margherita's son saw in a shop window which he could not buy with his pocket money, so he begged the shopkeeper to let him have it until Easter. And on the queen's birthday, when his royal father had presented his superb gift, the little prince proudly hung around his mother's neck a string of pearls, saying that they were real values. That rose in the eyes the queen of Italy's many and it was one of her dearest treasures.—Buffalo News.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR GOVERNOR
EDWARD BURD GRUBB,
OF BURLINGTON.

THERE ARE NONE PEOPLE WHO CAN FORGET THEMSELVES THAN COVERS THEMSELVES.—Boston.

JOTTINGS.

—Days of 1889 past, 280; days to come, 85

—This is delightful weather. People are enjoying it.

—The U. S. Grant Republican Club will hold an important business meeting in Spencer's Hall this evening at eight o'clock.

—A number of Plainfielders accompanied the Reform Club on their annual excursion to Moosic Chunk, Glen Onoko and the Switchback this morning.

—Chief of Police Tunis J. Cory yesterday afternoon took James Sherlock to the County Jail to serve out a thirty days' sentence imposed by City Judge Stillman.

—Mr. W. W. Martin will be at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Friday from 3:30 to 9 p. m. to enroll the names of young men and boys who may desire to join classes in light gymnastics.

—A mammoth rubber boot hanging in front of the shoe store of Mr. Z. Reid, Kenyon street, attracts much attention. John says it is an "ad" for his rubber goods and does not sleep in it as reported.

—The goose bone cranks all unite in saying that the coming Winter is going to be an open one. It would be wise, therefore, to prepare for an unusually severe Winter, frequently succeeds, has a morning dream, goes by contraries.

—Thomas Morrisey, age forty, was committed to the Union County Jail yesterday by Justice Neil, without bail, charged with criminal assault on a child of twelve years, Margaret Ellen Campbell. The child's father is in the neighborhood threatening to lynch Morrisey.

—Mr. Frank Hill, a German, whose family resides on Plath street, Elizabeth, was run over and killed at noon yesterday by a Central locomotive. He was walking upon the track, being on his way home from the Singer factory, where he was regularly employed.

—A very observing naturalist, and truthful, too, who has been studying animated nature at Lake Hopatcong, declares that "the mosquitos have grown so unusually large this year that the city sportsmen frequently mistake them for woodcock"—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—It may be that we are a little late with the information, but it will answer for another season. A high auth rity advises owners of lawns not to mow the grass too closely near the end of the season. A good length of grass protects the roots and acts as a mulch besides.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—Mr Samu-l M. Cark, of Dover, noticed last Sunday that one of his bees was instantly engaged in washing something, and concluded in turn to wash the bee. He was rewarded a little later by seeing her pounce upon and seize a spotted spider, which she handled so dexterously as to be able to push it to death before it could escape.

—The Board of Education have instructed the teachers to dispense of the tickets to the scholars who wish to attend the matinee on the 18th inst of Gov's circus when it is to be exclusively for General Manchester at Music Hall under the auspices of the Winded Scout Post, No. 72, G. GEN. GRUBB'S RESIDENCE.

A Democratic Campaign Falsehood Denied.

General E. Burd Grubb has speedily and emphatically disposed of the question of his eligibility to be Governor of New Jersey. A correspondent called at his residence, on Edgewater Park, and showed him the published statements of the certificate he signed when he assumed command of the City Troop, of Philadelphia.

"I am surprised that they did not mention that the deed is dated, after reading the article. "The documents are all open to inspection. They should have at least been fair enough, and taken the trouble to have examined the correspondence and opinions of Governor Bernard, Governor Biddle and others, before they maliciously raised when I refused to become a citizen of Pennsylvania, to secure the command of this military organization. Any free white citizen of the United States can be elected a member or commander, but, before this point was settled my name in connection with the military department of the controversy wanted me to come over to Philadelphia and announce myself a citizen of the State of Pennsylvania. I refused to do so and declared at the time, "I am a Jerseyman, and must be accepted as a Jerseyman." There is no consideration that will induce me to deny my citizenship. I took the customary oath to defend this State from invaders, and I positively assert that I have never voted in any other State but New Jersey, nor is any other county but Burlington and always in Beverly Township, and Burlington City, where my residence was there.

"Since the war I have held three commissions in the National Guard of New Jersey. Governor Ludlow appointed me the commander of the Yorktown battalion, and I took to this post the Estate of the New Jersey National Guard and won for them the trophy of which every guardsman is justly proud. I was commissioned a Colonel and the commandant of the Sixth New Jersey, and in 1886 Hon. Leon Abbett, then Governor of New Jersey, gave me a commission as a citizen of New Jersey to visit the armies of Europe in the interest of the Commander-in-Chief, and on my return to report to the National Guard of New Jersey the result of my observations."

"Do you think, General, that these statements will affect your chances?"

"Not at all. It proves that the opposition failing to find anything in my record to attack out of which they can make capital, have fallen into the error of distorting the facts, and mixed personalities with matters of public interest, like the City Troop. The motive is so apparent that no one will be deceived. I regard it as a compliment to the State of New Jersey that the oldest of the military organizations now in existence throughout the world had to come to New Jersey to secure a commander.

"In its true, General, that you deserted the New Jersey National Guard to accompany the City Troop to Pittsburg during the riots of 1877?"

"That is easily nailed. I was not a member nor commander of the Sixth New Jersey Regiment until 1878. The riot occured a year before my election.

General Grubb, who is conducting an active campaign, has made the following political engagements: October 6, Gloucester county; October 7, Hunterdon; October 8, Somerville Fair, and Trenton same evening; October 10, Mount Holly Fair; October 11, Salem; October 12, Cape May County Convention; October 14, New Brunswick; October 15, Elizabeth and Philipsburg the same evening; October 16, Bridgeton; October 17, Newton; October 18, Dover; October 19, Morristown; October 22, Paterson, Princeton in the evening; October 23, Montclair and East Orange; October 25, Louis River County Convention.

Annual Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Relief Association for the election of officers was held in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association Monday evening, Oct. 7th. COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Prohibitionists with Guts.

WESTFIELD, N. J., October 7th, 1889.

To the Editor of The News:—Having been nominated for Assembly in the Third District of Union county, it is but natural that I should desire to lay my claims to an election before as many of my constituents as possible.

Please allow me the use of your columns, therefore, in which to say to your many readers that every voting citizen among them ought to vote for me. I am very sure of the truth of this dogmatic assertion. The grounds for it is not for to seek. In brief, it may be tersely stated after this manner:

To greatest existing evil in our country is the liquor traffic; it must either be overthrown or it will rule our land; it is therefore a natural curse demanding a national remedy. The only political party which makes such destruction of the traffic its chief cornerstone is the National Prohibition Party. It follows that every patriot, every human man and pre-eminently every Christian ought to help the said party into power. I represent said party for the Assembly in this District. I ought to be elected.

Edward L. Masbett.

If our correspondent is sincere in his desire to have the liquor traffic restricted, if not suppressed entirely, he and his friends should join with the Prohibition party from which the only practical temperance legislation has ever been obtained in this State, instead of adding the saloon power now dominating the Democratic party and through it the State. The only way the local option law is likely to be ever re-enacted is through the Republican party, by local option expressed at the polls in favor of suppression is likely to be sustained.

Were is not for the fact that the saloon power is interested in keeping the Prohibition party alive to help defeat the Republican party, the real friend of good government, and the only party through which practical temperance legislation ever will be obtained, the Prohibition party would long since have ceased to exist in this State, if it even now really exists more than in name, Judge's by the rate it has been shrinking during each campaign, as the people have seen through the hypocrisy of its leaders and few unreasonable followers. Few though they have become, they numbered enough at the last election to enable the saloon power to overthrow the Republicans, and wipe out every temperance law enacted for the benefit of the people. No, we should regret to see any real friend of temperance waste his vote on Mr. Masbett; aye, worse, really vote to help defeat the Republican ticket and of our State. Instead, go to the primary and see that delegates are chosen who will select a candidate for Assembly who can be relied upon to promote and favor all practical temperance legislation, and restore to the people's hands the power to vote intelligently on this question. The Prohibition candidate for Governor was quoted in the newspapers some time ago as saying something to the effect that he would rather vote for the devil himself than for a Republican, and is large transparency in this same worthy had been all his life a Democrat of the most bitterly partisan stripe, and his recent blossoming out as a Prohibitionist naturally justifies, we think, the suspicion that he has now a perfect right to be called a Democratic tool. Let us go in and smash the Republican party. But the Republican party won't be smashed this season. It is in to win.

A Street With an Outlet.

To the Editor of The News:—I read an article in your paper of Monday evening, headed "A Desire for a New Street." I would like to ask "Pro Bono Publico" through your valuable paper, why Front Street would not be the most available place for a wide avenue? In the first place the expense would be decidedly less, as it is already open, and there are no buildings standing in the way, to make the street sixteen feet wide, eight feet on each street side. The two blocks it is now seventy feet wide, and by buying about thirty feet of the Y M C A. property, the street could be opened with North Parnell, connecting with streets, thereby making what we haven't in Plainfield, one street to run straight from Short Hills to the mountains. The people of North Plainfield in that locality, no doubt would be glad to be assessed enough to pay for the buying of the property, for it would open up property that is now of very little value.

Secondly, I do not think it desirable to have such short blocks. The more corners you have the more expensive it is for the city to take care of the street. And all the proposed street railroad routes run through Front street, making it in the near future one of the most used streets, if only allowed having more large buildings are started on it. I know now of some persons who are waiting for the widening of it to start some fine buildings on it.

I think if "Pro Bono Publico" hasn't some property directly in the line of benefit by his new street, he will agree with me that Front street is the place.

A Straight Street.

Justice Nash Denies the Statement.

The following is in reply to a communication sent by Mr. Hunter to Common Council:

To The Editor of The News:—In the tax on property of C. W. Bell was not paid at the time it was advertised or at the time Mr. Hunter's letter is dated, but was paid to Mr. Johnson by Mr. Hunter's cousin Mr. Bell's father-in-law, and by Mr. Johnson to me. I have not been notified to make a double assessment, and the office is of the church are putting in the necessary furnishings. The service next Sunday will be held at that place, and every Sunday morning thereafter.

E. W. Nash, Delinquent Collector.

A Missing Man Returns.

Frederick Bickter, of Sterling, the agent for the Metropolitan Insurance Company of Newark, who disappeared so mysteriously from his home at Sterling, has returned home to his family. Little has been seen of him since his return. He said that he sold the horse and carriage, but refuses to state to whom. His accounts are all straight. During his two weeks absence his wife was almost distracted. The whole village turned out to search for him, as he was well liked, but no trace had could be found.

Fun Damaging the Villa Sans Souci.

G. Warren Wallace, member of the Common Council of Plainfield, N. J., is being sued by Mr. George Lesignolo, the wife of the New York broker, for damages done to the Villa Sans Souci, a pretty cottage adjoining the home of John Taylor Johnson, the ex-President of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Conder Brothers, the New York lawyers, are pushing the claims of Mrs. Lesignolo, who has a number of letters and telegrams carefully preserved, showing how family affairs and all else were thrown into confusion. Mr. Wallace, it seems, is a great lover of sport, and his friends have frequently furnished the Villa Sans Souci with a full complement of guests. Councilman Wallace is a Democrat, and used this house, Lesignolo says, as a sort of headquarters for political purposes. He or his friends committed the damage complained of. Mr. Lesignolo values the furniture, and ill-used shrubbery and live stock, it is charged. Corporation Counsel Conder, in March will defend Mr. Wallace. The case will be brought into the Union county court at Elizabeth next week.—Tribune.

The Tribune's Plainfield correspondent at present is Mr. R. P. R. Huntsman, who is a constant visitor at the home of Mr. George Lesignolo on East Front street, and is supposed to be the author of the above dispatch to-day's Tribune, a truth of which friends of Mr. Lesignolo indignantly deny. In connection to The News, stating that the plaintiff is endeavoring, through the young man referred to, "to create prejudice against the other side by base newspaper articles", to influence the jury who are to try the case next week. We have nothing about the matter, and presume the court is the proper place to decide the truth or falsity of the charges.

Saul Among the Prophets.

The most remarkable conversions in modern times is undoubtedly that of Mr. Leon Abbett. In a letter to the Hudson County Ballot Reform Society, the ex-Governor says that if he is elected, he will do his best to secure "a short ballot, secret and free ballot." The ex-Governor has seen a great light since he had it in his power to help on the cause of pure, secret and free ballot, and did not help it. He has been converted since he persecuted the friends of honest suffrage and laid waste the hopes of men who attempted to put on the statute-books a law to insure honest elections. When, before now, did Leon Abbett raise his voice or the other side by base newspaper articles", to influence the jury who are to try the case next week. We have nothing about the matter, and presume the court is the proper place to decide the truth or falsity of the charges.

The most remarkable conversions in modern times is undoubtedly that of Mr. Leon Abbett. In a letter to the Hudson County Ballot Reform Society, the ex-Governor says that if he is elected, he will do his best to secure "a short ballot, secret and free ballot." The ex-Governor has seen a great light since he had it in his power to help on the cause of pure, secret and free ballot, and did not help it. He has been converted since he persecuted the friends of honest suffrage and laid waste the hopes of men who attempted to put on the statute-books a law to insure honest elections. When, before now, did Leon Abbett raise his voice or the other side by base newspaper articles", to influence the jury who are to try the case next week. We have nothing about the matter, and presume the court is the proper place to decide the truth or falsity of the charges.

A Lesson of the Great Strike.

The London dockers' strike was the most remarkable event of the kind in the history of labor. The extraordinary feature of it was that the dock laborers should strike at all, and still more extraordinary it was that, having struck, they gained their point and had their wages raised.

The London docker belongs to the very lowest and most wretched class of laborers, partly by his own fault, partly by the fault of the great corporations that employ him. He is one type of the vast throng of white slaves out of which civilization slowly squeezes the life and the manhood. There is nothing in barbarism so degraded, so apparently hopeless, as this lowest class, which is the product of civilization.

Yet in every one of these creatures there is a desire for something higher and better. In the case of the London dockers they demanded something better, and, to the surprise of everybody, got it.

How? We read that the dockers' cause was so just that they had the sympathy of the working people of Great Britain. Thousands of laborers in employments connected with theirs, who had not their grievances, went out with them. A spirit of restiveness pervaded all the trades' societies on the island. The tailors also struck; the bakers, the cab drivers, the railway employes and others were moved by the wave of discontent and insurrection that floated from the London docks. The wave disturbed all England, even the millionaire noblemen who are kept awake nights trying to devise ways to spend their money.

The strike was managed with consummate tact by the large brained, good tempered engineer who led it, John Burns. He began his career as an engineer; he will not end it as such. He is already a professional expert, and his specialty is conductor of strikes.

To Burns, as far as it can be claimed by any one man, is owing the success of the great strike. But there is a deeper, grander reason for its success than the efforts of any one person, or any dozen persons. That reason is this: The laborers held together as one man, and the working people of all England backed by them. That was why they succeeded. It was standing together, co-operation, that did it.

Utilizing this one idea, working people can rule the world. From their perfect union will grow a giant that all the capitalists in Christendom cannot down. This is the thought of John Burns, in his attempt to form a federation of labor.

Jute.

Once more the question is discussed of cultivating jute in the southern states since the cotton farmers in many localities are using cotton bagging for their bales rather than patronize the jute mill bagging trust. But cotton bagging is not as well fitted as the other, and now the farmers say: Why cannot we raise our own jute? Why not, indeed! It is true, in case they did, the product would have still to pass through the mills of the loathed combination, or, if other mills started up, it would not be long till they too joined the trust, but still a little thing like that ought not to stand in the way of raising the raw material. We should be just that much more independent of India and England. A calculation has been made that jute can be produced at a cost of one and a half cents a pound as the same soil that will grow hemp. Our improved machinery of culture would produce vastly more than is done by the rude and primitive methods of India.

When the mothers of the present generation of young people were girls they used to do their hair in long curls, wear hooped gowns, tinkle on the piano and sing, "I love it, I love it, and who shall dare, chide me for loving that old arm chair." They sang, likewise, "Home, Sweet Home" "The Old Farm Gate" and "Home in the Heart." In their school books, also, were the poems of Miss Elizabeth Cook, who wrote the songs named. Miss Cook and Mrs. Hemans had a little school of poetry all to themselves. It was the domestic school, chanting the praises of gentle, faithful family loves and virtues. Well; Miss Eliza Cook, who wrote so many of these gentle, musical poems, whose name the irreverent young generation hear with a half smile, has just died in England, at the age of 76. She has been unable to do any literary work for so many years that few thought her to be living still. She received from the British government a pension of $500 a year.

Mrs. J. C. Croly ("Jenny June") has started in New York the publication of a bi-monthly called The Woman's Cycle. It will deal especially with women from the specialized point of view, women united with other persons of their own or the opposite sex in business, in clubs, in co-operation and benevolent organizations. Mrs. Croly hopes her publication will help to join isolated units into a grand federation.

MASONS AT WASHINGTON

The Grand Encampment of the Knights Templar.

THE IOWA TROUBLE COMES UP.

The Annual Address of Grand Master Roome—He Reviews the Alleged Rebellion of the Grand Commandery of Iowa—Other Work of the Day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The grand encampment of Knights Templar began its session immediately upon arriving at Masonic temple at the close of the parade. Mr. Myron M. Parker delivered an address of welcome on the part of the local committee and introduced District Commissioner Douglas, who welcomed the knights in behalf of the city. To this address Grand Master Roome responded and this closed the public exercises. The encampment then began its business in secret conclave. The Iowa trouble immediately loomed up and a resolution was offered exciting the members from that state from the start. This resolution was one of the Iowa members somewhat indignantly withdrew. Gen. Roome, who, as grand master of the order, had declared the Iowa commandery and its members in rebellion, had nothing to do with offering this resolution, but simply referred to it in connection with it as unfortunately stated that he took no side in the matter during the discussion of the resolution.

Grand Master Roome's Address.

The annual address of Grand Master Roome, who had come from Boston, was then read. His address opened with a reference to the knightly deed during the past three years. He recommended selected Lenten services as a token of especial commemoration and religious services for the order throughout the country. He then devoted a good deal of space to the Iowa trouble, reviewing the whole matter from beginning to end. He said the grand commandery of that state had attempted to nullify the deliverance of the grand encampment, and, though still professing loyalty to the grand encampment and the constitution, its deeds had belied its empty words. He admitted that the ritual adopted by the San Francisco conclave in 1886 had not commended itself to all state commanderies, but insisted that while it was in force it was the bounden duty of knights to obey it.

Disloyal and Rebellious.

Iowa did not rest with criticism; did not submit such alterations as it deemed advisable, but attempted to do away with the laws of the grand encampment and questioned the constitutionality of the legislation of the grand encampment.

He maintained that the adoption of a ritual in 1886 was in all of the prerogative of the grand master, and that the duty then immediately devolved on him of seeing that it should be used everywhere. When the grand commander of the state of Iowa questioned his authority to order the use of the new ritual in the Iowa commandery he felt the gauntlet had been thrown down to the grand commandery of Iowa and all Sir Knights in its obedience to be in a state of disloyalty and rebellion to the constitution and the grand encampment of the United States. He declared that he had no ill feeling for his erring Iowa brethren, and what he had done had been intended solely to promote the welfare of the order. Further than this he wished to be distinctly understood as in no way taking up the cause of the rituals as adopted.

Forbearance Recommended.

Concluding, he recommended great gentleness in dealing with this unfortunate situation of affairs. The whole matter of the ritual, he said, was one that could be disposed of at this conclave, and in the final decision he hoped all would agree, and if Iowa was satisfied all occasion for disagreement would be removed. Following the reading of Gen. Roome's address the conclave adjourned.

Knocked Out by Dempsey.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—Tommy Warren early this morning met Jack Dempsey in a saloon and nailed in an insolent way if Dempsey had a fight on hand. Dempsey said he did. Thereupon Warren led with his right for the Nonpareil's face, but fell short. Dempsey swung up and in half a second Warren was down on the floor in a demoralized condition, so that his backer had to carry him out of the saloon. The supervisors at their next meeting will adopt an ordinance requiring all clubs which give boxing matches to pay a $5,000 yearly license. This practically wipes out all the organizations except the California Athletic club, which alone is able to pay this heavy tax, and bids fair to have a monopoly of slugging matches. Five ounce gloves are the rule and will be used in all future glove contests. The unknown who has been matched by the California club against the "Marine" is said to be Tod Wall, the English middle weight champion.

The Montana Election.

HELENA, Mon., Oct. 2.—It is now conceded that Joseph K. Toole Dem., for governor, is elected by from 500 to 600 majority. Carter (Rep.), for congress, has 1,800 majority. The legislature is claimed by the Democrats by seven. The Republicans will not concede as much, but admit that on the face of the returns it is Democratic, but claim fraud in Silver Bow and Deer Lodge counties. The Independent claims the state senate a tie and the house by seven majority. The official canvass will be made in most of the counties at once.

A Harvard Student Pleased.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Frederick Wallace, the keeper of a gambling house called the Commercial in Boylston street, which is largely frequented by Harvard students, was arrested on complaint of Thomas Frost, agent of Franklin Falls, who says he was enticed into the place and robbed of $55. Appleton was arraigned in the municipal court.

The Veiled Prophet's Pageant.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—The twelfth annual pageant of the Veiled Prophet was graced by almost the entire population of the city, reinforced by 200,000 visitors. The crowd was perhaps larger than that of any preceding year. The subject of illustration, "Scenes from Comic Opera," was magnificently presented.

Lottery Men Arrested.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 2.—A. G. Johnson and J. H. Bugh, who have been sending out lottery circulars under the style of A. C. Rose & Co. and the Denver State Lottery company, alleging that various large cash prizes would be drawn Oct. 15, have been arrested here for illegal use of the mails.

The Majority Against Prohibition.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 2.—The official returns, with a dozen towns to hear from, give 10,000 majority against the prohibitory amendment.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The New York Committee Makes an Interesting Report.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The committee on sites and buildings for the world's fair has adopted the Morning Side, Riverside and Central Park sites. In the latter Commissioner Low says he is limited to such portions north of Ninety-seventh street as are "physically available and shall be found absolutely necessary." The committee favor legislation which will bring land owned by individuals within the limits of the proposed site may be obtained by condemnation. The estimated cost of purchase of such lands is $15,000,000.

When the points mentioned are definitely settled the committee say that it will be a comparatively easy matter to formulate a plan for obtaining the necessary funds. In conclusion the committee recommends the raising of $5,000,000 as a preliminary fund, for which stock shall be issued when authorized by congress, and that $1,000,000 be immediately raised, and that subscription books be at once placed before the public, the funds to be at the disposal of the financial committee as soon as the site for the fair and the exhibition shall be held in New York.

Rhode Island Favors New York.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 2.—A conference called by Governor Ladd, which included boards from state and city officials, delegates from the Providence board of trade, Providence Merchants' board of trade, Bristol and Westerly boards of trade, Olneyville, Newport and Woonsocket Business Men's associations, Providence Chamber of Trade, Providence Mercantile exchange and Providence Underwriters' association, met in the board of trade chamber to consider the proposition to secure the location of the international exhibition of 1892. There were documents presented in advocacy of the claims of both New York and Chicago, and considerable discussion was had, the sense of the meeting being for New York as the location, but the conference ended without taking action.

M. Eiffel Says Excelsior.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—In speaking of a tower resembling the Eiffel tower for the world's exposition of 1892 in America, M. Eiffel is reported as having expressed his unbounded confidence that the plan of the Paris structure could be safely adopted for a tower twice its height. If the American exposition committee should petition for a tower 1,500 or 2,000 feet high they had simply to provide the funds, and the structure would spring from the ground like the Eiffel tower has from the ground. Of course great care would have to be exercised in the selection of a suitable site, as upon this would very largely depend the stability of the structure. M. Eiffel said he was already in communication on the subject with New York parties.

A GAS WELL'S JAMBOREE.

A Minister Roasted to Death at Jerome, Ind.—Others Injured.

KOKOMO, Ind., Oct. 2.—The citizens of Jerome, a small village fourteen miles east of this city, arranged for a gas well display and took for the purpose the Diamond Plate gas well just drilled there and the strongest well in the gas belt. A pipe from the rock pipe was laid from the well and to this was attached a four footbblow, vertically. Just when the torch was applied the end which was attached to the pipe was blown out of the ground and the immense pressure hurled the sixty feet of pipe around among the spectators with terrible force.

Most of the casualties occur in the crowd "were able to make good their escape from the roaring flame, which burst forth from the pipe, but several were caught. Chas Hammon, a painter of the Friedley church, was literally roasted to death. John Hogue who so badly burned that he cannot recover. Hiram Overman was knocked down in the stampede and sustained a fracture of the skull. Frank La Rue had his leg broken and amputation was found necessary. A number of others were slightly burned or hurt in the rush for safety.

Shipwrecked Sailors Rescued.

DALHOUSIE, N. B., Oct. 2.—The British bark Petit Codiac, Capt. Steeves, from Fleetwood, Aug. 30, has arrived here with Capt. Lindsay and crew rescued by the British ship Minnie Swift, from Greenock for Miramichi, which was sunk in collision with the French steamer Geographique, near the Codfish Islands. The Petit Codiac had on board six cattlemen, who were on the steamer Geographique, which was also sunk, and nine men belonging to the British bark Zuletti, which was abandoned Sept. 12 in a water logged condition, and whom crew were rescued by the Minnie Swift. Four men, the stewardess and Mrs. Mackie, wife of the chief officer on the Minnie Swift, were drowned, and one man is missing. The persons belonging to the Zuletti lost their lives at the time of the collision between the Minnie Swift and the Geographique.

William and the Czar.

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—Emperor William will not remain at Kiel to await the arrival of the czar, but will go to Berlin in order to become the officers of the British squadron and return to Berlin on Thursday. A state banquet in honor of the czar will be given in the white hall of the castle on Friday. After the banquet the emperor and the czar will attend a gala performance at the opera house. On Sunday their majesties will take part in the parade of the troops of the Emperor Alexander's grenadier guards, of which the czar is an honorary colonel.

The Dead Lock at Utica.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 2.—In the Twenty-third District Republican senatorial convention this afternoon Mr. Sheard, of Herkimer, and Mr. Arnold, of Otsego, and Mr. Wilson, of Madison—are still in the field with six votes each. Congressman Dunton and Wilbur and other leading Republicans are here and striving to break the dead lock. It may be several days before a conclusion is reached.

For Woman's Advancement.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 2.—The seventeenth annual congress for the advancement of humanity, under the auspices of Mrs. Cora Wolf Bloss, the president, delivered her annual address. Papers were read by Mrs. Louisa Linton, of Missouri; Mrs. Cooper, of Iowa, and Mrs. Helen S. Shed, of Illinois, on "Women in Affairs." There are about fifty delegates present. Mrs. Governor Cooper tendered them a reception in the evening.

Insurance Companies Settle.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Twenty-seven suits brought in the Suffolk county courts against that number of insurance companies for losses by the fire at the mills in Lawrence, May 11, 1887, have been settled by the payment of 50 per cent. The companies resisted on the ground that changes had been made in the machinery, and that the water was cut off the premises when the fire occurred.

She Gave Her Babe Carbolic Acid.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Fritz Katz, of 44 Bishop street, poured a quantity of carbolic acid down the throat of her 6-months babe and took a big dose herself. Both died in a few minutes. Mrs. Katz was in poor health and probably insane when she committed the crime.

MATRIMONY AND DEATH.

A Dying Surgeon Weds His Faithful Nurse.

SHE NEARLY SAVED HIS LIFE.

And He Wished to Make Her His Wife Before He Died—The Marriage Occurred One Day and His Death Came the Next.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—On Oct. 7, at the Sturtevant house, Miss Jennette Dalziel, of Boston, was married to Dr. Seth Eastman, of Concord, N. H. On Oct. 8, at the Sturtevant house, Dr. Seth Eastman died. Their story, which is an exceedingly romantic one, is well worth relating. Dr. Eastman had been employed for several years as a surgeon on the Rotterdam line of steamships when, a year ago last September, he landed in Amsterdam, apparently a perfectly healthy man.

Miss Dalziel's Devotion.

Soon after taking Dr. Eastman's trailed to a hotel to call on one of the passengers and ran up two flights of stairs, when he was attacked by a sudden hemorrhage which brought him to death's door in less than a minute. Miss Dalziel, who was stopping at the same hotel, was almost the first to reach the side of the stricken man, and it was three weeks before she left him for an hour. The slightest movement started the hemorrhage afresh. Miss Dalziel's nursing was a marvel of skill and devotion, and but for her aid the doctors would have deemed the case hopeless.

His Health Improved.

Slowly Dr. Eastman's lungs recovered from the effects of the hemorrhage, but constant attention was necessary to prevent its recurrence. Miss Dalziel gave that attention, and daily the attachment between them grew stronger.

When the patient was able to sit up it became evident that nothing but the warmth of a semi-tropical country could restore him to health. He was then advised from Concord, determined to take him to the Barbadoes. Even now a trained nurse was necessary, and there was but one trained nurse in the world for Dr. Eastman. In the Barbadoes, nursed by Miss Dalziel, Dr. Eastman in a few months so far regained his former strength that in remarried the performance of his duties on board the Rotterdam steamers. Miss Dalziel returned to Boston. The marriage ceremony was in contemplation from the day of the

The End Was Near.

A few weeks ago Dr. Eastman arrived in this city feeling very weak and depressed. He put up at the Sturtevant house, and wrote his father of his condition and his desire to be again in the skillful hands of Miss Dalziel. His father wrote back, advising him to send for the nurse and remain here until he was stronger. Miss Dalziel came on, but the patient did not improve. Monday morning he was told that the end was near.

"Then," said he, "I wish the ceremony to be no longer delayed. Please have a minister called at once."

An Episcopal clergyman lived near by on Twenty-eighth street. He was summoned, and at 11 o'clock, with the bridegroom hardly able to make the responses and the bride in tears at the bedside, Dr. Eastman and his faithful nurse were married. He spoke but a few times afterwards.

Against the Deadly Car Stove.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The general term of the supreme court heard argument on the appeal of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad from an order of the special term granting a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the company to receive $7,000 penalties for the use of stoves instead of other heating apparatus in the company's cars. The company claims that as only twenty-six miles of its road are in this state it is not amenable to the law against stoves, which applies only to roads over fifty miles long. The people's attorney claims the defendant's road is over fifty miles long if it comes under the law, whether all of the road is in this state or not. Decision was reserved.

Ex-Speaker Cole Defeated.

GENEVA, N. Y., Oct. 2.—At the Twenty-ninth district Republican senatorial convention here there were twenty-nine delegates present. Four prominent candidates were in the field—Fremont Cole, ex-speaker of the assembly; Hon. Charles Lincoln, of Ontario county; ex-Senator G. J. Lord, of Yates county, and Hon. Charles T. Saxton. On the 201st ballot Charles T. Saxton, of Wayne county, received the nomination. The contest was very lively all day.

Two Passengers Lost.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 2.—The steamship City of Paris, from New York, has arrived here, and reports that a female steerage passenger and her child were swept overboard and drowned and two other passengers were severely injured by a sudden gale which was encountered on the voyage. The name of the female was Seeded. The number of miles made each day by the City of Paris was as follows: 400, 447, 466, 461, 453, 455, 119. Total, 2,801. The passage occupied 5 days, 7 hours and 54 minutes.

An Editor's Contempt of Court.

That subject, together with other trans-continental enterprises, Nicaragua canal and Panama schemes—will be brought to their attention while on their tour of this country.

"The Panama canal projects is not dead by any means," said he. "When I was in Paris this summer I paid a visit to M. Brunot, the receiver of the bankrupt company. He has, after paying all the debts, about 14,000,000 francs at his disposal. He has decided to send out a commission of engineers to Panama during the winter. AFLAME IN MIDOCEAN.

Frightful Experience of the Steamer Unionist.

A FIVE DAYS' FIGHT FOR LIFE.

The Thrilling Voyage of a British Ship. Fire in Her Coal Bunkers, Gas Explosions and a Terrific Storm to Contend With.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Running in the very teeth of a gale which tossed her like a chip on the waters, and with a red hot fire burning in one of her coal bunkers which threatened to destroy the steamer and which offences and crew worked day and night to subdue, is the history of a good part of the voyage of the British steamer Unionist, which has just steamed into this port from Liverpool. It was on Sept. 21 that the Unionist, under Capt. R. W. Nash's command, left Liverpool for New York, in ballast. There was a heavy westerly gale blowing when the steamer left port. On the 26th the wind veered to the north northwest and blew with almost hurricane force.

Storm and Fire.

A heavy cross sea caused the big steamer to pitch so heavily that the sailors could hardly keep their feet, and at night they had to lash themselves in their bunks. On the morning of Sept. 30 the Unionist was steaming against a gale which almost buried her.

Trouble in the Bunkers.

It was 5 o'clock in the morning when Chief Officer Attsmbrow saw a thin line of smoke forcing its way from underneath the bunker hatch on the port side of the bridge. He quickly called Capt. Nash, and they lifted the hatch. A dense volume of black smoke poured from the hatchway, almost suffocating the captain. All hands were at once summoned, the hatches battened down and every crevice filled with oakum. Two holes were cut in the hatch and barrels of water were poured into the bunker.

Overcome by Gases.

At 10 o'clock the hatch was removed and two of the crew went down and began passing coal from the port bunker into the saddle back or cross hatch coal bunker. There were fifty tons in the port bunker, where the fire was. The men were relieved at 1 o'clock, when Firemen James Farrell and T. Pearson took their places. Half an hour later the smoke and sulphurous gases overcame the men. They were rescued with difficulty, and did not recover consciousness for some hours. During this time the ship was pitching and tossing so that the men could hardly retain their feet. The hatch was closed again after the men were taken out, and kept closed until 3 o'clock Sunday morning, Oct. 1, with the hose constantly pouring on water.

Then the hatch was again reopened and the men were sent down in relays of two to again make an attempt to get out the fire. An officer had charge of each relay and the men were relieved every fifteen minutes. Thus they worked all that day. At 7 o'clock Monday morning, Oct. 2, they went to work and the hatch went on again, while the water played as before until 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, when the work of removing coal was resumed. The fire had now increased and the men found it almost impossible to work. Still they kept desperately on, urged by officers, who took their share of the work with the men. More than twenty tons had been removed by 10 o'clock Wednesday night, when the deadly smoke and gas had caused another cessation of work.

The Red Hot Coal.

They began to draw the coal from the bottom of the bunker Thursday afternoon, and soon reached red hot coal. Although buzzing the engineer, Capt. Nash ordered the steamer to the cross hatch bunker, placed upon the men deck and deluged with water. The men had removed two tons by half-past 8 o'clock Friday evening.

Terrible Gas Explosion.

At 2 o'clock Friday morning Second Officer Hemming heard a subdued report and saw the port bunker and the cross bunker hatches fly into the air, while a tongue of flame ran up nearly to the mast head. The gas had exploded. The hatches fell back into the bunkers, but were secured with difficulty and the fire kept under.

The hose was turned on again, but at 8:30 there was another explosion, and this time the port hatch struck Engineer Lowe on the head, killing him instantly. The port side was very hot, and the fire room was almost unbearable.

Out at Last.

Capt. Nash decided to cut a hole through the iron side of the bunker, and this was accomplished and the water turned on the blazing mass at 6 o'clock that morning. By 9 o'clock Friday night the fire was quenched and engineer exploring the bunker with an electric light found only charred and wet coals.

The Chautauqua-Cattaraugus Dispute.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The Republican senatorial appointment committee of Chautauqua-Cattaraugus met here. Among those present were State Committeeman Warren, of Buffalo, and candidates Vedder and Sessions. Cattaraugus county refused to accept the original Chautauqua proposition as to representation and Chautauquans refused to consent to a continuance of the present representation. Finally on Dr. Williams' motion it was decided to leave the dispute to be settled by the arbitration committee of the state committee.

What Happened to the Unicorn.

The Pet Waiter to Monster Raspberry, the Second Swallower)—Ah, my dear monster, how are you? I have you made a sandwich today to an best of my appropriateness!—Judge.

The Wise Maid.

In a Vine street subbe'ter, the other day, were an old gentleman, with an ear trumpet, and a very pretty young woman, accompanied by a little boy. She smiled at him with on the boy, and shouted her pretty teeth in a bewitching way. All at once the old man in the way peculiar to so many deaf people who do not know how to modulate the voice, said, in tones as loud as to be audible all over the car: "I only paid 45 for my upper teeth. What did yours cost?" To my that the pretty woman was mad is putting it mildly. She flounced around with a flash of anger blazing in her cheeks, and signaled the conductor to let her out at the next crossing.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The World Be Mean.

A little Maine girl, visiting New York recently, went to the theatre two or three times. After returning home she was reluctant to go to church on Sunday, and made the remark that "she liked those meetings best where the curtains rose." Her father, who was a leading church member, cautioned her about making that remark when callers were present. Shortly after the minister was shown in and the little girl entertained him a while alone. When her father entered the room she said, "Papa, I've told the minister all about my visit to New York, but I didn't say anything about the meetings where the curtain rose, and I ain't going to, either."—Rockland (Me.) Free Press.

Johnnie Knew It All.

Wife—John, there is something in this baseball report that I do not understand. I wish you would explain it to me.

Husband—Read it, my dear.

Wife reading)—"With one to tie and one out, he reached first in the eighth inning, and ran to third on Pfeffer's hit to right. He should have scored on Tiernan's wild throw in, but became rattled and held his base."

What does that mean?

Husband (who knows nothing of the game)—Blowed if I know.

Wife—Oh, you stupid—I'll have to wait until Johnnie of years old comes in.—Boston Courier.

A Novel Invention.

"What can I do for you?" asked the horse railroad president of the newly looking individual before him.

"I have a patent life preserver I'd like to have you adopt for your cars."

"But, my dear sir, we don't need them."

"No, sir, you don't now, but you will. You see, I'm a weather prophet, and I have predicted unprecedentedly heavy rains for the autumn, and our streets will be positively flooded. Now—"

But the presidential worm had turned and the inventor left precipitately.—Harper's Bazar.

A Suitable Epitaph.

It has often been said that the chief characteristic of the epitaph is its lack of veracity, but it is perhaps better that it should err on the side of kindliness rather than wound the living by a brutal truthfulness, as in the case of an inscription written for the tombstone of a lazy man by one who knew him well: "Asleep as usual."—Harper's Magazine.

He Must Make a Change.

He—You must have a great antipathy to me, Miss Lakefront. You never seem to be in when I call.

She (cold)—I never receive gentlemen, Mr. Bagley, whose calling cards are printed in three colors.—Judge.

Explicit.

Judge—You reside——?

Witness—With my brother.

"And your brother lives——?"

"With me."

"Precisely; but you both live——?"

"Together."—Entomologist.

An Unexpected Call.

Servant Maid—Madam, the doctor!

Lady (who is having a delightful call from a neighbor)—It is impossible to receive him now. Say that I am ill!—San Francisco Wasp.

The Front Gate.

An old and crippled gate am I,
And twenty years I've stood
Since Evan hung my high and dry
Rebrigh from my native wood;
But now I've grown as powerful weak—
Despised by man and beast—
So commonly creaky, to speak,
Although I'm never greased.

'Twas twenty years ago, I say,
When Mr. Evan White,
Some kind of hanging round my way
Must every other night;
He hung upon my starboard side,
And she upon the other—
'Till Susan Bobbins bit bride,
And in due time a mother.

I groaned intensely when I heard—
Despite I am so chary!—
My doom breathed in a single word:
The baby was a girl!
And so she grew, and grew, and grew,
I beat bemoaned my fate;
For she was very fair to view,
And I—I was the gate!

Then, in due time, a lover came,
Behokingly polite,
A dapper fellow, Brown by name,
The grown up baby wooed;
They softly spoke me in the gloom,
And talked of moon and star.
They're married now and live at home
Along with me and pa.

My ma was happy for a year,
So constant or day—
Fixed me straight, I had no fear
Bad luck would come my way;
But, ah! this morning, save the mark!
There came a wild surprise,
A shocking thread, grim and dark,
Across my astonished eyes.

A doctor, with a knowing smile,
A scowl with face serene,
A bundle in the house the while,
Dread fruit! And can it mean?
My hinges ache, my back is weak,
My pickets in a whirl;
I fear that dread doctor speaks:
It is another girl.

"Why—er—sin's you folks the cursus?" asked the boy in reply. It appears that a circus had been booked for Somerville on the day of the visit of the equestrians, and the youngsters had met ten the equestrians for the advance guard.

Pedagogy.

CONTRIBUTED BY THE GIRL.

Yes, the Summer is over,
Also I'm back at work once more,
For upon a week ago to-day
At Alb narie spot a long score.

We strolled the b ach two by two;
We sang da s ngs sacred yet,
He, talked about h s school;
I, that "wonderful Miss Violet."

Days after day this happened,
At last to, I grew sad indeed,
One night the moon darke ed,
And I felt his hrandy arm—

Oh, Eva! don't tell it to Gusbens,
But he—he—he had his arm around my waist,
As it circled my dainty tender waist,
Somehow, I let it stay there.

I had the interest feeling,
That we to us were two married,
And the moments and hours,
As he held my sweetness bound.

I have learned much this Summer,
Of go ing, yes, and men and men,
But the art of pedagogy
I've been afraid to touch.

You have taught me this lesson to-day,
The meaning of love, I mean—
While slowly stood up a wave,
Of one of us we were seen.

My heart was beating wildly,
He said, "my pupil—my dear,"
When all of a sudden—a dampness,
And on my face—a cowslip!

The chain of his thoughts was broken,
In time to—not time, to B flat,
My time's next lesson—loving he—
The Summer must not a subject.

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING.

Miss Grace, a Daughter of Gen. Negley, Married Yesterday.

At the beautiful home of the bride, Seventh street and Plainfield avenue, were gathered noon united in wedlock, Mr. Enoch S. Farson, of Philadelphia, and Miss Grace Negley, eldest daughter of General and Mrs. James S. Negley. Promptly at the appointed hour the lovely bride, attired in a most becoming gown of brown cloth, with panels of rich velvet and passementerie, entered the library, leaning on the arm of her father, General Negley, followed by the groom and Mrs. Negley. The ceremony was performed by the venerable pastor of the bride's family, the long l nger in the hearts of her immediate relatives, the only invited guests.

At half-past one o'clock the bridal couple led the way to the handsome dining room, which was prettily and good taste and combined to furnish a right royal wedding feast. F thful to the old tradition, it was the bride herself who, with hospitable hands, cut and distributed the first slice of the magic bride loaf.

Mean ime was the caterer.

Mr. and Mrs. Farson departed at four o'clock p. m., amidst showers of rice and slippers, for their future home, Philadelphia, the guests remaining for later trains.

Tuesday afternoon, Mr. L. B. Hoffman, a Bound Brook merchant, had his left leg amputated just below the knee. Mr. Hoffman, is forty-six years old and has been a cripple since he was eleven years of age. While playing at school he broke a small bone in his foot, and necrosis set in and extended nearly to the knee, destroying the tibia and rendering the limb useless. Mr. Hoffman has used crutches ever since, up to about three months ago, when the pain in the limb became so great as to keep him in the house. The operation of amputating the leg was successfully performed by Dr. Fisher of Bound Brook, who was assisted by Dr. Parish, of Flemington, and Dr. Mastherson, of Somerville.

Watson Has Returned.

Michael F. Watson convicted on four charges of illegal selling, and who suddenly left town without paying the fine of $400, and was gone for several days, has returned, and it is reported, declares that he had not skipp ed at all. Considerable rain showers looked for, but failed to appear. The Candidate tirade was on hand and noon and found plenty of admiring friends to shake hands with. After a first-rate dinner at the President's headquarters the Board made a tour of the grounds. He hoped the exhibition of grain and stock with a critical eye and the neat, quiet and mammoth rakes under a glass case added his hearty homeopathy. He took an early train for Trenton. The races even in draw a big crowd, but proved uninteresting. The day getting C. C. E. won for 2.30 Trot, of Boonton, a purse of $200. The State Board of Health reports a Summer more exempt from disease than usual. Diphtheria continues to be the scourge of the State. No specific is yet known for it, and even its cause is not fully understood. It is very prevalent where there is bad sanitary surroundings. The one great remedy is early isolation of the first cases, to treat it shall not spread by contact.

AGAINST SWEARING.

A Novel Association Formed at Millstone to Prevent It.

A novel organization has been started at East Millstone, having for its object the prevention of swearing. The organization is the second that is in existence in the country, the other being at New Haven, Conn., and having a membership of nearly 600 members. The Millstone society is known as the Anti-Swear-Association. It was started last Spring by seven young men who had read the reports of one of Dr. Talmage's sermons on swearing. The membership rapidly increased, and is now about sixty. Each man, on joining the organization, pledges himself to cease swearing and to try and induce others to make the same promise. No fine is imposed for violations of the pledge, but the matter is made widely on the books of the members, except of course, during meetings. These are held every Friday evening, and are made interesting and entertaining. It is surprising how much good the society has done since organized, and those who have become members. The officers are: President, S. S. Fisher; Vice President, G. H. Hagaman; Secretary, C. W. Barcalow; Treasurer, Jacob Bergbardt.

Shortly after its organization the club wrote to Dr. Talmage, telling him of the objects of the society, and in return a very pleasant note was received from him. This Association was formed at a meeting held last evening in Voorhees's Hall. Sumner Rinaldy, the well-known clarionet player, appeared, assisted by an amateur string band.

Prohibition League Organized.

A Prohibition League was organized in this city Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected:

A Change of Charge.

Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Farrall has relieved Father Bogaard of the Millstone parish and has assigned him to Dunellen instead. This will prove a great relief to Father Bogaard, who for the last 13 years has attended to his duties there faithfully, only allowing three Sundays on account of severe during all that time. Besides many improvements introduced by him he has paid off the entire debt of the church, amounting to $1,000. As he can go to Dunellen by train he will now sell his pet horse Dick.—Somerset Messenger.

The U. S. Grant Club held a meeting in Spencer's Hall last evening and elected delegates to the convention of Republican clubs to be held at Elizabeth on the 15th inst. They are as follows: Harrison Coddington, James Andrews, George W. Bullman, Eugene Pope and R. R. Fairchild.

Undoubtedly Texas is a great state. She can produce annually cotton enough to supply the world, she raises one-sixth of all the cattle produced west of the Mississippi river, and she is also said to raise one considerably. Besides all these she will not permit a silk hat to be sworn within her borders.

Within the past quarter century the Protestant Episcopal church has grown in America as at no previous period in its history. It is mentioned as a curious fact that as the taste of the American people for artistic decoration and esthetic ceremonials has been awakened and intensified the Episcopal church has increased proportionally.

The ugly Emperor William of Germany gave Minister William Walter Phelps is something unspeakable. He always admired the United States, spoke of the emperor, and the study of our "history of peace" had excited in him the greatest interest. This sounds very sweet, coming from the most warlike ruler in Christendom. Well, most of the nations of Europe are beginning to find it healthy to admire our country as much as Emperor Willie does.

Atlantic Coast Storms.

The storms that do such incalculable damage along our southern and eastern coasts are generated in the boiling hot atmosphere of the Caribbean sea. They are usually known as West Indian hurricanes. A peculiarity of them is that they follow the general course of the gulf stream northeastward. What is known of them definitely is that immense volumes of heated air rise among the islands east of the Caribbean sea. They rise and whirl around and around in great eddies, sucking up in their course more and more hot air, circling eastward and northward as they whirl. Why they move in these vast circles, and why they travel eastward and northward will be a problem for future scientists to solve.

If a cyclone like this touches the Gulf coast then there is a terrific storm along our southern shores. Destruction and terror are in the wake of such a hurricane.

Again the cyclone stands off the Gulf coast, whirls eastwardly, then, [illegible] drawn northward, follows the line of the Atlantic coast from Georgia to British America. In the southern Atlantic states the rice and cotton fields are wrecked; further north, watering place hotels and towns are damaged, houses are splintered in the gale and ships are foundered and driven upon the coast. The hurricane season is from Aug. 10 to Oct. 20. It is then that the accumulated heat develops its greatest energy. It is rare for a season to pass without at least one of these mighty hurricanes.

All the Americas.

"The success of Mr. Blaine's device would be of great and disagreeable significance to Europe, as is easily understood," remarks La Epoca, a paper published in Madrid. The Spanish journal refers to the congress of the three Americas, which opens its sessions in Washington this week. It does not appear, however, that the idea originated with Mr. Blaine. The scheme first began to take shape as far back as Garfield's administration, but the late Congressman Townshend, of Illinois, first introduced it. It is entirely commercial in its object. Mr. Townshend had a favorite plan, which was that all the countries of the American continent should be joined in one customs union, against the rest of the world. The German wort Zollverein expresses the meaning of such a union as Mr. Townshend wanted.

At this very important congress the great object in view with both North and South Americans will be to increase and facilitate trade. The annual commerce of Central and South America amounts to $700,000,000. The United States gets only a small fraction of the whole vast sum. This is not because the Spanish republics do not want our trade, for they do. It is a fact that many of our manufactured products are first sent to Europe, repacked and labelled, and then shipped anew to South America, where they are bought as European goods.

The great difficulty in the way of direct trade with these countries is lack of facility of transportation. There are very few lines of steamers in the North and South American trade. Merchants and those interested say that steamers enough can be maintained regularly if the United States will pay increased sums for rapid mail transportation. But there is in the United States a strong feeling against subsidized steamships, one that the question will not be easy to settle.

Other topics discussed at the congress will be arbitration of international disputes, the acceptance by each government of a common silver coin which shall be legal tender in all the countries, and the adoption of uniform customs regulations and of uniform weights and measures.

MR. HARRISON'S GUESTS.

Sir Knights Received by the President.

TWENTY THOUSAND WERE IN LINE

But Only a Third of That Number Succeeded in Boarding the Chief Executive—The Grand Masonic Exhibition Drill at the Baseball Grounds.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The reception tendered the Sir Knights and their ladies by President Harrison at the White House was as much of a similar occasion a very brilliant affair. The sidewalks by 7 p. m. in the vicinity of the mansion were thronged with Sir Knights and lady companions, and long lines of people two and four abreast extended for squares in different directions, waiting for the reception to begin. At 8:30 the doors of the White House were opened and the people began to enter. The mansion was handsomely decorated for the occasion, potted plants, tropical flowers and beds of roses being everywhere in profusion. The spacious East room was brilliantly illuminated and presented, long before, with the gorgeous uniforms of the Sir Knights and the handsome costumes of their ladies, has presented a more animated appearance.

Received in the Red Room.

The president received the guests in the east room, assisted by Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Windom, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Tracy and Mrs. Rusk and all the members of the cabinet, except Secretary Proctor, who is out of the city. They were at first introduced to the president by Eminent Sir Knight Myron M. Parker, of Washington, of whom a book hands with each; but as the throng in waiting seemed endless, the president soon abandoned hand shaking to expedite the passage of the crowd. The Sir Knights and ladies then passed along rapidly, saluting the president as they passed by. The guests entered the front doorway and passed out on the rear portico into the grounds south of the White House, which were brilliantly illuminated with Chinese lanterns and colored lights. A steady stream poured in and out of the mansion until 11 o'clock, when the front doors were closed.

Thousands Were in Line.

There were perhaps 20,000 people in line and waiting to shake hands with or get a glimpse of Harrison, but not more than one-third of this number reached him. It was a lovely moonlight night, and many of the commandery bands escorted their members to and from the White House—the ladies accompanying the Sir Knights, marching with them through the streets.

The Exhibition Drill.

The exhibition drill of the Knights Templar commanderies at the capital baseball grounds was witnessed by more than 4,000 people. The Appolis commandery of Utica, N. Y., the first to appear, executed the peculiar evolutions of the Knights Templar drill with grace and precision. Louisville (Ky.) commandery followed and showed the most perfect perfection it had attained in the various difficult movements which it also executed. De Molay commandery of Louisville, Ky., came next, and its execution of the Templar square and Maltese cross called forth rapturous applause. The Detroit commandery, sixty members, came next, and for so large a body of men did excellent work.

Miniature Masons Make a Hit.

But it was the "boys" who carried the day by storm. When "the little commandery" from the Masonic home at Louisville, Ky., came upon the field, accompanied by the De Molay band, Louisville commanderies with their bands playing "Old Kentucky Home," the spectators cheered vociferously. The boys executed the Templar manual drill known to the Knights Templar manual drill and the various figure with such perfection as to detail that it was difficult to discover a flaw in any movement.

The firm was established in 1830, and has an oil refinery in New Bedford and an office here. The liabilities are placed at about $400,000, and the assets at $300,000 or $400,000, about $100,000 of which is in this city.

The Failure a Surprise.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Oct. 10.—The announcement of the failure of William A. Robinson & Co. has caused much surprise to the people in this city. The failure is attributed to the losses in the Baltic mill in Connecticut and to recent failures in Providence. Their bonds and shares are in Boston, with branches in this city and New York. The New Bedford member of the firm, William A. Robinson, declined to state the amount of liabilities, and said that he was unable to make any statement of the present affairs the firm will be able to pay. It was impossible for him to say what the Connecticut cotton mill and the oil refinery will sell for. The business of the firm was very opened and the people began to enter. The mansion was handsomely decorated for the occasion, potted plants, tropical flowers and beds of roses being everywhere in profusion. The spacious East room was brilliantly illuminated and presented, long before, with the gorgeous uniforms of the Sir Knights and the handsome costumes of their ladies, has presented a more animated appearance.

A PRIEST POISONED.

Dastardly Attempt Upon Father Kelly's Life at Oneida, N. Y.

ONEIDA, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Rev. Father James Kelly, of this place, is seriously ill, and the circumstances connected with his illness point to a crime of murderous intent. He celebrated mass in the risk and partook of about two teaspoonfuls of the wine, when he was at once seized with great pain and a sickness at the stomach. The symptoms were regarded as symptoms of poisoning. He quickly retired from the altar, and making known his situation, sent immediately to a store for an emetic. When this opened to the desired effect of relieving his stomach, but none too soon. A physician was summoned and applied the best known remedies for poison, but the case was deathly sick when conveyed to his home.

One of the parishioners went to Syracuse to have the wine in the bottle analyzed. Several bottles were made, each showing the presence of arsenic in large quantities. The theory is that some one entered the risk by means of a false key Sunday or Monday night and put the deadly drug in the small bottle of wine left there, as arsenic was found scattered on the altar.

This afternoon the Sunday school scholars of this city participated in exercises in the Academy of Music and Second Presbyterian church. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. J. A. Worden and Dr. C. R. Loss, $25,000. The wing is the one that was burned in a similar way some years ago, and it was used for storage, school book and library purposes.

RAVAGES OF THE FLAMES

A $400,000 Cotton Fire Occurs at Savannah, Ga.

"TIFFECANOE PLACE" SCORCHED.

The Studebaker Mansion at South Bend, Ind., Damaged $6,000—The Pan-American Congress Was to Have Been Entertained There Oct. 12.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 10.—Fire which started in the lower hydraulic cotton compress yard destroyed that compress and the Tybee compress and five warehouses with 4,000 bales of cotton. The British steamships Napier, Cypress and Carlton were in great danger, but were towed safely from the wharves. The Carlton was somewhat blistered. The wharves took fire, but were saved. There will be hardly any salvage on the cotton.

The Loss Was $400,000.

The loss is estimated at $400,000. There is an insurance of about $60,000 on buildings, presses, etc., and the cotton was well covered by floating policies. The fire will not interfere with the handling of cotton, as there are plenty of reserve presses that can be brought into use. The cause of the fire is not known. It originated among the cotton in some way.

"Tippecanoe Place" Destroyed.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 10.—About 3 a. m. "Tippecanoe Place," the mansion of Hon. Clem Studebaker, one of the finest in the northwest, was discovered to be on fire. Mrs. Studebaker noticed smoke in the house, and after a search found the fire in a closet on the first floor. When this opened the door the flames rushed out, ran up the elevator and a stairway to the fourth floor and roof. Owing to the absence of Mr. Studebaker, who is with the American congress on La Base through New England, and her son and daughter, who are in Cincinnati, Mrs. Studebaker was alone with her grandson, Miss Isabel Milburn, and several servants.

Plucky Mrs. Studebaker.

The grandson was sleeping on the fourth floor near the nurse's room, and to him Mrs. Studebaker ran, through flame and smoke, screaming to alarm the others. She rescued the room and rescued the child, but was severely burned about the head, face, neck and shoulders. The child was but slightly burned. Mrs. Studebaker escaped in her night clothes and bare feet. The servants aroused by Mrs. Studebaker's cries and Miss Milburn also escaped in their night clothes.

She Slid Down a Water Pipe.

The nurse girl, Louise Weller, was cut off by the flames and slid down from the fourth floor on a water pipe and escaped unhurt. The upper floor was gutted by the flames and many valuable art treasures destroyed. Fire, smoke and water also practically destroyed everything on the floors below, the walls alone escaping destruction. Very little furniture was saved. The loss will reach $150,000 to $175,000; insurance about $60,000. The building was but recently completed by Mr. Studebaker at a cost of $100,000. It was built of cobblestone, was four stories high and furnished magnificently. A reception to the delegates of the American congress was to have been held there Oct. 19.

THE EPISCOPALIANS.

Work of the Bishops—Memorial Services in Honor of Bishop Vail.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—At the Episcopal convention committees on the Japan and Michigan were asked for but refused. At the opening of the afternoon session Mr. Taylor, of Springfield, moved as an amendment to the proposed change in the judicial system the insertion of, "or by the federate council of a convention associated together for the government of this church."

By the passage of this amendment such decisions or federated dioceses would have a separate court of appeals. The memorial service in honor of the late Bishop Vail were most impressive, the right reverend bishops of Maine, Rhode Island and western New York officiating.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

What Is Going On in the World of Politics.

POOR FELLOW.

Dim—Ah! nothing on the shore—I think I see one now—
A sorry sailor has the worst
And longest spoon for supper.

Her dress was such an inner wear
That I'm a judging woman;
I noticed, too, she wore a pair
Of any rumor shoes.

While watching them inside the sea,
Her pretty waves I'd mark,
And hardly think, while passing me,
She dropped by accident.

I noticed, she also stooped, and lo!
Her bustle became smaller;
I felt my face begin to glow—
Her cheeks were all ablaze.

I took the bracelet from the sand
And handed it to her,
And perhaps I drew my hand
She said, I thank you, sir.

That broke the ice and for a while
We mixed and chatted there;
Perhaps she had the sweetest smile,
The most bewitching air.

Along the silvery sands we walked
Beside each wavy wave,
Of pebbles and shells I know we talked,
And sounds sweet!

We left the shore at half past one
And dined at the cafe,
I thought myself in Paradise
That glorious summer day.

I seemed in a delicious dream
When out again we strayed;
I bought her caramels, ice cream,
And cold, pink lemonade.

When evening came, I said, May I
Escort you home to-night?
She looked at me with beaming eye
I saw a merry light.

Oh! no she said, it may not be,
To-night it, sir, is vain,
My husband's coming down for me
On the 6:30 train!

WOMAN AND HOME.

IMPORTANCE OF TEACHING POLITENESS EARLY IN LIFE.

A Convenient Business Dress—Mistaken Ideas of "Strong Minded" Women—A Woman Who Makes Pocket Puffs—The French Housekeeper—"Killing Time."

It is becoming a matter of some anxiety among thoughtful people whether politeness is not almost a lost art. Not that there is any loss of etiquette or mannerism (rather the contrary), but that there is less of habit and politeness than there formerly was among people of respectable social position. And it is a loss greatly to be deplored. There are some misguided persons, who, contemning hypocrisy with good manners, think it honest to be rude, but there are many more who never cast a thought upon the subject. To them one word:

Do not think that your son or daughter can acquire habits of politeness as they can books at the moment they are needed. The very phrase—habits of politeness—implies the impossibility of that. Habit implies the facility of unconscious action in any given direction. If we would have our children truly polite, they must first see that we are so, and that from the first breath they draw, for even as early do impressions begin to be made upon them; and secondly, they must be gently checked in their first manifestations of selfishness, for no habit can be truly politeness and selfish at the same time.

To render thanks with gracious warmth for every slightest favor; to never meet a mother, or whatever rank, or however many times daily, without a smile or bow of genial courtesy; to rise spontaneously in the presence of age; to "lend a hand" gracefully wherever one is needed; to step aside that another may pass before; to ask no questions concerning another's private matters; to seem not to know, and, as far as possible really not know, of things that we have reason to suppose that others would not wish us to know; to make no comments upon such occurrences when by circumstances we have been obliged to be aware of them; to avoid disagreeably loud talking or whispering; to allow to others their full share of the conversation, without leaving the whole burden of it upon them; to think first of others and only secondarily of ourselves, are all essential parts of true politeness, and they can never be successfully assumed by those to whom they are not habitual from babyhood.

We hardly realize to what an extent our daily actions and motions are automatic, or, to speak more correctly, are so habitual as to amount to action in the absence of conscious thought. We rise, dress, eat, walk, talk, laugh or cry without consciously exerting our muscles to produce those results. In the same way we should be polite without knowing it, without having to cast a thought upon it. One of our best writers on etiquette says: "Now it is easy enough to learn when and how to leave a card, how to behave at dinner, how to dress, how to eat with one's fork, how to sit in a carriage, how to bow, how to converse, how to receive and how to drop an acquaintance, but how to be polite is a far higher education." And it is this education which must begin in the cradle.

To a certain extent it may be an inheritance. Mr. Fareybody, whose long experience with animal training has made him an authority, says that the horses whose sires have been trained are much more readily taught than are others, and those who are descended from two or more generations of trained animals are themselves already half trained, their intelligence is quicker and surer, their minds more responsive.

Among human beings we recognize the fact that there are cultured and uncultured classes, and that it is natural that a child of cultivated parents to acquire the habits of cultured people than for one not so descended. But this alone is not enough. The child from birth to the age of seven should have been taught to perform most wonderful feats for the showman, cannot yet dispense with training. He may learn to ride on the "Bronco buster," or to ably than can the wild horse of the prairie, but he will never learn it without instruction. Neither can a child, no matter how long his pedigree, afford to dispense with the silent admonitions which come from constant association with people who are themselves always polite or with the not less important knowledge conveyed by prompt upon precept.

The children who see—and they are wonderfully quick and sure to see—that the politeness of their parents is but a veering of conventional manners," put on for show, will be little likely to trouble themselves to obtain even this indifferent degree of it, and their "people are almost sure to be exposed, at the moment when they would least desire it, by the ill manners of their children.

The enfant terrible is in general only the important outcome of his parents' ill breeding. If the child says—I will, I won't; you shall, you shan't; give me some of that; I want some of the other; its up to me; You're a fool! You lie! or some other similar expressions of the sort, we may be quite sure that he is in the habit of hearing them at home, and no amount of shocked looks and deprecatory expressions of astonishment on the part of his parents will or should alter this opinion.

Let no parent console himself for the boisterousness of his child by the thought that "he will know better by and by." For, though friction with the world will undoubtedly in time rub off all offending roughness that people will not always submit to having their clothes used as foot mats or to receiving other similarly agreeable attentions, yet the world's friction will never bring more than an exterior polish. It should be our end and aim not to have our children's hearts and minds like the marbles on which fricasees have been served, a brilliant surface, for within the marble is rough and smooth still. Rather should we wish them to be like precious stones, shining with an inner light when polished can display.—Helen H. Smith in Ladies' Home Journal.

Women's Business Dress.

A woman's paper said the other day: "The want of a convenient dress for work increasingly felt by business women. One of the largest working girls' societies in New York has adopted the blouse waist and straight gathered skirt as a club dress for the members. The dress of young American women would be improved by simplicity and discretion. They dress extravagantly and too much, as a rule." Interviews with some twenty or more women engaged in making their own living resulted in the discovery that eighteen of them believed there was a crying need of some dress designed distinctively for business women, in which they might have more comfort and common-sense than in the garments they now wear. Send one of these.

"A friend of mine, just home from Paris, is very much interested in mounting the stairs there in the way of a reformed dress for business women. There is no doubt that some reform in that direction must and will come, though it is slow; because we are not only very conservative, but very much afraid of wearing anything that will make us conspicuous or ridiculous. It is not women alone are afraid of as much as the men, who, ever since the days of Jeremiah the prophet, have been inveighing against the follies of women's dress, but who are the first to jeer at and persecute her if she dare attempt to emancipate herself from these follies in any way. Now, in my own case, for example, my work requires that I should be out of doors a great deal, no matter what the state of the weather may be.

"My condition when it storms is positively pitiable. I must hold up my umbrella, grasp my skirts with one hand to try to keep them out of the mud, and in this way, I never does succeed in keeping them out of it entirely—and whatever books, papers or parcels I may have to carry must be tucked inconveniently under the arm. I have spent many plodding about in the rain and almost wept from envy. Their trousers are turned up quite out of the danger of wet, and their long macintoshes have a deep pocket in that will hold all their parcels and papers, and they have both hands free for their umbrellas, and they can step into their office, lay aside their outside wrappings and be as neat and dry as when they left home. Let any woman walk through a windy rain and see if she can say the same thing when she arrives at her destination.

"The Prince Fredrick dress which my friend saw at Paris seems to me the best suggestion I have heard yet. The trouble has been to find something that would combine the convenient, be also graceful and modest, and this seems to come near it. It is modeled on the uniform of the Zouave regiments and consists of trousers and gaiters fastened together, by the way, for walking that has ever been invented. This makes no exposure of the person at all, while leaving the limbs perfectly free. Over it is a skirt that comes to the ankle, but it is only slightly gathered and is slit up on each side to the hip, so that while it answers all purposes of modesty it does not interfere in the least with locomotion. The waist can be either a blouse with a sash, or a waistcoat and coat with plenty of pockets. I hear that a number of French women who make their own clothes have work to do out of doors have adopted it and find it both comfortable and becoming. Miss Dieulafoy, the great explorer, who is a woman of fine taste in dress as well as travels, is a great admirer of this new dress, and says it is, she thinks, the solution of the problem of a working dress for working women."

The Pocket Powder Puff.

Among those women who have taken to fancy work for sale and to better reasons is a pretty faced widow living in one of the smallest of flats up town on the east side. She has two daughters, school girls, always growing out of their skirts and their shoes, but bright and rosy cheeked, loving little souls, with awful appetites. To provide for their needs the mother's weary fingers toil till the night is far spent, and by day she is tied down to a big embroidery shop. The dainty needlework which she learned to do in her girlhood in a southern convent embellished many an exquisite "piece" which found a place in the Broadway window and then found its way into homes of luxury.

She was not well paid, however. The lamplighter's bill ran high, and now a few days and nights brought her but seventy-five cents. They sold in the shops for $15. She painted and made up the daintiest of sachet cushions and fifty cents a dozen, and they sold for $12. She had always to contend in her struggle for a livelihood with women who work only for "pin money." One of her employers gave out articles to be worked, to be made up at their homes. Two-thirds of these women were in no way dependent upon the money so earned. They took their time to do the work and bought ribbons and trimmings with the proceeds. The most difficult and particular pieces were given to women like the mother here mentioned, who needed the money solely to complain of any conditions imposed.

One day this woman had a call from an old friend, whose clever fingers often devise pretty gifts for Christmas and birthday times. She pulled out of her pocket a little embroidered bag drawn up with narrow blue ribbon, explaining: "Here's something I made in Copyright, and see if you can't make something that will pay you a little better than this shop work." The bag was about three inches square at the top, with a two inch wide piece was slightly frilled around this and gathered in a tiny frill where the ribbons drew it in at the top. A lining of delicate silk just showed. Opening it, it proved a nest of swan's down inside the square, underneath which was a layer of cotton sprinkled with perfume powder. It was a pocket powder puff of superlative pretensions and model convenience.

There is a popular fiction that New York women of the better class do not use powder, but the amount of money gathered in by the women who sell it, and the large number of new and manufactured little puff bags is proof positive that the pretty article "filled a long felt want," as the advertisers put it. Finding that her bags were being imitated in the shops the manufacturer recently secured a patent. Her success with this simple article has been so encouraging that she now advises women who toil at fancy work for the shops for a pittance to "go and invent something, for it pays much better."—New York World.

A French Woman at Home.

She helps to cook the dinner she has bought—for servants are wasteful with the charcoal, and she knows to an inch how little she can use. In that marvelous place—a French kitchen, where two or three little holes in a stove cook such delicate dishes and perform such culinary feats as our great, roaring coal stoves have no conception of—she flits about like a fairy, creating magical messes out of raw material of the most ordinary description. Yes, though a lady born and bred, refined, elegant and luxurious, she is equally, and does time, not always, a sweet dish; if not thus, a little fruit, such as may be the cheapest, and is the ripest season.

But there is very little of each thing, and it is rather in arrangement than in material that they appear rich. The idea that the French are gourmands in private life is a mistake. They spend little in eating, and they eat inferior things; though their cookery is rather a science than a mere accident of civilization. At home the greek aim of the French is to serve; and any self sacrifice that will lead to this result, is cheerfully undertaken, more especially in eating than in the mere luxury of mere idleness. No French woman will spend a cent to save herself trouble. She would rather work like a dray horse to buy an extra yard of ribbon, or a new pair of gloves, than to have the softest sofa in the world to splash! fine ladyism, with crumpled gauze or bare hands.—Dorothea in Ladies' Home Journal.

"Strong Minded" Women.

Just where the weak minded woman stops and the strong minded begins it is hard to say. The boundary line is so vague, it is crossed so unconsciously, so unpremeditatedly, that some women are over it before they know it, and find the epithet "strong minded" prefixed to their names. And it is strange that such an epithet should be used as a term of reproach when applied to a woman, for surely "weak minded" would also be an undesirable profix.

No sensible woman would like to be called "weak minded," and no refined woman desires to be called "strong minded," taking the word in the accepted sense of the popular definition. For, generally speaking, when a woman is called "strong minded" it is meant that she is eccentric almost to absurdity, regardless of public opinion, and that no one need be surprised at anything she may do, for she is capable of doing anything and everything that is queer. It may be supposed under the circumstances that a strong minded is this same lack of no value. Very true it is of no value, for, truthfully speaking, a woman who is strong minded is not eccentric or regardless of public opinion, nor likely to do anything shocking. Rather should these things be expected of a weak minded woman.

A strong minded woman is, first of all, a woman of sense; she has convictions, and the courage to express them; she is clever, and nearly always intelligent. She does not fill the trivialities and small conventionalities of fashionable life, if she does her mind is intent on higher and better things. She claims a right to make her life what she chooses to make it, the same right that men have and from time immemorial. She works for money if she wishes to do so, or for the love of work, if she prefers the latter thing

The line formed in Cark street, in front of the Atalanta's club house, with some 100 hundred wheels in it, every wheel club in Jersey and vicinity being represented. The parade started at 9 o'clock. The Atalanta Wheelmen, with 48 men, under Capt. Dobbie led. Then came the Hudson County Wheelmen, with 32 men, under Capt. Ditmis. Then the Orange Wheelmen, 30 men, under Capt. Gilbert; the Plainfield Bicycle Club, with 15 men, under Capt. Martin; the Orange Wanderers, with 20 men, under L. Johns; the Brooklyn Bicycle Club, with 18 men, under W. Fuller, and the Bloomfield Cyclers, 9 men.

After the parade the visitors repaired to the way rooms of the club, where here was an entertainment. Speeches were made by President Miller, A. W.; Capt. Dobbie, A. W.; Capt. Martin, P. B. C., and G. Gilbert, E. W. Some fifty unattached riders were in line the while; the different cyclers taking additional order Chelsea lanterns furnished by the Newark boys.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

Miss Taylor's Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

Shortly after one o'clock this afternoon a team of horses attached to a soda water wagon, left standing at the corner of Front street and Washington avenue became frightened and ran away. They ran down Front street toward Park avenue at a break-neck speed and narrowly escaped colliding with several vehicles on the former thoroughfare. In attempting to turn the corner into Park avenue they slipped and fell, one of the horses landed on the sidewalk and the other in the gutter. They could not extricate themselves and were easily captured. The wagon struck the curb and the force of the collision smashed a number of the soda water, ginger ale and sarsaparilla bottles with which the wagon was loaded.

Miss Alice Taylor, who was passing along Park avenue at the time, narrowly escaped serious injury, if not death. She was struck by one of the frightened animals and knocked down, the horse following over her. Engineer Chas. Runyon, of the Telephone Company, saw her peril, and ran to her assistance, rebinding her before the brute began kicking. She was terribly frightened and went into hysterics. She was taken to her home on West Second street.

Both horses were badly cut by broken glass. The wagon was not wrecked. It is said the horses frequently run away.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Thomas Cullen Thrown from a Wagon and His Collar Bone Fractured.

At about seven o'clock this morning Thomas Cullen, a cripple, who is employed by Edward Cline, the hackster, met with a painful accident on East Third street. He was sitting on a basket in the wagon, when the horse, which was left standing white Mr. Cline was in a house soliciting an order, suddenly started, throwing Cullen out backwards. The unfortunate man landed on his shoulder and it is thought that his collar bone is broken. He lay in the road for some time before he was di-covered suffering intense pain. He was later taken to the residence of Mr. John K-lly and medical aid was summoned. Cullen lost a leg in an accident some years ago.

—There are 977 prisoners in the State prison and only 700 to do. The warehouse is the attraction—no one counting on full term and getting out. Some are kept idle. The brush, stone and shirt departments are running with but one-half the regular force of workmen.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Work That Has Been Done During the Summer.

The State Board of Health has had, during the past summer, the principal trade of the sewers of the State in order to know as to various systems in use, their adaptability and the condition of the towns that have a public water supply but no sewers. The report will appear in the next annual report, the preparation of which, by the Secretary, is well advanced.

The Board, in view of some developments along the sea coast is about communicating with owners of hotels, and boarding houses, and will order such an inspection of them as will secure more perfect sanitary arrangements.

Two circulars have recently been issued by the Board, one relating to the most supply and the modes of detecting unsound meats and the other a general circular addressed to local boards containing various items of interest.

There is now a system by which cases of Typhoid fever or other contagious diseases found in New York city and claiming to have originated in this State, are reported and the facts examined into.

Who Stole the Boot?

A few days ago Mr. John Kenney, the shoe dealer, hung a mammoth rubber boot in front of his establishment as an "ad" for his rubber goods. Last night some one stole the boot, and Mr. Kenney has repeatedly pointed to it with pride. The boot was belonging in its accustomed place at 5:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but when Mr. Kenney looked for it a few minutes later it was non est. Nothing daunted the popular shoe dealer became excited, and started in search of Chief of Police Carey and told him to recover the boot at any price, but the Chief was "on" to the joke and told Mr. Kenney that his property would turn up all right and it did; when John returned from his supper last evening he was surprised to see the boot hanging in its accustomed place. But it did not hang there long for with the assistance of his clerk, John carried it tenderly into the store where it by at sweet repose for the remainder of the night. It is again displayed in front of the store to-day and presents as base an appearance as ever. Mr. Kenney is now trying to ascertain the names of the practical jokers and says if he does he will pay them back with interest.

The "F's" have rented two rooms on the second floor of Mr. Love's new building on the corner of North avenue and Peace street. They are being fitted up as rapidly as possible, and an effort is being made to have the rooms in readiness for the next meeting. The rooms are to be furnished by Peter Tetcoux, to the ladies of the Episcopal Guild, and to the Ha Hua Chautauqua Circle.

Regular meetings are held by the "F's" on the first and third Tuesdays of the month, and the temporary new drill class for colored children will soon be organized on Mondays.

On their arrival at Bernardsville they took coaches that were in waiting and drove to Pleasant. It is understood that the object of their visit is the proposed extension of the road.

NEW JERSEY AT GETTYSBURG.

A Glowing Record of Noble Deeds.—Recollections of a Veteran.

General St. Clair A. Mulholland, of Pennsylvania, was in our city a few days, and in conversation with the comrades of the G. A. R., recalled many incidents of Gettysburg, and the part taken by the troops from this State in that titanic struggle: "Of the troops from the eighteen States represented in the Northern army, at Gettysburg, I will be, "you see honestly claim that none carried off greener laurels than those from your own loyal State, New Jersey, that gave to the Union, Kearney, Kilpatrick, Mott, Byard, Torcott, Sewell and a hundred other brilliant leaders. It also gave some of the noblest regiments and batteries that ever fired a shot in the cause of our country.

On the battlefield of Gettysburg were your First and Second Brigades, the First Cavalry, the Eleventh, Twelfth and Thirteenth Infantry, and batteries B and A. Each and everyone did their whole duty, and did it bravely and well. In the gigantic struggle no organizations performed more heroic service or fought with more bravery than the regiments of the Second New Jersey Brigade as they met the first onslaught of Longstreet's lines at the Peach Orchard, where Francine, Price and four hundred other noble Jerseymen fell with their faces to the foe.

Then what a sweeping charge the Sixth and Eighth Regiments made across the Wheat Field and through the Devil's Den! What language can tell of the magnificent fighting of the Eleventh Regiment that lost, near the Peach Orchard, nearly all the officers and two-fourths of the men, every field officer and company commander being shot down, and the remnants of the command, under command of Lieut. Schoonover, retiring fighting to the last. At Culp's Hill the Thirteenth Regiment did splendid work, and was in the front of the struggle at the last point. The Twelfth Regiment, which was in line of battle near Ziegler's Woods, made one of the most gallant charges of the battle, and helped to repulse the great assault of Pickett's division and Hill's corps on the afternoon of the third day. Your cavalry did a good deal more than its share of fighting in the great cavalry battle on the right flank of the army, and certainly carried off the honors of that brilliant affair. Hopeman's battery did its full share with the artillery of the army in stopping the men of Pickett's division in the great charge; and Battery B was excelled by no other in the work they did at the Peach Orchard. Altogether, you can rest well satisfied with the record made by your troops at Gettysburg."

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

Louis Van Post-ave, of Newark, who was stabbed several times by a negro named Jones on Saturday night, made his ante-mortem statement to the county physician at the City Hospital yesterday morning. The room in which the wounded man lay was then cleared and Jones' Counsel, Mr. Tetcoux, to the ladies of the Episcopal Guild, and to the Ha Hua Chautauqua Circle.

Regular meetings are held by the "F's" on the first and third Tuesdays of the month, and the temporary new drill class for colored children will soon be organized on Mondays.

A full attendance of the members of the "F's" is desired at the meeting to be held Tuesday, Oct. 15th.

Articles of incorporation of the Bismarck Arcade Building Company were filed with the County Clerk, at Newark, yesterday. The company will construct a street railroad from Bloomfield avenue to Lafayette street. The Knox Construction Company also filed articles of incorporation yesterday with $100,000 capital.

Theresa Mackolenawitch, an aged Polish woman of Newark, was run over by a Branch man named Victor Alberis, who said he was driving at a rate of 12 miles an hour company. It induced the woman to lend him her services, amounting to $40, upon the promise that he would pay for both her and the Newark Common Council was to pay him $10,000 after the city got the money in his possession Alberis disappeared.

At a late hour Wednesday night Peter O'Neill, jr., of Morris Plains, was told by one of his fellow-workmen that Mrs. O'Neill had up the back porch of his home and entered a window. Mr. O'Neill cried out the door in the lower part of his house, and, arm-ed with a revolver, went up-stairs and found a man hiding in one of the store-ms. O'Neill grappled with the fellow and h d an exciting struggle before he succeeded in overpowering him. Assisted by some of his neighbors he took the burglar, who said he was John Moore, to the Morris county jail.

Shall it Be?

The Bridgeton Pioneer says that "every intelligent voter in the State knows that Leon Abbett is one of the most corrupt politicians in New Jersey, and that he does not, in seeking a political appointment, considered the fitness of a man for the office, but that the appointed is for Abbett any time, at the time, for anything, everything. The Governor to be elected in November will have a large number of important appointments to make, and they should not be handed out by such unscrupulous men as Leon Abbett. If General E. Bond Gruhb is permitted to make the appointments, successors to the following will be appointed by him:

Chief Justice Beasley.
Associate Justice Scudder and Van Lyckle.
Secretary of State Henry C. Kelsey.
Attorney General Joseph D. Bedle.
Supreme Court Clerk Benjamin F. Lee.
Clerk in Chancery Allen E. McDermott.
State Prison Keeper John H. Patterson.
State Prison Supervisor Henry L. Butler.
State School Superintendent R. O. Chapman.
Three Judges of the State Court of Errors.
Three members of the State Board of Assessors.
Three District Court Judges in Cities.
Six Deputy Factory Inspectors.
Eight Prosecutors of the Pleas.
Nine Law and eighteen Ivy Judges of the County Courts of Common Pleas.
Six managers of the Morris Plains Insane Asylum.
Four trustees of the Reform School.
Ten visitors to the Agricultural Society.
Six trustees of the Deaf Mute Institution.
Five members of the Council of State Charities.
Four managers of the House of Freble minded Women.
Three members of the State board of health.
Three members of the State Board of Pharmacy."

Gleanings from Our Exchanges on Political Topics.

When Leon Abbett takes the stump, of course he will explain the omission of the temperance and ballot reform planks from the Democratic platform.—Salem Standard.

The issue this Fall is the record of last Winter's Legislature, Mr. Abbott dictated that record, and he and it are on trial before the people. Should that record be approved, or its inspirer justified?—Woodbury Constitution.

Leon Abbett has lost what little grip he has. He excites no enthusiasm in his campaign travels, and is looked at more as a curiosity than anything else.—Bridgeton Pioneer.

Rich American Women.

Mr. W. E. Curtis contributes to the October Cosmopolitan magazine a list of American women whose wealth in their own right loots up into the millions. He startles us in the outset by telling us there are in the United States today two dozen women who have more money than any of the married heads of Europe, except Queen Victoria, the richest one. There are half a dozen of our ladies who are as rich as even Queen Victoria herself. American women are all queens, as has been remarked several hundred times.

The wealthy women Mr. Curtis names are variously distributed among the northern cities. It is noticeable that none come from any place south of Baltimore. The richest woman in the world is the widow of W. H. Vanderbilt. It is of course impossible to know just how much any rich person is worth, and the wealth of all who have any considerable property is grossly exaggerated in popular regard. It is, however, probably safe to say that Mrs. Vanderbilt would "cut up" for not less than $35,000,000.

The next richest woman in America is Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts, also of New York, who is "estimated" to be worth $20,000,000. Not a few of the rich women named are descendants of old New York families, who became rich through the "unearned increment" of the rise in real estate. The deed which the original Dutch, or Indian, purchased from the Indians ceding to the whites the whole of Manhattan island, on which New York now stands, has turned up among some ancient papers in a family descended from some of those shrewd Dutchmen. From this deed it appears that the price originally paid for the whole ground was $24.

There are numerous American single women among those mentioned, and it is rather surprising that several of them have kept both their wealth and their single blessedness to the age of 35 or 40. The richest single women in the Union are Miss Mary Garrett, of Baltimore, and Miss Jennie Flood, of San Francisco. They are worth each from fifteen to twenty millions. None of the women named their millions themselves, unless those who, when young girls, married aged men may be said to have done so. It is to be remarked, though, several of the elderly women helped their husbands "get a little while they were "getting started." Jay Gould's daughter Helen will inherit many millions, and already has several in her own right, left to her by her mother. Mrs. Leland Stanford, of California, has the most magnificent collection of diamonds of any private individual in the world, her jewels being valued at over two million dollars.

Race Origin.

M. de Quatrefages, the French ethnologist, has published his conclusions with regard to the origin and distribution of the human race. He says all mankind came from a central mass in northern Asia, and there were three fundamental types, black, white and yellow. These three types scattered over the world. They intermingled, and in time formed seventy-two distinct races, now represented on the globe. The American Indian came from the blending of the white and yellow races with a "local quaternary race." All this is sufficiently hazy to be scientific, but it does not account for the American Indian. And, besides, how did the three different colored races—white, black and yellow—happen to spring from the same place?

Mr. Charles Hall, a member of the British parliament, is on his way to America to attend the maritime conference at Washington. In a farewell speech Mr. Hall said that for the first time in history England, the mistress of the seas, was sending a delegation to a maritime conference abroad. This fact showed the great importance of the matters to be discussed at the Washington conference. Mr. Hall might also have added that it showed the interdependency of nations on one another. Let us hope the conference will settle satisfactorily the Behring sea seal fishery question.

An Italian paper, The Diritto, has also something to say about the international American congress. One remark shows the uneasiness in Europe on its account, as follows: "The congress indicates the possibility of two dangers—the hegemony of the Anglo-Saxon race over the Latin race and a coalition of the American states against the products of Europe. It cannot be said that civilization has reached its highest outcome when the harmony and prosperity of one set of nations is considered to mean the injury of another set.

The costliest luxury in which a nation can indulge is one of the modern war ships. A century ago $300,000 was a good price for a warship. England's most formidable one, the Royal Georges, cost less than $350,000. Now an ordinary naval vessel costs a million and a half, while $4,312,970 was paid for the construction of the Trafalgar, of the British navy.

THE NAVASSA RIOTERS.

Arrival of the Surviving Whites at Philadelphia.

LISTEN TO THEIR TALES OF WOE.

Further Particulars of the Sanguinary Insurrection Among the Negro Laborers of the Island, Which Cost Five White Men Their Lives—A Thrilling Story.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—The British steamship Dorian, which has just arrived here from Kingston, Jamaica, brings six of the officers of the Navassa Phosphate company, who were recently attacked by negro laborers on the island of Navassa. They were taken off the island by the British man-of-war Forward and taken to Kingston, where they were transferred to the Dorian. Their names are: C. D. Smith, M. D.; C. W. Roby, F. A. Jones, H. M. Vail, John O'Connor and John Jacobson. They have with them three negroes who were friendly and who helped to save their lives. Mr. Roby was the first man attacked by the rioters, and he was terribly beaten. His recovery is due to his remarkably strong physique. Mr. Jones was nearly robbed to death.

A Hard Set of Laborers.

Dr. Smith says they had no warning of the outbreak. The 157 negroes employed in the phosphate mines were all shipped from Baltimore. Many of them were ship hands who had been arrested for desertion and other offenses, and instead of being put in jail were sent to Navassa by the United States shipping commissioner. They were a hard set, always up to mischief. Dr. Smith says:

"The building we took refuge in was a fierce shell, affording no protection, and the only reason we were not killed by the dynamite bombs is that the missiles fell on the piazza instead of under us. When we had a chance we made a rush.

Stabbed, Shot and Clubbed to Death.

"Some of us had been badly injured. As we ran the gauntlet we were hit by clubs, knives, clubs and revolvers. Thomas N. Foster, Joseph Fales and William T. Shea were struck down and butchered. Foster was the second man killed. The first one attacked a small house, where we hid for safety. Meanwhile the negroes pillaged the superintendent's house, where we had first taken refuge.

The Butchery of Mahon.

The shooting of James Mahon was one of the most bloodthirsty acts of the day. The negroes came to our hiding place and promised us safety from attack if we came to supper. We came out and found that some of the darkies were disposed to intercede for us. We marched along in Indian file, when one of the ringleaders, a negro named George S. Key stepped and fired a revolver within six inches of Mahon's face, the ball going through his cheek. As he fell the fiend Key struck him in the head. Mahon's back, which pierced his heart. With the smoke curling from the barrel of the weapon, Key then stepped up to Jones and said: "I settled him, didn't I?" Jones felt that his time had come, but if it had been the negro's intention to shoot Jones something caused him to hesitate, and the man's life was spared.

Gatling Guns as Pacemakers.

The English brig Urmorette was lying off the coast, but heavy storms were prevailing and we had no means of communicating with her. Finally, got a note to the captain, and he sailed to Jamaica and sent the British man-of-war to our assistance. When the vessel came to the island the negroes were all drunk and in the fight. The rest of them were still thirsting to finish the job by killing those of us who had survived. The captain of the Forward got his fighting force ready for service and threatened to shell the island unless every man of us was turned over to safety. We were taken on board the vessel and the negroes made a most humiliating exit of our lives since the previous Saturday, when the insurrection took place. As we ascended the steps up the side of the vessel the officers paid us the compliment of hanging the American flag over the side. We were treated royally by the officers of the man-of-war.

The Extent of His Injuries.

"They took us to Kingston where we were taken to a club house and entertained as if we were distinguished people and put safely aboard the steamer Dorian destined for this port. We have been treated like princes from the moment of our rescue by the English cruiser. There was only one sad accident to mar the joy of the occasion. On board the vessel one of the negroes who had had his head frightfully cut and bruised, died on the Forward on the way to Jamaica."

The arrival of Mr. Roby and Mr. Jones were in the same vein as that of Dr. Smith. The survivors left by rail for Baltimore, the headquarters of the Navassa Phosphate company.

A VERY DIFFERENT STORY.

Alleged Brutal Treatment of the Men by Captain Mahon.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 11.—The Jamaica Post of Oct. 1 publishes a full story of the recent riot on Navassa island. It has a statement of the facts, and a statement of the negroes which puts an entirely different face on the trouble. James Mahon, who was shot, frequently ill treated the men. After Superintendent Tipton's death Mahon put four or five men daily by placing them in stocks, handcuffing them and hanging them up by the hands. Davenport tells of Mahon's cruelty to a man who died in the hospital for twenty days. When the sick man was discharged from the hospital Mahon put him to work. The man was still ill and objected. Mahon then took him to the jail, where Jones tried him up. About half-past 11 the doctor let him down, but Mahon tried him up again and took away the keys of the handcuffs. But the handcuffs had been taken down again and had the handcuffs cut off.

Everybody Was Sick.

Dr. Smith was generally recognized by the men as superintendent, but in fact everybody was boss. Next morning Roby had a conflict with two men named Phillips and Robinson, and was knocked down and Robinson said to Smith, who claimed to be superintendent: "We want to see you with regard to the treatment of the man—the same as we treated Mahone. We are American citizens and not slaves." Smith made the men go their quarters at the point of a gun. Half an hour later all the men got and their revolvers and guns in their hands. They called on the men to come up. Jones was foremost, and the men filed out and commenced to fire, and they were called off man by man.

The Shooting of Phillips.

Dr. Smith was the officers' spokesman, and he and they had cocked revolvers and guns. As each man filed past he was asked:

"Are you willing to work?"

"Yes."

"Then pass on." When James Phillips came along he said: "Yes, if I am properly treated." Mr. Jones immediately shot Phillips through the jaw. The rest also fired. Davenport's story of the remainder of the fight is practically the same as that of the officers. In conclusion he says:

When the Prisoners Were.

"After the officers' surrender three of them were murdered. Foster was killed by Henry Jones, and Malone and Fales were also shot. But I did not see it. I think I would have gone hand with the remainder had not Henson and I stood guard over them. They got proper treatment, but because of this action of ours and the feeling of dislike which it took to us in consequence, we thought it best to come away from the island, knowing we would not be sure of our lives if we remained."

Reardon practically admits that he had made an error in handling the ship.

There was much excitement and alarm on board when the accident occurred, especially among the steerage passengers. Many of the latter made threats against the pilot, but they were quickly put down by the officers. The passengers of the steamer were all brought to the city by boats sent down for that purpose.

I TOLD YOU SO.

If you marry an angel she cannot make pies,
And after the honeymoon, O,
And shortage a failure with all it implies—
Remember my telling you so.

If you try to outshine your neighbors in style,
And live on the money you owe,
And sail in the poorhouse soon after awhile—
Remember my telling you so.

If by blowing and bragging you try to impress
The world with your consequence, O,
And show you are nothing—or possibly less—
Remember my telling you so.

If you think or maybe imagine you're wise
And posess all of things you don't know,
And guess you've the fool that you cannot disguise
Remember my telling you so.

If you're late business unless the cash
You mean the same properly go,
And after a struggle, shut up with a smash—
Remember my telling you so.

If you try to be happy without being good,
And live a life that is slow,
And find all your joys become gall and wormwood
Remember my telling you so.

If you try to be healthy by swallowing pills,
And natural ways overthrow,
And find you've a victim of aches and of ills—
Remember my telling you so.

If you try to make love to a sweet little miss
Who doesn't reciprocate, O,
And find you are left when you ask for a kiss,
Remember my telling you so.

So-so,
Remember my telling you so.
—H. C. Dodge in Detroit Free Press.

A Game of Croquet.

"Whose turn is it?"
"Maude's."
"No it isn't."
"Yes it is—Jamie played last."
"I thought I came after the blue, and"—
"That was a splendid hit, Maud."
"New play for Fred's ball, and knock him away from me, and"—
"No, don't! Play for the side wicket, you can go right through it."
"If I were you, Maude, I'd—ha, ha!—you missed it."
"Isn't it provoking?"
"Ha, ha, ha! See where Charlie has sent Fred's ball!"
"Good for you, Charlie! Now send Jamie's ball far as you can."
"Oh, you mean old thing, you!"
"Now go through these two wickets—there! that's splendid!"
"Whose turn is it now?"
"Jamie's."
"No—yours."
"Oh, so it is! What am I thinking about! Fisher! Isn't it provoking to just miss a wicket like that!"
"Isn't it, though?"
"Now, Fred, don't you fail to hit the post, for the world!"
"Ha! ha! ha! He missed it!"
"Goody! Goody! We'll beat 'em yet, Maude!"
"May be you will, sir!" "Oh! Charley, that was a lovely stroke! Now do make both of those wickets—bravo! Now keep right on—Oh! dear! dear! I'm so sorry you missed it!"
"Now, Jamie, play for dear life—Oh! that's too bad!"
"Good!"
"Ha! ha! ha!"
"We've beat! We've beat! hurrah!"
"Ha! ha! ha!"
"Splendid!"—Drake's Magazine.

Fly Old Chap.

Mr. Rich Oldboy (to his beautiful young wife just after the wedding breakfast)—Now, my dear, as I have said nothing hitherto in regard to where we should spend the honeymoon I may say now that I am in favor of a trip to Paris.

Mrs. Rich Oldboy clasping her hands ecstatically—Oh! that will be just delightful.

Mr. R. O.—Yes, and you see by doing so I can kill two birds with one stone.

Mrs. R. O. (aghast)—Kill two birds!

Mr. R. O.—Why, you see, we can spend the honeymoon there and I will be right on the spot to get myself dosed with Dr. Brown-Sequard's life elixir. Big idea, ain't it?

Mrs. R. O. (after a pause)—I don't think, after consideration, that I would care to go to Paris. Let's go to the White Mountains.—Boston Courier.

THE MONUMENT TO GRANT.

MANY DESIGNS SUBMITTED AND A DATE SET AT LAST.

The Next Five Designs and the Prizes Paid Therefor—The Monument to Be a Modification of the Best Design—The Corner Stone to Be Laid in 1892.

When the Grant Monument association, some two years ago, asked for designs to be submitted it imposed some rather hard conditions. It was required that the design should be "purely original," which was explained to mean that they should portray monuments representing as little as possible any monument now standing. Also, that each design should provide for a mausoleum, or a sarcophagus, and a hall and an observatory to be reached by an elevator. And, finally, that the monument should not cost in excess of $300,000, and that each designer should fix specifically to show the cost of the monument he proposed.

It is scarcely necessary to add that designs have been slow in coming in, but the committee has a report to make at last. The main committee named as a sub-committee of experts Messrs. N. De Brun, James Renwick, Professor W. H. Ware, of Columbia college, James E. Ware, George B. Post, and Professor S. Wolf, of the New York college. They were to select the best five out of the designs submitted, and for these prizes were to be paid of $1,500, $1,000, $500, $400 and $300 respectively. Of course the usual provision was made for sealed and numbered envelopes, that the experts might not know the designer in any case. The expert committee, working without pay, has had a long and rather laborious task in selecting the best five designs, and does not seem any too well pleased with the "catch."

There were sixty-six designs submitted, each with a motto, and the one selected for the first prize bears the simple motto "1822," the year of Grant's birth. The design is for a monument 215 feet high and 125 feet square at the base, the summit crowned with an immense funereal urn, and the estimated cost is $470,000. The second prize is awarded to the design bearing the motto "Let Us Have Peace." Its dimensions are almost the same as those of the first described. Both these are extremely ornate at the base, and are open to the criticism that the great extension below may detract somewhat from the effect of the upper column. Against this it is urged that the monument will stand on such a height above the Hudson that specific allowance must be made for that in calculating the general effect.

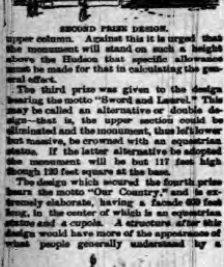
The third prize was given to the design bearing the motto "Sword and Laurel." This may be called an elaboration or double design—that is, the upper section could be eliminated and the monument, thus left lower but massive, be crowned with an equestrian statue. If the latter alternative is adopted the monument will be but 117 feet high though 120 feet square at the base.

The design which secured the fourth prize bears the motto "Our Country," and is extremely elaborate, having a facade 600 feet long, in the center of which is an equestrian statue and a cupola. A structure after this design would have more of the appearance of what people generally understand by a



THIRD PRIZE DESIGN.

"mausoleum" or massive tomb—using those words in the popular and not the scientific sense. The committee awarded the prize for the general beauty of the design, but declared against the extended facade, retaining only the central monument, as the whole bore a rather close resemblance to the tomb of Victor Emmanuel in Milan.

The design which received the fifth prize is more like what people generally understand by a monument, its height and extreme simplicity making it very imposing. It provides for a monument 100 feet square at the base, and above that a perfectly plain, quadrangular shaft rising to a height of 225 feet and surmounted by the bronze of Grant and attendant figures. It is probable, however, that the monument will follow generally the design which secured the first prize, and the chances are that all he to follow: The vault, or mausoleum, will be below ground; above this the central hall, then the sarcophagus, and the memorial hall above all.

The committee also announce that they expect to have all things ready for laying the corner stone during the World's fair in 1892. They certainly do not intend to be hurried, or to give out their plans any earlier than is necessary. Meanwhile the public impatience has found vent in suggestions for giving the remains of the great commander a final resting place at Washington. To this end, and a movement has been inaugurated looking to the action by the Grand Army of the Republic, as an organization, towards erecting the monument. Now that active progress is reported, and a date set, it is probable public impatience will subside.

As might have been expected, the report of the committee at once renewed the old discussion as to the proper burial place of Gen. Grant. There seemed to be special reasons why West Point or Washington city should be chosen. Galena as his last residence before he became president had some claims, and St. Louis as his residence early in his military career asserted that Chicago also claimed a right to succeed to the claims of Galena if the latter should be thought too small a place. All these cities urged their claims on ground—that it was probably the desire of Gen. Grant, and certainly that of his family, that his remains should lie in New York, and that the great city should lead in erecting his monument.

Nevertheless, many other places have instead to honor his memory in marble, and as they have only come done on the criticism of New York's "unaccountable slowness" has increased. On the 14th of last month, at Leavenworth, Kan., a noble statue of the great leader was unveiled under the direction of Gen. Wesley Merritt, and in the presence of many thousand people, representing all sections of the country. The statue is of bronze, nine feet in height, and standing on a granite block five feet square, which in turn rests upon a base seven feet square.

In the north and south sides of the pedestal beautiful bas reliefs are inserted. One presents the general on horseback at the battle of the Wilderness, overlooking the scene of carnage. The statue represents him as he stood in his military cloak, order book in hand, just before writing the noted order to Sherman, of May 4, 1864. On one side is a beautiful inscription concerning the donors and objects of the monument.

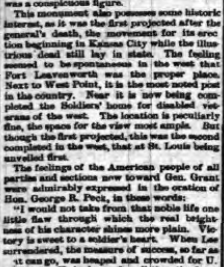
Many other places have erected fitting memorials, but this at Leavenworth is of special interest because the location is that of the principal military post of the country, and because of the eminent men, Federal and Confederate soldiers, who took part in the ceremonies. Lovelo Pafi, who designed the statue, is a peculiar case, a young countryman of the hero, as he was born April 29, 1860, in Elmwood, Ills. Addresses were made by Gen. Merritt, Gen. Charles W. Blair, Senator Ingalls and Hon. George R. Peck, and the occasion was honored by the presence of Governor Marmaduke, of Missouri, with his staff, the mayor and officials of Kansas City, and many eminent men of Kansas and adjacent states. Gen. McCook, of the post, was a conspicuous figure.

This monument also possesses some historic interest, as it was the first projected after the general's death, the movement for its erection beginning in Kansas City while the illustrious soldier was still in state. The feeling seemed to be spontaneous in the west that Fort Leavenworth was the proper place. Next to West Point, it is the most noted post in the country. Now it is the only one completed the Soldiers' home for disabled veterans of the west. The location is peculiarly fine, the spot selected for the monument being the first projected, this was the second completed in the west, that at St. Louis being unveiled first.

The feelings of the American people of all parties and sections now to ward Gen. Grant were admirably expressed in the oration of Hon. George R. Peck, in these words:

"I would not take from that noble life one little flaw through which the real brightness of his character shines more plain. Victory is sweet to a soldier's heart. When foe surrendered, the measure of success, so far as it can go, was heaped and crowded for U. S. Grant. He had won for all time the fame of a great general. But he won something more than a great general when that hundreds the weary soldiers he led fought so long back to their farms and cotton fields, and built up the broken fortunes in the peace had won for them and for us all. It was an act such as poets love.

"When they sing of Arthur and the table round, or of Sir Fabled Cid, whose gentle hand heaved up the wounds his own right arm had made. Whether it meant to others, to Grant Appomattox meant only peace. He saw blossoms from the famous apple tree dropped into the old commander's heart and filled it with the sweetness of the spring. But why dwell on these things? The great leader is at rest. How widely diffused have been his acts and his example. In quiet value, in thronging cities and on the battlefield the uttermost land men speak of Grant and find in his very name omens of security and peace.



FIFTH PRIZE DESIGN.

The armies he led—vanishing now with the vanishing years—share his fame. This statue and all the monuments a grateful people shall build to him will be but every day heroism of the common soldier."

BEETHOVEN'S MEMORIAL.

THE HOUSE WHERE HE WAS BORN TO BE RENEWED AS A SHRINE.

He Lived a Sorrowful Life, but Has Monuments in Many Places—His Father's Tyranny—His Disappointment, Sickness, Deafness and Death—His Genius.

Beethoven's birthplace is to be restored to its original condition—that is, if the designs of the municipal council of Bonn are followed. He was born in a quaint, tall and narrow old house in Bonnestrasse, a quarter of Bonn on the Rhine, and a committee of citizens of that place have sent appeals to its admirers throughout the world to contribute toward a complete restoration of the old house. To this end a concert will be held in Stelnway hall, New York city, in December, and others in other cities of the United States. It is planned to make the old house a sort of monument to the great musician and a museum of objects connected with his life or various renditions of his music. The society organized for the purpose comprises many eminent Germans, Prince Bismarck and Count Von Moltke being members.

Beethoven's life was a full one, interwals except, almost incredibly so, which may perhaps partially account for the depth and mournful intensity of much of his music. A believer in blind fate would say he was doomed from his birth, for whatever he succeeded in escaping from some intolerable evil he soon fell under another affliction, which in turn became intolerable; and a singular feature of the case was that each affliction came just at that era in his life when it could produce the greatest disappointment. At the age when free and manly spirits are a law imperative needs, he was deprived of both and cruelly overworked; when he was to have gone away to complete his studies, his mother's poverty compelled him to a drudgery he hated, and finally, when a career was open to him, ill health made him miserable, and when he had succeeded at last in producing a great work, deafness deprived him of all capacity of enjoyment.

His family was originally Belgian, and the name is supposed to have been derived from "beet," a root, and "hof," a garden. In Holland one "Besthof," or, in other words, one of the old family of "root gardeners," left his native village near Louvain and located in Antwerp, lived till his noted grandson was old enough to remember him, and was always regarded by the latter as the founder of the family.

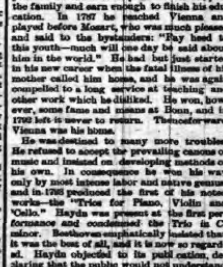
His grandson Johann made a failure early in life and became a drunkard; his wife was a lady of high character and long kept the family in sort of respectable condition. Their son, Ludwig Van Beethoven, was born in the old house in the Bonnestrasse, Dec. 17, 1770. As long as the good old grandfather lived the family did not want and the boy's musical ability was allowed to develop in a natural and boyish way. But when the older Beethoven died, Johann became possessed with the idea that his son was to be a "musical prodigy"—the young maestro had lately astonished the world—and at the age of five Ludwig was driven by threats and punishment to cruel tasks. It is reported that when the father came home at midnight from his place in the theatrical orchestra, he sometimes took the little fellow from his bed and made him toll over the piano till daylight. In short he had apparently developed the child's spontaneous love of music when other persons got control and after a real Ludwig's talent revived.

At the age of 13 he published three sonatas, and soon after obtained a place in the elector's choir; then the elector died, the choir was dissolved, and Ludwig had to toil for years as a teacher to help his mother support the family and earn enough to finish his education. In 1787 he reached Vienna and played before Mozart, who was much pleased and said to the bystanders: "Pay heed to this youth—much will one day be said about him in the world." He had but just started in his new career when the illness of his mother called him home, and he was again compelled to a long service at teaching and other work which he disliked. He won, however, great fame and a position, and in 1792 left it never to return. Thenceforward Vienna was his home.

He was destined to many more troubles. He refused to accept the prevailing canons of music and insisted on developing methods of his own. In consequence he won his way only by most tedious labor and native genius, and in 1795 produced the first of his noted works—the "Trios for Piano, Violin and Cello." Haydn was present at the first performance and considered the Trio in C minor. Beethoven emphatically insisted that it was the best of all, and it is now so regarded. Haydn objected to its full cation, declaring that the public would not understand it; Beethoven vehemently declared that if it was not published the others should not be, so they remained unpublished for years.



BEETHOVEN'S HOMEPLACE.

Thereafter his triumphs were rapid. He was a favorite in the most cultured society and appeared very happy, when suddenly his digestion failed. For three years he suffered a distressing "roaring in the head," and finally, in 1801-2 the presiding genius mingled and composers became perfectly deaf! Of all possible afflictions the worst had come. While vast audiences were thrilled by his music he could not hear the loudest note. He wrote of it:

"If I had not somehow read that nine years of my own free will depart this life I should long ere this have been no more, and that through my own act."

He had recovered a measure of cheerfulness when his brother came to trouble him, and soon succeeded in alienating his friends. He fell in love, and became excessively anxious to have its bearing restored that he might wed, so free physicians tortured him terribly with blisters and other applications. His health again broke down and he longed for death. He loved a lady of rank for above his own, and she apparently cruelly disappointed. All this time Germany was constantly in agitation, often in the turmoil of war and painfully humiliated till Bonaparte was overthrown, and then the great musician had a year or two of peace. Then the widow of his brother caused him to be involved in a tedious lawsuit, and her licentious conduct sunk him to the very depths of abasement. Yet during these stormy years his great symphonies and other immortal works were composed. His final sickness was long and his sufferings terrible, and there is only some reason to believe that he was sadly neglected. He died March 26, 1827, and it remained for an American, Alexander W. Thayer, to collect all the facts of the brief but complete life of the great Beethoven.

ALL ABOUT NAVASSA.

The Island in the Sea Which Was Lately the Scene of Race Riots.

When the intelligence was flashed over the continent, late in September, that the blacks of Navassa had risen in insurrection and murdered four Americans, there was a general inquiry as to the place, and many learned with surprise that there still some islands in the West Indies not ruled by any one in particular. Indeed, there are a few rocky points over which no nation has ever formally assumed jurisdiction. Navassa possesses a history in Hayti, but the Haytien government long since abandoned all pretense of government there, having conceded all property rights in the island to the Navassa Phosphate company, of 23 South street, Baltimore, and 19 Cliff street, New York.

The island lies just off the extreme westward point of Hayti and has no value whatever, except for a guano deposit about a mile square. The workers in this deposit, a few fishermen, the clerks and agents of the company and those who minister in various ways to the spiritual or bodily needs of the others, form a population of about 300, their support depending entirely on the works of the fertilizer company. The workers are Haytian negroes, and they have lately been joined by many exiles from Port au Prince, transients and malcontents generally. The basis principle of Hayti is is that "a white man has no rights that a Haytian is bound to respect," and as the agents of the company differed from the employes in color, language and religion it is easy to see how, when a dispute arose about work hours and wages, it soon ran into a "race fight."

The underlying trouble is admirably set forth by Froude in his late account of his travels among the blacks. No American or European can be said to own property in Hayti, and are as little liked as we (English) are, but they are feared, and they do not allow any business of a sort our kind to go on in those waters without knowing what it is about. Hayti is the most ridiculous caricature of civilization in the whole world. Doubtless the whites are not distinguished for virtue, for they are treated as they once treated the blacks. They can own no freehold property, and exist only on sufferance. They are called "white trash." Black dukes and marquises drive over them on the street and swear at them, and they consider it an invasion of the natural order of things. No one can tell the future fate of the black republic, but the present order of things cannot last in an island so close under the American shores. If the Americans forbear they other power to interfere they will have to interfere themselves."

President of the Bankers' Association.

Charles Parsons, of St. Louis, who was recently re-elected president of the American Bankers' association at the convention held at Kansas City, is a New Yorker by birth. He was born in Homer, Cortland county, N. Y., in 1833, his parents emigrating to Ill. 40 years of age, retains all the vigor of body and mind of earlier days. His father was Lewis B. Parsons, of Buffalo, N. Y., the founder of Parsons college at Fairfield, Ia. He is in every sense a self made man. He began his business life as clerk in the Bank of Attica, Buffalo, but after a few years moved to Cincinnati, where he began business as a private banker, remaining there until the war broke out. He entered the army and served for three years as an officer, being in charge of the river and railway transportation of troops and stores between Galena and the south. He entered in 1866 the State Savings association of St. Louis, which afterwards became the State Bank of St. Louis, and of which he is now president. Mr. Parsons is a man of medium height, has iron gray hair, and his body and mustache are perfectly white. He has a clear, although not very strong, voice, and makes an excellent presiding officer.

—The following from the scientific American indicates a rather bad outlook for the beer drinkers: It is our observation that beer drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers. Inside testify, a stupor succeeding almost to paralyses arrest the reason, changing all the higher faculties into a mere animalism, sensual, selfish, sluggish, varied only with paroxysms of anger, senseless and brutal.

—The church members of the United States are divided among the churches as follows: Roman Catholics, 7,900,400; Methodists, 4,800,000; Baptists, 4,100,000; Presbyterians, 1,300,000; Lutherans, 1,400 000; Congregationalists, 500,000, and Christian Scientists, 10,000. Dr. H. K. Carroll, the editor of the religious census, says: "The Catholics count the children of a family as members who have been baptized in the faith. the Protestants only those of mature years actually admitted to full membership. This is also the number upon which the Catholics base their estimate. In many cases it is much larger than it actually is."

—The Sanitary News, a standard work on sanitary subjects says: "Authorities in many localities state as a fact that cases of typhoid fever is found in polluted drinking water, and that wells are most often the source of such water. This has caused some investigation, and the analysis of well water shows that when it is found in the city or town, it may, and often does, contain typhoid fever germs. The well draws the surface water for some distance around it, and it has been frequently shown that the filtration of water through the earth does not purify it of the poisons germs it contains."

A DISASTROUS RUNAWAY.

Two Men Injured and a Wagon Badly Smashed.

At about seven o'clock last evening Messrs. John Bonner and Alonzo Ayers, were returning from Round Brook in a buggy, when opposite the "eight row of houses" between South city and Dunellen Mr. Bonner's carriage collided with a heavy farm wagon. The force of the collision threw both men out.

Mr. Bonner was so severely injured that he is to-day confined to the house and under a physicians care. Mr. Ayers escaped with slight injuries.

The horses broke loose from the wagon and ran at a break-neck speed through the city to Scotch Plains, where it wound up by jumping through a window in barber Bounds' shop and smashed things in general.

The injured man were brought to this city in another wagon.

The horse was badly cut and the wagon wrecked.

It is a most important message for girls, as it presents the social life of girlhood, its graces and perils, and responsibility of marriage and motherhood, in a most sympathetic, delicate, and reverential manner. It should be read by every girl in the land. Price by mail, 20 cents a dozen, $1.00 a hundred. Address The Philanthropic, P. O. Box 2324, New York.

—The following from the scientific American indicates a rather bad outlook for the beer drinkers: It is our observation that beer drinking in this country produces the very lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers. Inside testify, a stupor succeeding almost to paralyses arrest the reason, changing all the higher faculties into a mere animalism, sensual, selfish, sluggish, varied only with paroxysms of anger, senseless and brutal.

—The church members of the United States are divided among the churches as follows: Roman Catholics, 7,900,400; Methodists, 4,800,000; Baptists, 4,100,000; Presbyterians, 1,300,000; Lutherans, 1,400 000; Congregationalists, 500,000, and Christian Scientists, 10,000. Dr. H. K. Carroll, the editor of the religious census, says: "The Catholics count the children of a family as members who have been baptized in the faith. the Protestants only those of mature years actually admitted to full membership. This is also the number upon which the Catholics base their estimate. In many cases it is much larger than it actually is."

—The Sanitary News, a standard work on sanitary subjects says: "Authorities in many localities state as a fact that cases of typhoid fever is found in polluted drinking water, and that wells are most often the source of such water. This has caused some investigation, and the analysis of well water shows that when it is found in the city or town, it may, and often does, contain typhoid fever germs. The well draws the surface water for some distance around it, and it has been frequently shown that the filtration of water through the earth does not purify it of the poisons germs it contains."

FRENCH DAM QUESTION.

A HEARING BEFORE THE VICE CHANCELLOR YESTERDAY.

Mr. Charles Hyde's Application for an Injunction Against Mr. F. P. French Denied.—Mr. French Can Now Build His Dam.

Last June Mr. Chas. Hyde filed a bill in Chancery seeking to compel Mr. F. M. French to reduce the height of his mill dam eight and a half inches, claiming that it had been unlawfully raised that much when rebuilt, after the freshet of 1882. During the freshet of July 30th, 1889, the dam broke again, and Mr. French began rebuilding it. Mr. Hyde applied to the Chancellor for an injunction, and an order was made that Mr. French show cause before the Chancellor why an injunction should not be granted, and that in the meantime he should not raise his dam to within eight and a half inches of its former height. The question whether or not the injunction should issue was argued before Vice Chancellor Bird on Tuesday last. Mr. Craig A. Peck, counsel for Mr. Hyde, presented affidavits of Mr. Hyde and others, stating that the dam was too high and had been raised eight and a half inches in 1882. Mr. Charles A. Reed, counsel for Mr. French, presented counter affidavits, stating that the dam was not raised in 1882, nor at any other time, but that the dam was lower in 1882 than it had been before that time. Yesterday the court decided that Mr. Hyde is not entitled to an injunction, and dissolved the restraining order, and discharged the rule to show cause, with costs to be paid by Mr. Hyde. Mr. French is therefore at liberty to rebuild his dam to its old height.

A Thrilling Incident.

During the exhibition of the Battle of Gettysburg, at Rink, a lady present was very much affected. She gazed with more than usual interest upon each great scene of the fight, and was noticed to be wrapped up in the realism of the struggle. From time to time tears would steal down her cheeks, and when the grand tableau of Little Round Top burst upon the view she could control herself no longer, but covered her face and wept and sobbed piteously. No doubt that she had lost relatives in the war in fight. The vast audience was much moved, and seemed to sympathize with her deeply. Gen. Mulholland will exhibit the above battle at Music Hall Wednesday afternoon and evening, Oct 16th.

State School Law.

A new edition of the State School law, revised and enlarged, will soon be issued. About twelve pages have been added, consisting of new laws, and the index has been made much more comprehensible. A new section forbids the marking of the pages in the time when each particular law was passed and the place where it can be found in full. This work has all been done by J. Brognard Bevis, head clerk in the office of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Mr. Bevis, Mr. Reed, his assistant labor, watched the reports of the higher courts, and in fact notes their results for all opinions bearing upon the laws.—True American.

Elizabeth Wins the Suit.

Two years ago Dr. Schleimer, member of council from the Fifth ward, succeeded in passing a resolution looking to the recovery of a debt, owned by the city of Elizabeth that the Central railroad company had squatted upon many years ago. It was through Dr. Schleimer's persistence that a suit for the ejectment of the railroad company was gotten in the courts. The case was brought up in court last week, and yesterday morning it was given to the jury. It retired, but almost immediately returned, bringing a verdict for the city.

It is thought the railroad company will appeal the case.

A Smashup at Elizabeth.

Engine 31, Engineer Charles Moore, was backing across Broad street, Elizabeth, at half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon, a coaler coal car run off the switch opposite the superintendent's office, colliding with other cars to do it damage. No one was injured, although a number of cars were derailed. The tracks were also injur d. Travel was delayed two or more hours. Fortunately no one was injured, although a gentleman had a narrow escape. He saved himself. A wrecking train cleared the tracks.

The Goose Bone Forecast.

Henry Stillman, of Woodstock, Conn., Windham county's weather prophet, has made his annual forecast of winter by a goose bone. He says that the bone shows clearly that we will have an open winter. Mr. Stillman says he has read the bone closely, and finds that it indicates more regular weather than last year and not as severe as even the last mild winter. There will not be many days during which running water will freeze. The coldest weather will occur during the latter half of January, and during that time there will be several days of freezing. Near the point of the bone is a marked discoloration, showing that the first days of winter will give proof of the season's change. Christmas will be "green," but wet and cold. January 1st to 15th will be marked with warm days, growing gradually colder. The coldest day of winter will be January 27. The brief spell of severe weather will be succeeded by heavy thaws, and the traditional January thaw will come in February. The month will be a disagreeable one, with heavy snows and rains. An early and decided thaw is among the promises of the bone. February will burst into March with swollen mountain streams, and disastrous floods may be looked for. There will be an early Spring.

The Third Party Opposed.

D. L. Moody, the great evangelist, in an interview on the prohibition question, said: "I believe in prohibition, but not in the third party. I also believe that there is no use in having a law until there is public sentiment that will ensure an enforcement of it. If I could enact a prohibition law in Illinois tomorrow by turning over my hand I would not turn it over, because I don't believe the State is ripe for it."

"Why don't you help to create some of that sentiment?"

"I do. Don't I have Francis Murphy here with me?"

"Is he in favor of prohibition?"

"Well, I have John G. Worley, too, and he has just returned from canvassing for Dakota for prohibition."

"D; you think the law against murder is pretty well enforced in Illinois?"

"Never mind about that. A Prohibition law couldn't be enforced."

A Nutting Party.

Yesterday afternoon a half holiday was given to the pupils of St. Mary's school, and at 1:30 p. m., they, in company with Rev. Father Smyth and the fathers wended their way to the woods for an afternoon's frolic. The sport ended, they returned to their respective homes about 5 p. m.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Suggested New Street from the Depot to Rollers Park Avenue.

To The Editor of The News:—In reply to your "Straight Street" advocate, I would say briefly:

First—Peace street is about as "straight," as a rainbow East of the railroad.

Second—Nobody wants to go "straight" from Mount Hills to the mountains.

Third—I am not a property-owner in the vicinity of the new avenue proposed, nor do I care a bo ks.

Fourth—Making Peace street wider will not relieve Park avenue. Peace street is out of the way, or it would be used now, and Mr. Love has planted his new store as an obstacle.

Fifth—The cost of the new avenue would be insignificant compared with the value of results direct and indirect to our city.

The new avenue ought to be opened in Front street without delay while it can be done at least cost and be extended "straight" through North Plainfield to the mountains as soon as possible. It would at once be the popular approach to the railroad station from the North side and relieve Park avenue effectually.

The proposed railway cars ought to run through this avenue and land passengers directly at the station, instead of on Peace street, a block distant.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey ought to be petitioned to remove the unsightly freight sheds and tracks in the rear, and to substitute for them a neat and comfortable open passenger station, with a handsome lawn and driveway between it and Fourth street, and the whole to open and light by the run of from Fourth street, directly up alongside the station, enabling South side residents to also reach the cars, quickly and easily, without unnecessary exposure in stormy weather. A back street would be conveniently arranged on that side also. It is ridiculous that South side residents are compelled to go around "Robin Hood's Barn," in reaching or leaving the railroad station, thus causing a daily loss of time to hundreds.

The Plainfield station is now a dirty, dangerous, unsightly place, disagreeable to residents and uninviting to strangers in its surroundings. If the freight shed and tracks are removed to some more appropriate location, and a pretty passenger house be built as suggested, with handsome surroundings and the electric cars conveniently, our station can be easily made one of the most beautiful and convenient to be seen anywhere, giving daily comfort and pleasure to thousands, besides adding incalculably to the attractiveness of our city, and, therefore, to the value of property. The Central Railroad of New Jersey thrives upon our prosperity and growth, and cannot refuse to grant a petition to thus remove what has become a nuisance, obstructing the convenience of our people and reserving or suppressing the development of Fourth and Fifth streets, between Peace street and Park avenue.

The copper trust collapsed last spring; the Liverpool cotton trust has followed suit. Given rope and time and the greatest trust will destroy itself at last, apparently. The two most flourishing organizations of this kind in America are now the cotton seed oil trust and the sugar trust.

The American Economist, high tariff, thinks it is probably true that the day for the manufacture of the lower grades of iron work in the eastern states has passed. These have already gone to the south and west, in The Economist's judgment, so that even free iron ore, coal and coke will not save them to the eastern states.

A Frenchman, Monsieur Hirn, writes to prove that what seems empty space in the universe is not filled with ponderable matter, even in the shape of the thinnest gas. If it were so, then, so rapidly do the planets move, that the accumulation of ponderable matter in their forward path would knock them all out of time, cause them to wobble in their orbits and strip them of their atmosphere if, like the earth, they had one.

A Clear Head.

It is worthy of note that the two principal labor leaders in Europe and America—Burns in England and Powderly in the United States—are advocates of temperance. Burns neither drinks nor smokes. He is a member of the London county council. He is a trained athlete and a leading cricketer. His physical health and clear head enabled him to bear up under the fearful strain of a month's strike and conduct a hundred thousand men to victory.

One of the most distinguished journalists in America said not long since that when he started in his profession he began, as many others did, by taking free quent alcoholic drinks and ale and beer with his luncheon.

"I had laid out a great deal of work for myself in my life," he said. "I soon found that if I accomplished it I must give up this drinking, and I did so. The other boys, those who started with me, and kept up the drinking habit, are now nearly all dead or broken down."

This is the testimony of one who, though middle aged, probably can still do more writing in an hour and think to it more hours than any other journalist living.

It is indeed the universal testimony that he who rises from the ranks, whether in a trade or profession, is the man who keeps his head clear and his nerves steady and strong by temperance. If at the same time he can manage to keep a sunny temper, his chances for success are doubled.

An International Episode.

It was nothing less than an outrage, the indignity put upon a highly respectable American family man by Bismarck's burly minions in Germany.

Mr. Howard Douglas, of Cincinnati, is one of the mildest mannered of men. He has been president of the Cincinnati board of education for several terms. Thus it will be seen that he was permeated through and through with respectability. In all the queer things that have been done in Cincinnati and elsewhere in the state of Ohio, Mr. Douglas had no hand. He is a man of peace.

This summer he made the tour of Europe with his wife. His face ought to have insured his safety anywhere, for Mr. Douglas is a very good looking man. Besides, he had a letter from Secretary Blaine.

But in Germany this first class citizen was not saved by all these favorable circumstances. Nothing saved him. He was arrested as a Nihilist and thrown into a bastile. He had in his trunk a parcel containing asthma medicine. The German minions pounced upon this as an eagle swoops upon a lamb in the old school readers. They felt it, they smelt it. Dynamite! The perspiration stood in drops on their Teutonic brows, and their Teutonic hair stood on end. Tremblingly they hurried the American school board president before their superior. He showed his letters, he begged and explained in the choicest Cincinnati vernacular.

No go. At least, it was not for a good while. The insidious asthma medicine to a chemist sent must be, and itself officially analyzed let he must, the German interpreter told Mr. Douglas. A powerful guard with outstanding eyes was then stationed around the respectable American. Not till his asthma medicine was boiled, bubbled, burnt, steeped, precipitated and winnowed by a group of spectacled German chemists was he allowed to go. German men of science do not hurry.

But this is not the last of the outrages to which he was subjected. In Belgium the customs officials arrested his dress suit and confiscated it. Whether there is anything suspicious in the appendages of a dress suit made in Cincinnati the dispatches do not say. But certain it is that the Belgian customs officials give the richer by an Ohio man's evening dress. Perhaps, like George Washington's drab coat and breeches, it will adorn at last some museum of history.

IN SIGHT OF THOUSANDS.

The Horrible Death of Lineman John Feeks.

NOT ONE DARED TO ASSIST HIM.

Imprisoned by Electric Light Wires, Feeks Was Slowly Cremated While a Host of Horror Stricken Spectators Stood Helplessly By.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—A frightful accident occurred at the corner of Chambers and Center streets at 1:10 p. m. which from the horror the blood of thousands of eye witnesses. John R. H. Feeks, a lineman of the Western Union, climbed a telegraph pole to cut a dead wire. He was surrounded by a perfect network of wires, and began his work with the utmost deliberation. He had already severed the wire he intended to cut. It was fastened to the extreme end of the cross-bar, and he had severed it several feet away from where he was hanging. He was forced to reach out and catch the wire in his right hand, clinging meanwhile to the crossbar with his left leg and left arm. The wire slipped in between the middle finger and the ring finger. There was quite a current also passing, a shiver though every fibre as though the man was about to spring straight out into the air, and a cry went up from the little group on the corner. And then there was enacted, before the like of which no man in this city has ever seen before; whose awful horror will be burned and stamped into the memories of all who saw it for many years to come.

Roasting to Death.

When the man with that first movement sought to fly from the mysterious and deadly current which was passing through his frame, his head was instinctively raised. There were two wires running parallel to him and just above him. When he threw his head back the wires closed in upon him. One of them fastened itself under his chin and the other was pressed against his mouth. A tiny blue flame like that which a candle emits when the wick is low has been forced to the socket hovered about the right hand of the man. It was followed by a puff of smoke. There was the same tiny blue flame hovering for a moment about the left foot, also followed by a puff of smoke. The man was roasting to death.

A Sea of Faces Upturned.

It seemed an hour to the crowd. The corner group was but in a sea of faces, all turned in horror to where the ghastly tragedy was being enacted. Thousands blockaded Chambers street from Broadway for a block beyond Center street. Thousands hung with white faces upon the approach to the Brooklyn bridge. Still other thousands blocked all traffic on Center street. From all the side streets within view there poured out other faces—thousands upon thousands.

Forty-five Awful Minutes.

It all looked like a nightmare, grisly, horrible, ghastly and William Feeks, hanging in mid air, lay the smoking body. The untold agony of the face you might see even from the street below, looking straight ahead with eyes which saw nothing. The right form with the burning hand, like a torch, the outlines never moving. Some men cried out. The horror was more than they could bear. Every few minutes a policeman or fireman would fiinss shifting along the body and always followed by the smoke, which told the hushed thousands the dreadful thing which was going on under the electric light.

There was time enough for all to get a good view, for the man lay there with that awful look of utter agony on his face slowly burning within that horrible cage of hot wires for forty-five minutes, while every detail was watched by countless thousands of his fellow men.

A Plucky Rescuer.

How slowly the minutes crept by! At last J. W. Darrow, of the New York Electric Light company, accompanied by John Cunningham and William Mehrtens, arrived. Darrow's hands were covered with rubber gloves. Across his arm was thrown a long, new manilla rope. He started up the ladder, pole as a piece of paper, and his hands shook so that he could hardly hold to the rungs as he ascended. He gave one look at the grisly object hanging with arms spread between him and the sky, and then he wisely concluded to look no more. He went on with his work, however, with a dogged bravery which was greeted with a murmur of applause from the lips of the thousands of men below.

"Beyond All Hope."

When he had carefully balanced himself against the pole Darrow slowly unwound the rope and made a noose in one end of it. This noose he fastened about the body and drawing it out, he threw the line over the cross bar so that it trailed on the pavement below.

"Is he alive?" called some one.

Darrow shook his head. "He is dead, and beyond all hope," he called back.

Darrow cut the live wire which had been burning all this time into the poor fellow's right hand. Then the two wires which were eating their way into his face and neck were cut. The red hot irons were cut. When the wires had all been cut away and there was an open space left for the body, the rope was slackened over the cross bar and the dead man was carefully lowered.

The Body Frightfully Disfigured.

The body was perfectly recognizable, although frightfully disfigured. The right arm burned through almost to the spine and the eyes were literally burned out. The dripping mass of lifeless clay was hastily placed upon a stretcher, covered with a horse blanket and hurried, by Coroner Schultze's orders, to the police station in the basement of City hall.

Six Killed in a Month.

Six men have died in New York on the fatal wires since Sept. 4 last. On that day Darrow, A. Berry, superintendent of the Excelsior company, received a call for wires with his hands and fell dead. On Sept. 14 Giuseppe Manza, an Italian fruit dealer, met a horrible fate similar to that of Feeks, being struck by Jacob Brown, a lineman employed by the Brush company, was the next victim, being instantly killed on Sept. 16. John Bell, a lineman employed by the Union Telegraph company, perished on the wires Sept. 25. Last Tuesday Charles Eadman, a lineman in the employ of the Manhattan company, was killed, and John S. Kelly added to the victims on the list. The local press is loud in its demand that the wires be buried at once.

FROM FAR AWAY COREA.

News from the Missionary Who Was Reported Dead by Death Statements.

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—The Traveller prints a letter from Mrs. Hattie G. Heron, of Tennessee, the missionary who was reported to have been murdered to death in Corea some time ago. The letter is under date of Seoul, Corea, Sept. 2, Mrs. Heron says she has just recovered from a long illness. She says the king would not do such a thing as to set a price against him. He is a kind man, of great strength of character. He and the queen have treated Dr. and Mrs. Heron cordially and generously. They will do all in their power to protect the missionaries. The only danger is from the ignorant and superstitious natives.

Mrs. Heron says that Dr. Heron has personally treated about 20,000 sick Coreans, who, with their families, are very grateful, and Mrs. Heron does not think violence will be done her husband or herself, as neither may happen to others. She recites several incidents showing their friendly relations with the royal family. In conclusion she says: "Rev. Mr. Ross, a shiver though every fibre as though the man was about to spring Dr. Heron and I are not now preaching or teaching Christianity except by an example which we earnestly pray may be worthy of the name of Christian. The king has not forbid it, and through the United States minister about a year ago the American missionaries were absolutely forbidden to teach religion. But we live for the time when our treaty shall be revised and freedom of religion allowed. Until that time we are doing all in our power to gain the confidence and respect of the people, with what success you may judge from my letter."

BELLE HAMLIN WINNER.

The Swift Buffalo Mare Defeats Harry Wilkes.

THE VICTORY REPRESENTS $7,500

Particulars of a Noteworthy Trotting Match at Fleetwood Driving Park; Hamlin Took Two Heats Straight. Closing Sale of the Fairbrass Stud.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The announcement of the match race between Belle Hamlin and Harry Wilkes proved a drawing card for Fleetwood park. The club house, verandahs and the grand stand were crowded with interested spectators. Among the prominent horsemen present were C. J. Hamlin, Jim Smith and Garry Marshall, of Buffalo; the Sire brothers, Gabe Case, Robert and David Bonner, and George Archer, president of the Rochester Driving Park association. The track was never faster than when the speedy flyers responded to the starter's bell. Drivers Andrews and Turner jogged their charges in reglow before the grand stand and each received loud and long applause. The action of both racers was admirable. Time—Pools: Belle Hamlin $70, Harry Wilkes $50.

BELLE HAMLIN.

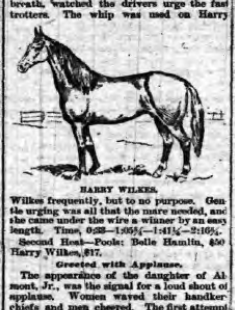
The First Race.

Driver Turner drew the pole for Harry Wilkes. The word was given at the second attempt, with Belle Hamlin a short neck in the van. Harry Wilkes, however, soon took the lead, but at the quarter was only a neck ahead. Both were trotting perfectly. Going into the backstretch the mare shot out like an arrow, and at the half was nearly two lengths ahead. Neither had broken. Between the half and three-quarters the gelding had closed up the gap, but only on sufferance.

Nearly Nose and Nose.

Rounding the stretch they were nearly nose and nose. Everybody, with bated breath, watched the drivers urge the fast trotters. The whip was used on Harry



HARRY WILKES.

Wilkes frequently, but to no purpose. Gen the urging was all that the mare needed, and she came under the wire a winner by an easy length. Time, 0:33—1:05½—1:41¼—2:16½.

Second Heat—Pools: Belle Hamlin, $50 Harry Wilkes, $17.

Greeted with Applause.

The appearance of the daughter of Almont, Jr., was the signal for a loud shout of applause. Women waved their handkerchiefs and men cheered. The first attempt at scoring saw the trotters under the wire in a start devoid of favor to either. Harry got a lead of a nose, but he lost it and took Belle's dust to the wire. Neither made a break. At the eighth the mare was three quarters of a length in the lead and going easily.

Again a Winner.

At the quarter there was no change, but between there and the half Harry lessened the space of daylight between himself and the mare. Coming up the hill it was neck and neck, but in the stretch Andrews let "The Belle" out, and she won the heat and race in a jog.

Harry Wilkes was under the whip in the finish, but he was no match for Belle. At the winner sped by the judges' stand a length in front, both horses under the throats. Time, 0:33—1:06¾—1:42¾—2:19¼.

Belle Hamlin's lucky owner will pocket the snug sum of $7,500 as a result of the mare's victory.

The first quarter was reached in :36, the half in 1:09½, the three-quarters in 1:37½, and the mile in 2:08¼. The grand stallion finished strong, without a wabble or false stroke. Besides reducing the 3-year-old record, this performance beats the record for stallions all ages. Mr. Williams, the driver, was taken from his sulky and borne aloft on the shoulders of his admirers, amid cheers for the gallant colt and driver.

Axtel Sold for $105,000.

BOWSER AND THE WHITEWASH.

He Doubles It in Spite of His Wife's Advice—The Result.

There were several little things I wanted done about the house this fall, and in the course of the week I spoke to Bowser about them. He came and went for a couple of days. It so happened that he came one morning before Mr. Bowser had left the house.

"Mr. Bowser," said him sassy, and after the man had come into the house and asked:

"Did you hire a colored man?"

"Why, yes."

"What for?"

"I was going to have him whitewash the vegetable cellar, take down and clean the boundary stovepipe and do some other odd jobs."

"But Mrs. Bowser, if there are any little jobs about the house I've got plenty of time to do them. In fact, I need just such exercise. Such work is a diversion for me, and the doctor recommends it."

"I wish you wouldn't do it. You'll get lime in your eyes and you'll blame me for it, and"——

"There you go! Blame you! What would I blame you about? If I get lime in my eyes it's my own fault. Mrs. Bowser, you are getting to be a good deal of a crank lately."

"Well, if you are determined on it, don't say that I asked you or encouraged you."

I was quite sure how it would end, but I said nothing more, and in the course of half an hour he got into his old clothes and went down cellar. I followed him down to give him a few last words of advice, but he didn't need them.

"You go right up stairs and sit down and enjoy yourself," he said. "Leave the job to me and here's a pail of lime, and if I don't whitewash another cellar in ten minutes than Moses could in all day I'll never try it again. Besides, Mrs. Bowser, whitewashing is not the slouch work you have thought it to be. It has got to be done by a person of taste and intelligence or it won't stand. I want a little blueing to give it a tinge."

"You understand, I said, as I got what he wanted, "that I did not ask you to do this work."

"Ask me! What on earth ails you, Mrs. Bowser! You are making fun enough over ten minutes' work to warrant a year's job."

"It must be well done."

"Certainly."

"You obtain all around."

"Just so."

"Even if it takes you all day."

"Even if it takes me over half an hour, which it won't. I'll show you a job here that will make a black man turn green with envy. Just run up stairs and make yourself comfortable."

I retreated up the stairs to the kitchen door and waited for results, which I knew were sure to come. Mr. Bowser dipped and dished and sozzled and stirred until he had the liquid to his liking, and as he began on the stone wall I heard him chuckling:

"I said fifteen minutes, but I'll go slow and take twenty. The idea of a colored man doubling around here all day to do this work. Let's see. I believe I'll take the overhead first."

I held my breath in suspense for a long minute. Then a yell arose from that cellar which jumped the cook out of her old slippers and made her cry out:

"For heaven's sake, Mrs. Bowser, have we been struck by another cyclone?"

There was a second and a third yell, and as I hurried down stairs Mr. Bowser stood in the middle of the cellar, hands outstretched and dripping up and down as if he had fire under his feet.

"For heaven's sake, what is it, Mr. Bowser?" I asked.

"Whitewash—lime—fire!"

"Where?"

"In my eyes! I'm blind! I've burned them out!"

I got hold of him and led him out to the laundry tubs and set the water to running. He had indeed got a dose in his eyes, but it was more painful than dangerous. He could hardly see daylight after we had washed out all the lime, and as I led him upstairs he said:

"I shall never see again—never see you or the baby again in my life!"

I washed his eyes with milk and got him to lie down on the lounge, and in a couple of hours he was pretty near all right. His eyes were sore, but no great damage had been done. He was very gentle until he discovered this. Then he suddenly turned on me with:

"Mrs. Bowser, what possible excuse can you urge in extenuation of your conduct?"

"What do you mean?"

"What do I mean! That's a cool question to ask me! In view of what has transpired what have you to say?"

"I say that you were foolish to undertake the job. I warned you how it would turn out."

"Mrs. Bowser!" he shouted, squirting tears of lime water out of his eyes, "do you pretend to deny that you didn't encourage me to undertake a task which you knew would put my whole future happiness, if not my life, in peril?"

"I do, sir. I did all I possibly could to dissuade you."

"And you are not to blame?"

"Not in the least."

"And I brought it all on myself?"

"You did."

"Mrs. Bowser, this is too much—too much! I could forgive one who had wronged me, if penitent, but when they although to brazen it out it is time for action. We will settle on the amount of alimony right here and now."

But we didn't. After blinking around for half a day he went down town, and when he came home to supper he was as good natured as pie. I got a colored man to come and do the work, and two or three days later, when Mr. Bowser happened down cellar, I heard him saying to himself:

"Yes, it's a mighty slick job; I did on this, and I'll tackle that stovepipe to-morrow morning."—Detroit Free Press.

Photographer's new clerk—Isn't there some mistake? That one doesn't resemble you.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

How to Park Flowers to Send to a Distance.

Roses should never be packed fully blown. They last longer and likewise travel better. Gather ferns in the morning of the day they are to be sent. Small flowers, such as violets, primroses, snowdrops, pinks, sweet peas, mignonette, asters and the like are best tied in small bunches. White small basket hampers and card board boxes will answer very well if not too long in transit. The very best packing-case is the best, however, for excluding the air, and yet keeps its contents cooler and fresher than a basket or paper box. Whatever practicable line the box with spinach leaves, which are a cool and soft and absorbent lining far better than any other packing material. When, however, spinach leaves cannot be obtained use lettuce or cabbage leaves.

Paper is not a good packing material. At the bottom of the box place a layer of leaves; on this place large ferns and any other foliage; next place the strongest and heaviest of the flowers; over these another layer of leaves and other flowers, and so on until the case is full, reserving the most fragile flowers, maiden hair ferns and other delicate blossoms for the top. Finish all off with another layer of leaves. Put leaves also at the sides of the box. On the arrival of the box of flowers, the recipient ought to unpack the flowers carefully, cutting the stems of each flower before putting it into water.

English Politics.

The political parties of England are as follows: First, because it is in power, comes the Conservative or Tory party: its leader is Lord Salisbury. It believes, as regards Great Britain and Ireland, that whatever is best; as to foreign affairs it for the present believes the same, although not so long ago the party was for war anywhere and everywhere. Then comes the Liberal party led by Gladstone, which disestablished the Irish church, and doubtless will disestablish the English and Scotch churches; it believes that things must change with the times. At present it is pledged to give Ireland home rule. Between these is the Liberal-Union party led by Lord Hartington; it is composed of Liberals who object to the home rule for Ireland. At present it is firmly bound to the Tories, but after Ireland shall have got home rule its members may return to the Liberal fold. A fourth party is that led by Mr. Parnell, the Home Rule party, whose members, as a rule inclined to the Liberal party, are now united in trying to obtain justice for Ireland, without regard to the personality of the dispenser of that justice.

Action of Light.

A study of the action of light on water colors has been made by Dr. Russell and Capt. Abney. They find that blue light has the greatest effect, green less and red rays the minimum effect. Some colors, however, fading, but best does not appear to affect it, and all pigments are permanent in a vacuum. Mineral colors are far more stable than vegetable. Of thirty-two colors experimented on, twelve were not acted upon by light, viz.: Yellow ochre, Indian red, Venetian red, burnt sienna, chrome yellow, lemon yellow, raw sienna, Verona green, vermilion, cobalt, Prussian blue, cobalt, French blue and ultramarine—all except Prussian blue being purely mineral pigments. Permanent mixtures were: Blue and yellow; light green; raw sienna and Antwerp blue, cobalt and Indian red. Carmine, crimson and scarlet lake. Payne's gray and Naples yellow were the most fugitive of the colors examined.

What to Do in Gas Asphyxia.

The following rules are advised for the recovery of a man overcome by gas: 1. Take the man into the open air. Don't crowd around him. 2. Keep him on his back. Don't raise his head nor turn him on his side. 3. Loosen his clothing at his neck and waist. Give a little brandy or whisky, not more than four tablespoonfuls of brandy in all. Give an ammonia mixture (one part aromatic ammonia to sixteen parts of water) in small quantities at short intervals, a teaspoonful every two or three minutes. 5. Slap the face and chest with the wet end of a towel. 6. Apply warmth and friction if the body and limbs are cold. 7. If the breathing is feeble or irregular, artificial respiration should be used, and kept up until there is no doubt that it can no longer be of use. 8. Administer oxygen.

Fatal to Love.

The opal is supposed to be fatal to love, hence it is never selected as the engagement ring. It sows discord between the giver and the recipient. It is thought by some to be of passion on the contrary. This was a notion of the ancients, who called the opal carbuncus, or the thunder stone. The opal is also considered the emblem of hope and is dedicated to the month of October. The moonstone is supposed to have the virtue of making trees fruitful and of curing epilepsy. A writer on the subject of precious stones and superstitions connected with them says that the adularia, or moonstone, contains in it an image of the moon, representing its various phases during the month.

The Seven Wise Ones.

Those generally given as the seven wise men of Greece are: Solon, Chilo, Pittacus, Bias, Periander (in place of whom some give Epimenides), Cleobulus and Thales. They were the authors of the celebrated mottoes inscribed in later days to the Delphian temple. These mottoes are as follows: "Know thyself," Solon; "Consider the end," Chilo; "Know thy opportunity," Pittacus; "Most men are bad," Bias; "Nothing is impossible to industry," Periander; "Avoid suretyship," Cleobulus; "Suretyship is the precursor of ruin," Thales.

The First Railroad Accident.

The first great railroad accident occurred in 1841, on the Versailles railway, in England. Thirty-eight passengers were killed, and the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death and praised the "steward" of £1,000 on the tender and carriages. The deodand was a feature of the old common law which declared that when any personal chattel caused the death of a subject of the king's subjects that chattel and all its accompaniments should be forfeited to the crown. The law of deodand was abolished in 1846.

Transmigration.

The origin of the doctrine of transmigration is attributed to Pythagoras about 570 B. C., and asserts the transmigration of the soul from one body to another. It is also attributed to the Egyptians, who would set no animal food lest they should devour the body into which the soul of a deceased friend had passed. They also had an idea that so long as the body of the deceased was kept entire the soul would not transmigrate, and therefore embalmed their dead.

Great Britain.

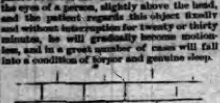
The term Great Britain includes England, Scotland and Wales. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland consists, apart from its colonies, of England, Scotland and Wales, with their dependencies, Ireland, the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and the Hebrides, Orkneys and Shetlands.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

SUBJECTS THAT AFFORD USEFUL INFORMATION AND RECREATION.

A Simple Way of Producing a Hypnotic Condition in Man—Rendering a Fowl Cataleptic by the Drawing of a White Line on a Dark Surface.

If any shining object, such as a lancet or a disk of silver paper gummed to a plate, is placed at about the distance of a foot from the eyes of a person, slightly above the head, and then pushed upwards this object fixedly and without interruption for twenty or thirty minutes, he will gradually become motionless, and it is great number of cases will fall into a condition of torpor and genuine sleep.



EXPERIMENT OF THE CATALEPTIC ROOSTER.

Physicians have grown the complete insensibility to pricking or pinching on the part of individuals rendered cataleptic by the fixing of a bright object.

The experiment of the cataleptic cock depicted in the cut, while doubtless new to the majority of our readers, was, in point of fact, first phenomenon under the name of "Experimentum Mirabile" at Rome in 1646. To those who desire to repeat this experiment, which has been many times performed with marked success by the professors of both Liberty led by Gladstone, which disestablished the Irish church, and doubtless will disestablish the English and Scotch churches; it believes that things must change with the times. At present it is pledged to give Ireland home rule. Between these is the Liberal-Union party led by Lord Hartington; it is composed of Liberals who object to the home rule for Ireland. ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

Suggestions as to Various Departments of Domestic Economy.

How to Use Left-Over Rubbers.

Sewing linen is a favorite material for hangings in chambers. These are easily made, easily laundered, and cost very little; the color should match the carpet as well as the paper. Where ornamentation is desired, Decorator and Furnisher directs to work the white or light stripe in self colored cotton, or in linen floss of the color of the stripe. The heavy cotton may be worked on the curtain itself, while separate stripes are done for the top and bottom. They should be put on plain unbleached jute web with brass rings.

An effective portiere described was made of white cotton canvas, embroidered with bold designs to him the edge and the bottom were placed alternate bands of blue denim and the white canvas, each embroidered with a simple pattern in flax of the opposite color. The red poppies flower, with its running vine and leaves, is a favorite among artists for designs of this kind.

Large scroll work designs worked with heavy cord look well on brown jeans and other decorative purposes.

Window boxes of carved wood are exceedingly handsome and appropriate in country homes. Plain, of course, may be used.

A quaint little Spanish chair is making its appearance. It has a circular seat and a tall, narrow curving back, and is much more picturesque than comfortable.

Hanging receptacles for growing climbers are now to be seen made of scallop shell joined by wire, one forming the base of the next smaller one, each pierced and joined to its neighbor with a stout wire, the sides. There is sufficient depth for earth.

The wire is passed through the little flaps at the point of the shell, and a wire suspending the whole, passed through near the edge of the shell at the top.

Plain Cake and Cookies.

Where milk is scarce one is often at a loss to know what to make for dessert. Here are a few tested recipes that will help out:

Cake—Half cup butter, one cup of sugar, one egg, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water, flour enough to roll out soft; cut in shapes and bake in a quick oven.

Lemon Cake.

One cup and a half cupfuls sugar, one cupful butter, two and a half cupfuls flour, five eggs (yolks and whites beaten separately), four teaspoonfuls sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in one large cake or two small ones. Two tablespoonfuls butter, two eggs, juice of two lemons; beat all together and boil till it is like jelly; oranges may be used instead of lemons.

Golden Rod and Grasses for Winter Use.

Golden rod gathered in its perfection and dried in a dark closet is said to keep its freshness of color for a long time. It makes a very pretty for winter bouquets, as are the cat tails and pretty marsh grasses of various kinds when preserved in the same way.

Wild Grape Jelly.

Boil and strain the grapes; to one pint of juice allow three-fourth of a pound of sugar; boil the juice twenty minutes, then add the sugar in the meantime; add the sugar to the juice, boil five minutes and put the jelly up in tumblers.

Decoration of Gourds.

In some places there is quite a fancy for converting the dried gourds into drinking, eating and ornamental drinking vessels, water bottles, powder horns, cups, bowls, etc. When the gourds are perfectly ripe, those of mottle like shape are selected, and the outer skin or rind of the outer skin is scraped off. They are then dried either in the sun or a gently heated oven, being placed on a wooden board or tin tray, which has previously been covered with paper. During the drying process the position of the gourds should be frequently altered.

When thoroughly dry, the seeds and the core are shaken out through a small hole on the top, or removed with a wire loop. The gourds are then ready for surface ornamentation, of which our illustration gives a characteristic and effective example. The surface is first stained brown, and then the Japanese design painted on in flat relief with gold powder mixed with shellac and oil of copal, the whole being varnished afterwards.

On other specimens the design is first traced on the surface with a lead pencil, and then filled in with oil colors in red and gold brown. Ultimately the whole is covered over with a coat of French varnish.

GOURD PILGRIM FLASK.

A third style shows the ornament slightly cut or scratched in the surface, which has been well oiled to prevent the ink from soaking out. The whole is then rubbed over with a mixture of lampblack and oil, which sinks into the engraved lines and shows them clearly.

Still another method is to cut the outlines in the surface and fill in the design with dark red and blue oil colors.

An Undecided Question About Dreams.

It is an undecided question whether dreams take place during sleep or only in the intervals between sleeping and waking. A case was recently reported in which a person who was suddenly and completely awakened in the middle of the night, when slumber is supposed to be most profound. A well dressed man was discovered in his room, which undoubtedly took place at the moment of awakening, as it is not likely that it would have been remembered if it had occurred at an earlier hour of the night. From this and other evidences there we are inclined to the opinion that a sound sleep is always a dreamless one, says Popular Science News.

Clock silks are more fashionable for day wear; for evening lisse laces are specially the fashion. These are used for the trains and waists, with embroidered or plain scalloped fronts.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

A Sufferer from Insomnia Relates Some Interesting Reminiscences.

Another "long sufferer from insomnia," who has at length achieved sleep, gives the world the benefit of it's experience as follows:

My first precept to the sleepless is, see that your liver is awake; and the second is, never have a watch box near you. I do not wish to refer to the "tired feeling" call the secondary cause of sleeplessness—that is causes apart from bodily health and disturbances of mind. One of these is of so simple a character that I should almost hesitate to mention it, but from the fact that the abandonment of it in my case had a most miraculous effect in promoting sleep. When I was in the midst of my difficulty I was always hurriedly kept my watch and a lamp and matches close to the side of the bed. The consequence of this was that the moment I turned in bed or recovered consciousness, even in so small an extent my thoughts immediately flew to the matches, and I felt an acute anxiety to know how long I had been asleep that in a moment I was wide awake and in a mighty hurry to look at my watch. After being thus thoroughly aroused, sleep did not return for sometimes an hour, sometimes two, sometimes not at all. One night I resolved to see, as it might to save done at first, that if the facilities for striking a light and consulting my watch were not at hand I might possibly only turn myself round and go to sleep again. From the time I first banished the matches I have scarcely ever had a really bad night. The habit of rousing up was broken through—and that is a wonderful factor in connection with sleep. The second precept I would lay down for the sleepless, therefore, is, "Never have a box of matches near the bed."

Next, I can counsel from an experience of many years that to the sufferer from chronic sleeplessness alcohol, even in moderate quantities, is injurious. Many sufferers from insomnia have said to me: "I feel so exhausted from want of sleep I am obliged to take a small quantity of stimulants to keep me going." I have suffered from sleeplessness as much as any man, and I do not believe in alcohol. Anything that tends to increase the circulation and inflame the blood vessels is fatal, more especially at night. My next, and case of my most sympathetic people, therefore, is, "Avoid alcohol."

I will now refer to another system which I have adopted in my battle with insomnia, and which I still find occasionally indispensable. I refer to reading in bed. Henry Kingsley, who appears to have suffered much from insomnia, recommends this, and goes so far as to say that one cannot do it in defiance of the risk of setting the curtains on fire. In my own case there is no risk of this, for the simple reason that I never have bed curtains, which to my mind are a delusion and a snare. Wherever, in spite of the absence of the matches, I find myself wide awake after three, or four, or, it may be, five hours' sleep, and feel that there is little or no chance of my going to sleep again, I invariably read in bed for an hour. If I did not do this a state of restlessness would set in—a feverish craving for sleep, which, in its turn, would end in effectually banishing it for the rest of the night. The best thing, therefore, to be done is to light a candle, eat a biscuit and take a book. Bear in mind of course the book must not be of a too exciting character, but just sufficiently interesting to get the thoughts into a right channel.

One very frequent cause of sleeplessness is too great an abundance of bed clothing. A sheet, two blankets and a counterpane are generally sufficient in winter, except in very severe weather, and a sheet and blanket without a counterpane in summer. In former years I was reckless enough to sleep in strange beds without first examining the amount of clothing. In the small hours of the morning I would awake hot and restless, and find to my consternation three or four blankets and a counterpane over me even in mild weather. To a bed thus loaded I say, let no one should accustom himself to as little bed clothing as possible, and of as light a character.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

The Endless and Painful Advice That Some People Inflict Upon Friends.

One of the greatest of social annoyances is the habit which some people have of making endless adieus in leaving friends. "The woman," says a masculine critic, "who begins at the top of the stairs and overflows with farewells and parting admonitions every step on the way down, and repeats them a hundred times at the door, simply maddens the man who is her escort, be he her husband or lover. Be persuaded, ladies, to say 'good-by' once or twice and have done with it."

On the other hand it may be asked, "Who does not dread the man who starts, then thinks of something else to say; rises and then thinks of another subject of conversation; nearly gets to the door and then has another revelation; reaches the door and, most probably holding it open, is aroused to a degree of mental brilliancy that threatens the total demise of his host or hostess by lingering detaining of both in a cold draught while he discourses! What a tax on the patience and politeness of the listener, who waits for stories, by some mental listlessly to every proposition, to end the interview and break the restraining bond of polite attention."

Callers, masculine and feminine, will alike do well to avoid any such painful leave taking as these.

A Hint to Young Folks.

Young people who are unconsciously or unconsciously acquiring manners and habits that will cling to them and fix upon them for a lifetime a distinctive mark by which they are broadly should, among other things, carefully shun the parrot like utterance of any certain phrase or exclamation. The uncouthness of this habit has been very nicely illustrated by a writer for boys and girls, who says:

I sat by Mrs. Blank (her husband is a clergyman) in the street car a few days ago, and after we had exchanged greetings, I said: "My cousin Angeline sails from Liverpool today." "Is that so?" said Mrs. Blank. "Yes," I said, calling as well as I could, for this reply took all the spirit from me, "and she is always very ill on the ocean." "Is that so?" said Mrs. Blank again. A pause followed. How can one continue to pay out the coin of conversation if not even the interest comes back!

I was glad to get out of the car and meet pretty Amy Hunter. I met a bit of news for her. Amy is in the high school, and I told her at once that Miss Cummins, who taught her botany last year, is to be married.

"Is that so?" returned Amy. I love Amy, but I do not like "Is that so?" and I hastened to get out of its way; but as I went along Frank Sullivan overtook me, and will you believe that when I asked Frank if Mr. Stockton had explained to answer my question, "The Lady or the Tiger?" he exclaimed, "Is that so?" Later in the day I told Mr. Emory that his playing of the organ last Sunday had been most accomplished, and he smiled and murmured, "Is that so?"

The greatest ascertained depth of the ocean is midway between the Island of Tristan d'Acunha and the south of the Rio de la Plata. The bottom was there found to be 6% miles below the surface. South of the Society Islands a depth of 6¾ miles has been found.

FRENCH DAM QUESTION.

Plaintiff's Counsel Says the Court Has Not Decided the Main Question.

We had received the impression that the Court of Chancery on Friday decided the main question in dispute between Mr. Charles Hyde and Mr. P. M. French as to whether in point of fact, Mr. French's mill dam was illegally increased in height in 1882. Complainant's counsel says "that is a mistaken impression; the Court did not pass on that question at all. That question remains to be decided in the case not yet tried. The evidence has not even been taken as yet. Numerous witnesses on both sides will be examined and cross-examined the evidence will be printed, and briefs and arguments submitted on final hearing—all this before the Court will be called upon to decide what is the proper height of the dam. So far, the Court has merely refused to grant a preliminary injunction. That is to say, the Court will not, in advance of the trial, stop Mr. French from rebuilding his dam. What it will do after this trial does not yet appear. It is true that Mr. French is at liberty to rebuild his dam to its old height, but it is also true that in that event he will, if the case is decided against him, be liable to damages again and be liable for damages besides."

On the main case, in view of the well-known fact that citizens of the highest character are ranged as witnesses on opposite sides, it is impossible to foretell which side will win. That remains to be seen. The counsel desires us to correct the impression which was given in Saturday's issue, and which he states, we in common with many others erroneously received, that the Court had already decided that question. On the main case, as was also true in the argument for preliminary injunction, Mr. Hyde is represented by Mr. Craig A. Marsh, and Mr. French is represented by Mr. Alvah A. Clark and Mr. Charles A. Reed.

The Somerset Street Bridge.

The proposed iron girder bridge over Somerset street will not be completed before May, 1890, the freeholders say. It is hoped to have the foundation for the bridge finished before cold weather sets in upon the ground, but that is as much as will be attempted. This work was begun over a week ago. It is intended to build the foundations on the northerly side of the bridge, and shift to it the temporary wooden structure which now spans the southerly half of the bridge, and to work on the construction of the southerly foundations. After the latter are completed, the wooden bridge will be shifted back again to allow for the construction of the iron work. In this way it is hoped to keep the street open for travel during the construction. It is important that this should be done, since it is doubtful if there is any street in the city more used, excepting the portion of Park avenue, between Front street and North avenue. Over 1,600 wagons passed it, in front of The News office by actual count in a single day, taken haphazard.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Leo Daft, of Putnam street, was last week granted a patent on an electric railway.

"Watching the Enemy," an interesting war study, is being painted by Julian Scott. It is a production of an actual scene in the history of a New Jersey regiment. The central figure is Col. Hall, son of the late Dr. Hall, of Trenton, well known as an alert officer, who is being held by other soldiers in a position on top of dilapidated rail fence, from which he is about to turn his field glass in the direction of the enemy.

Republican Primary.

The North Plainfield Republicans held their primary meeting Saturday evening. Mr. Isaac Brokaw was elected chairman and Chas. A. Reed was made Secretary. Messrs. James Hardy, Isaac Brokaw, J. N. A. Bannerman, Peter Cox and Thomas E. Arnold were chosen delegates to attend the Republican county convention to be held in Somerset Hall, at Somerville to-morrow at eleven o'clock. Compton, of the Third Regiment.

Heart Disease Caused her Death.

At about nine o'clock last evening Mrs. Peter Campbell, of Liberty street, was discovered by her husband and Policeman Flanagan lying on the sidewalk near the railroad bridge on that thoroughfare. She was carried into the house and Dr. Simpson was summoned, but she expired before he arrived. Heart disease is supposed to be the cause of her death. Deceased was about thirty-seven years of age.

BOWLING AT DUNELLEN.

Dr. W. E. Lindstedt Wins the Champion Medal.

On Saturday afternoon last, the members of the Middlesex County Bowling Club played for the championship medal, which was won by Dr. W. L. Lindstedt, of New Brunswick. His strongest competitor was Mr. F. H. Haffner, of Dunellen, whom he defeated by a score of 15 to 14.

The contestants were: W. E. Lindstedt, F. P. Haffner, E. D. Chrisler, B. M. Pettit, L. A. Powelson, F. Weigel, A. W. Peter, J. E. Powelson, H. R. Willis, T. B. Boisseau, P. W. Frick, Doctor Wagner.

Mr. Schepflin was holder of the medal last, but did not compete this season, having agreed after the question of the dam.

To close the season a friendly game will be played between the Middlesex County Club and the Dunellen Bowling Green Club after Mr. Schepflin's return from a trip to the West and Southwest, which will be in about three weeks. He left town yesterday.

A Terrible Runaway Accident.

Edward Augar, a porter at the City Hotel, yesterday hired a one-hang and buggy and accompanied by a young lady started for Mt. Bethel, when about half a mile from their destination the horse became frightened at some chickens flying up from under his feet, and sprang suddenly to one side, the carriage falling into a ditch. The horse with the broken harness and shafts started at a pace. Mr. Agnar held on the reins and was dragged about 100 feet, when a stone striking, his head momentarily dazed him, compelling him to let go the reins. The horse continued on and was caught at Mt. Bethel. Mr. Agnar went back as soon as he recovered from the blow and found the young lady entangled in the wreck of the buggy, insensible. Carefully extricating her, he carried her to Dr. Zigle who resided within a hundred feet of where the accident happened. Upon examination it was found that no bones were broken, and the doctor had his carriage brought around and the young lady, who was weak and exhausted, taken to her home near Mt. Horeb. The blow on the head that Mr. Agnar received, gave him a slight flesh wound. The buggy is a total wreck.

A New Class in Mechanical Drawing.

In addition to the classes already at work a new class will be organized and commence work at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening. The advantages to anyone connected with the manufacture of machinery or a knowledge of mechanical drawing are so great that it is not necessary to repeat them here. By this instruction a carpenter can become his own architect and a machinist his own draughtsman. The instructors are Messrs. A. J. Gaves, civil engineer, and C. F. Robertson, draughtsman at Scott's Press Works. The membership fee, $6, includes instruction in the class and all other privileges of the Association.

THE ISSUES IN NEW JERSEY.

Address by the Republican State Committee.

The New Jersey Republican Committee has issued the following address to the voters of the State:

The issue of this contest are of paramount importance. Upon your right decision will depend the security of the highest public interests. The convention of each party has been held, its candidate for Governor named, and its platform of principles enunciated. Every General Edward Burd Grubb or Leon Abbett will be the next Governor of New Jersey. All votes given to any other candidate will be thrown away. Mr. Abbett's candidacy is a personal one, and looks to the acquisition of political power, patronage and future advancement. It has in it no element of fitness. It is a purely partisan nomination made under the management and direction of Democratic machine politicians for partisan purposes.

We are not left in doubt as to the sort of administration Mr. Abbett will give us in the event of his election. He has already given us a test of his quality. During his former term as Governor he made the public interests subservient to partisan ends. He converted the judiciary of every county and all the charitable and penal institutions of the State into political machines. He established the rule of the mercenaries, "leaders" and spokesmen of his party. His administration was marked by the worst appointments ever made by a New Jersey Governor; by election intimidation and rascality of the grossest character; by the bold bossism of legislative acts; by the illegal use of the Democratic constabulary and local police of the State capital for the election of officers of the House of Assembly in the discharge of their lawful duties; by political wrongs and outrages which stirred the indignation of honest men every where; by bargains and "deals" ruthlessly sacrificed every principal of good government, and by repeated conspiracies against the rights and interests of the people. In those years of Executive control in this State every law equalled in bi-ter and malignant partisanship those in which Mr. Abbett compiled the Gubernatorial chair. Is it worth while to invite a repetition, in a still more aggravated form, of a policy thus perpetrated to the good name of the State?

The Democratic platform is like the party candidate, unworthy of public confidence. It evades the question of temperance and it juggles with ballot reform—two of the most important issues of the campaign. It has no intelligent policy to propose as to any matter of real concern.

General Edward Burd Grubb is the candidate of the people in the truest and best sense. He did not seek the nomination, and in accepting it has no other object in view than the promotion of the welfare of the State. He is without partisan pledge or obligation of any sort. If elevated to the Governorship his efforts will be given for the advancement of measures productive of the highest public good. General Grubb's every interest is with the people. He has been a soldier and citizen in Burlington county. He led New Jersey troops in the front of battle from 1861 to 1864. He has lived at his Jersey home since the close of the war, and has been identified with many public interests. He is approachable, genial in his manners and bearing. He has convictions, and the courage to maintain them. He will bring to the executive chair the best and ripest ability of experienced manhood. He can be elected if the right-thinking people of the State will go to the polls and vote. It only needs a full vote to insure his occupancy of the executive chair of this State of the next three years.

In the platform of principles on which the Republican candidate stands there is no uncertainty or evasion. It stands for local self-government; for honest registration and return of elections, for the best possible safeguards on the subject of ballot reform, in the nature of the Kane bill or the Australian system; for increased facilities for the free education of children; for reform of the evil of tax-exemption, for economy in the State government, and for the upbuilding of every important public interest.

The history of the State Legislature of 1888 is too recent and well known to need comment or elaboration. Every action of the Democratic majority was in response to upon the behests of the State and received the disapproval of all right thinking people. A failure to undo its work would be a public calamity. The right-thinking people of New Jersey are in the majority, and when they speak with united voice are irresistible. That voice can only find effective expression at the ballot box, and we appeal to every citizen of the State who, irrespective of party, is interested in good government, and who deserves an honest Executive and a Legislature in sympathy with him, to interest himself actively for the success of the Republican ticket from this time until election day, and above all things, to vote and see that his neighbors vote in favor of Grubb and the whole ticket.

An Old Story and an Old Moral.

Our readers are familiar with the account of how the high sheriff of New York got a divorce from himself on his wife's behalf, and kindly saved her any bother in the proceedings by not letting her know anything about it till it was all over. The indictment by the grand jury of Sheriff Flack and five of his co-conspirators will have a tendency to bring the whole happy crew to their senses. They will find that getting a fraudulent divorce through perjury and secrecy is not such a "private matter" as Sheriff Flack claimed it was. One of the indicted individuals is Flack's own son, another is a judge and lawyer, while a third is the referee himself, before whom the alleged testimony in the case was alleged to be given.

If one at first supposed that the fames originated in a detective flue, the statement being made that fire had been started in the burned building on the night that the building was set on fire, the Standard Oil company's refinery, Newtown creek, Long Island, was damaged to the extent of $2,000. The roof of the building, No. 225 also became ignited and was damaged to a little amount. Dr. Halleck's house, on the east side of the church, was also burned; loss, $2,000. No. 227, owned by John Arnold, sustained a loss of $2,500. Buildings on the south side of the street were also damaged. The loss on the church building, including the organ, one of the finest in the country, is $200,000, partially covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered at 7:30 a. m. Sunday, by a policeman, who turned in an alarm. The flames had gained such headway, however, that the firemen were almost helpless and turned their attention to saving the adjoining buildings. The three story structure, occupied by Hatch & Hatch, carpet dealers, however, and was damaged to the extent of $2,000. The roof of the building No. 225 also became ignited and was damaged to a little amount. Dr. Halleck's house, on the east side of the church, was also burned; loss, $2,000. Long on Pork.

The position of a broker or commission merchant is not always an enviable one, especially when the principal or customer is on the losing side of the market. As such there is frequently appealed to for advice, and anger to him should following events prove his advice to have been wrong. Sitting in the office of John Peacock, at the Chamber of Commerce, the other day, discussing the probability of doubling a $10 bill that had unexpectedly fallen into my possession, I was startled by the restless appearance of a man who rushed up to Mr. P. and exclaimed:

"She's down twenty-five cents more, John! What had we best do?"

I learned later that the stranger had bought 500 barrels of pork some time before for September delivery at $12.75 a barrel, and the market had steadily declined to $12.50. Mr. P. said he hardly knew what to do.

"Well, is the market likely to go much lower?"

"I'm sure I cannot tell. It may and it may not."

"Well, how low have you ever known pork to go?"

"Oh, I don't remember ever seeing it go below $6."

"I would like to know if the blamed thing is going below that now just because I am long of it."

"I'll tell you how you can figure on that and be pretty safe," said John. "You can always count on eighty barrels for $1 apiece and the salt will bring twenty-five cents. So it will hardly get below $1.55 per barrel.

The stranger did some rapid figuring and left with a weary, heated look.—Minneapolis Tribune.

An Autumn Night.

Night brings with her a brooding chill,
As lengthening o'er the eastern hill
The golden sunbeams to chase away.
The tiresome tumult of the day.
To sleep you sink with careful rest,
Of all your earthly pleasures best!
When Earth, with sable curtains drawn,
Admits gray bearded, hasting Dawn,
To then that from your bed you rise
Rest casual and silver in surprise
To find that by some means unknown
The atmosphere has colder grown.
You strike a flickering, blinding light,
Then quick the blanket—meless quite!
The mattress then you raise on high
And drop again, with weary sigh.
You hurry through the house, but come
Back to your chamber, cold and glum,
You don your clothes against your will,
Compelled by the increasing chill.
The question still returns, unbid,
Where are those extra covers hid?
—Exchange.

KING MENELIK II.

Something About Africa's Most Powerful Native.

Abyssinia's new and greatest ruler, King Menelik II, who was recently crowned at Adua, the coronation site of all the kings of that country, is the son of King Hadtow and a poor woman of remarkable beauty, who used to seek alms at the doors of the palace. The charms of this woman pleased the majesty so much that he introduced her into his harem. On the birth of a boy the king refused to recognize him as his son, unless in the course of years he showed a striking resemblance to his majesty. King Hadtow grew older he strongly resembled his royal parent, and the king made him his heir, although there were other sons who thought they had a better right to the throne.

Physically the new ruler is almost coal black, short and dumpy. He is gentle and amiable to those who are his friends, but he has been guilty of acts of atrocious cruelty to conquered enemies. To Europeans he is very friendly, and wishes to introduce their arts into his country. Machinery and implements of all sorts are of the greatest interest to him, and his chief delight is to examine their mechanism. He has several watches and clocks and alarm clocks in taking them apart and trying to put them together again; however, he has at last become quite a proficient watch tinkerer.

Some years ago the French government sent a mitrailleuse in charge of Mr. Chefneux as a present to the king. The weapon was taken to pieces compactly packed, and reached its destination several days ahead of the traveler. Menelik had carefully studied the mechanism of firearms, and, as Mr. Chefneux's great astonishment, he found that the king, with the aid of a picture of a mitrailleuse, had properly put together and mounted the weapon.

Menelik's kingdom includes not only the domain of the late King John, but also his own country, where he had an army of 100,000 men. About one-fourth of them carry improved rifles. He does not like missionaries, and in 1885 he practically imprisoned two Swedish missionaries in his chief town for refusing to permit them to march to the coast. He has since expelled all the French Catholic and German missionaries from his dominion.

QUINCY'S FIRST CHURCH.

214 Quarter Millennial Was Lately Celebrated with Great Ceremony.

The first church of Quincy, Mass., which has just celebrated its 250th anniversary, has had a memorable and ever changing history. It was in 1639, at the settlement of Wessaguscus, that the inhabitants of Mount Wollaston took steps towards establishing an independent church. It was agreed, in order not to break the first church of Boston of its influential support, that those living at the Mount should pay as church rates sixpence per acre yearly for such land as was within a mile of a meeting house and eighteen pence per acre that which was further off, for the support of the Boston church. It is understood that the original covenant was signed at the first meeting, Sept. 16, 1639, by William Thompson, pastor; Henry Flynt, teacher; George Root, Stephen Kinsley, elders; John Dassett, William Potter, Maurice Saunders, Gregory Belcher.

Mr. Thompson was ordained either on Sept. 24 or Nov. 19, 1639. Mr. Flynt was ordained on March 17, 1640. The church has had eleven pastors, the average length of pastorate being more than twenty-two years, the longest forty-five and the shortest eight.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF QUINCY.

Two notable sermons were preached by the pastor, Rev. John Hancock, on the completion of the first century of the church's existence. A century later Rev. William P. Ems preached two able discourses, and in the forenoon service a hymn written for the occasion by Hon. John Quincy Adams, then an ex-president of the United States, was sung. Anecdotes differ somewhat as to whether the present church is the third or fourth to be occupied by the old society. It can be put down as very probable that the little "stone chapel" was the original church.

The date of the building of this edifice is uncertain, but it is known to have been standing as early as 1640. It had no pews, the people sat wherever they by individuals from time to time. There were seats, however, but the men sat apart from the women. The hour for beginning service was announced by beating a drum. And an hour glass stood beside the pastor to warn him when his time was up. Church going in those times was a serious matter, the services occupying the greater part of the day. On March 17, 1728 or 1729, twenty shillings were voted to Joseph Parmenter as payment for keeping dogs out of the church on the Sabbath. March 23, 1730, 40 shillings was voted to Joseph Thomas for twenty shillings for tlearing cart loads of snow from inside the church. A new pulpit was built in 1731, and pews were erected in 1732. In 1806 it was considerably enlarged. On April 9, 1827, ground was broken for the present edifice. The corner stone was laid on July 4, 1827, the principal address being made by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Whitney. The church was dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, Rev. Messrs. Gray, Ware, Lowell, Whitney and Flynt taking part in the exercises. The church is of granite, with a pediment in front supported by four massive Doric pillars. It contains 160 pews, twenty-four of which are in the gallery. The total cost was about $35,000.

He Could Spell It.

During the Franco-Prussian war a corporal came in the door with one of his men who was unfit for the saddle. The doctor examined him and found him suffering from rheumatism. The corporal grumbled as he filled up the requisite form for the man's admission to the nearest military hospital. "Can you spell rheumatism, corporal?" said the doctor. "I think I can, doctor. Rumph you," said the sufferer, shouting. The corporal was Louis Gustave, one of the leading journalists of Paris.—San Francisco Argonaut.

THE COMING WOMAN.

MOVING ALONG ON SOLID LINES IN THE UNITED STATES.

Female Suffrage Recognized in Several States—Whether for Good or Evil, One of Those Questions That Is Not Yet Ready to Well Started.

Could an American statesman of a century ago come back to life, she thing that would amaze him most would not be, I suspect, the existence of electric lights and of photographs, for these would lie outside the sphere of public life, which would be our supposed Rip Van Winkle's chief concern. Nor would it even be, within his own domain, the Australian ballot law, or civil service reform, or the efforts of a great nation to get rid of its surplus money. It would be the spectacle of a strange alteration in the very basis of government; it would be the fact that in regarding the future of the part of vast area and unknown resources, a large part of the time of the organizing body has been devoted to deciding whether the half of the human race should be women in these new born commonwealths. Nay, his chief wonder would lie in the fact that the final debate in each case did not turn on the question "whether," but rather on the question "how far," since all five states have finally made women voters about something. Idaho and Washington have given them the school suffrage; colonies, we have North and South Dakota; while in Montana those women who pay taxes will vote on all questions submitted to the vote of taxpayers. Moreover, in two of these states (Washington and South Dakota) the question of giving women full suffrage is hereafter to be put to vote, and on this question women already qualified as voters for any purpose can also vote.

WOULD SURPRISE THEM.

We herculeanists take all these things very quietly, because we have come to them by degrees. But were some Rip Van Winkle of a deceased statesman to open his eyes upon them suddenly, he would justly pronounce them to involve a more deeply rooted change than any Australian ballot law, while the longest train of electric cars could not be so much as named in comparison.

He could only end in accepting Victor Hugo's high sounding phrase that this is rightly or wrongly—the woman's century. All the traditions about the sphere of the two sexes, as being something unchangeable and eternal, must fall before this simple fact. A local experiment, as in Massachusetts, or Kansas, or Wyoming, proves very little, it may be urged.

But the founding of five new states by popular action, in communities drawn together from all quarters of the globe, is not only an extraordinary demonstration of self government, but offers, as it were, a cross section of current American thought on government in general. That five different sets of constitutional conventions, acting not merely independently, but with an almost jealous degree of mutual independence, the uniform outcome should be the grant of female suffrage, brings with it irresistible inferences. For good or for evil, it is an advance along the whole line; it is one of those revolutions which do not turn back. It is also a revolution based, like most American steps, not merely on facts, but on principles.

No matter what was the motive—whether impulse, or logic, or persuasion—the concession has been made. That this has been done in every one of five different states virtually within the prevailing course of all our future national development.

"AS ACQUIRED INTELLIGENCE."

That the result is to be of immediate, invariable and great good, I do not for one, believe. If it were, it would be unlike the result of all previous extensions of the suffrage. Every newly enfranchised class needs to learn by, so to speak, control of its weapons, and this usually involves some out fingers. Women are not so unlike men as to be free from all the parts and weaknesses of ones, and that is the sum total of the case. Men have, in many years of voting, partially attained to what the once famous jurist Theophilus Parsons called "an acquired intelligence" on many practical matters, which women, as a class, have yet to gain. Men have also learned how to get on with one another politically, across political differences, and to acquiesce with amazing equanimity in the results of election day. They are, I suspect, a little more patient of public order than women, and a little less ardent in expectation.

On the other hand, this very habit of moderation has its dangers, and there are many households which can show a record

There has been a storm in Philadelphia in which descended hailstones having a strong and distinctly sulphurous smell. We had no idea Philadelphia was so wicked as that. Come, come!

Gen. Meigs has been prophesying again with reference to the growth of our population. He says: "The child is now born who in his old age will be one of 1,000,000,000 of people in the United States, of which 80,000,000 will be blacks, or of African descent."

The eleventh census will present one feature that is unique in our history. This will be the chapter on the growth and statistics of the electrical industry. If electrical inventions make as much progress in the next ten years as in the past decade, the history of labor saving machinery will have to be rewritten.

A colored man has been nominated on the legislative Republican ticket in Ohio. He is a school teacher and has a magnificent voice. He can make himself distinctly heard in all parts of the Cincinnati Music hall, something which probably not more than six men in the United States can do. There is one peculiarity of colored orators, they nearly always have fine voices.

A Church 250 Years Old.

Quincy, Mass., has had a celebration of more than local interest. The first church there commemorated fittingly the 250th anniversary of its foundation. Governor John Winthrop was present at the signing of the contract that formed its original members into an organized body. Generation after generation of Adamses, Quincys and other old New England families have worshiped within its walls, which contain memorial tablets to the two Adams presidents. Eight generations of men have passed since the church organization was founded here, yet the edifice still endures, a monument to the gospel of peace and good will. Charles Francis Adams, grandson of John Quincy Adams, delivered one address, and Josiah Quincy, the sixth of the line, another, and C. P. Cranch read a poem at the celebration.

War has thundered and peace has smiled upon our land over and again, yet within and about the historic roof of the first church the gentle domestic scenes of joy and grief have followed each other uninterruptedly for two and a half centuries. Fair daughters have been born and reared to comely maidenhood, been wedded within its walls, have found grown old and been carried from its kindly doors to the burial ground, to be followed in time by their daughters over the self same road. Boys have listened to the word preached year after year in this old first church, and have gone out and made their names illustrious in their country's story. It may be that as long as the republic stands the old first church of Quincy will stand too.

In the course of his address Mr. Adams quoted this from Dr. Holmes:

Little of all we value here
Wakes on the morn of the hundredth year
Without both feeling and looking queer.
In fact, there is nothing that keeps its youth,
So far as I know, but a tree and truth.

The Mormons.

The law that has come nearest to dealing with the Mormon question successfully is the Edmunds law. Under it there have been 700 convictions already.

The annual report of the Utah commission contains some interesting information, as well as a significant suggestion. We learn from this report that polygamy is dying out, at least outwardly. "Polygamy is not at the present time openly practiced, except to a few remote and out of the way places." The Gentile element insist, however, that clandestinely there are still hundreds of many wived saints, and that plural marriages are still sometimes celebrated.

However, if polygamy is practiced secretly, that is a very great gain over a few years ago. Then it was practiced openly and flauntingly, in defiance of every law the United States made previous to the Edmunds law. It shows that these people no longer openly defy the whole United States.

As long as convicted polygamists are regarded as martyrs, and it is a glory to serve a term in the penitentiary, the question is not settled. It will be time to admit Utah as a state. Once in the Union, with the power of state home rule and statehood, the Mormon theocracy would drive every Gentile and a free civilization out of Utah. So if the saints knock at the door during the present congress the answer should be "Not this year."

Finally, the commission call attention to decided terms to the fact that while we refuse to let Chinamen, contract laborers and paupers land upon our shores, our doors are wide open to the army of Mormon immigrants.

Those who brought there to avail themselves of polygamous family relations should be forbidden to land on our shores, and provision for punishment of those who introduce them into the country should be made. Such institutions every intelligent citizen of the United States must regard as a menace to the liberties and peace of the land, and that resolution to stamp them out should be a rendering of obedience to God. Have we part of treason these teachings and to those of those who can answer.

THE EIGHT HOUR FIGHT.

Labor's Champions Discuss It at Philadelphia.

KNIGHTS AND THE FEDERATION.

A Meeting of Representatives of Both Those Well Known Labor Organizations. They Are Working Together Harmoniously—What Other Workers Are Doing.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—Representatives of the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor held a conference at the Girard house during the afternoon. General Master Workman Powderly, Secretary Hayes and A. W. Wright represented the knights, and President Samuel Gompers, William Martin, of Pittsburg; Henry Ehman and John B. Lennon, of New York, appeared for the federation. The conference was harmonious throughout and lasted three hours. The present condition of the eight hour movement received a full and free discussion. The knights' representatives stated that the executive board could do nothing as a board until the general assembly, which meets at Minneapolis on Nov. 12 next, acted in the matter. Circulars relating to the eight hour system had been sent to all local assemblies, and it is likely that delegates to the General assembly will be fully informed as to the views of the people they represent on the question.

Letters to Representative Men.

On behalf of the federation, it was stated that letters had been sent to representative men seeking an opinion on the subject and the replies received were nearly every instance favorable. It was agreed that the federation would give the knights' executive board, for presentation to the General assembly, a synopsis of the opinions and views and their plan of action, and President Gompers, if possible, would attend the General assembly and address the delegates. The knights' board will not ask formally for the federation of any action that may be taken by the General assembly bearing on the eight-hour question.

Will Work for Harmony.

The present condition of the relations of the different labor organizations to each other was next discussed with a view to harmonizing various interests and to prevent disputes and disagreements in the future. The knights offered a written proposition suggesting a mutual exchange of working cards, a mutual recognition of each other's laws, and the adoption of a rule which would prevent one body from organizing the suspended or expelled members of another.

A Third Conference to Be Held.

The federation proposed that the knights discourage the formation of trade organizations within the order, the promise being made that the federation would urge the members of its various trades to withdraw with mixed assemblies of Knights of Labor. It was agreed that the matters above referred to should form the subject of discussion at the conference, and that a third conference that has been held between the two organizations. Another will be held between the General assembly on Nov. 12 and the convening of the Federation of Labor on Dec. 10. Before adjournment the gentlemen present had a general conversation on the present condition of the labor movement, and exchanged views as to what would best promote the success of the common object.

The Brakemen's Convention.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 15.—About 700 delegates have already arrived to take part in the second annual convention of the Brotherhood of Railroad Brakemen which opens here today. In the afternoon the brotherhood held a parade, which made an imposing affair, there being about fifty carriages and fully 500 men in line. In the evening a public meeting was held in the armory, attended by 1,500 people, at which addresses of general interest to railroad men were discussed. Among the speakers were Governor Merriam, Mayor Smith, County Attorney Egan, Judge Williams and Gen. Becker, of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission.

The Methodist Conference.

Dr. Searle was appointed financial agent of Canaseraga seminary and C. M. Eddy general secretary of the Sunday school work. Principal Clements, of the Canaseraga seminary, reported that $30,000 had been secured for the endowment. Dr. Quaal and Dr. Ives have been elected clerical delegates to the Ecumenical conference and Professor J. R. French and Hon. D. Decker, lay delegates. The report on temperance and constitutional prohibition provoked a heated and prolonged discussion. Dr. Warren insisted on recording his vote as being opposed to that section of the report which recommended every form of license. The promotion to the Bergen trial raised its case. It is feared the trial will prolong the session.

Death of Alexander Duncan.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 15.—A cablegram announces the death in London of Alexander Duncan, formerly of this city. He owned real estate here assessed at about $2,000,000. He was born in Scotland in 1805, came to America a youth, was graduated from Yale, practiced law in New York, settled here in 1838, became president of the Providence and Worcester railroad, was a delegate to the Peace convention held before the war, removed to England in 1862. He gave largely to public institutions in this city. He leaves two sons and a daughter, the widow of Sir Robert Hay, Bart.

THE EPISCOPALIAN CONVENTION.

The Work of the Day—The Delegates Received at Baltimore's.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—In the Episcopalian convention the committee on canons that the title "Protestant Episcopal" be changed to "American Church," on the ground that the former title was indefinite, was referred to the committee on canons.

After recess the Rev. William R. Gordon made a lengthy report on missionary work in Mexico. The committee in whom was referred the report of the board of missions of Foreign and Domestic missions regarding the proposed million dollar sustentation fund, which failed of its purpose, suggested that the money be returned to the subscribers. Laid on the table. The committee on colored evangelization presented its report, and moved that $40,000 be appropriated for the work among colored people for the coming two years. Carried.

The return of the money subscribed to the sustentation fund was then discussed, but without action the convention adjourned.

The Delegates Banqueted.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The Church club gave a reception at Delmonico's to the delegates attending the Episcopal convention. President Everett P. Wheeler, of the club; Bishop Potter, Bishop Coxe, Bishop Doane, Judd, of Chicago; Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama, and Rev. Dr. Davenport, of Cairo, Ills., were the speakers.

VOTES THROWN OUT.

Democratic Ballots Excluded in Montana. The State May to Republican.

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 15.—The canvassers in Silver Bow county threw out the vote in what is known as the railroad precinct, which gives the Democrats a majority of 174. If this action is upheld by the courts it will seat the entire Republican delegation from that county (eleven members), overcome the Democratic majority of 150 on joint ballot and give the Republicans control of that body.

The Democratic managers will ask Judge Ide Wolfe for a writ of mandamus to compel the canvassers to count the votes cast. The throwing out of this precinct, while it reduces Toole's vote for governor, does not overcome his majority.

The Democratic committee have issued a statement and protest in regard to the action of the Silver Bow canvassers.

The Congregationalists.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 15.—At the Congregational convention a resolution asking congress to increase the number of navy and army chaplains was adopted. Recommendations from the finance committee were adopted increasing the pay of the secretary and appropriating $100 toward the year book; also that all churches contribute to the expenses of the gospel at the rate of 15½ cents per member. Business was practically finished at the afternoon session. Several reports were made, none of them important, and a committee of five to suggest improvements in public worship was appointed. A resolution was adopted that the Christian Endeavor movement be recommended, and was referred to the committee in charge of such matters. Two hundred dollars were collected for the Crete academy. A delegation to attend the proposed ecumenical council was appointed. In the evening session Rev. Josiah Strong spoke on "Religion and the Public Schools," and closing addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Dunning, D. D. Mears and Moderator Northrup. The meeting closed with the doxology and benediction by Rev. J. Strong, after which the council was dissolved for three years.

An Alleged Poisoner Arrested.

LISBON, N. H., Oct. 15.—Chauncey M. Williams, of Lisbon, was arrested on suspicion of attempting to poison Frank Foster and family. Deserating Emerson's Grave.

CONCORD, Mass., Oct. 15.—The desecration of Ralph Waldo Emerson's grave Saturday night has caused much consternation here. Dr. Edward A. Emerson has returned home, and appears satisfied with the examination made by Sanctuary Keyes, Undertaker Farrar and Chief of Police Sanford, on Sunday, who declare that none of the remains have been taken. The Emerson family desire no further disturbance, and the grave will be continued at the grave for the present and until a solid vault of masonry with stone covering can be constructed. The hole was dug at the foot of the grave big enough to admit a man's body, and extending down to the box inclosing the casket. The hole was discovered by chance by visitors to the cemetery on Sunday, and word sent to the Emerson mansion to pay their respects to the president. The term opens with a crowded docket of about 1,875 cases, only 109 more than were on its docket last year.

Quartermaster Stowe's Deficiency.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 15.—At a meeting of Admiral Foote post, G. A. R., the auditory report of Quartermaster Stowe, of the 23d regiment, Quartermaster William H. Stowe, Mr. Stowe has been very prominent in Grand Army circles, and was for years instructor of military tactics in the Hopkins Grammar school. He has been quartermaster of the post for seven years, and has stood high in business and social circles. There was much feeling manifested last night over the fact that the auditors' quarterly examinations of Stowe's accounts have been merely formal for some years past.

The Election in Samoa.

AUCKLAND, Oct. 15.—At the time of the latest advices from Samoa the natives were in progress for the election of a king. At a public meeting held in Apia the present king and all the foreign representatives were in attendance. Malietoa addressed the people, and in his speech highly praised Mataafa and advised them to elect him king. As for himself he said he was perfectly willing to be left out. The supporters of Mataafa stood in Samoa that in case Mataafa is elected, which seems almost certain, Germany will refuse to recognize him. In that case serious complications are threatened.

BIG GUNS OVER THE SEA.

The Size of Germany's Cannon Greatly Exaggerated.

THEY ARE BIG ENOUGH, THOUGH

And Krupp's Largest Specimen Weighs About 150 Tons—Smaller Ordnance Is Now Preferred—Prince Bismarck and the Czar.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Recently a report went the rounds of the English press to the effect that the well known gunmakers, Messrs. Krupp, of Essen, had shipped at Hamburg, for the fortifications of Cronstadt, a monster piece of ordnance weighing 225 tons. The length of this gun was said to be 40 feet, its caliber 13½ inches and its diameter 85½ feet, while we were further told that its range was 11 miles, and that a 4-foot base projectile, weighing 1,000 pounds, fired from it with 700 pounds of powder would penetrate 19½ inches of armor.

Krupp's Largest Cannon.

In the first place there is no 225-ton gun in existence; in the second, when there is we shall scarcely expect from it better results than have been obtained by the present 120-ton Krupp's largest gun is said to weigh 100 tons. It is not quite 40 feet long, and with 1,323 pounds of powder it can throw a projectile of 2,500 pounds through 80 inches of wrought iron. The same firm has also constructed a gun of 72 tons of 130 and 119 tons, the latter for the fortifications at Spezzia.

Italy Has the Big Fellows.

For much better results, however, even than those recorded in this apocryphal gun, we can look in England. Some months ago a 101-ton gun, mounted in the Dolilo and other Italian men-of-war, is 30 feet long and its caliber 17 inches. It can throw a 2,000 pound projectile with 725 pounds of powder through 32.8 inches of wrought iron. This record beats the imaginary gun, and the Armstrong 125-ton gun, carried by the Italian ships the Lauria and the Doria, and the 110-ton guns of the Benbow and the Victoria now give better results. Designs for a gun of 156 tons are said to be in the royal gun factory at Woolwich.

The Race for Large Guns Over.

The rage for large guns, however, is dying out, and everything points to smaller guns being used in preference both afloat and ashore. The British 67-ton gun puts a 1,250 pound projectile through thirty inches of armor. The French 47-ton gun, with a 925 pound projectile, and piece twenty-four tons and one-fifth inches of wrought iron at the muzzle, and its range is eleven and one-half miles.

Ex-King Milan Interviewed.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A Parisian journal has been interviewing ex-King Milan, of Servia, who says very emphatically that his abdication of the Servian throne was not only unconditional and irrevocable, but final, and that final. He does not desire to resume power in Servia and has no political aims in the country. He was not at all surprised at the downfall of his former queen, Natalie, in Belgrade at the present time. She was always fond of kicking up a row upon the slightest provocation or no provocation at all, and the present unsettled condition of affairs in Servia gave her an opportunity she could not ignore. He ridiculed the suggestion that the ex-queen had any assurances of getting back her husband. He admitted that her game was to convince the Servians that Russia stood behind her.

Bismarck and the Czar.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Prince Bismarck held a final and prolonged interview with the czar at the Russian embassy. The conversation between the emperor and the ex-chancellor William, seizing the earliest chance of learning the result of the interview, drove with Prince Bismarck back to the chancellor's residence. Political circles here are highly satisfied with the exchange of views between Emperor William and the czar. It is believed that peace is assured on the basis that Bulgaria belongs to Russian and Servia to Austrian spheres of interest.

Engineers and Stokers Strike.

During the war of 1812 he was one of the eighteen who went to Fort Hill at Winnebagoe Lake to defend the Saco harbor. He was a member of the first city council of Biddeford, and was one of the oldest Masons in the state, having joined the order in Newburn, N. C., in 1816. He followed the sea from early manhood to old age.

A Memorable First Night.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Edwin Booth and Miss. Modjeska opened their New York season at the Broadway theatre, and the occasion proved an attractive one, the audience being unusually large and brilliant. An especially interesting theatrical event was the appearance of Joseph Jefferson and W. J. Florence in "The Rivals" at the Star theatre. The popular comedians were warmly received.

Low Water in the Canal.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The canal water is low and the lockport mills, on the creek, closing down all the vast industries dependent on the water power. The increased by low water at Buffalo. Many boats are aground at Tonawanda. The level is eight inches lower at Tonawanda now.

Township Admitted to Bail.

A Murderer Lynched.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 15.—A special to The Chronicle, says: Robert Berrier, who shot and killed his mother-in-law, Mrs. Walker, near Lexington, last week, was captured near Greensboro, and lynched. He was hanged to a tree on the outskirts of the town.

Both Washed Overboard.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Capt. Wm. Bailes, of the fishing schooner William Emerson, of Boston, and Patrick Jennings, one of the crew, were washed overboard and drowned in the bay by a sudden squall. Both leave families in Boston.

Le Coney's Plea "Not Guilty."

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 15.—Challiss La Coney was formally arraigned to answer to the indictment charging him with the murder of his niece, Amelia La Coney, on Saturday not guilty.

THE JURY FIXERS.

Lawyer John Graham Arrested—Prominent Irishmen Self for London.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—John Graham, the lawyer man indicted in connection with the conspiracy to bribe jurors in the Cronin case, gave bonds in the sum of $20,000, double the amount required of his fellow conspirator. A brother of the noted lawyer, A. R. Trude, and Alderman Whelan became sureties for the prisoner. Joseph Keenan, the fruit dealer who was arrested late Saturday night, was also released on $5,000 bail. Mayor Harrison will be present at the trial today. It is said that Graham was the man who employed the other six to see that the jurors stood right with the court and the jury. The evidence against Graham, he said, was as strong as could be expected in such a case. Graham began this work over two months ago, but the state's attorney's office said that the eight jurors already examined have not been tampered with. Frederick W. Goetch will be the principal witness against Graham. Mr. Longenecker, the stenographer, will say that up to this time had not been any evidence of any kind that would implicate E. S. Taylor or Thomas Scanlon, clerk of the probate court.

Dr. O'Reilly Leaves for London.

DUBLIN, Oct. 15.—Dr. O'Reilly, treasurer of the National league of America and John Atkinson, a prominent attorney and Irish Nationalist, of this city, have just left here for London. Dr. O'Connor has it that their departure has something to do with recent disclosures in the Cronin trial at Chicago. Dr. O'Reilly received a cablegram from London on Saturday, requesting their visit, and subsequently held a long conference with Col. Atkinson, at the latter's residence.

A Fatal Shooting Affray.

NEWBURGH, Miss., Oct. 15.—Dr. W. M. Tutt, of this place, and F. G. Collins, of Lebanon, Ky., had a shooting affray here. Tutt was to have been tried for complicity in the Doyle tragedy of last year, in which Dr. and Mrs. Doyle were murdered. Collins and J. W. Turner were witnesses against him. The case was dismissed for lack of an affidavit. Shortly afterward Collins was loudly expressing his views when Collins came up with a double barreled shotgun and fired into Collins' face, killing him instantly. Some of the shot entered the back of Turner, who was an innocent bystander. Tutt then fired the second barrel load into Collins' prostrate body. Turner, who was Collins' brother-in-law, is near by, and a second affair he and Tutt exchanged a pistol shot. Tutt finally fell, two balls having passed through his body. He died three hours later. Person will recover.

HE GOT THE BILL.

A Bonest Tailor Catches His Man by the Nick of Time.

For a year or two past the collector for a certain fashionable tailor has been trying all sorts of pacific ways to get the sum of $25 out of a gentleman who has been a debtor for several years. The collector has been put off a hundred times by promises made to be broken, and he has worked every ruse known to fertile brain without avail. The other evening it happened down at the Thirty-fifth street depot that the young man buy a ticket for Chicago.

"Do you are going west?" he asked.

"Only to Chicago. I'll be back in three or four days and then I want to pay you that little bill."

"Is. Going to Chicago on a visit?"

"Not at all; going to get married."

"Ah!"

"But. The ceremony takes place at 10 o'clock in the morning."

"And you want to be there, of course?"

"I should like."

The collector took off his hat, removed his coat and kept putting off his visit when the other asked him what was up.

"I've been hiding my time, and my opportunity has come," he replied.

"How's what?"

"I'm going to light into you. You are the bigger man and I expect to be licked, but the row will certainly cause both of us to be arrested. Come to the station, and you will have time to make your train. Perhaps I can thank your cut, and in that case the marriage can come off for a week. Do you want to do it?"

"Say, man, you wouldn't be as mean as that!"

"Thirteen dollars or a row."

"I'll pay you half."

"Its all or nothing. It's my first, last and only chance. Come down or put up."

The young man took out his needle and cried for the amount of the bill, and while he stood for the train the other calmly donned his garments and left the depot chuckling. "I Wonder What My Ma Would Say?"—Detroit Free Press.

When Thackeray Was First Here.

When Thackeray made his first visit to this country, in the year 1856, the yacht America had a year before taken the cup in competition with the best that England could furnish. As a result of this her designer and builder, George Steers, was a considerable figure not only in yachting circles, but in all others. Thackeray, who was interested in everything, expressed a desire to Mr. Dana to visit Mr. Steers. Accordingly the next day Mr. Dana called upon the novelist at his hotel and went with him to the ship yards where Mr. Steers was working. They were introduced in the ordinary terms, and stood conversing with each other a few minutes. Finally, during a hiatus in the conversation, Mr. Steers stepped around to Mr. Dana, nudged him on the elbow and asked: "What did you say his name was?"

"Thackeray," replied Mr. Dana.

Then, much to Mr. Dana's surprise, and gratification, Mr. Steers confessed his inquiries by saying: "Is he famous for anything?"

Mr. Dana told the story to his friend and visitor, very much to his delight. Thackeray was always fond of telling such stories as this on himself; but this one, so far as my memory goes, has never been seen in print.—St. Louis Republic.

A Life Saved.

Mr. Simkins (wildly)—You must be mine. Say "yes" or I will drown myself.

Miss Prettie—You will at least wait until I have had time to think over it, I am sure.

Mr. Simkins—How long? It is now September. Will you give me my answer in October?

Miss Prettie—I will if I can. If not you will have to wait longer.

Miss Prettie (the following December)—What! Still in the land of the living! It is a month, nearly, since I refused you, and you know you were to drown yourself if I said "no."

Mr. Simkins (despondently)—Yes, but you waited so long that the—the water got too cold.—New York Weekly.

Sudden Change of Subject.

Mr. Smallpurse (who has carefully figured up the cost of two theatre tickets and the street car fare)—Do you enjoy the drama, Miss Gehall?

Miss Gehall—Oh, very much; but I become entirely sworn out every time I go. You see the play is seldom over before 10:30, and then it takes fully an hour to get supper at "Del's," and after that comes the long ride home, and the hackmen do poke so, you know.

HEART LONELINESS.

Alone, alone! Life's deepest sorrow sighs
In this dark pressing season. Upon the years
Of youth
We find in the world no thing for tears;
That heart to heart may keep confidence in vain.
And, asking, guard the secret of its pain,
Based in its silent prison by its fears.
To waken eyes that see not, none dwell care
That hope of comfort have alone the wish.

Who has not yearned in such hour for unity
To commune back to life some spirit dear!
Dreaming in that dear presence he were free,
His soul's contrasted anguish to out-reveal;
But what of pain, if a word or look could not be;
Our worst of woe we tell not to the dead.
—Emily Pfeiffer in Boston Transcript.

ALL THE FAMILY LAWYERS.

Father, Mother and Three Daughters With the Bar.

An entire family of lawyers. That is what the Pier family—father, mother and three daughters—are to be. Col. C. K. Pier, formerly of Fond du Lac, now of Milwaukee, an old practitioner. His wife and his oldest daughter are also practicing, and his two younger daughters are taking the law course at the State university.

Mrs. Pier and her daughter, Kate H. Pier, graduated from the law department of the State university in 1887, and I were two of only four women in the law class. Before this fall takes the law out as of the State university, the other two being Mrs. La Follette, the wife of Congressman La Follette, of Madison, who graduated in the class with Josie Hutchinson, of Richland Centre, Wis., who graduated last year. Mrs. Pier and her daughter are associated together in the law office in the Miller block, and are enjoying a large practice.

It was Miss Pier who attracted such interest in the supreme court when she made the fact that she was the first woman lawyer who ever appeared before the supreme tribunal of the state. She appeared but as a young girl and as a young lawyer in the lower court. For half an hour her argument was followed with the closest attention by all present. Even the dignified judges seemed to appreciate it as an unusual event, and mingled an increased degree of austerity with a certain amount of interest in the fair young attorney.

Miss Pier acted her case unhesitatingly, and frequently turned to and cited authorities, showing an acquaintance with law and a degree of self possession. At the conclusion of her address she was cordially congratulated for the successful impression she had made, and among themselves the lawyers were unanimously of the opinion that she would act accordingly, strong and convincing argument.

It was a trying ordeal for a lady so young, as Miss Pier is but 20 years of age. She has a strikingly handsome and intelligent face, and is possessed of a wealth of black hair, which, in a single coil, almost trails the floor. Like this exceptional young woman of today, she wears no bangs, but combs her hair back. Miss Pier is a native of Fond du Lac, Wis., and a graduate of the Fond du Lac high school. In 1890, at the same time as her mother, she entered the law department of the State university and, by taking a double course in 1897, obtained the degree entitling her to practice in all the state courts. For ten months she held a position in the legal department of the Wisconsin Central railway, resigning April 1 to associate herself with her mother.

"Yes, I like the profession," said Miss Pier today, "and also the science of medicine, which I have studied, too, for some years. While, of course, the two are in no way identical, still I think it well for a lawyer to be more or less familiar with medicine, as it is often useful, particularly in the taking of such expert testimony as is likely to be offered in the Cronin case."

Miss Pier's two sisters, who have entered the State university for a course in the law department, are Carrie H., aged 18, and Harriet H., aged 17.—Milwaukee Cor. Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Wonder if Everybody Knows

That the best covering for a poultice or a mustard plaster is thin paper?

That hands may be kept smooth in cold weather by avoiding the use of warm water. Wash them with cold water and soap.

That the best and most economical cover for a jelly tumbler is this paper fastened over the top of the glass by a rubber band.

That the best way to clear out and straighten the fringe of towels, dollies, etc., before ironing, is to comb it, while damp, with an inch length of coarse toilet comb.

That plaited skirts will last for the older children is to be found in the making of a scrap book of the portraits of noted men and women; the portraits to be obtained from published pictures, magazines, newspapers and other available sources.

That essence of peppermint, applied with the finger tips over the seat of pain, gives relief in headache or neuralgia, whether there is any part of the body. (Care must be taken not to put it directly under the eye, on account of the smarting it would cause.)—Nelly Browne in Good Housekeeping.

A Mother's Eyes.

Mrs. Plunkett, the superintendent of the House of Mercy, a hospital on the English cottage plan, in fashionable Pittsfield, Mass., has given an example of a mother's devotion too conspicuous to pass unnoticed. Her son, a promising young man, just ready to enter a medical school, was stricken with a disease which left him blind. He was unwilling to resign himself to his misfortune, and his mother went into the clove room with him, making herself his eyes. The text books on anatomy, physiology, chemistry and materia medica she went through with him, reading each day's portion over four times aloud, to be sure it was thoroughly comprehended. The young doctor graduated with honors, and will devote himself to heart and lung diseases, specialties in which sight has comparatively little play. Mrs. Plunkett is a serene faced woman of 50, and the mother-in-law of Miss Dean, the daughter of the senator.—Exchange.

Queen Victoria a Business Woman.

The queen of England does not pass the idle time some people imagine. The position is no sinecure. She receives daily from almost all of the government departments boxes of documents, warrants, etc., requiring her signature and attestation. There is not a question of precedent, etiquette or dress in the realm of the army or naval or military and civil orders and decorations that does not come under her immediate supervision. In addition she carefully peruses the minutes of Privy Council, which, it is said to be a model of punctuality.—London Letter.

Agreeable a Hair Wash.

What remains itself as being an excellent hair wash has recently been recommended in a German journal. It is said to keep the scalp cool and the hair dry and to prevent, also to prevent dandruff, besides being a most agreeable toilet preparation. It is composed of the following ingredients: Spirit of ether, one and one-half drachm; tincture of arnica, two drachms; tincture of vanilla, one drachm; balm drops, three minims; geranium oil, one drop. Mix well. Keep well corked and do not expose to direct sunlight or strong heat.—Boston Herald.

The net proceeds of the work will be applied to the relief of the printers, orphan children and aged men and women who suffered by the flood.

CANE AND UMBRELLA NOVELTIES.

Silver etched to represent the grain of pine wood constitutes a plain handle of a recent make.

The inveterate dice gambler is now using a cane with his favorite implements secreted in the handle.

Rather massive in appearance is a silver cane, coiled twice around an Indian canoe of the same metal.

A puff box and small mirror are contained in an umbrella handle that will doubtless soon have a large sale.

An umbrella head of Japanese make is of solid silver and represents three monkeys playing among the branches of a cocoanut tree.

An old design for umbrella handles that has recently been revived consists of Dresden china painted with scenes from the old masters.

For those who think a silver head too conspicuous small oxidized silver tassels, which give a wood handle a decided finish, have been produced.

Small gold leaves, the veins of which are delicately delineated as clinging to the smooth surface of a gold crook, form an elaborate and costly handle.

Blue enamel forms the background for some beautiful open silver work on a recent importation. Mythological figures with attending animals are artistically reproduced in color.

A beautiful piece of silver work is a handle representing the curved trunk of an oak tree. At intervals the plain wood of the tree, from which the bark has been removed, is covered with a delicate tracery of leaves and acorns, all in silver. Gold is used to heighten the effect.

Guiding the Scenes.

Housework, in reality, is healthful and pleasant. It is the natural work and unconscious vent for their restless energy that produces many victims of nervous prostration. It is also wholly compatible, if brought under any proper system, with good intellectual work. Moreover, the creating and guiding of a home is the best gift the world has to offer. When one thinks of the flood of bad art and bad music created by the present day, it is not uncharitable to reflect upon the wasted energy that might have gone into beautiful and helpful lives. The education is costly, but the result is to make woman a joy in the superintendence of her home. If she is with all the incentives of love and pride, despises the daily cares that make the comforts of the household, her end and object then to be rightly met by a hired housekeeper, whose only interest is money getting!

"No man can serve two masters;" and, therefore, it seems to me to be self evident that any woman who accepts the gift of a home thereby pledges herself to elevate to it her best service. The highest, if not the only, means of elevation for her soul lies in the work in other directions.

Punished to Death.

The artist's instinct, to be used in the cost of putting down on canvas the "effects" of nature's subtle interchange of hues From my imperfect woman.

may arise the perfect woman.

There are women whose God given talents require no trend a death path. There are many others to whom disappointment comes of a false education. But the best work of artist or poet or physician will ever spring from the hidden, passionate womanliness that appreciates in the full the greatness of the sacrifice or Eve.—Christian Register.

A Mania for Pins.

Georgie Cayvan, who is the leading juvenile lady of the Lyceum company, has an odd little mania for pins. Pretty society girls who make a rendezvous of her dressing room at the theatre begging for "just a few pins" interest her not at all. She always exclaim over the dainty little boudoir. Its walls and ceiling are covered with pale blue satin, and the same color prevails in the soft carpet and rich upholstered furnishings. The ceiling is gathered into a huge rosette of blue folds and the mirror frames are covered with the same material that hides the woodwork. The treasures of the room are the actress' pins, which are thrust into fourteen pin cushions, lying on the dressing table. The cushions are of all shapes and sizes, and the pins are of every imaginable dimension, from the tiny ribbon pin to the long pikes women fasten on their hats with nowadays. There are pins of great value, set with rubies and opals, pins with curiously wrathed and twisted heads, pearl headed pins and pins of gold, silver or platinum. Miss Cayvan can't see a pin without buying it, and some of her pins go back to the days of Queen Elizabeth, when a steel and ruby mounted pin was a personal possession to be used in room of a pocket, which was very sparingly.—New York Mail and Express.

The Prettiest Parisian Actress.

Thirty years ago the prettiest woman in Paris was Blanche Pierson; now it is Mlle. Depoix. The first was fair, the second is dark; the first, even in her youth, had the delightful languor which undoubtedly became vexatious obesity; the second is slender and thin, all muscle, without a suspicion of fat anywhere, just a due covering of flesh on her bones.

The last is, she is pretty, distinctly and charmingly pretty, with dark hair clinging to her forehead, clear gray eyes, black eyebrows drawn with a single stroke of a master's hand; and a long, oval face, and something sweet and suddenly in her whole person, and a figure which undoubtedly foretells promises a woman of the world. There is no sign of the free and easy airiness which assumes the common actress; everything about her is delicate, refined, lovely, and, and in good taste; nothing to catch the eye or divert attention from that charming head on which we gaze with restful pleasure.

The second, this unfortunate victim of obesity, needs no frills or furbelows. It has found its proper setting—a stamp of reserve, almost of dignity. That is what she sees at her boards when she plays, where she is to be seen, for that is all that is required of her; she need not speak.—Dublin Freeman's Journal.

How Some Girls Walk.

Why is it our young ladies do not know how to walk? Scarcely here comes one with her head pitched forward, her hands swinging ungracefully by her side, her feet shuffling the walk, and altogether presenting an appearance quite unbecoming one of America's lovely daughters. All others do, we perhaps, but oh, such a gait! The next one walks with a jerk, her feet and lower part of her body having started on a race with her head to see which would get there first. The consequence is for every step forward she comes part way back with a jerk.

Her daughter follows, striking ungracefully from side to side, rolling from one foot to the other like a sailor in mid ocean, only he has some excuse, and she has not. The arms usually follow, but not in graceful curves. The body of the next one makes a perfect bow, back bent, head forward and feet trying to catch up. Not one with the firm, graceful step, erect head, height, shoulders, easy arms and hands to be acquired by sufficient determination to present a dignified carriage. When will department be taught in our schools?—Kingston Freeman.

A Chinese Custom.

According to the customs of Chinese society, the wife of the Chinese minister to this country will comb her hair up from her forehead, to show that she is married. Her trousers reach to her feet, and so distant is the idea of dressing them close to the ankle that some several days. For the preservation of the coiffure she lies while asleep on a willow pillow as firmly woven as an imported basket. Instead like a loaf of baked bread. The maids dress their back hair in a queue, and arrange a long one and one-half inches deep, from ear to ear. A bit of coquetry is displayed by allowing a single lock to float loosely in front of the face and over the shoulder. The hair of the Chinese girl is never cut, and, as a result of the long queues she has stowed, it grows luxuriantly.—Detroit Free Press.

Good for the Children.

A prominent Buffalo physician is an enthusiast on the subject of onions. He feeds them to his children daily, and says they are the best medicine for preventing colds, and adds: "Feed onions, raw, boiled or baked, to the children three or four times a week, and they'll grow up healthy and strong. No worms, no scarlatina or diphtheria where children eat plenty of onions every day." Some people follow the following easy injunction: "Eat onions and no doctor bill."—Buffalo Letter.

Pneumatic Telegraphs.

The introduction of female service in the English telegraph department and in the opinion of Mr. H. H. Fowler, one of the greatest improvements in our social system. Mr. Fowler ought to know, for he has had a long story to tell recently, and he has been a careful observer. This is high testimony from a man who knows every day he is enlisted minister of high rank.—London Figaro.

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM.

In Belmont county, O., an old gobbler attacked and killed a playful young puppy because he persisted in chasing the young turkeys.

The prize exhibits of the season in French creek, at Cambridge, Pa., were a twenty-seven pound pike and an eel weighing forty pounds eight ounces.

A fisherman at Doylestown, Pa., saw a sunfish swallow a bee, and a few minutes later saw the fish on the water dead. He cut it open and the bee flew off.

John Connor, of Sauk Rio Marie, has a cat which has three legs and eight paws, with one head, three distinct jaws, and to complete the combination it has two tails.

John Jones, a Norristown hunter, has shot with a small rifle an oval shaped bird of bright yellow and red hues, with a face like a monkey and no tail mark on its breast resembling a heart.

A large fish hawk caught a three pound bass in the river at Harrisburg, Pa., and after flying some distance with it was obliged to descend, when it was frightened away and left its prey.

Jacob Shannon's children, while on Shade mountain, Berks county, Pa., recently, came upon a dead snake, and beside it lay a china egg, which the reptile must have swallowed and disgorged in dying.

Thomas Pierce, of Deep Creek Valley, Schuylkill county, Pa., owns the largest raccoon in that vicinity. If a tramp attempts to enter the premises a gleam of the animal's teeth is enough to frighten him.

A horse weighing 1,400 pounds, owned by a man in Dover, N. H., got hungry in the night, left his stall and climbed a long, steep and narrow pair of stairs into the hay loft, where he helped himself to a generous meal.

Rimmie, especially great tits, are held in great horror by many bee keepers, who declare that they are their greatest enemies, and accuse them of helping the moth to destroy the hives and snapping up the bees as they come out to discover what is astir.

A steer which seems destined to a circus life is exhibited at Pimlico, Md. It is 4 years old, fourteen hands high, has a sunken back and high and wedge 4,000 pounds. Not content with being a curiosity as to height, the steer has added the feature of double joints in his legs.

One day recently, not having anything particular to do, the captain of a schooner lying in Tampa bay counted the number of sharks in sight, and he made the figure 760. As he is considered a most upright sea fellow that some of the fish must have got away while he was counting and are to be lumped in as about fifty.

Penns visiting Cacoe Island, Me., recently heard a bird like that which an old fashioned windmill might send forth in a gale. They went to the south side of the island, where they saw a most unusual looking sight of a pitched battle between a sea gull and a crow. The gray bird won, "knocking the crow out so badly" that he was easily captured by the visitors.

Bridgetown, Fla., has a genuine curiosity in the shape of a three legged pig. The little thing is perfect in every respect, being the donor of a litter of six, except that his left forward leg is missing, where it should have been being marked by a boneless projection about an inch in length. He seems to get around with perfect ease, and is always ready for a frolic with his little brothers and sisters when they come around.

Above and back of the rostrum was draped a large American flag, above which was the motto, "For God and Home and Native Land." Memorial service was followed by the reading of the report of the Department of Purity in Literature and Art by its superintendent, Mrs. Sarah Hornby, of Keyport. She was followed by Anthony Comstock, of New York, who spoke for an hour on the evils of vicious literature and kindred topics, to which the Union has of late devoted much of its energy.

THE JOHNSTOWN FUND.

The Balance of $580.64 Forwarded To-day by Mr. Samuel Milliken, Jr.

FRIDAY, May 31st, 1889, the great Johnstown flood occurred. All communication with the stricken district was cut off. The vague accounts given Saturday June 1st, were so terrible that their accuracy was doubted.

Sunday, the information from the press showed that the calamity was even worse than at first reported.

By Monday all doubts were removed. Tuesday THE NEWS started a popular subscription for the relief of the sufferers, and by three o'clock that afternoon the fund made up of contributions ranging from $25 down to 25 cents, amounted to $215.32, which was forwarded the same afternoon.

The next day, Wednesday, Mayor Male, telegraphed $1,000, of which he had contributed $250 toward a fund started by him.

Thursday THE NEWS fund grew to $872.73, the Mayor's fund to $737.

On Friday THE NEWS Fund grew to $1,000.61, and the Mayor's Fund to $1,081.25.

On Saturday THE NEWS Fund grew to $1,079.12, the Mayor's Fund to $1,320.25.

On Sunday the Plainfield churches started a fund, raising $555.05.

On Monday THE NEWS Fund grew to $1,153.12, the Mayor's Fund not reporting.

On Tuesday THE NEWS Fund grew to $1,157.22; the Mayor's Fund to $1,522.50; the Church Fund to $691.65. The Daily Press ceased to report the day before and raised $5.

On Wednesday THE NEWS Fund increased to $1,168,19; the Mayor's Fund didn't report; the Church Fund grew to $665.20; The Daily Press Fund grew to $105, by one contribution of $100, and the grand total grew to $3,377.62.

Saturn's rings are believed to be composed of innumerable meteorites, revolving like moons about the planet.

How are you anyhow? We are glad to see you again, Stovepipe Joke. You come to us fresh and smiling as ever, perennial as the morning. For two months you will be with us, and then you will pass again into six months of well earned retirement. You are doubly welcome, because while you are in the mother-in-law joke is out.

The Goose Bone Prophet.

We knew it. We knew the venerable gray goose bone prophet would make his appearance simultaneously with the fall of the leaf and the stovepipe joke.

The prophet bone is the sharp blade from the breast of a goose that was hatched in spring, and has a trace of wild blood. A row of dots around the keel of the bone forecasts the weather. The darker these spots, the colder the weather will be. Contrary to corn husk lore, the goose bone says there will be a very mild winter. "There will not be many days in which running water will freeze." The coldest weather will come the latter half of January, and the coldest day of all will be Jan. 27. The January thaw will come in February. There will be disastrous floods and dam bursting, and the flend to pay generally. After that we shall have an early spring. We ought to.

The Arsenic Fashion.

The Maybrick trial in Liverpool and the testimony given in evidence that old Maybrick used arsenic and whisky for a tonic, and Mrs. Maybrick used the same poison for her complexion, have had a curious result. It has stimulated the sale of arsenic cocktails and complexion wafers to an unheard of extent in America as well as in Europe. Other fools of both sexes desire to test the Maybrick recipes for themselves. Arsenic nostrums for both the inside and outside of the human animal are plentiful on the market. There are probably women crazy enough to try any means under the sun to secure a good complexion, except the one method prescribed by nature and hygiene.

An unusual crime or out of the way achievement of any sort is sure to find plenty of imitators. This fact seems to favor the presumption that mankind are descended from the monkey.

Our Visitors.

The most distinguished of the Spanish gentlemen now receiving Yankee hospitality is Senor Matias Romero, Mexican minister to United States since 1882. From Guatemala comes the leading literary man of that little country, Senor Ferdinand Cruz, LL. D., though what a literary man could know about commercial relations is hard to tell. The delegation from the Argentine Republic is a brainy one. Its chairman is Minister Quesada, at Washington. The delegate from Bolivia is a newspaper man, Juan Francisco Velarde. The Venezuelan delegate, also a journalist. Many of the delegates from the different countries are lawyers.

At this time the whole array of distinguished guests are making the grand tour of the country. The plan is to show them our manufactures and our massive and mighty agricultural products; also our military resources in case of war, and to impress them on general principles that the United States is no end of a great country anyhow, richly worth trading with.

With this view, after a brief inspection of West Point, the party were taken first to New England. In admiration not unmingled with awe they gazed upon Yankee cotton mills, Yankee carpet, hosiery and woolen mills. They inspected thread factories and shoe and silk factories, edge tool works and the Waltham Watch company's buildings. They gazed on the gilded top of the Massachusetts state house. They scented the awful air of Boston culture as it lived. In each place where there is time for it they received a banquet and a reception.

By the time their six weeks' tour is ended our guests will have traveled 5,000 miles on our steamers and in our palace coaches. They will have seen and smelled the Standard oil of Cleveland, O.; they will have witnessed pork slaughtering in Chicago, and tasted the beer and admired the cream colored brick of Milwaukee. At Ann Arbor they will have beheld something of the Spanish eye and stood out with wonder, a splendid university where young men and women get their education together, and in the same classes, peaceably and with no nonsense.

They will go west as far as Omaha, then, returning, they will take a peep at Kentucky and see the pretty girls and fast horses of the Blue Grass region. At Cincinnati their path will be made smooth by discovering that that city makes more glycerine than any other place in the world does. Thence by way of Pittsburg and its iron works our guests will return to Washington. But it is a thousand pities they will not visit the iron works of the new south too.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

Meeting of the Democratic Societies of Pennsylvania.

A LETTER FROM MR. CLEVELAND.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall's Regrets—What Is Going on in New York State—The Situation in Montana—New Jersey Republicans Meet at Elizabeth.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—The Thalia theatre was crowded with the delegates to the first general assembly of the Democratic societies of Pennsylvania. In his speech on calling the convention to order President Black evoked applause by referring to the tariff as a tax "which pillages the mass to enrich the class." In the course of his remarks he said:

President Black's Speech.

"We know no differences, no dissensions. In the Democratic society, indeed in the Democratic party; properly speaking, there can be none. All the fundamental doctrines are the same yesterday, today and forever. As to tariff taxes, for instance, discriminating against many industries to artificially stimulate a few, pillaging the mass to enrich a class no Democrat ever, as an original proposition, believed that inquisition consistent with a republican system. 'It is,' cried Thomas Jefferson, the first Democratic president, 'a question whether we are to live under a limited or an unlimited government,' and after the lapse of a century come ringing down to us his solemn words: 'Grover Cleveland, the last Democratic president, 'Unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation.' Congress has power to tax only for the support of the government, economically administered.' Chairmen of Democratic national limits, and a seizure of the property of the people, by the exercise of the power of taxation, for any but a public and general purpose, is an unconstitutional and monstrous abuse."

Chairman Hensel's Remarks.

W. U. Hensel was then chosen chairman, and in the course of his remarks, said: "We are for tariff reform, and will not allow the efforts nor turn back from the course of our leaders. We are for genuine civil service reform. Some may fall out by the wayside, but others will take their places. Chairmen may go, but we welcome President Eliot, of Harvard. We are for ballot reform, for the enfranchising liberties of the south and the white workingman of the north."

A Letter from ex-President Cleveland.

The following letter from ex-president Cleveland was then read:

NEW YORK, Oct. 11, 1888.

Hon. Chauncey F. Black:

MY DEAR SIR—I am sorry that I shall not be able to be in Philadelphia at the general assembly of the Democratic societies of Pennsylvania on the 16th inst., and cannot, therefore, attend the meeting which will follow that assembly. My estimate of the value of these Democratic societies as agencies for the instruction of the people upon public work is well known, and there never was a time when, in the interests of good government and national prosperity, they were more needed.

The condition of political affairs is such that the attention of all true Democrats should be directed to the enforcement of the distinctive principles of the party, and, in my opinion, this is no time for the adoption of doubtful and temporizing expedients. We, as a party, are fairly enlisted in the cause of the people, and patriotism, duty and party success require that our efforts be earnest and steadfast. All personal and selfish aims should be subordinated. I confidently expect that in the work we have before us the Democratic societies will exhibit an efficiency which will be gratefully acknowledged by all who have at heart the welfare and prosperity of the American people.

Yours very sincerely, GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Letter Heartily Cheered.

The scene which followed the reading of ex-President Cleveland's letter was almost beyond description. The delegates cheered until they could cheer no more by reason of exhaustion.

Samuel J. Randall's Regrets.

The following letter from Samuel J. Randall was also read:

WALLINGFORD, Oct. 7.

Hon. Chauncey F. Black:

MY DEAR SIR—Your letter asking my presence at the general assembly of the Democratic clubs of Pennsylvania, to be held at Philadelphia on the 15th instant, received.

I shall go to Washington before that time and cannot accept but appreciate your courtesy. I hope the meeting will be successful in every particular. Organization is what is needed in the state, and the work of the state committee should receive the encouragement and support of every Democrat in our good old commonwealth.

Yours truly, SAMUEL J. RANDALL.

The Officers Elected.

President Black, Secretary J. D. Worman, of Philadelphia, and the following vice presidents: Irwin Steele, of Ashland, were re-elected, and W. J. Rauch, of Reading; J. H. W. Howard, of Harrisburg (colored), and Edward Murphy and John H. Fow, of Philadelphia, were elected vice presidents.

The report of the committee on resolutions was received but announcing

BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY.

ELECTRICAL PHRASES

By this term we do not mean the experts who installed recently that they could receive a shock of 50,000 volts and feel sort of braced up on it. We make this explanation in order to prevent any misconception of the tenor of the article by the intelligent reader. By "electrical freaks" we do not mean people who play fantastic tricks with their imaginations when they talk or write on this subject, but rather the practical which the forked lightning plays when it strikes a hen house and lights up the emotional fancy of the reporter who is working on space.

A few years ago a young man named Casper Wildpants, residing in Asbury park, was sitting at the window of his boarding house, reading his week's mail, when the lightning struck it and divide it equally among himself and give some of it to his father and a little to his landlady or take it all and hire a hack and a narrow buggy and take a proud ride and carelessly behave out to drive. At that moment a bolt of lightning struck the corner of a large house in Long Branch, not more than seven or eight miles away, and the young man never thought of his father or his landlady again. They often thought of him, but nobody ever found out where he went.

In the summer of 1870 John J. Fowler was a practical paper hanger in Albany. During the first week of June he was hanging paper in the residence of Mr. Clarence H. Mott. The grey when a heavy black cloud came over the city from the west, and a single flash of lightning fell from the cloud, entered the room where Fowler was at work, ran up the trimmer machine like a beanstalk, shrivel up the paste, turned up the paste, burned all the paper in the room and trimmed sixteen yards of arabesque border. Some of the family went in the room about 7 o'clock that evening and found Fowler lying on the table, still sleeping from the effects of the shock. The stroke had also affected his mind and it seriously impaired his natural faculties, but he afterward brought in a bill for the work, and had to sue for it (Mr. Montgomery being a very rich man), and he testified that he had done all this work before going to sleep. But that was impossible, and the court so decided, as it was established by the evidence of more than twenty householders that up to the hanger ever did that much work in a day.

People now living in Skaneateles who resided there in the spring of 1,283 still remember the excitement over the remarkable case of the Rev. Lars Christopherson, rector of the Aboriginal American church. He was sitting in his study on Sabbath morning, in a mental and gloomy state of mind, having just learned that his son, who had gone off on a little scalping party down the lake the night before, had taken the only razor in the house. While the elder sat gloomily rubbing his chin and wondering if he couldn't whisper it before class meeting, a storm that had been gathering for some time suddenly broke above the town with terrific violence. A long zigzag streak of ball lightning entered the window of the minister's study, shaved his chin as close as without raising a pimple, trimmed his hair straight across the back of the neck, giving him that peculiarly neat look of meekly meekness which is the ardent triumph of that style of cut, banged it in front to make him look childlike and simple, gave his shoes a patent leather shine, brushed his coat and vest and left the window again with a crashing noise like a 4-year-old boy falling off a pew during the long prayer. The strangest thing about the occurrence was his discovery of it next morning, when the preacher discovered that the lightning, on departing, had burned a hole in his vest pocket and fused a silver quarter into a round sphere, which had dropped out on his way to the meeting house.

Last July, Mrs. Weatherby Showers, wife of the well known financier of that name, was putting her three children to bed one very warm, sultry evening when a flash of sheet lightning—Hey? Sir? I "want to remember that this is a Sunday paper?" Ha! I'd like to see to get a chance to forget it. Well, that's so; guess I'll leave that Showers story out. It is pretty tough, a little. But the others may stand. If they are as true as some lightning stories I've heard told by some awfully truthful people, I don't want a cent that I can't get.

PROFESSIONAL MEASURES.

President of Electric Light Company to Secretary—Look here, we've got to cut down those gas bills some way or other. You must do more of your work by daylight or else you'll have to burn kerosene in the office. Why not get a couple of student lamps, if you must work after night?"

NOW YOU SEE HOW IMPORTANT IT IS.

"The aim and end of manual training in the schools," says a teacher, "is ethical." And yet there are some people who denounce a four years' college course of football and—Ha; come to think of it, they are correct; football isn't manual training.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Miss.

Old Gent (evidently under great mental strain)—See here, sir, I want to speak to you, sir. You were at my house until very late last night, and after my daughter went to her room I heard her sobbing for an hour. You're a villain, sir, and I've a great mind—

Young Man—Sobbing!

O. G.—Yes, sir. How dared you to insult—

Y. M.—I wouldn't think of such a thing. Believe me.

O. G. (tempestuously)—What did you say to her, sir?

Y. M.—I merely remarked that I was too poor to marry.—New York Weekly.

Nautical Questions.

Lady (to sea captain)—How do you manage to find your way across the ocean?

Captain—By the compass. The needle always points to the north.

But suppose you wish to go south?—Texas Siftings.

A Poser.

There's a matter that's troubled us greatly,
And it never been settled as yet.
We should like to have some one inform us
Whether Eve was a blonde or brunette.
—New York Sun.

For More Uses Than One.

Mr. Whiffletree (who has pleased his fond on the fly by catching her)—That's just about the cutest thing I ever saw, but darn me if I'd a knowed what it was for if that chap'd hadn't sold me.—Mooney's Weekly.

Saturn's rings are believed to be composed of innumerable meteorites, revolving like moons about the planet.

How are you anyhow? We are glad to see you again, Stovepipe Joke. You come to us fresh and smiling as ever, perennial as the morning. For two months you will be with us, and then you will pass again into six months of well earned retirement. You are doubly welcome, because while you are in the mother-in-law joke is out.

The Goose Bone Prophet.

We know it. We know the venerable gray goose bone prophet would make his appearance simultaneously with the fall of the leaf and the stovepipe joke.

The true bone is the sharp blade from the breast of a goose that was hatched in spring, and has a trace of wild blood. A row of dots around the keel of the bone forecasts the weather. The darker these spots, the colder the weather will be. Contrary to corn husks and bone, the goose bone says there will be a very mild winter. "There will not be many days in which running water will freeze." The coldest weather will come the latter half of January, and the coldest day of all will be Jan. 27. The January thaw will come in February, and there will be disastrous floods and dam bursting, and the flend to pay generally. After that we shall have an early spring. We ought to.

The Arsenic Fashion.

The Maybrick trial in Liverpool and the testimony given in evidence that old Maybrick used arsenic and whisky for a tonic, and Mrs. Maybrick used the same poison for her complexion, have had a curious result. It has stimulated the sale of arsenic cocktails and complexion wafers to an unheard of extent in America as well as in Europe. Other fools of both sexes desire to test the Maybrick recipes for themselves. Arsenic nostrums for both the inside and outside of the human animal are plentiful on the market. There are probably women crazy enough to try any means under the sun to secure a good complexion, except the one method prescribed by nature and hygiene.

An unusual crime or out of the way achievement of any sort is sure to find plenty of imitators. This fact seems to favor the presumption that mankind are descended from the monkey.

Our Visitors.

The most distinguished of the Spanish gentlemen now receiving Yankee hospitality is Senor Matias Romero, Mexican minister to the United States since 1882. From Guatemala comes the leading literary man of that little country, Senor Ferdinand Cruz, LL. D., though what a literary man could know about commercial relations is hard to tell. The delegation from the Argentine Republic is a brainy one. Its chairman is Minister Quesada, at Washington. The delegate from Bolivia is a newspaper man, Juan Francisco Velarde. The Venesuelan delegate, is also a journalist. Many of the delegates from the different countries are lawyers.

At this time the whole array of distinguished guests are making the grand tour of the country. The plan is to show them our manufactures and our massive and mighty agricultural products; also our military resources in time of war, and to impress them on general principles that the United States is no end of a great country anyhow, richly worth trading with.

With this view, after a brief inspection of West Point, the party were taken first to New England. In admiration not unmingled with awe they gazed upon Yankee cotton mills, Yankee carpet, hosiery and woolen mills. They inspected thread factories and shoe and silk factories, edge tool works and even the Waltham Watch company's buildings. They gazed on the gilded top of the Massachusetts state house. They scented the awful air of Boston culture and lived. In each place where there is time for it they received a banquet and a reception.

By the time their six weeks' tour is ended our national guests will have traveled 5,000 miles on our steamers and in our palace coaches. They will have seen and smelled the Standard oil of Cleveland, O.; they will have witnessed pork slaughtering in Chicago, and tasted the beer and admired the cream colored brick of Milwaukee. At Ann Arbor they will have beheld something to make Spanish eyes stand out with wonder, a splendid university where young men and women get their education together, and in the same classes, peaceably and with no nonsense.

They will go west as far as Omaha, then, returning, they will take a peep at Kentucky and see the pretty girls and fine horses of the Blue Grass region. Chicago will next be visited, be made smooth by discovering that that city makes more glycerine than any other place in the world does. Thence by way of Pittsburg and its iron works our guests will return to Washington. But it is a thousand miles they will not visit the iron works of the new south too.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

Meeting of the Democratic Societies of Pennsylvania.

A LETTER FROM MR. CLEVELAND.

Hon. Samuel J. Randall's Regrets—What Is Going on in New York State—The Situation in Montana—New Jersey Republicans Meet at Elizabeth.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—The Thalia theatre was crowded with the delegates to the first general assembly of the Democratic societies of Pennsylvania. In his speech calling the convention to order President Black evoked applause by referring to the tariff as a tap "which pillages the mass to enrich the class." In the course of his remarks he said:

President Black's Speech.

"We have no differences, no dissensions. In the Democratic societies, indeed in the Democratic party; properly speaking, there can be none. Our fundamental doctrines are the same yesterday, to-day and forever. As to tariff taxes, for instance, discriminating against many industries to artificially stimulate a few, pillaging the mass to enrich a class no Democrat ever, as an original proposition, believed their imposition consistent with a republican system. 'It is,' cried Thomas Jefferson, the first Democratic president, 'to take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned.' This is the definition of taxation, for any but a public and general purpose, is an unconstitutional and monstrous abuse."

Chairman Hensel's Remarks.

W. U. Hensel was then chosen chairman, and in the course of his remarks, said: "We are for tariff reform, and will not abate our efforts nor turn back from the course of our leaders. We are for genuine civil service reform. Some may fall out by the wayside, but others will take their places. Chalmers may go, but we welcome President Eliot, of Harvard. We are for ballot reform, for the enfranchised blacks in the south and the white workingman of the north."

A Letter from ex-President Cleveland.

The following letter from ex-president Cleveland was then read:

NEW YORK, Oct. 11, 1889.

Hon. Chauncey F. Black:

MY DEAR SIR—I am sorry that I shall not be able to be in Philadelphia at the general assembly of the Democratic societies of Pennsylvania on the 16th inst., and cannot, therefore, attend the meeting which will follow that assembly. My sentiments in favor of the most thorough organization as agencies for the instruction of the people upon political work is well known, and there never was a time when the success of a party, good government and national prosperity, they were more needed.

The condition of political affairs is such that the attention of all true Democrats should be directed to the enforcement of the distinctive principles of the party, and the education of the people for the search after makeshifts and temporary expedients. We, as a party, are fairly entitled to place in the control of the government, but party success require that we should be consistent and steadfast. All personal and selfish aims should be subordinated. I confidently expect that in the work we have in hand our Democratic societies will exhibit an efficiency which will be gratefully acknowledged by all who have at heart the welfare and prosperity of the American people.

Yours very sincerely, GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Letter Heartily Cheered.

The scene which followed the reading of ex-President Cleveland's letter was almost beyond description. The delegates cheered until they could cheer no more by reason of exhaustion.

Samuel J. Randall's Regrets.

The following letter from Samuel J. Randall was also read:

WALLINGFORD, Oct. 7.

Hon. Chauncey F. Black:

MY DEAR SIR—Your letter asking my presence at the general assembly of the Democratic societies of Pennsylvania, to be held at Philadelphia on the 15th instant, received.

I shall go to Washington before that time and cannot accept but appreciate your courtesy. I hope the meeting will be successful in every particular. Certainly what is done in the way of our state, and every effort in that direction should receive the encouragement and support of every Democrat in the good old commonwealth.

Yours truly, SAMUEL J. RANDALL.

The Officers Elected.

President Black, Secretary J. D. Worman, of Philadelphia, and Treasurer J. Irwin Steele, of Ashland, were re-elected, and W. J. Roach, of Hastings; H. W. Rowan, of Harrisburg (colored), and Joseph Murphy and John H. Fow, of Philadelphia, were elected vice presidents.

The report of the committee on resolutions was received and unanimously adopted. This ended the business of the convention.

POLITICAL NEWS.

What Is Going on in New York State and Elsewhere.

The Tammany convention nominated the following city and county ticket: Register, Frank P. Fitzgerald; judge of court of common pleas, Henry Bischoff, Jr.; judges of city court, Richard A. Wyatt, Edward J. Reilly, Nathan Straus; judge of the general sessions court, H. A. Gildersleeve; president of the board of aldermen, Wm. L. Wyatt.

The executive committee of the state Democratic committee met at the Hoffman house, New York, and discussed ways and means for the campaign. What to do about the candidates on the state ticket were presented, and great apparent cheerfulness prevailed as to the outlook.

The Twenty-first congressional district Democratic convention unanimously renominated Hon. Donald McNaughton for state senator.

M. F. Collins has been nominated unanimously for senator by the Democrats of the Sixteenth senatorial district.

Joseph D. Saunders has been nominated by the Republicans of the Second district for assembly.

William P. Richardson, of Goshen, has been nominated for assembly in the Thirteenth senatorial district by the Republicans.

The Warren county Republican convention was held at Glens Falls, N. Y. Delegates Queensbury has only sent five delegates to all conventions and the Republicans here have been snubbed on many occasions. This year they sent to the convention twenty delegates. After a hard fought battle, a resolution was carried that the future representation of towns in the Warren county Republican conventions be on the following basis: Each town shall be entitled to three delegates and one additional delegate for each 150 votes and another part of 100 cast for the last of the Republican tickets at the last presidential election. The Glens Falls delegates were admitted and harmony reigned. Hon. Scott Barton, of Horicon, the present member, was renominated for the assembly.

New Jersey Republicans.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 16.—The convention of the state Republican league of New Jersey assembled in the Temple Opera house, in this city, and was largely attended. Nearly every Republican club in the state was represented and many organizations were present in a body. Many leading Republicans were also present.

The greatest enthusiasm and harmony prevailed. Gen. Grubb arrived in Elizabeth at 10:28 and was escorted to the Elizabeth house, where a reception was held. President Wilbur A. Mood called the convention to order in the morning. The usual committees were appointed.

The Situation in Montana.

HELENA, Mon., Oct. 16.—There have been no new developments in the Silver Bow county election case. Several of the Republicans getting in their entire legislative delegation they only get in six members, but that number is sufficient to overcome the Democratic majority on joint ballot in case of returns. The general opinion among lawyers is that the Silver Bow canvassers had no authority to go behind the returns at the time they did, and will decide in favor of the counting of the ballots as returned by the judges of election. The Democrats are outspoken in denunciation of the action of the canvassers.

The Board of Foreign Missions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The eightieth annual meeting of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions was begun in the Broadway Tabernacle. This is the first time the board has met in this city since 1857, when Dr. Leonard Bacon, then pastor of the church, opened the meeting with prayer. Dr. W. M. Taylor, of the Tabernacle, delivered an address of welcome, which was responded to by President Alonzo H. Ward, of Boston, who submitted his report, showing the cost of maintaining missions during the year ending Sept. 1 to have been $636,135; amount received from donations, cost of publications, $6,403; cost of administration, $698,135; balance on hand, $548. The permanent funds of the board amount to about $350,000. Dr. Ward is now constituting a survey of the missionary work throughout the world. A gratifying progress is reported in all directions, but the universal cry is that more laborers are needed, but that laborers are few." The most rapid progress reported is in Japan, where the enlargement of religious toleration by the emperor's recent decree has greatly stimulated the work of Christianization. After hearing the reports the board adjourned.

Still in the Dark.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Argument was begun in the supreme court on the application of the electric companies to make permanent the injunction restraining municipal interference with their wires. The companies claim that until sufficient accommodation is provided in the subways the wires must be permitted to remain overhead. If any defects in insulation exist, the companies are willing to shut off the current from the wires on which the defects are found. The argument will proceed today. Meanwhile the companies will keep the current shut off on all circuits. The city was dark again last night, but a few gas lamps have been brought into use.

New York's Claims Indorsed.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 16.—At the adjourned meeting of the business men called by Governor Ladd in the board of trade rooms to hear the report of the state's agent, a letter was read in behalf of New York from the exposition committee, and Hon. Thomas B. Bryan, of Chicago, and Secretary Anderson, of the Washington exposition committee, were present to plead for their respective cities. There was little discussion after the speaking of the gentlemen from abroad, and the meeting was unanimous in indorsing New York for first choice, with Chicago second and Washington third by a vote of 30 to 22.

A Well Known Artist Married.

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—Arthur Cleaver Carey, a well known artist of New York, and Miss Agnes Whiteside, of England, were married at the residence of Professor A. S. Hill, Cambridge. Miss Whiteside's bridesmaids were present, including members of the Astor, Langdon and Kane families, of New York, and the elite of Boston and Cambridge. Mr. Carey is a grandson of Hon. Thomas Cleaver. The couple will spend a year or two in Europe, where Mr. Carey has been studying art.

The Czar Goes Hunting.

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—The czar, Grand Duke Vladimir and Grand Duke George took part in the hunt given by Prince Albert, Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, at Letzlingthaut. A number of red deer were shot by the imperial visitors. The czar and his party left Berlin shortly after 6 o'clock p. m. for Russia, returning by way of Berlin and Dantzic. The czar has repeatedly expressed his gratification with his reception in Germany.

Strikers Committing Robberies.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The striking coal miners at Lens are assuming a more threatening attitude and many of them are committing daily light robberies. Six thousand men are now on strike in the district. More troops have been sent to Lens. The miners refuse to quarter them, threatening to resign rather than do so. The troops remain quartered just outside the city.

To Pass the Honeymoon in Jail.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—John Dougherty was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for the crime of bigamy in the general sessions of the district attorney's office, where he was married by Father Curran to a young woman, whose name was unknown. When Father Curran learned of Dougherty's record he promptly had the bridegroom arrested at the church door. The bride wept bitterly as her husband was taken away to spend his honeymoon in Sing Sing.

Confectioners in Convention.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 16.—A convention of confectionery manufacturers of the state was held here. An association was formed which will look after the trade and harmonious trade relations. George W. Cole, of Philadelphia, was chosen president, J. E. Able, of Easton, treasurer, and A. L. Koons, of Upper Strasburg, secretary.

Laundrymen Debate on the Chinese.

BUFFALO, Oct. 16.—The Laundrymen's National association continued in session this morning. Six new members were admitted, making fifty-three so far. The principal discussion was upon a motion in the Thirteenth senatorial district by the Republicans. The Chinese question and the delegates are the Chinese laundries and the flannel shirt.

Four Hundred Girls on Strike.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 16.—The girls in the weaving room of the Arlington mill struck against a reduction in wages of five per cent on piece work and 200 and 300 pair goods respectively. The girls, to the number of 400, refused to go to work.

A Successful Cutting.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—A cutting for the stem of a new steel deltoid vessel has been completed and will enable the Pacific rolling mills to turn out 15,000 tons of steel per year. There were 15,000 tons made during the presidential election. The Union Pacific has

FIVE DASHED TO DEATH.

Details of a Frightful Accident in Cincinnati.

MANY KILLED IN A RUNAWAY CAR.

Down the Steep Track of the Mount Auburn Incline It Went as Never Car Went Before—A List of the Killed and Injured.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 16.—A car on the Main street inclined plane broke its cable just as it reached the top of Mount Auburn, soon after noon. It descended at a terrific speed and crashed into the passenger station and office below. Five of the nine passengers were killed and the others were more or less seriously injured.

How the Accident Occurred.

The accident occurred just as the two cars began to move. The car on the west side attained but a slight elevation, and in consequence was but slightly injured, stopping at the usual resting place at the base of the incline, but the other car released from all its fastenings at the top of the hill came down the incline with fearful force, and reaching the bottom divided into two parts, the lower section grinding into dust at the stone base of the station. The passenger portion, continuing its terrible journey across Mulberry street into a grocery, and leaving sections of itself strung all along the street. Some of the bodies of the killed and wounded were found in the debris below the building, and others in the street. The roof of the car was found leaning against the grocery, forty feet from the base of the incline.

The Cause of the Accident.

An inspection revealed the fact that the accident was caused by the breaking of the cable as was at first supposed, but to the inability of the clamps to grip the cable with sufficient strength to hold the weight of the carriage. It is claimed that the Mount Auburn incline was the only road not supplied with automatic brakes or safety catches at the top.

The Killed and Injured.

The following is a list of the killed:

Judge William Dickson.
Joseph McFadden, Sr.
Mrs. Caleb Ives.
Mrs. Mary Ehrer.
Michael Kneiss.
The injured are:
Mrs. Agnes Bachstetter.
Miss Lillian R. Oskamp.
Joseph McFadden, Jr.
George Miller.
Joseph Stucle.
Lizzie Vanney.

The Story of an Eyewitness.

Mr. A. D. Ziegler, an eyewitness to the accident, says:

"I had just come down on the car before the accident. I was standing at the bottom of the incline, just after the other car had gone up, when suddenly I heard a tremendous crash above me. I looked and saw the top of the incline had broken loose and was coming down like a flash. It went faster than anything I ever saw before on earth in my life. When it struck the bottom there was a terrific crash, and the big wooden bumpers, shod with iron, were crushed into splinters, while the car itself was literally torn to pieces. The wreck was instantaneous and complete. Pieces of flying wood filled all the space at the foot of the incline, clearing the way before them like an explosion. As many people were hurt at the bottom of the incline by these pieces of flying wood—people who had run up to see what was the matter—as were hurt in the car itself."

Daniel Webster's Friend Dead.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 17.—Ernstus D. Culver died at Greenwich, N. Y., Sunday, aged 87 years. He was born in Whitehall, and while still a young man was the confidential Washington county in the assembly and in congress. In 1840 he traveled on a stumping tour with Daniel Webster. His witty style proved an attraction to the latter's persuasive eloquence. Culver also stumped the state in 1844 and 1848. He then settled in Brooklyn, where he won fame as a lawyer and orator. In 1861 he was appointed by Lincoln collector of the city court. In 1862 Lincoln appointed him minister to Peru, which position he occupied for eight years, after which he retired to private life. He was an intimate friend of Chester A. Arthur's father, and took part of the expense of educating the boy who afterwards became president. Mr. Culver was one of the lawyers who obtained a writ of habeas corpus in the famous Lemmon slave case. At the time of his death he was president of a bank at Greenwich, and he leaves a large fortune.

Monsignor O'Connell was the bearer of and delivered to Cardinal Gibbons a letter from Pope Leo, in which the holy father congratulates the Catholics of America upon the centennial of the establishment of the first see in this country. He also prays God to shower his blessings upon the great republic and the people. In connection with the centennial there will be a solemn pontifical mass celebrated on Monday morning, Nov. 11, invoking the blessing of God upon the Catholic congress which will begin its sessions that morning.

O'Brien was found drinking with two men in his room soon after the fall, and his wife and child were picked up. The three men claimed to know nothing about the tragedy. They were arrested. It is said that O'Brien had threatened to punish his wife for going to a funeral without his permission.

THE BRIDEGROOMS WIN.

The Brooklyn Ball Team Captures the Pennant.

THE ASSOCIATION GAMES OVER.

St. Louis' Defeat at Cincinnati Robs That Club of All Hope of Victory—New for the World's Championship—Brooklyns Home Coming.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 16.—The St. Louis Browns slipped up in their plan to capture the American association pennant by playing off postponed games. The stumbling block was the Cincinnati team, which won a game from the Browns yesterday, and settled the championship in favor of the Brooklyns, who take the pennant, with twelve points to spare, after a race fully as exciting and practically as close as was the fight for the League championship.

Ready to Tackle New York.

The pennant winners arrived home in a very happy frame of mind and red hot to tackle the New Yorks for the world's championship. They reached Jersey City at 4:30 and were welcomed by a large crowd of very noisy enthusiasts. The armed host was taken to Brooklyn. There it was that the enthusiasts got their work in.

The ferry house and the approaches to it were packed with people, and when the Association champions made their appearance the noise was deafening. The crowd was at once formed into a procession and began to fight their way to the carriages provided to take them to Washington park.

President Byrne Happy.

The face of President Byrne looked like a full blown peony. The usually pale grey blushes chased each other across his mobile countenance. The nervous little president couldn't keep his joy concealed, although he tried. He was overjoyed. He was thoroughly happy, and well he might be, for his men had won against many handicaps and under circumstances which made their victory all the more glorious at that of the New Yorks. Mr. Byrne didn't care to talk much about the world's series.

The World's Series.

He said he thought seven or nine games would be sufficient, and he believed that as soon as one club won a majority of the series the games should stop. He expects to see Mr. Day at once and arrange the details of the series. It is probable that the first game will begin on Saturday afternoon. As the St. Louis team could not win the pennant by playing the Athletics, it will probably not pay to play off any more postponed games, and the record for the season will stand as follows:

The Season's Record.

Riddle Gets a Big Judgment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—William B. Riddle, formerly president of the Penn Bank, of Pittsburg, now of this city, has obtained a judgment, by default, in the supreme court, against Upton L. Boyce, the well known Harlem railroad operator, for $250,000. In Mr. Riddle's complaint it is set forth that he procured a loan of $25,000 for Boyce and found a purchaser for him of $1,200,000 of the common stock of the Manhattan Beach railroad company at par value, for which service Boyce was to pay him $70,000 in money and give him $250,000 of the stock. Riddle claims that he has not yet been paid for his services.

LOUIS, Oct. 16.—Paul McBride, the son of the well known lawyer of this city, shot and instantly killed Frank Loftus, a member of the fire department, at 2 p. m. on the corner of Smith and Olive streets. McBride was drunk and took umbrage at a slight jostle which accidentally received from Loftus. McBride procured a pistol from a revolver and shot Loftus dead. McBride is under arrest.

WORK OF THE BISHOPS.

The Minority Resolution Defeated—The Question of Marriage and Divorce.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Rev. Cornelius F. Swope, of Trinity church, this city, one of the delegates to the Protestant Episcopal house of deputies, declared in that body that men begin to look upon the changes in the Book of Common Prayer with favor instead of as something to be opposed. Divorce is not to be discussed at a social club. Loyalty to the old book, he said, seems to disappear from the church, and contempt for the authority of rubrics has crept in.

The minority resolution asking that the revision of the Book of Common Prayer be closed at the present general convention instead of going over until the year 1892 was defeated.

On the question of marriage and divorce it was resolved that congress be asked to pass more stringent laws on these subjects for the District of Columbia and the territories. The following figures bearing on these subjects were submitted: Divorces granted in the last twenty years, 328,710; children involved, 307,789; total number of persons involved, 965,115; number of divorces granted in 1867, 9,937; number of divorces granted in 1886, 26,533. These figures were taken from the report of the United States commissioner of labor.

The house of bishops received the resignations of Bishops Bedell, of Ohio, and Williams, of Japan. They were referred to the appropriate committees.

To Preserve the Forests.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—The eighth annual meeting of the American forestry congress of the United States, in joint convention with the Pennsylvania forestry association; has begun here, with about 300 delegates from the state and the district of Columbia, South Carolina; Professor Byron D. Halstead, of New Jersey; Hon. Jacob Haldeman, R. J. Reading, of Georgia; Lucius Polk, of Tennessee; W. Saunders, of Ontario; Hon. B. G. Joly, of Quebec, vice president of the congress, and many other well known gentlemen. Mr. Joly called the convention to order in the absence of the president of the congress, Governor Beaver, who will be present later. Burnett Landreth, president of the Pennsylvania association, delivered an address of welcome, to which Mr. Joly responded. Hon. Carl Schurz, of New York, who appeared by invitation, then spoke on the preservation of our forests. His convincing plea was enthusiastically applauded.

BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY.

ELECTRICAL FREAKS.

By this term we do not mean the experts who assisted recently that they could receive a shock of 10,000 volts and feel sort of braced up on it. We make this explanation in order to prevent any misconception of the tenor of the article by the intelligent reader. By "electrical freaks" we do not mean people who play fantastic tricks with their imaginations when they talk on their telephones, but refer to the genius which fills the barked lightning to the electrical fancy of the reporter who is working on space.

A few years ago a young man named Case, for want, residing in Asbury park, was sitting at the window of his boarding house, passing his week's salary and wondering how he should divide it equally among himself or give some of it to his tailor and a little to his landlady or take it all and hire a horse and a narrow buggy and take a proud but wealthy heiress out to drive. At that instant a bolt of lightning struck the corner of a large house in Long Branch, not more than seven or eight miles away, and the young man never thought of his tailor or his landlady again. They often thought of him, but nobody ever found out where he went.

In the summer of 1879 John J. Fowler was a practical paper hanger in Albany. During the first week of June he was hanging paper in the residence of Mr. Clarence D. Montgomery when a heavy black cloud came slowly over the city from the west, and a single flash of lightning fell from the cloud, entered the room where Fowler was at work, ran up the trimming machine like a beam of light for a few minutes, stirred up the paste, hung all the paper in the room and trimmed sixteen yards of arabesque border. Some of the family went in the room about 7 o'clock that evening and found Fowler lying on the table, still sleeping from the effects of the shock. The stroke had also affected his mind and memory and his moral faculties, for he afterward brought in a bill for the work, and had to sue for it (Mr. Montgomery being a very rich man), and he testified that he had done all this work before going to sleep. But that was impossible, and the court so decided, as it was established by the evidence of more than twenty witnesses that no paper hanger ever did that much work in a day.

People now living in Skaneateles who resided there in the spring of 1865 still remember the phenomenon of the remarkable case of the Rev. Lars Christopherson, rector of the Aboriginal American church. He was sitting in his study one Sabbath morning, in a mood and gloomy state of mind, having just learned that his son, who had gone off on a little seagoing party down the lake the night before, had taken the only razor in the house. While the elder sat gloomily rubbing his chin and wondering if he couldn't sandpaper it before class meeting, a storm that had been gathering for some time suddenly broke above the town with terrific violence. A long zigzag streak of ball lightning entered the window of the minister's study, shaved him once over without raising a pimple, trimmed his hair straight across the back of the neck, giving him that peculiarly neat look of meekly manliness which is the artistic triumph of that style of cut, banged it in front to make him look childlike and simple, gave his shoes a patent leather shine, brushed his coat and vest and left the window again with a crashing noise like a 4-year-old boy falling off a pew during the long prayer. The strangest thing about the occurrence was the discovery, that evening, when the preacher discovered that the lightning, on departing, had burned a hole in his vest pocket and fused a silver quarter into a round sultry, which had dropped out on his way to the meeting house.

Last July, Mrs. Weatherby Showers, wife of the well known financier of that name, was putting her three children to bed one very warm, sultry evening when a flash of sheet lightning—Hey? Sir? I want to remember that this is a Sunday paper? Ha! I'll take to see and get a chance to forget it. Well, that's so; guess I'll leave that Showers story out. It is pretty tough, a little. But the others may stand: if they are not as true as some lightning stories I've heard told by some awfully truthful people, I don't want a cent that I can't get.

ECONOMICAL MEASURES.

President of Electric Light Company to Secretary—Look here, we've got to cut down these gas bills some way or other. You must do more of your work by daylight or else you'll have to burn kerosene in the office. Why not get a couple of student lamps, if you must work after night?"

NOW YOU SEE HOW IMPORTANT IT IS.

"The aim and end of manual training in the schools," says a teacher, "is ethical." And yet there are some people who denounce a four years' college course of football and—Ha: come to think of it, they are correct; football isn't manual training.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Miss.

Old Gent (evidently under great mental strain)—See here, sir; I want to speak to you, sir. You were at my house until very late last night, and after my daughter went to her room I heard her sobbing for an hour. You're a villain, sir, and I've a great mind—

Young Man—Sobbing!

O. G.—Yes, sir. How dared you to insult—

Y. M.—I wouldn't think of such a thing. Believe me.

O. G. (impetuously)—What did you say to her, sir?

Y. M.—I merely remarked that I was too poor to marry.—New York Weekly.

Nautical Questions.

Lady to sea captain—How do you manage to find your way across the ocean?

Captain—By the compass. The needle always points to the north.

A Power.

There's a matter that's troubled us greatly,
And it's never been settled as yet,
We should like to have some one inform us
Whether Eve was a blonde or brunette.
—New York Sun.

For More Uses Than One.

Mr. Whiffstraw (who has placed his food on the fly disorder)—That's just about the cutest thing I ever saw, but darn me if I'd a known what it was for if that chief of hash's told me.—Money's Weekly.

Fear is the mother of safety.—Taylor.

Duties are ours; events are God's.—Cecil.

Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.—Socrates.

Example is more forcible than precept.—Cecil.

Fools admire, but men of sense approve.—Pope.

Heaven gives its favorites early death.—Byron.

They never fail who die in a great cause.—Byron.

The noblest mind the best contentment has.—Spenser.

Grief treads upon the heels of pleasure.—Congreve.

He makes no friends who never made a foe.—Tennyson.

A faithful friend is the true image of the deity.—Napoleon I.

Hypocrisy is the necessary burden of villainy.—Dr. Johnson.

It is much easier to meet with error than to find truth.—Goethe.

Confidence is a plant of slow growth in an aged bosom.—William Pitt.

Here of the sight of means to do ill deeds make ill deeds done.—Shakespeare.

Base envy withers at another's joy and hates that excellence it cannot reach.

Oft expectation fails, and most oft there where most it promises.—Shakespeare.

Death lays upon us like an universal frost upon the pendant herb and our cradle stands in the grave.—Bishop Hall.

There's a divinity that shapes our ends rough-hew them how we will.—Shakespeare.

GOOD RULES FOR TEACHERS.

Don't forget the lessons of last year's experience.

Don't become discouraged. Be satisfied with small results, if they are sure.

Don't fail to learn as soon as possible in what direction your class need to work, and just where they need to begin.

Don't fail to do everything in your power to work in harmony with your principle and the other teachers in the building.

Don't get order in the schoolroom at the expense of growth. Have order, not by all means, but by the best means only.

Don't let the year pass without reading some good books on education. Learn more of the world than you can build.

Don't omit the visiting day. See other teachers at work. Be sympathetic in your criticisms. Go for help, not for self satisfaction.

Don't allow yourself to become fretful or anxious or worried over your work. Be serene. Use your powers to the best advantage, and teach the children to do the same.

Don't teach a single lesson without knowing why you teach it, and what you hope to accomplish by it. Have a purpose in every lesson, as well as in every series of lessons.

Don't think that inattention is a small matter. Stop with it. If you fail to hold the attention of your class. Study the art of securing the habit of attention, and see that every lesson tends to strengthen that habit in your pupils.—Sarah L. Arnold in Journal of Education.

SOME OLD ODD REMEDIES.

Aspen leaves used to be considered good against ague.

Snails boiled in barley water were sovereign for an ordinary cough.

Whooping cough could be cured by any one who rides on a piebald horse.

The heart shaped leaves of the ordinary wood sorrel were remedial in cardiac disease.

Turmeric, on account of its deep yellow color, was of great reputation in the treatment of jaundice.

Any one suffering the agonies of toothache was instantly relieved by merely smelling a dead man's tooth.

A little of the mucus growing on a skull, dried well, reduced to powder, and used as snuff, was specific for headache.

Warts: "Put three droppes of the blood of a wart into an eldern leafe, and burie it in the earthe and the warts will vanish away."

The powdered flesh of a mummy was of sovereign power in physic, especially in contusions, where it prevented the blood from settling and coagulating at the injured part.

The flowers of the lily of the valley being closely stopped up in glass, put into an ant hill and taken away again a month after, ye shall find a liquor in the glass, which, being outwardly applied, helpeth gout.

From Beaumont and Fletcher's fine comedy, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle," we learn that chilblains should be rubbed well with a mouse skin, or the sufferer should roll his feet and ankles in hot embers.—Alithea Vere Round.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

In R. J. Kettlewell's garden at St. Helens, Ore., is a pumpkin vine which has twined around an olive tree and grown to a height of about fifteen feet. Near the top are two large pumpkins, and Mr. Kettlewell has had to have boxes erected on poles to let these lie in to keep them from breaking the limbs of the tree.

A few days ago T. H. Adams, of Clarksville, Ga., cut a perfectly sound, fresh-looking muskmelon he had just received from Banks county, and upon examination it was found that a number of the seeds had sprouted and had roots nearly an inch long. The melon was perfectly sound and the flesh fine and nice.

A hard maple tree in S. G. Snook's yard at Flatbush, Mich., is the object of great curiosity. It is just now shedding its foliage. Soon new leaves will appear, and after the fall frosts it will again shed itself of leaves. This it has done regularly for several seasons. The tree differs only in shedding its leaves twice a year from other maples standing within a few feet of it.

The discovery of the curious ice cave in Ashley valley, in the Rocky Mountains, continues to attract attention. Tom Mitchell, who has just returned to Salt Lake City from there, says that in the latter part of August he found in the cave a section of ice 20 feet high and 30 feet thick at the base. A small lake was also discovered. One of the rooms in the cave was over 1,200 feet long.

DAUGHTERS OF EVE.

Carmen Sylvia always sees Germans for her literary efforts.

Miss Jennie Flood is the richest unmarried woman in California.

"Ouida" will write no more novels after she concludes the one she is now at work upon.

Belva Lockwood has come to the conclusion that England is the most interesting country of the Old World.

Augusta Holmes, whose "Triumphal Ode" was performed in Paris recently, is rather mediocre in appearance.

Edith Thomas dresses simply, with faultless daintiness; and Louise Imogen Guiney's gowns are as exquisitely fine as her verses.

The Grand Duchess Serge of Russia is writing a series of biographical sketches of the empresses of Russia of the present century.

Mrs. F. M. Kendall, of Cambridge, Mass., will probably write the biography of her sister, Maria Mitchell, the famous astronomer.

Rosa Bonheur's new painting illustrative of the buffaloes in Buffalo Bill's show promises to equal her famous one entitled "The Horse Fair."

Miss Emma Eames, of Boston, who is the bright particular star at the Grand Opera, Paris, says that all her real study was done in America.

Miss. Le Roy, who is starting an exploration to Persia, is accompanied by a single man servant. She will organize armed bands as she proceeds.

Miss Lottie Fisher, a Philadelphia stenographer, has received an offer from some of the noble English families to instruct a class of young girls in her specialties.

Miss Bruce, of New York city, has given $50,000 to the astronomical observatory of Harvard, to be devoted to the purchase of a telescope for celestial photography.

Mme. Dupoix is the prettiest actress in Paris nowadays. She is a slender and rather tall brunette, with dark hair, clear, deep eyes, black eyebrows and a long, oval face.

Miss Louise Worley, the young English woman who was graduated with honors at Cambridge in 1888, has received an offer to teach the languages in a Boston private school.

Miss MacIvee dresses very simply, and is fond of Quaker gray gowns, but has a passion for beautiful lace, and is extremely difficult to satisfy on questions of the cut of her dresses.

Grace King wears the daintiest of silk stockings and black satin slippers, made for her by a French shoemaker in New Orleans, and she likes to wear long trained, perfectly plain black silk gowns that fit like a glove.

Margaret Sangster, who edits Harper's Bazar, usually dresses in black, with a bit of fine white lace at her throat or wrists, and her snow white hair in smooth folds about her head. She gives always an expression of extreme daintiness and care.

The wife of the late S. S. Cox was his inseparable companion; she shared all his plans, and made his life her own. Mr. and Mrs. Cox were not only a devoted couple, but she was like a partner to him in his business, sharing his confidence in everything.

Mrs. Hallie Ferguson, the daughter-in-law of the poet, lives with her husband's family, and has entire charge of the dairy connected with the poet's estate on the Isle of Wight. Eggs and butter of this dairy are in great demand and bring a high price.

Julia Ward Howe, who wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and began and mastered the study of Greek after she had turned 70, has the most beautiful little hands, that are kept with exquisite care, and her dress is always the work of the best dressmakers and a model of elderly daintiness and charm.

Anna Bowman Dodd, author of "Cathedral Days," is an author with charming little hands, and no Parisian grande dame was ever more "from from" in her taste in dress than every year she goes to the French capital and renews her wardrobe, and she takes as much delight in high heeled slippers and Worth gowns as if she did not know one end of a pen handle from the other.

A school girl frolic was given in honor of Mrs. Cleveland by her college mates during her recent trip to Buffalo. The refreshments were crackers, passed around in paper bags, and the pickles were out in force, while sardines were eaten with fingers instead of forks, and relished as in the old days of dormitories and early rising. The occasion was enlivened by reminiscences of schoolday escapades, when oysters were fried over a gas jet, and cheese toasted on hairpins.

Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi and her husband have been in the past somewhat closely associated in medical writings.

Joseph and Mary Robbins Pennell travel together in quest of literary material, she writing while he furnishes the illustrations.

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps' collaboration in novel writing with her husband, the Rev. Herbert D. Ward, adds another to the few examples of literary partnership in the conjugal relation.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Senator Quay recently entered his 57th year.

Governor Fitz-Hugh Lee, of Virginia, is growing stout.

Mr. Spurgeon denies the rumor that he contemplates retiring from the pulpit.

Talleyrand laid great stress on a knowledge of whist as indispensable to a happy old age.

Mr. Edison was greatly pleased with his brief glimpse of English country life—his visit to Sir John Pender.

Pope Leo rises at 6:30 the year through and often gives audience to his secretaries before sitting down to breakfast.

Theophile Landreau, the discoverer of the immense beds of guano in Peru, is living in comparative poverty in Lima.

The late Col. Tomline, a very rich Englishman, would not permit a book written by a clergyman of a woman to enter his library.

Almost with his dying breath Wilkie Collins said: "I want a simple funeral and no feathers, no crape, no forms nor ceremonies."

Gordon Craig is the stage name of Ellen Terry's son, who made his debut recently, and is said to resemble his mother in face and manner.

John Burns, the English Socialist, is a distant relative of Robert Burns, and he bears a facial resemblance to the dead poet—Scotland's most intimate friend.

The late Dr. Weil, the distinguished Orientalist and German historian, has the honor of being the first Hebrew who was ever admitted to a professorship in the University of Heidelberg.

Marshall Field, the millionaire merchant and importer, of Chicago, is of rather slender build, with iron-gray hair and gray mustache. From his appearance he would hardly be taken for an energetic business man.

After destroying a very large number of letters, Mr. Gladstone has selected 60,000 for preservation and has built for them a fireproof room. When his biographer comes to overhaul these he will find his work half done in advance.

Irish Secretary Balfour, who is called by his opponents "the best hated man in England," is still young. He was born in 1848 and went to parliament in 1874. He does not look like a strong man, either physically or mentally, but he has shown that he is both.

To the seventy languages (including Chinese) that he had previously mastered, Father Johann Martin Schlayer, inventor of Volapuk, is said to have added three distinct African varieties. With these and Volapuk he should be able to give vent to his feelings under ordinary circumstances.

Chang Yen Hoon, the retiring Chinese minister to the United States, has already made plans for future diplomatic work upon his return to his native land. He holds at present the high office of manager of the imperial stables, which is equivalent to the English office of master of the horse.

Don Jeronimo Zelaya, minister plenipotentiary and delegate from Honduras to the international conference, was born in Honduras in 1853. He completed his studies at law in the University of Guatemala, and returned to his own country, where his professional abilities and honorable character soon procured him a high standing among his countrymen.

Tello D'Aparry, the 13-year-old publisher of The New York Sunny Hour, has received a letter from Mr. Prudhomme B. Perrine, editor of The Kosmos, published in Athens, Greece, congratulating him upon the appearance of his little paper and asking for his photograph and biography, also a letter describing New York city. The editor of The Kosmos says that he is about to issue the first illustrated paper in Athens and he hopes later to make his new venture a success. He expects Master D'Aparry is to adorn one of the pages of the first issue of the new illustrated Athens paper.

IN WHAT MONTH WAS SHE BORN!

Here is an astrologer's table from which you may learn your wife's characteristics according to the month in which she was born:

If in January, a prudent housewife, given to melancholy, but good tempered.

If in February, a humane and affectionate wife and tender mother.

If in March, a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarrelling.

If in April, inconstant, not very intelligent, but likely to be good looking.

If in May, handsome, amiable and likely to be happy.

If in June, impetuous, will marry early and be frivolous.

If in July, passably handsome, but with a sulky temper.

If in August, amiable and practical and likely to marry rich.

If in September, discreet, affable and much liked.

If in October, pretty and coquettish, and likely to be unhappy.

If in November, liberal, kind and of a mild disposition.

If in December, well proportioned, fond of novelty and extravagant.—Boston Globe.

LITERARY LIGHTS.

Haggard's income from "King Solomon's Mines" is between $5,000 and $10,000 a year.

Edgar Saltus, now that his publishers have failed, is going to publish his own books.

James Payn's life work—over forty novels and a library of other writings—has brought him a princely fortune.

Tolstoi has been obliged to give up smoking. He says that the abstinence has sadly interfered with his power to write.

Theodore Roosevelt frankly confesses that his handwriting is so poor that the printers in the establishment where his last book was published struck on his copy, and he was compelled to have it typewritten.

At the time Sir Walter Scott made his remark about literature being an unsafe crutch he was earning $50,000 a year. Twenty of his volumes brought $550,000, and in eighteen months at one period his work netted $120,000.

A. G. Gunther, in the last year or so, has probably earned more by his pen than any other American writer. Not long ago he said that he had made from "Mr. Barnes of New York" and "Mr. Potter of Texas," in two months clear of expenses, $37,000.

The fight created considerable excitement and caused a crowd of about one hundred boys to congregate.

—A novelty sold by the swell London ladies' tailors will soon appear on this side. These are leather collars and cuffs, which come in varying shades of brown, green, red and all of a black, and which are ornamented with fancy stitching. The cuffs are about three inches deep. As accompaniments to these are arabesque designs in leather for dresses, while traveling dresses are trimmed around the edge of skirts with broad strips of black, gray and brown leather.—Boston Beacon.

—Geo. Mulholland gave his illustrated lecture on "The Battle of Gettysburg" yesterday afternoon and last evening, before a highly appreciative audience, and a considerable sum was realized for the benefit of the Isabel Fund of the Y. M. C. A. Next Tuesday evening whose auspices the lecture were given. It is probable that even those who took part in the memorable struggle were not aware of the great part they had in restoring peace and a reunited country, until they heard the details of the battle so vividly described by one who took an active part in the fight, the lecturer himself. Many who heard the description last evening have decided to visit the battlefield at one of the re-unions next year.

For the Freeholders.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—How long has the public to suffer from the neglect of some one to provide a temporary free bridge over the by ok at Elm pl ce. Have the officials nothing to say in this matter? If they were consulted to slip and slide up and down muddy bank to find a plank to cross on and frequently find none there, we imagine there would be some given them.

A CITIZEN.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

The Point of a Parasol Penetrates Mrs. Hatfield's Cheek.

Mrs. A. P. Hatfield met with a painful and almost fatal accident at the North avenue depot last evening. The family of Mr. Hatfield, moved from Dunellen to Plainfield yesterday and Mrs. Hatfield followed on the train due here about six o'clock.

When she alighted from the train at the station she stepped into a hole that had been left uncovered by workmen who had been making repairs around the depot and fell to the ground. In her hand she carried a parasol and the point penetrated her cheek, tearing the flesh and inflicting a painful wound.

Dr. Endicott dressed the wound and the unfortunate woman was taken to her home at the corner of Madison avenue and Ninth street.

The doctor said had the point of the umbrella penetrated the cheek a little lower, it would have caused death.

Mrs. Hatfield is a sister of Mr. Vincent L. Fraser, of Orchard place.

Honoring Plainfield Genius.

The Babcock and Wilcox boilers have received the "Grand Prix", the "Diplome d'Honeur", at the Paris Exposition, the highest award given to any exhibitor.

This award was not reached with those to American exhibits because the boiler being made in the Glasgow shops was placed in the British section, and the award was made to the Babcock and Wilcox Co., as English exhibitors. This acknowledgement of the superiority of their boiler is the more noteworthy because of the fact that the jurors in Class 61, in which the boilers were exhibited, were from the home countries of the exhibitors. By the decision of the jurors in this class by the fact that their business is now several times the largest in the world in their line, and their boilers are favorably known and in use in every country on the globe.

Mr. George H. Babcock, the President of this company resides on Eighth street. He is also President of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and in Plainfield is a member of our Board of Education.

No one who knows Mr. Babcock, and the thoroughness with which he does everything he undertakes, will be surprised that his company should receive such a recognition of superiority. We are sure the people of Plainfield will all join us in congratulating Mr. Babcock, and be proud of the fact that he is one of us.

A large heap of soft coal had been undermined by the rain. Mr. Fleamer although terribly frightened, escaped injury.

ABBETT'S WAR RECORD,

THE BITTER ENEMY OF THE UNION SOLDIERS.

He Would Have Deprived Soldiers After Enlistment of All Bounties and the Same Payment to Their Wives and Families.

The Convention Repudiated — Is Manifested to the Veterans of the Rebellion.—Compare the Records of the Two Candidates.

The followers of Leon Abbett are industriously seeking support for the democratic candidate for governor among the veterans of the late war on the silly pretense that the ex-governor in his official capacity has in the past performed certain acts of kindness to them. The smallest basis for this extraordinary claim is completely overthrown when the official record of the present democratic candidate is examined.

Leon Abbett was a member of the Assembly from Hudson county in the years 1865, 1866 and 1869! The records of the assembly for these years prove conclusively that the pretended friend of to-day was at that time the bitter enemy of the soldiery. The records show that Mr. Abbett opposed almost every measure introduced into the legislature of 1865 and 1866 intended to give aid and comfort to the soldiers themselves or ease the burdens of their wives and families.

The following extracts copied from the minutes of the assembly should be read carefully by all who desire to learn the democratic candidate's true feelings toward the men who imperiled their lives that this union might live.

On page 573, minutes of 1865, is recorded an act authorizing a loan for the purposes of the war, to pay bounties, and providing for the payment of the same.

Mr. Abbett opposed the bill.

On page 619, minutes of 1865, is a bill "to incorporate the Soldiers' Children's home."

It was Abbett who cast the final passage and passed—40 to 0. Leon Abbett not voting.

On page 533 senate bill 102 is recorded, being a supplement to "an act for the relief of such portions of the militia of the State as may be called into service." It was approved May 11, 1861, was taken up and read a second time. Mr. Abbett moved to strike out the enacting clause. His motion was not agreed to and the bill was ordered to a third reading. The following is the text of this bill which Mr. Abbett, the soldier's "friend," tried hard to kill:

Supplement to an act entitled an "Act for the relief of such portions of the militia of this State as may be called into service," approved May 11, 1861.

WHEREAS, The act to which this is a supplement is in force, or for other things, however that the sum of six dollars per month shall be allowed and paid to the wife or wives of the enrolled persons of the militia of this State and to the children of such persons, by the proper county out familes dependent on them for support, as have been called into the service of the United States, and inasmuch as there are many worthy and deserving families of the militia of this State who are not now provided for by the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, therefore

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the act to which this is a supplement, be and the same is hereby amended so that the provisions of said act shall extend to mothers of such persons of the militia of this State as have fallen or may hereafter be mustered into the service of the United States, when such mothers are dependent upon them for support, whether the husband of such mothers be living or dead, and the children of such mother has abandoned her and left her without support, or when such mother is unable to pay, incapacitated, refuses or is unable to support her.

2. And be it enacted, That the sum of six dollars per month shall be allowed and paid to the mother of such persons of the militia of this State as may have been or shall hereafter be mustered into the service of the United States, notwithstanding the date of his marriage, if such person was at the time of his enlistment in the service of the United States, provided, that such family be resident in this State.

3. And be it enacted, That the wives, widowed mothers and families entitled to support upon any naval recruit credited to the quota of this State, who shall be resident of the county in which such recruit shall be credited, shall be entitled to receive the same benefit as they would have received from the county if such recruit had been credited to the quota of the militia of this State, and the boards of freeholders of this act and the acts to which this is a supplement, shall have the same power to make provision for such families, without distinction of color, who have heretofore, or may hereafter be mustered into the military service of the United States and credited to the quota of the State of New Jersey and such families entitled to the benefits of enlisted men or are now residents of the same.

There is nothing in the above quoted above that would justify any fair minded man in refusing his affirmative vote to the passage of this bill. Yet Leon Abbett, who now poses as the soldiers' friend, did his utmost to defeat the measure, as the records show. On page 191, minutes of 1865, a motion of the assembly of 1865 there is ample evidence that the present democratic candidate for Governor did his utmost to kill this just and fair bill. He moved to strike out of section 4 the words, "without distinction of color." The motion was lost by 11 ayes to 44 nays, Abbett voting in the affirmative.

On page 311 Mr. Abbett is recorded as having moved to strike out the second section, which motion was not agreed to, and the bill passed, 41 to 8, Abbett voting in the negative.

The effect of striking out of section 4 the words, "without distinction of col r" would have been, had Mr. Abbett's motion prevailed, to deprive the wives and families of all New Jersey colored naval or army recruits of all benefits under the act, as the word "white" was then a part of our State constitution.

Fortunately for the soldiers, Abbett failed in his effort to kill this just and fair bill. He also moved to strike out of section 5

Bogus Doctors.

Dr. William G. Eggleston, Dr. Austin Flint and Dr. R. Ogden Doremus hold, in The North American Review, a symposium on quacks, medical quacks. We learn from Dr. Eggleston that in the United States there are 117 live medical colleges and 105 dead ones. More than a dozen bogus colleges have been broken up that had no course of study at all, only sold diplomas, some of them as high as $150 apiece. There are now in the country not less than 10,000 persons practicing medicine on these bogus diplomas, some of which persons never studied medicine for ten minutes. The strange part of it is that some of the M. D.'s who never studied medicine for ten minutes have no more patients die on their hands than those who are fully up in medical science. Still, if one has to die, there is a satisfaction in being diplomaed scientifically.

We have, furthermore, at this moment in existence schools enough to educate doctors sufficient for 300,000,000 people. Many of these schools are so inferior as to make an American medical man a laughing stock abroad.

Fewer schools and better ones should be the motto, but the learned gentlemen do not quite see how this is to be brought about. Dr. Eggleston is of opinion that the national government should take the whole matter into its own hands and by appropriate legislation clean out the quacks, which would be centralization of government with a vengeance. Drs. Flint and Doremus are of opinion that state boards will answer.

None of them, however, mention directly the surest remedy of all. It is for medical colleges themselves to raise the standard of admission to their course of study. At present a man who can scarcely do more than write his own name correctly, can enter almost any medical school in the land and in due course be ground out a doctor. Doctors are in consequence so much in the common, illiterate men of the country that the people cannot discriminate between the good and bad ones. State legislation can destroy the bogus mills. The medical schools themselves can do the rest by requiring preliminary to admission a higher literary education in the graduates they turn loose upon an unoffending world.

A Negro League.

William E. Matthews, a well known colored man, has been making the tour of Europe this season. He says his visit was an exceedingly pleasant and profitable one. Everywhere in Europe he found colored people treated with politeness and consideration, and the Australian negroes from the wilds of Africa. Nowhere in foreign lands did he find his color a bar to his associating on terms of equality with other cultured gentlemen. Only when he returned to his native land was he made to feel that he was an outcast, a despised inferior. While abroad, his soul was filled with grief at the stories he mails brought, of violence, cruelty and insult to his people at home. Mr. Matthews therefore calls on Professor John M. Langston, of the oldest representative American colored man, to take the lead in forming a universal negro league, extending over the world, which shall "bring the fragments of our race into one mighty host." Professor Langston accepts the task.

G. L. Carden, writing in The North American Review about the navy of the future, says our American seamen must be trained differently if we expect to keep up with other nations. Navies are now composed of steamers, not sailing vessels. Instead of learning to scale masts and rope ladders, naval recruits should now be drilled like regular soldiers, as fight on land. On old method the gone do the fighting. Mr. Carden regrets that the common seamen in the American navy are nearly all foreigners. He does not explain, however, that no self respecting American boy will submit to the petty tyranny imposed on him by old and young snobs in the navy. If Shakespeare had lived in our time, he would have reconstructed one of his most famous passages to read: There's a divinity doth hedge an American naval officer.

A telegraph operator over a long distance who says the sounds no longer represent mere sounds to him, but the impression is that of a voice actually talking to him. The sounds so meaningless to others are real words to him—as real as if the person was in the room in conversation with him. Sometimes he closes in his chair and another operator calls him over the wires. The effect is precisely as if he had been awakened from sleep by some one calling his name.

NOBLE DEFENDS HIS ACT

He Tells Why He Rescinded Tanner's Order

ADVANCING $2 PENSIONS TO $4.

A Long and Interesting Official Document—The Secretary Vigorously Defends His Action—Tanner's Letter to Private Dalzell Referred To.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The following authoritative statement, prepared at the interior department, in support of the action of Secretary Noble in rescinding Commissioner Tanner's order advancing pensions from $2 to $4 per month in certain cases, has been given to the press:

In view of the recent decision by the department of the interior relating to the authority of the commissioner of pensions to increase the rate of pensions, certain some $8,000 or $9,000 by advancing their pension rate order from $2 to $4 per month, it is worthy of attention that section 4,698 of the Revised Statutes of the United States provides that: "Except in cases of permanent specific disabilities no increase of pension shall be allowed to commence prior to the date of the examining surgeons' certificate establishing the same, made under the pending claim for increase," and also that a rating made by the commissioner of pensions, except in certain cases where, by law, a specific rate is attached by statute to the disability named, is determined by the degree of disability found by a medical examination of the claimant, and that the claimant's disability is total he is given under the statute a fixed amount.

How They Are Graded.

If one man is found to be very little disabled he is rated at 1-18, or $1; or if he is still more disabled, 2-18, or $2, and if still more disabled, 3-18 or 4-18, and so on. If a man, for instance, has lost a portion of his finger and is thus to some considerable degree disabled, as may have been rated by some examining board at $4 for that, and so on in some other part of the finger this disability, if, however, he has suffered from chills or malaria or some other disability contracted by him by exposure in the swamps during his service as a soldier, and which may not prove permanent or may increase, he may have been thought slightly disabled, if at all, and entitled at the beginning to but one dollar per month in total, say $2, which is the amount fixed in many of the disabilities allowed. In this latter case it might possibly have been a question with the board whether he was to get anything or was disabled at all; but from a lenient construction of his case they have given him $2.

In Addition to Other Soldiers.

If, now, by an order of the commissioner, without regard to this medical examination, the man who has thus been receiving $2 is advanced to $4, without the man who was more disabled and who had been rated at $4 being himself advanced, it is obvious that injustice is done to the higher graded man, because he is put upon a par with a man evidently less disabled. And as between soldier and soldier there is an unfair preference of the less injured. If these cases, however, are all referred to the examining surgeons and their disability to be equal to $4 and it is then allowed, everything has been done in due order and according to law and upon a basis that any man can understand, and no one can say that a board of medical knowledge, experience and professional reputation.

On the contrary, if arbitrary orders of the commissioner are the basis it must result that a few are made favorites and given a particular amount, and the great mass of the men have been deprived of their medical examinations are put at a great disadvantage. Therefore, it was decided that there is no authority in law for an order arbitrarily increasing a great mass of men's pensions in the face of the statute already cited, and which order is not extended to all the pensioners' cases.

The Letter to Dalzell.

The commissioner, whose order has given rise to this decision, in his recent letter to Mr. Dalzell did not claim that his order was to be extended according to the law, but he said: "While commissioner I issued two orders which I thought, and still think, were mighty good ones; first, that the $3,000 men in the pension rolls at less than $4 a month should all, unless they had a medical examination within a year, be ordered for examination before their home board, with a view to putting them on to at least $4 per month pension or drop them off the rolls, for it was and is my opinion that a man who is worthy of any pension at all, $1 a week is small enough for a totally disabled man."

Commissioner Tanner's Order.

The order itself read: "April 25, 1889.—In all cases where a pensionable disability is found to exist, and rated under the law at less $4 per month, to date from and including March 27, 1889."

The decision that was made by the assistant secretary in accordance with these two propositions. The commissioner announced one before he resigned his office; the other after, to Mr. Dalzell. The assistant secretary had other matters to attend to separately. The order as made was arbitrary, unqualified and required an advance without examination to the amount specified at $4 per month. It did not propose to drop any one as the letter pretended it did, and it did not order any one for examination before the home board to see if better provided for did. It was an unauthorized, unqualified and illegal order for every pensioner to be advanced to $4 who was receiving less; it was made April 25 and it was proposed to have it take effect March 27.

Unauthorized Distribution of Money.

A slight consideration of this matter will show that to give away $60,000 a month of the people's money on the order as this would be but the beginning of a system by which millions could be expended uncontrolled by law, as it was unauthorized by the statute. There would be no reason why it is giving to Senator Manderson $4,000 or more than there would be in giving to 25,000 men $48 per year. In such cases he would be an unauthorized distribution of the public moneys, and the door of the treasury might as well be open to actual invasion as to have it opened by warrants not based on the law without questioning. It is also obvious that such a course as this would not be of benefit to the soldiers ultimately, as it is intended that the pensions should be based upon disabled; in other words, those who have been, claim for disability. If one may judge that those men are to be advanced upon a consideration of age alone or that of the full amount of pension, the others might justly think that their more severe wounds and disabilities were quite as uncompensated as those of the favored few.

Every Man's Pension at Risk.

In other words, whenever the opinion of a commissioner without investigation is substituted for actual examination as to disability, every man's pension is put at risk. Order to be so considered as that the government or people would not allow it, or to be so disparaged as that nothing could be obtained. If you can drop a man who is receiving $2 per month from the pension rolls on one opinion of a commissioner, you can drop off a great many others receiving more, on the same principle. It is a mere question of when and where the line is to be drawn. It has been insisted that the law should be adhered to, and the precedents established should have weight. It must also be obvious to all that these things are no mere opinion of a commissioner, but are the result of careful examination by boards of surgeons of the highest professional standing, and that to allow the decision of one man to overthrow the decision of a number, and that, too, in a matter of such importance to the pensioners, is to open the door to favoritism and to the possibility of fraud.

Appeal to Congress.

If the law is abandoned, the weak, the distant and those without powerful friends will suffer, while favorites will flourish.

THE MARITIME CONGRESS.

Secretary Blaine's Speech of Welcome to the Delegates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The opening of the international maritime conference was marked by an unusual display, more by the high rank and glittering costumes of those participating in the proceedings than by the nature of the ceremonies, which were very simple. Every maritime power in the world except Portugal had accepted the invitation of the United States to attend the conference, and Secretary Blaine's welcome to the delegates was as follows:

GENTLEMEN—On behalf of the United States I welcome you to the duties which lie before you. The object of your meeting, the importance of the course between nation and nation demands that every protection against the dangers of the sea and every provision for the safety of human life shall be provided. The spoken languages of the world will continue to be many, but necessity commands that there shall be only one code of signals, and that code, universally known, shall be one. That language must be as universal as the needs of man for commerce and intercourse. Such is the object of the first question which the maritime nations have taken in the questions at hand is shown by the eminent character and the experience of the delegates to whom they have committed the important work.

Rear Admiral Franklin, of the United States navy, then welcomed the delegates in behalf of the navy department.

The delegates were then presented to the president.

Fighting the Electric Light Wires.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The resolutions adopted by the board of health were sent to Mayor Grant. They call attention to the great danger arising from the presence of defective or improperly insulated electric light wires in the street, which brings the question of their continuance thereon under the jurisdiction of the health department charged with guarding the health and lives of the citizens. Looking at the legal aspect of the case, the health commissioners consider that the interests lie with the board of electrical control, and call upon the board formally to take proper steps toward the protection of life. The board declares that 500 volts can be safely used for the light of alternating current. The board of health further declares that in the event of the failure of the board of electrical control to act immediately to forward the improvement will consider it its duty to do so at once under the general laws regulating sanitary matters.

Two Men Hanged.

PLAQUEMINE, La., Oct. 17.—John Olsen and William Drager, who were convicted of taking part in the murder of John Lowell in March, 1888, were hanged here at 7 a. m. H. H. Myers was implicated in the murder, was hanged last November. After conviction Myers made an affidavit that he alone designed the murder and shot Lowell before the others came up. Governor Foster's actions, and afterward prevailed on the others to take Lowell's horses with which to effect their escape. An appeal was taken in the cases of Drager and Olsen, but the judgment of the superior court was affirmed. Great efforts were made to obtain executive clemency, but the governor refused to interfere.

An Important Gas Discovery.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 17.—The Fuel Gas and Electric Engineering company, of which George Westinghouse, Jr., is the principal stockholder, has announced that mechanism had been perfected whereby artificial fuel gas could be produced at a less cost than is expended in piping natural gas from the wells. The process is as yet a secret, as all the patents are not secured. The company promises to be able to furnish the gas very shortly.

Valuable Horses Sold.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 17.—At Woodward's horse sale thirty head were sold for $16,695, an average of $556. The best prices were: Dew to Ashley, Chicago, $1,000; Alcyone, Quiver; W. H. Richfield, Jackson, Miss., $1,850. Alcymoon, b. m., 6, by Alcyone, Dan Pinafore; W. H. Brown, Shelbyville, Ky., $1,850. Ashgrove, br. g., yearling, by William L., dam Mother Lumps; H. Cunningham, Knoxville, Ia., $5,100.

Gen. Powell Withdraws.

BELLEVILLE, Ills., Oct. 17.—Gen. William H. Powell, of this city, a candidate for commissioner of pensions, has withdrawn from Washington lately. He was there informed that his letters and indorsements were all that could be desired, but was given no assurance that he would get the appointment. Gen. Powell has now concluded to withdraw from the race and notified Secretary Noble of his intention.

Robbed the Safe and Burned the Station.

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Oct. 17.—The freight station on the Boston and Albany railroad at Webster was burned. An investigation after the fire revealed the fact that the safe had been broken open, and all the money and valuables in the safe, amounting to $200 in negotiable checks and about $100 in money. The amount of freight burned was not large. There is no clew to the burglars.

A Brakeman Ground to Pieces.

LEBANON, Pa., Oct. 17.—A construction train on the Lebanon and Lancaster railroad, three miles east of here, backed into a freight. RELIGIOUS CONVENTIONS.

Work of the Board of Foreign Missions.

REVISING THE BOOK OF PRAYER.

Six of the Proposed Changes Concurred In by the Delegates—Further Work of the Episcopalians—The Presbyterians Visit Yassar College.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The second day's proceedings of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions were begun at 9 o'clock a. m. at the Broadway Tabernacle. Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, as president of the board, called the meeting to order. The principal business was the reading of special papers from the prudential committee. Dr. Tyler, a veteran missionary from Southeastern Africa, spoke briefly of his work among the Zulus.

Work in Africa.

"The Evangelization of Africa" was the subject of a paper read by Secretary Smith. "Africa," said he, "is one of the grandest jewels which we can win. Africa is the mother of nations. Each year we are learning more and more of this country. If as at present 200,000,000 people can live in plenty, what delight not be done when this great land is brought under the influences of the gospel?"

Missionaries in Japan.

At the conclusion of Secretary Smith's paper Rev. N. G. Clarke, D.D., spoke of the work in Japan. He said that it was a mistake that the board had missionaries there. "At the close of the year 1879 the missionary force of the American board numbered forty-one, with fourteen churches and a membership of 400. Other boards were not less fortunate and all were happy over the results attained."

The Board and the Church.

At the afternoon session the report of the committee of fifteen on the subjects of closer relations between the board and church and the election of corporate members was presented by Dr. Blatchford. "The main statement of fact," said the chairman, "is that the time has not come for any radical change. Indifference and perplexity must first be overcome. Your committee has, therefore, no suggestion to offer concerning any change in the present manner of electing corporate members." In regard to closer relations with the church the report recommended that the president and vice presidents of the board be made ex officio members of the prudential committee.

PRAYER BOOK REVISION.

Doings of the Episcopalian Bishops—Six Changes Concurred In.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—That the Protestant Episcopal convention is sadly behind with its business was shown by yesterday's printed calendar, on which there were twelve reports of deputies and ten important resolutions by members yet to be acted upon. On assembling the house of deputies received as important report from the committee on canons, and also one of the committee on state of the church, and the committee of conference was continued, with authority to confer with similar bodies in other churches.

Revision of the Prayer Book.

Then came the great battle of the day, being the revision of the prayer book. For hours the house debated and quibbled over the report of the committee on liturgical revision. Many amendments were offered, and after much parliamentary wrangling with Chancellor Woolworth, of Nebraska, in the chair, the first thirteen changes already passed by the bishops were taken up. Out of the thirteen changes approved by the bishops only six were concurred in, the other seven being rejected by a decided vote. Then the temper shown in the evening session while the house was in favor of continuing revision, it is disposed to upset nearly all that the committee has laid down as advisable, and conference committees will be necessary to place the matter in an intelligible form before the house.

The house of bishops made some progress in considering the liturgical committee's report, and made arrangements for the consecration of Mr. Davies as bishop of Michigan at St. Peter's church in Philadelphia.

Pyle, Scranton, Pa.; W. H. Thomas, Philadelphia, and J. C. Sherman, Brooklyn. The Cincinnati board is represented by L. H. Brooks, C. M. Holloway, John A. Townley, L. G. Goodall, Richard Smith, A. W. Johnson, Thomas Morrison, Charles B. Murray, John A. Gano and J. G. Stubblapp. Frederick Fraley was re-elected to the presidency.

Abbott and Mills at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Those of the defendants residing in Philadelphia appeared in attendance upon the general assembly of Democratic clubs were taken on a boat ride up the Schuylkill. Shortly after 1 o'clock Hon. Roger D. Mills arrived and joined the party, and immediately went to the Hotel Lafayette. He was then taken for a drive through Fairmount park. Ex-Governor Abbett, of New Jersey, arrived at the same hotel late in the afternoon. At a mass meeting in the Academy of Music ex-Governor Abbett, of New Jersey; Governor Biggs, of Delaware; Governor Jackson, of Maryland, and Hon. R. Q. Mills, were among the speakers.

FIFTY PASSENGERS INJURED.

One Has Already Died and Others Are In a Precarious Condition.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 17.—A collision between two trains on the Burlington and Missouri River railroad at Gibson, a few miles from Omaha, resulted in the injury to at least fifty persons, and the probable fatal injury of two engines, a chair car and a combination car. Gibson is the meeting point for the two trains, but the westbound was slightly behind time and had just crossed the spur, when the eastbound train struck the rear end, which was still on the main line, and hurled both engines and the two coaches in the track. The combination car, coach and the chair car were both crowded with passengers, and the chair car, after being overturned, caught fire, many of the passengers being burned in addition to their injuries.

The exact number of the injured has not as yet been ascertained.

FIFTY MINERS KILLED.

Terrific Explosion in a Colliery at Longton.

BODIES FRIGHTFULLY BURNED.

Fifty Have Been Recovered, But Not One Can Be Identified—One Hundred May Have Perished—A Woman Drops Dead on Hearing the News.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Fifty miners have been entombed in the Bentilie colliery at Longton, Staffordshire, by an explosion of fire damp. There were seventy men in the pit at the time. Of these only two are known to have survived. The pit was completely wrecked.

Digging for the Dead.

Men in neighboring collieries began digging into the debris immediately for the dead. Of the fifty bodies so far taken out not a single one has been identified, as the bodies are so frightfully burned that recognition even by those nearest and dearest proved impossible.

Bodies Frightfully Burned.

In most cases the clothing was also completely burned off the bodies of the victims, and it is feared that the number of the scorched bodies now lying in two rows on each side of the road a few feet from the mouth of the shaft will ever be identified by the wives and mothers, whose wails for their dead are ringing out dolefully everywhere.

A Hundred May Have Perished.

It is thought certain that there are two more bodies in the mine which the brave explorers could not reach, and it is even rumored now that the number of men at work when the explosion occurred largely exceeded the figure given by the officials.

The first report said that sixty men, all told, were at the bottom of the shaft, but it is stated by some that the number will be much nearer a hundred. This statement is, to some extent, borne out by the fact that fifty bodies were recovered so quickly. The remainder, numbering nearly twenty more than ten victims still left at the foot of the shaft.

Killed by the News.

An old man and his three sons, who were in the mine when the explosion occurred, were lost, and when the news was brought home to the old man's wife, the mother of the boys, she being the only surviving member of the family, she dropped dead almost without a word, the shock having killed her.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

Boiling Superintendent of the Kicker with Mexican Matters.

WARM LEFT.—For the past four weeks our friends have been eagerly pressing us to take the nomination for mayor on the people's ticket. We do not crave office, and have a very busy man, but the pressure became so great we had to give in.

Last Tuesday evening the city caucus was held, and instead of being nominated for mayor we received only three votes out of a possible of sixty-one. Our friends were mistaken when they insisted that we were wanting it. Instead of being the unanimous choice of the patriotic people, we had the pleasure of seeing Jerry Baxter, the meanest man in town, given the nomination.

Oh, well, that's human nature right through, and as editor feel enough to go into politics deserves to be driven head first into the tanbark, as we were. We have a word to say however. The Kicker will not only bolt every candidate on the ticket, but we guarantee to have nine-tenths of the nominees in prison before they are a month older. You can gamble on this, which is final for saying: Don't monkey with a newspaper man.

HAVE GOT A FEW.—A correspondent inquires if The Kicker has got a libel suits on hand, as the result of its independent and outspoken course. Well, yes, it has a few—about four dozen, we believe, but we are not worrying any. They have all been instituted by second-class chaps, who haven't any character to be damaged, and the whole batch will probably be thrown out of court in a hung one day. In the beginning of our career a libel suit used to give us the colic for three days and nights, and we'd wake up from a troubled sleep to find our cheeks wet with tears, but we soon got sunburned. Indeed, we rather prefer to see them come. It looks like business.

WHO HAVE BEEN THE PROPHESIES.—Ever since we took possession of our office on Grand avenue certain people have taken a malicious delight in heaving rocks at the doors and through the windows at midnight. We put up with it the first six months because we were afraid, and the next six because we willed to see people enjoy themselves. Then we warned the public to let up or somebody would get hurt. Last Wednesday night a rock weighing three pounds came through a window and barely missed our head as we lay sleeping on our cot. As we put to the door with a shot gun we observed it was a man making off over the common. We drew on him and pulled trigger, and something uttered a yell.

Yesterday the body of Professor Jenkins was found in the sage brush about two miles from town, and it was plain that he died of a dose of buck shot in the back. Just as likely as not it was the chap we fired at in the darkness. We didn't owe him any particular grudge, and we didn't know that he did—so, and we are willing to foot half the burial expenses as a venture.

A RARE COWARD.—The item in the Chicago press of recent date that we had been fatally wounded by a pistol ball while publishing a border was not exactly correct. In the first place, the individual was a cowboy named Bose. In the next place the article was true, and in the third place, after he had fired five shots at us without touching a hair, we knocked him silly with a squash that we picked up in front of Snyder's grocery. Then we stood on him for about half an hour, and when he went out of town our brindled dog was chasing him at a speed of twenty miles an hour.—Detroit Free Press.

He Had Not Finished.

First Boy—Say, Jim, throw away that there cigar and come with me.

Second Boy—Naw, I won't, I ain't near sich yet.—Munsey's Weekly.

It Wasn't the Principle.

A young man with excited step and flushed face halted an officer in front of the City Hall the other day and stated that his had been robbed.

"Who, and where?" naturally inquired the officer.

"Out on the exposition grounds this forenoon."

"How much?"

"Well, to hear me I can figure it there was ninety-forty cents in the portmonnaie."

"Have any suspicions?"

"No. I missed it after coming out of the cable shire."

"Ah, it a pretty small matter to make complaint about?" queried the officer, "or is it the principle of the thing which actuates you?"

"Principle of the thing be hanged!" hotly exclaimed the young man. "What I'm after it my forty cents, and if I don't get it I'll have to walk up ten miles on the railroad track! Principle is all right when you have a big boodle, but I'd see a ton of it blowed high sky before I'd walk thirteen miles!"—Detroit Free Press.

A Rural Opinion.

The city girl's a queer concern;
There's a lot of things she has to learn,
Tho' she may claim with angry heat
Her education's quite complete.

She don't know yarbs from pizen weeds,
Nor nothin' much about the feeds
That's proper-est to give the stock,
Nor how on earth to tend a flock.

Nor gin'rally she's short of hose,
And bellers if you mention shoes;
And as for cows and goats that's mild
She's kinder s'picious that they're wild.

She can't climb fences, good, nor trees,
And she's no use at huskin bees—
But then, jes take her all in all,
She's purty nice—the city gal!

—Susie M. Best in St. George's Journal.

A Mean Teacher.

Mrs. Gadd—Are you goin' to send little Jack to Mrs. Thoro'ughcod again?

Mrs. Gaddy—Indeed I won't. She went to her all last year and said her $20 for it, and the mean, stingy thing didn't give him a single prize, not one, and they don't cost but a couple of dollars, either.—New York Weekly.

Does It Pay?

In one of the large towns of a western state two young ladies are suffering from lead poisoning as the result of using toilet powder containing white lead. One of them is greatly emaciated, and suffers much from spasms. In both cases the fingers and arms are paralyzed. If these unfortunate young women live, which is doubtful, they are, perhaps, rendered helpless for life.

Cases similar to the above are not infrequent from the use of poisonous cosmetics. A beautiful complexion is to be desired, but its artificial counterpart is very undesirable and does not deceive any observer. The use of powder and rouge is not only offensive to the eye, but leaves the skin sallow, dry and rough, even if it produces no worse results.

Not long ago we heard of a young woman who began using drugs upon her eyes to increase their brilliancy. Her silly vanity has rendered her blind for life!

Such sufferers from their own foolishness are not always young ladies. A gentleman of 60 years died last week as a result of lead poisoning. For fifteen years he had been in the habit of dyeing his hair and beard, and to this practice the physicians attributed his death. His is but one of four cases, within the writer's knowledge, where paralysis and death have been ascribed to poisonous hair dyes.—Youths' Companion.

How to Be Miserable.

There are persons whose lives are rendered miserable by slavish conformity to their own lot with those in easy circumstances. Many a woman has grown petulant and lost the charm of a pleasant nature by dwelling on this difference in her surroundings and velvets and the plainer fabrics which her small means compel her to wear. It is both foolish and dangerous to allow such thoughts to disturb the serenity of one's mind. It fosters discontent, and creates an ambition which too often seeks evil ways for its gratification.

Each individual's life is distinctively his own. He can live it well and happily only when his mind is sensibly adapted to the circumstances which govern it.

There is something, however, to be envied. Something both prettier and pleasanter than costly equipages or fine dress; and that is—a sunny, happy spirit. A wife and mother with such a nature is more to be desired than all the costly furnishings that money can supply. She is the joy and ornament in one.—Atlanta Constitution.

Business Habits.

Every girl should learn business habits at home while under her parents' control. The mother who permits to stamp her daughter as soon should pay her for transacting domestic duties as regularly as a father would pay his son when he took into his store or office with him. The object of the mother also should be allowed to spend with as little restriction as possible, but a deficit should never be made up, and a bill should never be paid except by the daughter. This is one of the problems of domestic economy. It sets at rest forever the idea that perhaps at the end of the month two and two make five, or that "father will pay it." Many girls do not set value of the thing bought. Two young men were looking at the mouth and said one to the apparent other. "Did you see that girl as small as a silver dollar. "I tell you," said the other impressionless youth, "a dollar looks bigger to me than any woman that ever lived." To me then any woman that ever lived." To me then any woman that ever lived." To me then —It has just been ascertained that the horse belonging to James Torten, of this city, who died a few days ago from the rabies, had been bitten by a dog on the Rahway road near Westfield. Mr. Totten will bring suit to recover his money.

—The proprietor of the Holly Grove Farm has just put on a handsome new wagon, to convey the pure milk and butter from Poplewood Farm, to the inhabitants of this vicinity who are fortunate enough to be among his patrons. The advertisement is in another column.

—The twenty-second anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city will be held in the First Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening, Oct. 22d, at 8 o'clock. Merrill E. Gates, LL. D., President of Rutgers College, has been secured to deliver the address.

—State Superintendent Chapman proposes the compulsory education law in this State, a failure for the following reasons: One is, the lack of public school accommodations, and the other, the long research machinery of the law. How best to force children to attend school is a problem that had never been satisfactorily solved in New Jersey, and the State Superintendent thinks that to-day will require a more stringent law and better compensation to those charged with its enforcement.

—The tactics of ex-Governor Leon Abbett and the Democratic State Committee is to make a great noise over side issues to divert public attention. Pen is wild not forget that in the present canvass the saloon-keep rs with their counsel, Leon Abbett, are the candidates on one side, and on the other are the people who were deprived of the right to decide for themselves on the saloon question by the Democrats serving the saloons. Mr. Abbett's trick won't work. The people won't have the dust thrown in their eyes this time.

WHARTON—JACKSON.

A Fashionable Wedding at the Methodist Church.

There perhaps has never been a more fashionable and largely attended wedding in the Methodist church than that of last evening, when at seven o'clock the bride was escorted to one of the most charming and accomplished of our Plainfield beauties, Miss Carrie Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Jackson, of Crescent avenue, was united in wedlock in a handsome and popular young gentleman, Mr. Charles Wharton, of Philadelphia, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. Mr. A. H. Tuttle, a former pastor, and an old friend of the family.

The bridesmaids were Miss Knowland, Miss Sanders, Miss Strull and Miss Wharton.

The maid of honor was Miss Minnie J. French, a niece of the bride.

The best man was Mr. J. Harding Wharton, a brother of the groom.

The ushers were Messrs. Campbell Bakewell, Edward McKnight, Marion Ackerman, DeGraff, McKenney and R. Bragdon.

There was a profusion of choice flowers from Dreer's beautiful conservatories about the pulpit, and among the pulpit decorations was an Italian marble bas-relief font, bought by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, while in Europe, and presented to the church, being exhibited there for the first time. A New York organist played the wedding march as the procession approached the altar and as it retired.

After the ceremony the bridal couple and their guests were entertained at the bride's home, where the bridal supper was partaken of, and the couple congratulated.

The presents were exceedingly numerous and costly.

The couple started later on their wedding trip, leaving a sealed envelope addressed to Mr. Jackson, to open after their departure, stating the destination. The couple will make Plainfield their home, Mr. Wharton having been established in a prosperous iron business in New York, by his father, a rich iron manufacturer at Pittsburg.

COURT NOTES.

A Prisoner Arraigned.—The Frazee Lee Will Case Suit, on.

General Court of Session convened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, Judge Mc Cormick Dyer and Wiley on the bench. The only business transacted with the arraignment of Henry Alberts, a young man who had been indicted for committing an assault and battery. He pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for November 11.—Judge Van Syckle then made his appearance and the Frazee Lee will contest, which was announced Tuesday before his honor, was on tinued.

Burglars at Ex-Councilman Cuthbert's.

About eleven o'clock last night two men attempted to enter the residence of ex-Councilman John H. Cuthbert at 95 Seventh street. There was only a girl in the house at the time. She called to the men to inquire what they wanted. The burglars paid no heed to her, but continued trying to force open the door. Then she thoroughly frightened them and screamed "murder", "fire" and other words to satisfy anyone her feelings. The family of Mr. T. J. Miller who reside at No 96 on the opposite side of the street, heard her, and Mr. Miller, were quietly to the residence of Mr. E. Wiltman at 101 West Seventh street, and had him telephone to the police station for help. Policeman Lynch and Flanagan proceeded at once in a cab to the scene, and while they were in the house the burglars disappeared in the darkness passing near the cab. The officers, however, did not see them. They did not seem alarmed, but walked quietly away. Indeed, the fact that they did not leave the premises until after the police arrived indicates that they were unusually bold although from the bunching way in which they did their work they are not thought to be old at the business. They used a saw, and had sawed through a part of the moulding of the door.

The girl at the house was much scared. A woman from Mr. Miller's family connected to remain with her at the house until the return of Mr. Cuthbert. Marshal Martin was detailed to specially watch the vicinity, although with no idea that the burglars would return.

In fact, it was concluded that the whole affair was part of a scheme to cave the people of the neighborhood into having special watchmen.

There is an old dog on the premises, but he appears to be of no account as a watch dog.

Chief Carey was at his home in bed suffering with a severe cold when he received the alarm, and sent the police as stated.

An Enjoyable Evening.

After an open meeting of Watamula Lodge No. 3,451, Knights of Honor, which was held last evening, a pleasant time was had by members, their wives, sweethearts and friends. The meeting terminated with an entertainment and dancing. A good supper was partaken of by P. P. Hagel or C. J. Pyatt in behalf of the Ladies as an appreciation of his services.

PERSONAL.

John Limburg caught a base at the dam in Bound Brook yesterday, weighing four and a half pounds.

A report reached this city to-day that Frank Dodge, who formerly resided here, had died in Connecticut.

David L. Runyon, a brother of the late ex-Judge Joseph W. Runyon, dropped dead in his office in Newark this morning from heart disease. Mr. Runyon was well known in Plainfield, having once resided there.

At the Annual Syracuse Convention of the New Jersey Women's Home Missionary Society held in New Brunswick Wednesday, Mr. W. E. Haywood, of North Plainfield, was re-elected President and Mrs. G. F. Mathews, of this city was made Treasurer.

Y. P. S. C. E. MEETING.

Addresses by the Revs. Mr. Clark and Sinclair.

At the time the First Presbyterian church was dedicated it was decided that one evening should be given to the Young People's Society of the church. It was found to be impracticable for the society to take charge of any evening's exercises during dedication week, as it was impossible to procure suitable speakers and last evening was selected as the time they should make it.

At half-past seven o'clock a large congregation filled the auditorium of the church and the exercises were opened by an organ voluntary, followed by a hymn entitled Jubilate Deo, by the choir. Responsive readings and a prayer followed.

Mr. Edward D. John then in behalf of the Young People's Society, welcomed the large congregation and introduced the Rev. Edward Clark, a well-known society worker.

Mr. Clark's address was full of enthusiasm and was eagerly listened to. Among other things he said: "It is very auspicious that the church should consecrate its young people. They come forward to help to work and is necessary to fight for the church. We are glad that the young people are marching with us. There are nearly 600,000 of them now banded together. Everywhere I go to conventions I find the churches well-attended and well-crowded to overflowing. They come together to talk over and promote the interests of the society. Young people, you must not stop, you must do more and better service for Christ and his church. God Himself has owned and blessed this work. The prayers and churches have taken up the work. There are nearly 10,000 societies throughout the land. The first one was organized in a small town in Maine. The constitution of the society has been translated into a number of different languages and is recognized by all denominations. We must keep up spreading the good work. The only way to feel like doing our duty and serving Christ is to do our duty and serve Christ. Do it because Christ expects these things. The pledge is the backbone of the society. Is means that the young people will do certain things because they have promised to do them. They promise to support the church and do their duty. It is the aim of the society to create a pure atmosphere around its members. The society don't find it a hard thing, but an acceptable thing to work for Christ and the church. We cannot stop at doing a thing once but must do it over and over again in order to become use to it. The societies desire to aid the church by creating enthusiasm among the young people. It has a work to do and the church ought which it is connected. Your work and mine is with the church in which God has placed us. Feel proper pride and be loyal to your church. I believe there will be raised up a generation that will be full of loyalty to the church. They come here with no personal purpose but to help the church. Search the Scriptures to work for Christ. All of you who did promise to your pledge and you will accomplish something for God. There is nothing so worthy of a young man or young woman as to work for Christ to sustain His church.

Rev. Mr. Sinclair, the last was next introduced and he spoke briefly on the Sunday schools. Taking for his subject "Wherein Does the Average Sunday School Succeed" Mr. Hurlbut's ad dress was full of enthusiasm and was eagerly listened to by the congregation.

The music was a special feature of the occasion. The double quartettes was composed of Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. Titsworth, sopranos; Miss Alice Holmes and Miss Annie Parrie, altos; Messrs. Bogelow and VanArsdale, tenors; and Messrs. Titsworth and Runyon, bass. Dr. E. W. Hodges presided at the organ.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE CARS.

A Seven Year Old Child Killed Last Evening.

Margie, the youngest child, of John and Margaret McInerney, was struck and instantly killed by the half-past five o'clock Philadelphia express train last evening. She was seven years old and lived with her parents on South Second street, between Plain field avenue and Liberty street. The accident occurred when she was evidently opposite her parents residence. Her skull was fractured and the right arm and right leg were broken.

Undertaker Carey notified County Physician Wescott, and he came to Plainfield this morning viewed the remains and held an inquest jointly, deeming an inquest unnecessary.

An eye-witness to the accident says that the child was picked up by the pilot of the engine and tossed high in the air, landing on the embankment.

The train did not stop until it arrived at the North avenue station. The child's father threatens to bring suit against the Railroad Company.

The little girl had just finished her supper and was at play with some children. She ran up the house to procure some cents with which to start a fire, and was struck by a train as above recorded. Frank McInerney, a brother of the child pointed out the remains.

WORSLEY IN TROUBLE AGAIN.

Frightening People into Engagements as a Watchman.

For some time past the residents on Broadway have been very apprehensive of burglary. Their fear has also been greatly enhanced because of an alarming amount of shooting that has been heard in this neighborhood of late, between Cherry and Sixth streets particularly. To this the fear already inspired by the residents on this vicinity, and in other portions of the city occupied by costly residences, they were intentionally informed that burglars were nightly seen in the vicinity. This widespread information caused the people to work for some protection, which they did in the form of a watchman whose duty it was to keep a constant watch on the premises. Several residents on Broadway failed to heed the warning sent to them or take any precautions. It is not to be wondered at then if they were unnecessarily alarmed last week on hearing, on an unusual amount of shooting, startling of windows and a grating on the doors. But Saturday night there was cause for additional alarm. At 12 o'clock the occupants of Mr. Henry G. Campbell's residence, 312 Broadway were awakened by an attempted burglar on the premises, and shooting in the rear yard. On examining the premises it was found that the burglars had not effected an entrance, but that they had managed to open one of the lower windows which fastens with a patent clasp on the inside, and on which it is necessary to turn a small knob before the clasp can be moved. This seemed a mystery. On examining the stable it was found that the staple on the door had been drawn out and all the doors thrown wide open. From all external appearances the robbers were frightened away just in the nick.

Having heard of the burglary yesterday, a Call representative called at Mr. Campbell's in the evening. A surprise was the only one that could be seen on the premises. Little or no information could be obtained from the domestics as first, but finally by dint of perseverance our representative managed to get an acknowledgment of the attempted robbery, after which the above facts, as believed in by the neighbors, were learned as a correct account of the affair.

The police station was the next place visited. Here an entirely different story was told. The police say that for some weeks back they have heard a deal of shooting around the wealthy portion of the city, and that up to Saturday night no culprits could be found. Officers on duty during the shooting would see the flash of a shot, but when they went to trace it to its origin they failed to discover anything that would have caused it. This state of affairs continued until Saturday night, when Officer Patrick Kilt, hearing a shot fired from the establishment of Worsley, on Park and Sarajito street, and seeing a flash of light in the rear of the Campbell residence hurried to the yard and there discovered a special officer named Worsley crouched in a corner near the stable with a cocked pistol in his hand ready to fire upon the first thief that came in sight. Officer Kilt, "Prince at the burglars," replied the special. "Well you just put up and act;" retorted disarming Officer Kilt, "or I will fire you." And the special placed himself up and stuck away like a whipped cur. Worsley then explained that he was on the uniform. Officer Kilt then made an examination of the premises and discovered them in the condition above described. At the finish of his night's duty, Sunday morning, Officer Kilt reported to the chief what he had discovered. Chief Seward's suspicions were verified by the officer's report, and he accordingly proceeded to the residence and informed Mr. Campbell of the true state of affairs.

Special Worsley, as the fel ow is known, claims to be the Detective Hardby who tracked down the burglars at Plainfield some time ago. He came to this city shortly after this occurred at Plainfield with a long list of names signed to a paper in which he got ited to be marvelous sleuth hound, able to track any midnight prowler to his lair. Worsley secured the shining employment of the Pinkerton agent of the Midland railroad to watch the freight cars that were side-tracked at the Broadway freight house. One night shortly after Worsley started in on his new job, a tie was discovered across the track a little above the crossing and in the line of a West bound train. Suspicion fell on Worsley, who was then discharged, and to this day nothing further has been done, although the suspected person has ever since been within the reach of the law. After being discharged from the employment of the railroad company, Worsley went about from house to house on Broadway soliciting work as a night watchman, showing a long list of his alleged achievements in the detective world. A number of people were taken in by the man and paid by him for watching at their homes at night. Worsley had quite a number of customers, so to speak, but not satisfied with the number on his list he thought to furnish the others into employing him by firing off a pistol in their vicinity at all hours of the night, and in other ways seeking to frighten them into employing him. Saturday night's exploit, however, is his last achievement. The police say that they have recently seen him in company with several notorious burglars, and that instead of attending to his business he is constantly in company with questionable characters at midnight hours away instead of acting in the capacity of watchman for which he was hired and paid by the many peaceful residents of upper Broadway. This is a clear case and to the confusion in which the people are now found by Chief Seward, Worsley's arrest is now simply impossible and out of the question for a burglar to do such work as to open all the doors of a place before he entered the building and then go away without taking anything with him, as in this case to-day. Then fellow Worsley has caused the police and public much annoyance and uneasiness in the night duty on Broadway. In connection the police and public ought to be about discussed with the indiscriminate manner in which men are appointed as special police without any one since has lost their services elsewhere. There are several of these men now in the force—trouble, and are practically by their special officer's badge.—Patriots Call.

The Cypress Commandery Ball.

Cypress Commandery, K. of T., a Plainfield masonic organization of colored men gave their third annual ball last evening at the Crescent Rink.

The ball was attended by colored people of Plainfield and surrounding towns and villages, all seeming to enjoy themselves heartily, either by drilling, dancing, jesting or feasting.

In the grand march there was about one hundred couples, one of which—a white man and a black woman—excited some comment. Some of the costumes worn by the dusky belles were very rich, and included silks, satins and laces.

The Knights presented a very fine appearance in their handsome uniforms, and their drilling was well spoken of.

The managers were very attentive to the visitors, presenting each with an elegant souvenir silk badge, inscribed as follows in gold letters: Cypress Commandery; In his hand honor; Of great importance; In his stand victory. Below these the faithful motto: Death; No. 6 Plainfield, N. J.; Welcome Guest.

New Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The appointment of Gen. Michael Kerwin, editor of The Tablet, as Commissioner of Internal Revenue has apparently given much gratification to Irish-Americans of all shades of political belief, many letters of congratulation poured in upon him yesterday. Gen. Kerwin won his first promotion in the Federal Army by entering in disguise the camp of the Confederates at Martinsburg and bringing back to Gen. Negley, of this city, information that saved Pittsburg from subsequent events. The new Commissioner was born in Wexford, Aug. 15th, 1837, but came to the United States at an early age and was educated in a private academy at Philadelphia.

Be Strong and Well.

A clergyman lately began an address to a meeting of working young men as follows: "I am never happy until I have seen the extra baseball edition, and I am with you in the hope that the Dashers will take the pennant." These words were greeted with yells that fairly raised the roof. Seriously it is matter for great rejoicing if the baneful cant has eliminated the desire for athletic culture in this country. If the present interest in athletics continues, as it is to be hoped it will, we shall soon hear no more of the physical degeneracy of the present generation.

Our white faced students and dwellers in offices are beginning to find that sunlight and open air exercise will do quite as much for them as it did for the pioneers. When we add to this the all round development that systematic athletic exercise gives, the result will be a human being magnificent enough physically to have filled the ideal of even the old Greeks. For sunshine, open air and the exercise that is not grinding toil are the true elixir of life. Through them we gain the vital principle in its purest essence. They keep the human being bright, breezy and good tempered.

It is encouraging to note the movement among national guard regiments in the direction of gymnastic training. In some of the armories first class gymnasiums have been fitted up, with a trained teacher. A man is measured there from head to foot and the measurements are compared with a model. Thus his muscular deficiencies are discovered and he is put in training accordingly. In a year or two these regiments will show not only well drilled soldiers but splendid physical men.

Germany has today 350,000 trained athletes belonging to the Turner society. Men like these it was who wrested Alsace and Lorraine from France in 1870. It is the strong armed, broad chested man who wins, in peace and in war.

Another excellent result of physical training is that those who attain the best results in athletic culture must keep themselves rigidly from excesses in smoking and drinking.

A writer says the English girls of today are noticeably taller than their mothers, and it is attributed to the persistent outdoor exercise of the women of that country for the past two generations. English girls and even middle aged women ride, row, hunt, swim, shoot and sail their own yachts. An English woman will sometimes walk eighteen miles in a day. In our own country we have reason to be thankful that the consumptive beauty of the past is changing into the Junonian type, made for strength and wear. If the English maiden plays tennis and even cricket with vim and enthusiasm equally with her brother, the American belle is fast tending the same way. The American girl of the future will be no weakling. Strong, lithe and graceful, she will be the fit daughter of a country destined to witness the perfect flowering of mankind.

French Exposition Prizes.

From a partial list of the prizes awarded to Americans at the French exposition we glean a few of the most important. Americans have received premiums for beer, some machinery, educational exhibits and silverware. The Boston public schools naturally took a grand prize. Several California wines got a gold medal, and one exhibitor of California wines obtained a silver prize. United States government displays from the various departments—maps, drawings and papers on agricultural, scientific and military topics—received several grand prizes, testifying to the excellence of the work. Lard from Philadelphia, canned meats from Chicago and various electrical inventions received gold medals, while Edison and Elihu Thompson display grand prizes. New York carriages took a grand prize. So did Cincinnati wood working machines and Philadelphia fur hats. Finally, the Women's Christian Temperance Union carried off a gold medal, why we are not told, unless it is for being good and pretty girls.

The czar of Russia is troubled in his mind because he is getting so fat. So is his imperial highness, the sultan of Turkey. Queen Victoria has been for some years as fat and heavy as the royal Georges whose portraits she begins to resemble so strikingly. There is an infallible remedy for all. If those three rulers will consent to live for two months on some hundreds of thousands of their subjects do year in and year out, they will not long have to complain of surplus fat.

It is not often that stealing becomes so cheap and easy that there is no more money to be made at it, but this combined begins to seize from the pockets of pirated editions of foreign books. They say now that everybody has gone into the business, so that the price has been reduced by rival houses below the cost of printing and paper. There is such a possibility as commodities being too cheap, it seems, and liberty being too free.

A Riot in Court at Father McFadden's Trial.

SALE OF BOUCICAULT'S PLAYS.

Eight of Them Were Bought In by the Playwright's Divorced Wife—Said to Satisfy Unpaid Claims for Alimony.

Other News from Over the Sea.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The crown officials have begun the prosecution of Father McFadden and several of his parishioners at Maryboro, and if the crown attorney succeeds in his evident purpose of obtaining a jury of anti-Protestants it will not be without many disturbances in the court room. So violent were the protests at his action in dismissing every Catholic juryman that the proceedings had to be suspended pending the arrival of a large force of police. Two persons who cheered for Parnell's flock took a hand, and for a time it looked as though a riot would be precipitated.

Another Witness of the Killing.

Another Catholic, when told to stand down after having been accepted, got very much excited, and shouted to the crown attorney that he was a liar. Two men who share in the killing of Police Inspector Martin, for whose killing he stood indicted. He declared that he was present and saw the blow struck which killed Martin. It is to the credit that McFadden had already escaped from the church and was a mile away at the time. The crown at once ordered the detention of the man as a witness.

Serious Trouble Feared.

It is not unlikely that serious trouble will result if the crown persist in its present course. Word has been sent to all the Catholic farmers about Maryboro that Catholics are being rigidly excluded from the jury, and the excitement resulting is at such a pitch that many of those notified will undoubtedly come armed and determined to see justice done. A large force of police is already on the way to Maryboro from Dublin, and peaceably disposed citizens look forward with some misgivings.

The convention adopted a resolution concerning the flag episode, declaring that "in so who hissed the American flag were either fools or police spies, and did so only to give the "capitalistic press" an excuse for crying out in the spite against Socialists and socialism. The convention fixed upon Brooklyn as the seat of the executive committee, upon Boston as the seat of the labor bureau, and upon New York as the seat for the party organs.

THE CHERRY CASE.

Watchful Assembly Supreme in Public Sentiment to the Grand Jury.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Dr. Cherry, Alexander Sullivan's private secretary, was a witness before the grand jury all the morning. He refused to give a reporter any information, but succeeded in getting a word or two from him, to the effect that he was not a willing witness by any means and that he had told nothing. He was then hustled into State's Attorney Longenecker's office, where he was guarded by an officer. T. G. Windes, a partner of Alexander Sullivan, made several ineffectual efforts to see young Stoltenberg, and finally left the building. It is said that Mr. Windes will demand access to Stoltenberg on a writ of habeas corpus. Sullivan's residence and the Opera house block, in which he has his office, now both "picketed" by detectives last night.

Bailiff Hanks, the alleged jury briber, said in his statement to the grand jury that the notorious Bailiff Adolph Luetgert, Jr., of Sandwich, Ill., had been approached by Sullivan. Hanks moved slowly, because he disliked the job and because the money was slow in coming. He had frequent consultations with Sullivan concerning the method of procuring a corrupt juror. After plans had been agreed upon Hanks wanted to know what assurance he had that the money would be forthcoming. He went to Graham that a certain "triangular" would furnish it. Hanks finally went to work, but was not successful. Graham became disappointed and forged the note mentioned, saying that eight cases had been selected, and not one that the defense could depend upon. As an explanation why money was not coming he told Hanks that he was "the fellow at the Chicago Opera house" was having a hard time to pay the lawyers.

In this connection it is stated that Alexander Sullivan has not only paid for the defense, but he had been compelled to give it all to Attorney Forrest, who was clamoring for money. Another big sum of money was coming to him, it is said, and Forrest has given to understand that he could rely on getting some of it. This $5,000 that is claimed to have gone to Mr. Forrest is said to be the first money that has passed that has been apparent between Mr. Foster and his associates for some time. Foster charged that Beggs was being left out of considerations. Nothing was being done for him, and his lawyer was not getting any of the money raised by the triangles. He protested that Mr. Forrest should not have all the money, and demanded that Beggs demand his share of the $5,000. Beggs left out in the cold, Mr. Foster had been using his peremptory challenges, which are worth more than money, for Mr. Beggs' sole and exclusive benefit.

PENNSYLVANIA BEREAVED.

Death of Ex-Governor Hartranft at His Norristown Home.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Oct. 18.—Ex-Governor John F. Hartranft, who had been ill with pneumonia, complicated by uræmia, for the past two weeks, died at his home here at 5:30 p. m., Oct. 17. John Frederick Hartranft was born in Fredericktown, Lancaster county, Pa., Dec. 16, 1830, and graduated at Union college, Schenectady, in 1851. He was a descendant of Scotsmen who fled to this country to avoid religious persecution in 1734. He early abandoned surveying, his first choice as a vocation, and was admitted to the bar in 1860. He was in command of a military company when the war broke out and went into the three months' service with it as the Fourth Pennsylvania. He afterward went on the staff of Gen. William B. Franklin, and was in 1862 the Thirty-Pennsylvania regiment. His brilliant war record closed with a promotion to the rank of brevet major general, March 25, 1865. He was elected auditor general in October of the same year and governor of Pennsylvania in 1868 and re-elected in 1870, being unanimously nominated by the Republican convention. He was a delegate to the convention by which the Republican convention of 1876.

THE RELIGIOUS WORKERS

Proceedings of the Mission Board and the Episcopalians.

THE FORMER FLECK OFFICERS.

What Was Done by the Bishops at Their Meetings—Resolutions Passed Regarding Deaconesses—Work of the Episcopal Board of Missions—Religious Notes.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—At the session of the American board of commissioners of foreign missions on missions to secure the passage of a resolution appointing a committee of seven members to "learn and report what are the elements of discontent" in connection with the work of the prudential committee was prosecuted, as was also a motion to abolish the prudential committee on the report of the home department.

Rev. Joseph Cook's Report.

At 2:30 o'clock the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated, during which appropriate remarks were made, and at 4 o'clock the business session was resumed by the introduction of the report of the committee on membership.

While the ballots for new members were being counted Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, chairman of the committee on the Turkish mission, read a report. Dr. Pepadieti read the resolutions on certain papers and on certain platforms criticising the prudential committee, and reminded the audience that the missionaries were the go between for Greece as for the purpose of educating the native nationality. Therefore, they must go prepared to teach, and the effort of the prudential committee to secure competent teachers should not be made the subject of unjust criticism.

The Report Objected To.

Rev. Dr. Herrick read a paper on the growth of missionary work in Turkey, and then the committee to nominate officers presented its report. Among the names proposed for membership on the prudential committee was Arthur Little's name appeared in place of that of Rev. Charles A. Dickinson, who was spoken of by Dr. Noble during the course of the debate which followed as having been "unloyal to the American board." Dr. Lyman Abbott and several other clergymen objected to the report, and appealed to the board not to drop Dr. Dickinson's name from the committee.

The Officers Elected.

A. S. Storrs, D. D., LL.D., president; Elphalet W. Blatchford, vice president; Rev. A. C. Thompson, D. D., Rev. Joseph A. Rogers, Rev. E. B. Webb, C. C. Burr, Elbridge Torrey, Rev. A. H. Plumb, Hon. W. F. Ellison, Rev. F. E. Clark, Rev. Charles A. Dickinson and G. Hamlin Fitch, prudential committee; Rev. N. G. Clark, Rev. E. K. Alden and Rev. Judson Smith, corresponding secretaries; Rev. Henry A. Stimson, recording secretary; Rev. E. E. Strickland, assistant recording secretary; Langdon S. Ward, treasurer; Hon. Arthur W. Tufts, Samuel Johnson and James M. Gordon, auditors.

A motion to appoint a committee to inquire into the methods of the prudential committee was lost. The meeting Dr. Storrs, president of the board, made an address.

The Woman's Board Meets.

While the ecumenical conference was in progress the woman's board of missions held a meeting in the Thirty-fourth street Presbyterian church. It was addressed by missionaries from India, Turkey, China and Africa.

The Episcopalians.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—At the Episcopalian convention of the Fifteenth district, meeting in St. Stephen's church, the following

He Hedged.

"She's it glorious weather?" he said to the girl on the left on the street car platform. "It will look in the matter and see," she replied.

"Say, your liver is out of order," continued the first speaker. "Take some blue mass at once."

"That was a rather queer conversation," observed a passenger who had overheard it, after the liver mixing man had got off.

"Yes," said he bridge," replied the other. "After I had spoken of the weather I recommended him as a lawyer. He was going to get an opinion and send me a bill. That's the last time I gave him medical advice as an offset."—Detroit Free Press.

Well Up in His Business.

—Munsey's Weekly.

He Will Look Further.

There were four or five men in a Grand River avenue butcher shop recently when a new case in, looked them carefully over and inquired:

"Which of you is named Polonius?"

"Some of us," answered one.

"Sure?"

"Of course we are."

"Just my luck. I wanted to lick a man named Polonius. I expected to find him in here. I've been to a good deal of trouble in closing around after him, and it seems too bad to get left again."

"Yes, it does," replied the biggest one of the lot, in a reflective way.

"Polonius hasn't any friends here, has he?"

"He might have."

"Really! In that case one of them might want to take his place, you know."

"Yes, perhaps I might."

"If you only would!" Say, I can hammer you to squash in two minutes!"

"Out here in the alley?"

"Yes."

"Sure?"

"Right off."

"Well, let's see if you can!"

All went out, the two flung off their coats, and it wasn't more than a minute before the man who was looking for Polonius grabbed the coat and ran down the alley, just escaping a kick which stove in the head of a barrel of pork.

"Come back and be a man!" shouted the victor, as he waved his fists in the air.

"Not this afternoon!" shouted the other in reply. "I'm looking for Polonius, I am. Polonius is a thin, short man, weighing about 200 pounds, and he spits blood every morning before breakfast. I can lick him to squash with one hand."—Detroit Free Press.

The Song of the Talker.

Sweeter than Eolian breathings on the sense and trembling ear,
Made by flower burdened zephyrs from the per fume racing near;
Sweeter than the heavenly harpings of the rapt angelic choir,
Is the music, endless music, of my ever sound ing mouth:
How I love its giddy gurgle!
How I love its finest flow!
How I love to wind my mouth up!
How I love to hear it go!

Sweeter far than shawms and cymbals, harp and psaltery to me;
Sweeter than the flow of water thro' sun smitten lands of drouth:
Sweeter than the sunrise music of Memnonian melody
Is the intermodulation of my automatic mouth
How I love its giddy gurgle!
How I love its finest flow!
How I love to wind my mouth up!
How I love to hear it go!
—S. W. Foss in Yankee Blade.

Pushing the Comparison Too Far.

It was late, but the young man still sat uncomfortably on the edge of his chair trying to summon courage to say the words the young woman was waiting to hear.

With a mighty convulsion he swallowed something like an ostrich egg that had risen unexpectedly in his throat.

"Felsty," he faltered, "I never could say what I wanted to say, as other people can. I always was an unlucky dog, anyhow."

"You're not good for hunting purposes, Captan," murmured Felsty. "You are too long in coming to a point."

"Well, I won't be a setter any longer, Miss McGinnis. Not in this house!" thundered the young man, as he grabbed his hat and left her presence forever. Miss Felsty McGinnis had carried his figure of speech a little too far.—Chicago Tribune.

He "Whicbed."

As a lady entered a Gratiot avenue car in front of the opera house yesterday, a man who sat on the right hand side had his feet stretched across the aisle. She stopped, looked down upon him for a few seconds, and then sharply queried:

"Is that side of the car are you trying to sit on, my boy?"

He drew in his shanks and "whicbed" to the side the balance of his body occupied.—Detroit Free Press.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A WARNING TO THE MOTHERS PRONE TO PLAY WITH DRUGS.

Information for the Nurse—Heedlessly Deserted Lunchroom Scenes—Girls Who Are Daring Swimmers—A Sermon on Dressing for Church.

There is no doctor so expensive as the domestic doctor, and none more frequently and fatally employed. Every petty ache or pain of a member of a family too trivial an affair to send for the real doctor every time that the child ails slightly. She is trained to small economies and fears the expense, and she thinks the doctor may laugh at her, or be vexed at being called from more important cases to one so trifling; and then to have the doctor—why, the child must be so ill that the thought of it frightens her. Thus she takes the chances, and applies the remedies herself; and perhaps there was nothing the matter that her little dose could not have detected a dose of physic that destroys all the little patient's chances, and then she calls in the doctor only when hope may perhaps be over.

There are a few remedies that it is safe to administer without skilled advice, and those are the simplest, and might all be included in a list comprising only hot water, castor oil and a little tincture of rhubarb. When a child has been indulging in illicit food, swallowing cherry stones or eating unripe raspberries, whose hard seeds lodge in the little gut, causing so much to be borne for the express purpose of making trouble, the poor mother's first idea is to give it at once a relieving and discharging potion; and now quite harmless and immediate sentence of death in doing so, the physic having an inflammatory influence, which is the very thing to be avoided.

And, on the other hand, when a child gives evidence of a diarrheal disorder of the bowels, the poor mother flies to her medicine closet, takes down the phial of chalk mixture and administers herself for stopping the immediate symptoms, not knowing that the fever and distress and worse ensuing symptoms are due to the effect of the chalk mixture, which prevents the system from relieving itself, and that she should have given instead an unloading and clearing dose of castor oil. That she is deterred from giving the oil by the difficulty of making a child swallow the nauseous draught is not to be allowed in her excuse; for the child need not know what is given, and there are many ways of making it take less bedside that of administering it in capsules; for, when given in wine, beaten up with the white of an egg, as if for what is called "roman punch," with orgeat, or drops of lemon juice added, or a drop of essence of peppermint, the child will think it is having some unusual indulgence granted to it instead of disadvantageously to its advantage the old nursery lines:

Oh, yes, not well; you're very sick.
Indeed, indeed, you are;
You only want to cause nonsense
To make nice things for you.

Of course, in the wilderness, on remote farms and suburbs, the mother of a family must, in spite of any danger from ignorance, keep many remedies on hand and administer them as best she can, become a physician of unattainable there at short notice. But, in that case, as much her duty as it is to have the medicines, it is to know how and when to administer them; and it is to be hoped that her own a sufficient knowledge of the simpler and more common ailments to be able to treat them properly in their preliminary stages; and that ought to be a necessary part of every girl's education as bread making, sewing, reading and the multiplication table.

But when a doctor is in the next street or within call, and drugs are at hand all round the corner, a mother is wise who takes no more upon herself in this regard than the utmost help, and contents herself until she can send for him by making use of copious draughts of hot water and of soothing sweets.—Harper's Bazar.

Information for the Nurse.

To change the under sheet, roll it lengthwise—that is, begin at the side. Push rolled sheet and all coverings toward the patient, leaving the mattress bare. On this lay the clean roll, tucking one side under the mattress, unroll it toward the patient and move him over the roll on the smooth part of the bed. Then change with the blanket. Go to the other side of the bed, pull out under blanket and soiled sheet, finish unrolling clean sheet and tuck in. Lay the clean upper sheet over the top blanket and cover it with another blanket and thin white spread. When these are in place remove the blankets and then the soiled blanket, and he will be left lying between clean sheets, in a clean night dress and thoroughly bathed without having been exposed for an instant to the chilling cold.

Open the window at the top, and if there seems too much air over the bed place a screen between that and the window. If none is at hand improvise one by throwing a shawl over a clothes horse or fastening a cord between two convenient points and tossing a blanket over it. If the window will not open only at the bottom, raise the lowest three. The pillow case should be changed frequently and the pillow turned as often as can be done without disturbing the patient, as a cool fresh surface against the face is very refreshing.

Keep the pillow well under the shoulders; nothing is more tiring to a weak person than for hard to be edge a cord to the hollow of the neck, throwing the chin forward on the breast. Gently comb and brush the hair, and if there is a beard keep it soaked and free from crumbs. If the patient is a woman part the back hair and braid each portion. It can be rolled high on the head or allowed to hang in two tails. The nails on both hands and feet should be carefully attended to.

If the carpet cannot be removed, sweep it daily with a carpet sweeper or a broken whisk broom wrapped around it, and burn the dust. Wipe up the spittoon and disinfect daily with a damp cloth. Never leave matches standing in a sick room; it quickly absorbs impurities. If child is to walk for a few days, remain until the child is ready to walk in, never the gives considerably it. Make it a rule to leave nothing in the sick room that is not positively needed there. Have every possible article at hand as soon as said and then let the room alone as much as and as still as possible. Keep the little table beside the bed covered with a white cloth, and see that it is always clear. Keep all disorder as much out of sight as possible and by all means worries on the door. Remember while there is life there is hope, and never give way to despair while life remains.—Mrs. Lincoln.

Young Girl Bathers.

A group of young girls in every variety of gymnasium bathing costume lined up on the air, descended from the gondola. Then group commenced to dance—Sandy, Jr. Arrow, colored steersmen of their gondola and various others. Many of them, when they had reached the little pier, threw off light wraps and stood in the regulation bathing costumes of the bathing costumes they are so often in the park, been privileged to see. Front of the mount, whose outline took top to the shops of the channel. Lord St. Levan got into a boat as umpire and guardian. Peers of the realm have seen all the sights and times, abroad and at home. Take for instance the scenes Lord Dufferin must have witnessed. But surely few members of the upper house witness in their boiling times one little event which followed. One after the other plunge into the sea Lord St. Levan's five daughters—the Hon. Elizabeth, Hon. Georgiana, Hon. Evelyn and Mabel St. Aubyn, Capt. Michael St. Aubyn, their brother; Lady Agnes Townshend (Lady St. Levan's niece), Col. and Mrs. Knollys and Mr. Hargreaves.

Splashing and dashing in spout, now at real swimming work again, amid chatter and laugh and occasional splutter or puff, for there was a ripple on the water, they swam the 300 or 400 yards from island to mainover just the course the mounts dread giant Cormoran waded and swam when he visited his purlieus of Mount St. Michael back to its granite fastness the oxen and sheep of his smaller and boucster neighbors. That distance done, the swimmers took to wraps and boots and pulled to the mount, rejoined Lady St. Levan, and scampered over the level green sward and climbed the steep ascent to castle home and a well earned lunch.

The young folks of the island are all frequent bathers and bold swimmers. They have given evidence of bravery as well as kindness, and we may feel assured that, if ever the chance arose of doing the work of Grace Darling or Mabel Bell, the St. Aubyns would be "there." Prom childhood familiar with the open sea, they have made it their confident and playmate, and they trust it in the spirit breathed in Byron's beautiful lines. —Cornishman.

The Girl and Her Camera.

An ingenious girl has hit on an ingenious means of self support. With a clever little camera she goes about the streets of Paris and whenever her fancy led her about the city, picking up here an old apple woman, there a ragged news girl, yonder a group of ladies shopping, or lounging in the park, and wherever she an Italian woman with a huge bundle balanced on her head—all full of artistic possibilities. Though the girl could neither paint nor draw she knew how to mould compose well. Many of her photographs were really pictures, and, being caught instantaneously, preserved all the spirit, action and vivacity of life.

An artist friend saw them one day, and, to her surprise, offered to buy half a dozen of the best for suggestions for studio work. The girl was in want of money and resolved to turn what had been play into work. Now she and her camera are out every bright day from 10 o'clock until 3, and an hour in a "dark room" of an evening brings out some of the characteristic scenes of city life transferred to her negatives and ready to be transformed into such. Her work is quite the fashion among the studios, and clever suggestions are often taken from it. An attitude, a smile, an expression often serves as a revelation of some picture that is lacking, and supplies the missing something that somebody wanted to incorporate into a picture. Sometimes an artist gives her a commission, naming the subject of the work upon and asking her to bring in all the hints upon it that she can find.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Women's Luncheons.

The daintiness and aestheticism of ladies have elevated the simple act of lunching into a most important ceremony since the custom has been established for ladies to give to a friend a luncheon at some popular restaurant, just as a man would give a dinner to a guest. The handsomely furnished private rooms used on these occasions must be arranged to exclude all daylight, and the gaslight is filtered through softly tinted shades, and the writer of her circle still lives in the sister of James Davis, the editor and publisher, who goes in for the study of food, and who is not the less knowledge she acquires at tables and lectures in her novels. This lady, who writes over a male pseudonym, with a sharp pen, is married to a lawyer. She divides the care of her family with her care for her mental offspring, and is said to be a success in both directions. Her anonymity in letters is carefully preserved, for the best of reasons. One of her novels is historical for having, by its pungent personalities and sharp character drawing, created a positive riot in Maida Vale, the suburban paradise of the opulent London Hebrew.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Experiments on Feeding Infants.

Some very interesting observations have lately been made by a physician on the Gaspé basin discovery. He has selected for the purpose of study a number of artificially nourished infants, and fed them after the various popular methods. Between one and two years of age they had taken food so introduced a stomach tube, and drew out sufficient of the contents of that organ for analysis. In that way the exact value of the various constituents of the food was ascertained, and the mates of the value of the different foods. The conclusions derived from these investigations, of great interest to parents, are: (1) Infants under the age of months do not digest well the first of all, with cow's milk, diluted. (2) Infants artificially fed should not be fed every two hours, for the reason that more than that time are required to digest the food given. Hereto is furnished the best of evidence that infants, even in the earliest days of life, ought not to be fed oftener than once in three hours.—Herald of Health.

Spanish Chambermaids.

The Fonda de la Paz is the "first-class" hotel in Madrid; but the Ritz is less expensive and more Spanish. The manners of our attendants show a free and easy simplicity. Our waiter walks a short while with the collar, one lunch, and from time to time, help themselves to a mouthful of food or a draught of wine at a sideboard; but do it with tact so exactly turned out. They do not go up and down stairs in their hands. We were told to expect no chambermaids in Spain, but a dark eyed woman with wild dark hair and untidy petticoat, and no stockings, and no collar, cap or apron, glides suddenly into our midst, without knocking, raises our towels, and as silently glides away. Once when we rang she arrived in the middle of dressing up her locks of hair, holding one lock between her teeth, with the serene observation that she was "a la Magdalena."—Madrid Letter.

She Probably Wasn't.

De Trop—I hear that Miss DeWally's health is greatly improved.

De Smythe—Indeed! I called upon her last evening, and in the course of our conversation I heard her mention the word "decline," but I did not infer that she was referring to her health.

De Trop—Ex-n-n-n! Who are you going to try next?—Brooklyn Magazine.

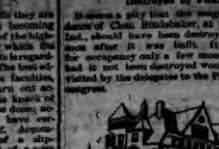
A Young Woman's Work.

Apropos of art tidings, a young lady living on St. Charles avenue, who has more traits than money, has made for her mother's parlor some very pretty things, and especially for the dining room. They are two panels of small blocks of tiles carved in a floral and foeliage design. A dado for the middle piece and tiles for the fireplace finish off the room most beautifully.—New Orleans Picayune.

THE STUDEBAKER MANSION.

A Magnificent Instance Handsome Recently Destroyed by Fire.

It seems a pity that the magnificent residence of Chas. Studebaker, at South Bend, Ind., should have been destroyed by fire so soon after it was built. It was ready for occupancy only a few months ago, and had it not been destroyed would have been visited by the delegates to the Pan-American congress.



THE STUDEBAKER RESIDENCE.

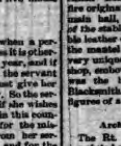
The house was built of Indiana field stone, with tile roof and copper facings, and was considered secure from fire. It had many broad porches paved with tile and supported by marble pillars. The main hall was the handsomest of all that wealth and taste could procure, and beyond it was the grand staircase, with its three flights of broad, low steps, the landings covered with rugs. The drawing rooms were done in the colonial style, the wood work being in pure white and gold. The mantel was of Mexican onyx, the chandeliers of artistic mirror, and the main hall was finished in quartered oak. The library was of mahogany, upholstered in leather. The reception room was done in white and blue.

Between the drawing room and reception room was a beautiful fountain. A marble block, stood a group in marble of the three children of Mr. Studebaker. It was tightly valued by Mrs. Studebaker, but perished with the other things in the fire. The dining room was situated beneath the drawing room. In the butler's pantry was stored the family china—a beautiful collection of priceless Dresden and Sevres. This entire collection was also destroyed by the fire, as was also the art gallery on the third floor. This gallery was filled with rare works of art, which it will be difficult to replace. It contained many paintings, was the ballet "Don" of Mr. Studebaker, where the fire originated. It was situated back of the main hall, the windows commanding a view of the south. The gallery was a comfortable leather chairs, lounges and desks. Over the mantel was a stained glass window of very unique design. Its central figure was a knight in armor, mounted. In the trees. Upon the front was the inscription, "John Studebaker, Blacksmith." In the foreground were the figures of a man and a horse.

Archbishop Thomas L. Grace.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas L. Grace, recently appointed archbishop by the pope, was born in Charleston, S. C., Nov. 6, 1814. As soon as he had completed the preparatory studies to taking the holy order at the seminary at Cincinnati. One year later he entered the Dominican convent at the village of St. Rose, in Kentucky. He then went to Rome to pursue his studies, entering the College of the Minerva. Dec. 31, 1836, he was ordained a priest in Rome. In 1846 he returned to America and immediately began work in Kentucky. For over thirteen years he had charge of a parish in Memphis, Tenn.

July 24, 1870, he was consecrated bishop of St. Paul. The ceremony of consecration took place at St. Louis, Archbishop Kenrick being the consecrator.

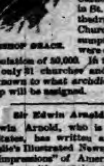


ARCHBISHOP GRACE.

When Father Grace became bishop the diocese included Minnesota and Dakota, and there were only two Catholic churches in St. Paul—the cathedral and the Church of the Assumption. There were only 87 priests and a population of 80,000. In the whole diocese there were only 87 priests and 97 churches. It is not known to what archdiocese the new archbishop will be assigned.

Sir Edwin Arnold.

Sir Edwin Arnold, who is now in the United States, has written an article for Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, giving his "first impressions" of America. He does not quite agree with certain other Englishmen who have written of their cisatlantic cousins. Among other things he says: "My chief impression has been the absolute practical identity of manner, mind and national life between our two countries. I have found myself very much at a transatlantic England. Half an American as I am, I am touched and by sympathies. I must confess that it has been wholly delightful to observe this amicable and minute identification of the race, and is like me with hope that, whatever other nations may quarrel and come into armed conflict, America and England—wisely divided by the ocean—will by and by establish an international tribunal composed of the worthiest and best trusted men on either side, and will refer to their judgment every question of right or honor, without appeal—every question which threatens to disturb the natural alliance that, in my opinion, furnishes the very best hope of mankind."



SIR EDWIN ARNOLD.

President Allen Manvel.

Mr. Allen Manvel, the new president of the Santa Fe road and system, is a gentleman who noted for his resemblance to President Lincoln. He looks, Illinois Republican, "as much like Abe Lincoln looked in 1860." Half the strangers who meet him on the cars turn and gaze at him, wondering where they have seen that kind man. He lacks an inch or two of being as tall as Abraham was, but has the same kindly, honest face, the same complexion and general build. He was born at Lyons, Genesee county, N. Y., Sept. 26, 1827, and is therefore 52 years old. He entered the railway service on reaching maturity, and was successively a telegraph operator, train inspector and assistant general superintendent of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad, and later general manager of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railway. There he continued till the present year, and after a brief intermission was made president of the Santa Fe system. The name at present is only nominal, as the Santa Fe is a component of the road is practically Kansas City,

JOTTINGS.

—Days of 1889 past, 292; days to come, 73.

—Thimbles are now made to imitate flowers.

—Too many of Plainfield's young men carry revolvers.

—The tax rate in Washington township will be $11. 57 per thousand.

—The new fourth track of the Central railroad is done and the earth taken therefrom is being used to fill up excavations along the track.

—Twenty-three passenger trains and twenty-four freight and coal trains passed through Plainfield last Sunday, between 7:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

—It is not very flattering to the patriotism of an American to be told respecting a wedding of an American couple that "it was of thoroughly English form".

—Now that the time has come to hand for setting up stoves it will be interesting for housewives to know that the stove or stovepipe light is nove doors, if soiled from smoke, may be made bright and equal to new by cleaning with salt mixed with vinegar.

—The Plainfield Choral Society, recently organized has secured the services of Mr. E. T. Fitzgerald as musical conductor and will have its first rehearsal on Monday evening next, at Vincent chapel. Further particulars of its plans will be made public in a few days.

—About the largest audience which has been seen in Music Hall this season was that which witnessed "Uncle Tom's Cabin" last evening, sustaining the reputation of the old play as having the most wonderful drawing power of any play ever written. Notwithstanding the many times it has been produced here, there seemed no falling off in interest.

—The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, it is said, is having a locomotive built with a fire engine attachment, capable of doing effectual work in the extinguishment of fires along the line of the road in town or country. The idea is without doubt a good one so far as it can be made practical. But when a fire occurs at Bound Brook while the fire apparatus on wheels is at Somerville, we opine that the conflagration will become historical before "the mashees" gets there. —New Brunswick Home News.

—"The Bunch of Keys," with its comic situations and pleasing songs, was performed at the National Theatre last evening. The side-splitting powers of this farce are so well known that it is almost superfluous to say it kept the large audience in a continuous state of amusement. Produced, as it is, by a company that fully enters into the spirit of the piece, it could not fail in its mission to entertain. There will be no change of bill during the week.—Philadelphia Ledger.

—The committee on county roads inspected the roads Wednesday morning. A reporter interviewed Freeholder James T. Pierson respecting the character of the work, and Mr. Pierson said the committee were well pleased with it, as it was being done in a thorough manner. He further said that the roads which are being constructed by the freeholders will when complete, be models. The officers after examining the roads, organized, so that at their one freeholder will make an examination of the work every day until it is completed. Freeholder Pierson said that the board feels the responsibility resting upon them and will not neglect the important work with the oversight of which they have been entrusted. They invite all our citizens to visit the road under construction and see for themselves how their money is being spent and also to get a practical knowledge of road making. He wisely suggests that our road-overseers especially, should avail themselves of the opportunity for getting points.—Union County Standard.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE ENTERTAINS.

An Enjoyable Evening for the Knights of Pythias.

At eight o'clock last evening Perseverance Lodge, No. 73, Knights of Pythias, headed by the Plainfield Cornet Band, went in full dress and did past Grand Lodge, of Jersey City, and delegations from Somerset Lodge, of Bound Brook, Otire Branch, of Elizabethport, Volunteer Lodge, of Elizabeth, Harmony Lodge, of Elizabethport, Unity Lodge, of Plainfield and Goodwill Lodge, of Scotch Plains.

The visiting Knights then formed line and indulged in a short parade through North avenue to Park avenue; to Front street; to Madison avenue; to Second street; to Reform Hall.

Upon arriving at the Hall G. P. John Ulrich in behalf of Perseverance Lodge welcomed the visitors in a neat little speech. There were in all about three hundred and fifty Knights present.

A team from Grant Lodge conferred the amplified degree in excellent form. Mr. Moses Bagley made a few remarks. Mr. Chilvers sang a song. Mr. B. R. Force recited and the Knights adjourned to the basement and partook of a collation. Afterwards they adjourned to Perseverance Lodge room and spent the remainder of the night and the early hours of the morning in speechmaking, recitations, songs, etc.

The officers of the Grand Lodge present were: G. V. C., DeWitt C. Bolton; G. P., John Ulrich; G. K. of R. & S., Eugene V. Lorton; P. S. B., M. F. Badgley; G. I. G., W. F. Hayhurst; G. O. G., William Malkom.

A PLUCKY COACHMAN.

He Clung to a Runaway Horse Until Thrown Out of the Vehicle.

A horse attached to a buggy belonging to Mr. William P. Smith, a New York broker, who lives in Belvidere, ran away this morning at about ten o'clock.

The horse was being driven by John Adams, Mr. Smith's coachman, when on Park avenue the girth which holds the saddle broke. This frightened the horse and it ran away. The coachman pluckily held on to the reins and tried to check the frightened animal in its mad flight, but was unsuccessful. When opposite Vetterlein's butcher shop the horse suddenly turned and made a "bee line" for the door. The vehicle caught between two of the awning posts and thus freed the horse by breaking the harness. The frightened animal then fell to the sidewalk and was easily captured.

The force of the collision with the posts threw the plucky coachman out and he landed head foremost in the gutter, but escaped injury other than a slight cut over the left eye. He was taken to L. W. Randolph's pharmacy, but the services of a physician was unnecessary.

The phaeton was badly wrecked and was turned upside down. The accident caused considerable excitement on the street and a crowded with vehicles of every description.

Mr. Garretson, the Nominee.

Joseph C. Garretson, Esq., of Bound Brook, the Republican nominee for Assembly, is 39 years of age, the son of the late J. Field Garretson, a farmer who resided in Bound Brook and Middlebush, and grandson of Jeremiah Garretson, who was widely known, and lived in the same locality. Joseph C. is also the nephew of William N. Adair and Joseph Cain, of Raritan, and William Ross, Jr., of Somerville.

He is a young man who has much push and energy, and is well liked about Bound Brook. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, the Rev. H. B. MacCauley pastor, and Secretary of its Board of Trustees; also a director in the Bound Brook National Bank.

He will make an earnest, live, and we hope winning canvass and will secure the votes of even many right-thinking members of the Democratic party.—Unionist-Gazette.

Epworth League Meeting.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal church met in Vincent chapel, last evening with President Mitchell in the chair. About fifty members were present. A lively and interesting debate on the resolve "That an American should visit his own country before going abroad" formed the program for the evening. At the next meeting to be held Nov. 1 there will be given a lecture on Astronomy.

The League is rapidly increasing in membership, as any young person can enter it, whether they belong to the church or not.

A Runaway on Ninth Street.

A horse belonging to Mr. Israel Lewis, of Park avenue, became frightened on Ninth street, yesterday afternoon and ran away. The horse was being driven at the time by Mr. Lewis's son, George, and he stuck to his post until he succeeded in running the horse into a fence, thus stopping him. The young man was considerably bruised by the occurrence and the wagon was wrecked by colliding with a post.

Thrown From the Wagon.

Yesterday afternoon as an employee of Mr. A. D. Thompson was turning the corner of Park avenue and Front street, with a horse and wagon, the latter slipped on the wet road bed and fell, throwing the driver and him sent to the hard macadamized road. He escaped injury. The animal was captured before it succeeded in running away.

Geo. Sanders Sentenced.

George Sanders, of North Plainfield, was yesterday sentenced by the Somerset County Court to pay a fine of $25 and costs. He was severely reprimanded by Judge Bartine. The light sentence has caused much unfavorable comment, and is looked by some as virtually offering a premium on crime. Still many people signed the petition for clemency.

—It is quite the fashion now to gather a collection of bright colored leaves, varnish and fasten them to the wall in the shape of a fan or horse-shoe. The effect is very pretty.

Gen. Drake Indicted.

The Union County Grand Jury for the October term finished its work yesterday and returned sixteen more indictments, which makes a total of forty-five. Among the indictments is one against Gen. J. Madison Drake, publisher of the Daily Leader, for criminal libel on Henry Cook, part owner of the Somerville New Jersey Journal. The Jury was discharged with the thanks of the court. Our newspaper brethren should not indulge in such foolishness, but live together in harmony —as we do in Plainfield, for instance (!)

PERSONAL.

The public schools of Somerville and Raritan have adopted a synoptic course of instruction in the vocal music under the weekly direction of Mr. T. E. Hazell, of Plainfield.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Maggie McInerny, the seven-year-old child, who was killed by the cars Friday evening, will take place to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery. It appears that the child while playing tag and not picking waste as reported.

The Old Man and the Old Lady.

Old Lady—"Meister Gillies, you vos such a good man, I hopes you leef a good vile. You vos so nice."

Mr. Gillies—"Well, I have lived quite a while. I am seventy-five years old."

Old Lady—"Vell, I hopes you leef a good vile more in good health." (The t pronounced softly.)

The old lady wondered that the old man walked away as if angry. He understood her words then. "I hope you will live a good while longer and go to hell."

—The company organized for the extension of the Rockaway Valley Railroad to Peapack have deposited the necessary $2,000 per mile with the Secretary of State and will begin the work at once. It is only three weeks since negotiations for the extension began.

—A "fad" among the young ladies is what is known as a "memory hoop." The hoop is a light wooden one about eight inches in diameter, to which is attached various colored streamers of ribbon inscribed with the name of the donor. When finished it reaches a rainbow higher than a corded hat.

—At the convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held at Ocean Grove this week resolutions were adopted providing for a petition to the Legislature to grant to women the right to vote at municipal elections, to secure a civil service law, and to provide for scientific instruction in the public schools on the effect of alcohol and narcotics, urging measures for educating the foreign population on the temperance question and declaring against impure literature; recommending that churches place women on Sunday-school and trust society boards and pledging the W. C. T. U. "to encourage and hold up the hands of those who have organized for the purpose of securing the prohibition of the liquor traffic."

STILL A MYSTERY.

The Murdered Girl Found at Rahway Three Years Ago.

It will be three years next March since the body of a murdered girl was found on the highway at Rahway, and the mystery is still fresh in the minds of our readers.

Mrs. Agnes Space, of Dexterburn, who expected a sister from Scotland, identified the body as that of her sister, Mary Dornan. A letter was received from Mrs. Space, brother also nor her mother, who is still in Scotland, has since heard from the girl. Her brother-in-law; Kirkwood, who at the time of the murder lived in Jersey City, and who was suspected by many of having committed it, is now in New Zealand. His wife is now in a lunatic asylum in Scotland. Mrs. Space's identification of the body was the only complete one. She is satisfied that the sister of four years Democrats. Finally one of them said: "Well, I never voted a Republican ticket in my life, but I am going to vote for General Grubb." "So am I." "And so am I," said the other two. Thus it was that each of the four Democrats quietly made up his mind to vote for General Grubb, and probably would have kept his intentions to himself if the first speaker had not announced his determination. There was never before such a feeling among the old soldiers, and before the campaign is through the Democratic politicians will have reason to change their opinions about the "old soldier racket being played out."—Dover Era.

Save Your Home Paper.

As an exchange will say, it is worth while to save your home paper and have it bound. A few years will make it the most entertaining and instructive volume you can possess. All the laws of association make it more or less a history of yourself and friends. Names, dates and facts are preserved for you in the most essential form. Over it you may cry at your miseries, laugh at your foibles, and rejoice in the steps which have led to prosperity. It gives the history of your town and county, which is but an epitome of universal history. If you can't save the papers, you can cut out and what items you wish to save, and paste them in some old book. The best plan is to buy a scrap book.

Firemen, Take Notice.

The following resolution was unanimously passed by the New Jersey State Firemen's Association, at its late annual session at Long Branch, upon the question: "Can a man be an active fireman and an exempt fireman at the same time?" being presented to it for decision. The question is causing much discussion among local firemen:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the State Firemen's Association that a fireman may, after he becomes exempt, be a member of an engine company and also join an active member of a fire company, as otherwise many effective firemen would be lost to the active fire service.

Election Clerks! Read and Heed!

The clerks of election districts should be careful, when making out their returns, to put in the full name of the candidate, the same as it appears on the ballot voted, and not by abbreviation or initial letters only, as the votes are counted exactly as returned.

If clerks of election would also see that the returns are sent promptly by mail to the County Clerk it will save the Board of Canvassers time and trouble.

—Gentlemen's trousers are being made narrower.

—"Coine," said General Grubb to the men under his command in the army. What did Ahnets say? Well, what did he say!

—Many of the saloons of this city are decorated with the picture of ex-Governor Abbett, and some saloon keepers have gone to the expense of enclosing these pictures in handsome frames. This is a straw.—New Brunswick Home News. Same all over the State.

—There were 205 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 243 in the preceding week and 193, 195, 198 and 164 in the corresponding weeks of 1888, 1887, 1886 and 1885 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 8,643, against 7,886 in 1888.

—The $500 prize offered by the American Agriculturist for the best yield of potatoes dug from an acre of ground, was won by Aaron Smock, of Atlantic township, N. J. He got 331 bushels and forty pounds from one acre. The potatoes were planted on May 24. In the latter part of July they were attacked by the rot, which caused a large loss in the amount of the crop.

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

The second annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of the fourth district of New Jersey began its session last night in the Second Presbyterian church, Rahway. President Merrill E. Gates, of Rutgers College, delivered the opening address.

Early yesterday morning a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad crashed into the rear of another train standing on the track at Metuchen. Engineer Hugh Gallagher was wrecked and George Carmichael and Frank Hampton, firemen, were badly scalded and slightly injured. Five cars filled with valuable merchandise were wrecked. A hand-bag containing $5,000 was also lost.

Charles Metler, the defaulting ex-treasurer of Lodi township, who has been in jail for several weeks, was arraigned yesterday before Judge Depue, at Hackensack, and pleaded guilty to two indictments charging him with having appropriated town funds to the amount of $2,500. Metler entered a plea of guilty to each indictment. The court ordered Metler on one of the indictments to pay a fine of $15 and on the other indictment to pay a fine of $10 in addition to costs, or to serve twenty-five days in the county jail. Metler paid the fines and was released. The light sentence imposed on Metler has caused much indignation.

The Liquor Question.

A new phase of the liquor question is looming up. Rathbone, Bird & Co., one of the most extensive manufacturing firms in Albany, N. Y., have removed to Amora, Ill. The reason given is:

In the latter place there are only thirty saloons, and the excise commissioners have promised the company that the license for will be increased next year from $1,000 in the hope of still decreasing the number of drinking places and that no saloon shall be placed within a half mile of the works. The experience of the company in Albany has proven that saloons are a great injury to it and to its workingmen. One member also asserts that some of the men employed by the company have spent enough for liquor to buy a good house and lot.

If it shall be generally found that the habit of drinking beer or liquors, even in moderation during working hours, lowers the quality of work and interferes with manufacturing business, the example of the Albany firm will be followed by many others. At present there are few better places for a saloon—from the people's point of view—than next to a large factory. It is a place into which a great proportion of the wages find their way. This is of greater moral account, but it is not so practical and forcible an argument against saloons adjacent to factories as the direct interference with the work. In other words work is more valuable than workmen, in the location of factories.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS
AND NEWSPAPER OF PLAINFIELD AND VICINITY, IS PUBLISHED AT 4:30 O'CLOCK EVERY AFTERNOON, AT NO. 11 SOMERSET STREET,

E. W. HOSKINS, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

IS DELIVERED BY CARRIERS TO ALL PARTS OF THE CITY AT TEN CENTS A WEEK, OR, IF PAID IN ADVANCE, AT $5.00 PER YEAR.

"2s London," said a returned Anglomaniac, "I can get for $15 a suit of clothes that I have to pay $40 for in the United States." "Yes," answered an Irishman who heard him, "and it's a blessed sight easier to get the $40 here than to get the $15 there."

At the census taking of 1890 the typewriting machine was not used. Its merits were not sufficiently well known then to commend it to the conservative heads of departments in Washington. This time the writing machines will be there in great force, saving the government $80,000.

There are 6,066,000 bushels of wheat in Minnesota and Dakota this year, against not quite 4,000,000 last year at the same season. In Dakota the farmers were many of them too busy threshing to go to the polls to vote, even though it was the first state election. Wheat is better than politics.

The Black Hills region in South Dakota was parted with very reluctantly by its original Indian owners, on account of the abundance of game and water there. It has all along been noted for its marvelous fertility agriculturally. But now the richest tin mines in the world are being developed there. When they are fully opened up, the country will be the richer by $20,000,000 a year. British owners of the tin mines in Wales are endeavoring through agents in this country to prevent the American mines from being developed, it is said.

Are the French Dying Out?

Looking over their last official census report, one is tempted to ask: Are the French passing out of existence as a nation? In 1889 there were less than a million births in all France, and in Paris one-fourth of these were illegitimate. Only for the births out of wedlock the population would actually decline from year to year. Each year there are fewer marriages by several thousand. In 1888 there were 35,118 fewer births than in 1884 even, so rapidly does the rate diminish. In 1830 France had a population of 31,000,000. Now she has 38,218,903, yet in 1890 and for ten years preceding, the average number of births was 21,000 greater than in 1888. Under such circumstances, with her diminishing population, there should be little suffering from poverty in France. But we find there is as much as ever. It would be of deep scientific interest to know what causes the decline of this slowly dying people.

Yellowstone.

It has been said, and it is probably true, that no other tract of land sixty miles square in the world contains so many natural wonders as Yellowstone park. The park, indeed, might be a bit of land from some other planet, placed into our earth, so far as resemblance to any other locality is concerned. The canyon of the Yellowstone river is a thousand feet deep, and the stream plunges into it over a precipice 300 feet high.

The time will undoubtedly come when the Yellowstone will be one of the greatest health resorts on the globe. The geysers or boiling mineral springs are the most wonderful feature. Some of the large ones hurl water to a height of 300 feet. When the silica and other minerals held in solution crystallize, orange, yellow and red tints of almost unearthly brilliancy appear. Scientists have decided that the Yellowstone wonders were produced by volcanic action. Volcanic fires far below the surface of the earth heat the waters of underground streams into steam. In seeking to escape the steam hurls the mud and water out with it.

The Two New Cruisers.

It is hoped and believed that we shall have, as soon as they can be built, two new cruisers as fast as the Baltimore. They are to be 3,000 ton vessels, with very powerful engines—10,000 horse power is what is ordered to be developed. The last congress appropriated $1,100,000 to construct each one. No bids were received within that limit. The secretary of the navy then resolved that the government would undertake the construction itself. One cruiser is to be built at Norfolk, the other at Brooklyn.

The vessels will be 350 feet long. Their uncommon engine power is expected to drive them through the water at a very high rate of speed, even possibly exceeding that of the Baltimore. It is calculated that they will reach a speed of between twenty-six and twenty-seven miles an hour. A principal feature in their construction will be the great fixing guns with which they will be armed, in accordance with the requirements of modern naval warfare. Two of these guns will be placed at the upper end of the lower masts, in the cross-trees, on the quarters. The weight of the long gun will send a 100-pound steel projectile six miles. These powerful guns are to be fitted out as torpedo boats. The progress of the government experiment in that cruiser building will be watched with much interest.

COCKRAN WORKING HARD

His Argument Before the General Term at Rochester.

FIGHTING FOR KEMMLER'S LIFE.

The Constitutionality of the Law Prescribing Electrical Executions Powerfully Assailed—A Highly Interesting Argument—Lineman Peeks' Death.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 19.—The appeal in the Kemmler electrical execution case was argued here in the general term of the supreme court. Bourke Cockran, of New York, appeared for the defense, and Deputy Attorney General William A. Poste for the prosecution. Mr. Cockran, after reciting the history of the case, read from the statute the provision relating to the mode of death "by an electric current," and then providing for the time and manner of the execution. The purpose of the framers of the statute, said Mr. Cockran, providing for execution by electricity was to render death painfully more merciful. Mr. Gerry was the only commissioner who testified before the referee, and his statement was a marvellous specimen of misinformation based on evidence given to the witness by Mr. Edison.

Unspeakable Torture.

Mr. Cockran said that many persons had unquestionably been killed by electricity. He referred to the Stevens case, where the victim received a current of 1,450 volts, "400 more than it was proposed to give Kemmler," and asked that the court read with attention and accuracy the testimony given before Stevens, and which was styled "unspeakable torture." If the purpose of the law was to cause instantaneous and painless death the method should have been specified. In one case an expert said that if death did not ensue in one minute the body of the victim would be carbonized.

Mr. Edison's Testimony.

Mr. Edison said that in the same case the body of the criminal would be "mummified." "Then we have the choice between carbonization and mummification," said Mr. Cockran, "in case death is not instantaneous." Other experts said that a post-mortem of a person killed by electricity would not reveal the cause of death if the circumstances were not known. "Harold P. Brown," said the speaker, "conceived the idea of applying the wheatstone bridge to a human body for the purpose of ascertaining if there was a part of the connecting substance—a wire, so to speak, to make the circuit complete."

The Death of Lineman Peeks.

Whether this could be accomplished was a question. The death of Lineman Peeks, of New York, was referred to. "After twenty minutes contact with the wire the poor man was still alive, and he was shoveled into a pile his body was carbonized," said Mr. Cockran. Another case in which a man seized a wire and held on until his hand was burned to a crisp and he was still conscious. Was mercy shown as proving that death was by no means certain. That the proposed mode of execution was simply an experiment was proved by Mr. Cockran, who proved by the expert testimony taken before the referee.

Edison Knew Nothing About It.

"Even Mr. Edison," said Mr. Cockran, "could not say he didn't know anything about it, except as a matter of conjecture, and that would until the state had killed some one by an electric current."

The constitutionality of the law was discussed. "It is claimed by the people that the courts have no right to review legislative action," said the speaker. He argued that on this view of the case the constitutional provision forbidding the enaction of excessive bail, for instance, was of no binding force on either the courts or the legislature. The attorney general had made this provision as a sort of ornamental addition of no earthly significance," said he. The constitution was a compact between the people, which could under no circumstances be set aside or disregarded, and by which the rights of every citizen were protected. Referring to the constitution as a "bill of rights," Mr. Cockran argued that it should be interpreted inviolate and should secure to every citizen equal and certain protection against wrong.

Counsel Was Frequent Interrupted.

The point was made that the first section of the state constitution was the gist, the life, the substance of the whole "compact" and that every law should conform to that section to mean "that no person should be delivered over to torture; that the death penalty might be inflicted, but not by cruel and unusual punishment." The argument on that point was a specimen of eloquent invective which was listened to with marked attention. His review of the constitutional provisions was able and every point was covered. Mr. Poste then presented his argument for the people. After recess Mr. Cockran replied to Mr. Poste's points and Mr. Poste made a brief reply. Two days were given a week in which to prepare and submit their briefs and the case was submitted. A decision is expected about Jan. 1.

One Case, Not One Hundred.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 19.—Investigation develops the fact that instead of a hundred cases of smallpox on Point Pelee Island, near Sandusky, as was reported, there is but one case. The quarantine of the island is the victim and he is much isolated. The men were driven away most of the members of the Point Pelee Fishing club, just as the boat was about starting on a trip around the lake. Fishing boats have been unable to land at the island for several days. A spread of the scourge is not anticipated.

Secretary Harrison's Funeral.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 19.—Governor Beaver has issued a proclamation ordering the suspension of business on the day of ex-Governor Hartranft, and ordering the display of flags at half mast on public buildings at the time of the funeral. Adjt. Gen. Hastings has issued orders for the detail of a section, by the militia in the funeral exercises.

Warships Going Around the World.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The four United States cruisers, Chicago, Yorktown, Boston and Atlanta, will leave this port on Nov. 1 for a trip around the world. The squadron will be commanded by Rear Admiral John G. Walker. It will sail direct to Lisbon, Portugal, and thence to Gibraltar. The winter will be spent in the Mediterranean.

The Armed Changes Its Name.

ALLEGHENY, Pa., Oct. 19.—The Methodist synod has changed its name to the Evangelical Synod of North America. Bishops of the Union Church Members pertaining to the brotherhood of Andrew and Philip were referred to a special committee.

A Shirt Factory Damaged.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Merritt's shirt factory was damaged by fire to the extent of $10,000. Thirty men are temporarily thrown out of work.

REVISING THE PRAYER BOOK.

Proceedings of the Episcopalian Convention—Work of the Mission Board.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—At the Episcopalian convention a committee was appointed to select the next meeting place.

The subject of prayer book revision was then resumed. Dr. Bratton, of North Carolina, objected to the term "pure intention" and "sufficient success upon earth," and offered a substitute, which was lost. Mr. Franklin, of New Jersey; Dr. Egar, of New York, and others proposed amendments changing the latter phrase to "such success as may please God," which was carried. Dr. Spaulding, of California, moved to strike out the words "pure intention" and substitute "singleness of heart," but the motion was lost.

At the afternoon session the house of deputies confirmed their action as committee of the whole on Thursday by adopting the liturgical amendment for a thanksgiving for a safe return from sickness, for a safe return from a journey, and for a penitential office for Ash Wednesday. Concurrence with the upper house was received upon certain of the rubrics following the Nicene creed title of the collects, epistles and gospels; that the collect appointed for any Sunday or other feast day may be said at the evening service, and that the Gloria Patri be printed at the end of the Easter anthems.

The resolution changing the gospel for the first Sunday before Advent was adopted and also that which substituted the services for the Sundays after Trinity. Dr. Phillips Brooks' resolution to substitute the 54th for the 66th Psalm on Good Friday was adopted. Another was to add the collect, epistle and gospel for Christmas and Easter. A resolution providing for the omission of the decalogue, if same be said once on each Saturday was passed.

Dr. Huntington's resolution for a "short office of prayer for Sunday occasions," which was adopted on Thursday in committee of the whole, was brought up again by Dr. Egar, of central New York, whose motion to reconsider precipitated a warm and lengthy argument. Dr. Huntington's resolution was finally put and carried. Adjourned.

In the house of bishops it was decided that no change should be made in the term "persistent bishop." Resolutions of sympathy for the continued ill health of Bishop Bedell, of southern Ohio, were adopted. Some verbal changes in the communion and baptismal services were adopted. A rubric was also passed forbidding the celebration of the Lord's supper when no communicant besides the priest is present. The bishops declined to concur with the lower house in a resolution petitioning congress upon the subject of divorce, on the ground that it was inadvisable at this time.

Dr. Davies Consecrated.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—Rev. Dr. Thomas Frederick Davies was consecrated bishop of the diocese of eastern Michigan. The ceremony occurred in St. Peter's church, this city, of which Dr. Davies has been pastor many years. A distinguished company of bishops, priests, deacons and laymen assisted. Bishop Potter, of New York, preached the sermon from the text Acts xiii, 2-3. Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, presided, and Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, was celebrant of the communion sermon.

The Mission Commissioners.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The American board of commissioners for foreign missions after passing a favorable report on work in China and passing a resolution thanking the Hon. Oscar F. Strauss, late minister to Turkey, for his efforts in behalf of the rights of the rights and liberties of American citizens resident within the Turkish empire." The board was declared adjourned to meet at Minneapolis October, 1890.

A Natural Gas War.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 19.—The war between the natural gas companies and their patrons in Ohio and western New York is a live topic just now. At Youngstown, O., the Mahoning Gas company has refused all persons using gas under boilers to return to coal by Nov. 1. A scarcity of gas is alleged, but in some quarters it is asserted that there is a scheme to defeat a bill before the council providing for a reduction of rates. At Uniontown, Pa., the arrests are announced of M. L. Minor, president; I. K. Ewing, Jr., secretary; A. M. Tallis, superintendent and fifteen other employes of the Fayette Fuel Gas company. The company was granted the privilege of laying street mains on condition that all boilers be lighted free of charge for five years. The company tired of the contract and shut off the entire city supply, giving only enough for cooking. They alleged a scarcity of gas, but refused to permit an examination of their wells by an expert employed by the town. The men were bailed in $100 each for a hearing.

Is It Jack the Ripper?

HAMBURG, Oct. 19.—Excitement has been caused here by the discovery of a murder similar in the details to those perpetrated in Whitechapel, London. The body of a fallen woman has been found in Plansburg, a suburb of this city. The head was cut off, the limbs dismembered and the abdomen cut open. The work of mutilation has been done by the hand of an expert who, if not Jack the Ripper, has fiendish him closely.

Twenty Troopers Swept to Death.

MADRID, Oct. 19.—While returning from an unsuccessful expedition against the sultan of Morocco had to cross a swollen river to get to Fez. The sultan crossed safely, but twenty of his body guard, who undertook to swim their horses across, were carried down the stream by the raging flood and drowned.

Mayor McGee Falls.

OSHAWA, Ont., Oct. 19.—Mayor Robert McGee, who had been engaged in the real estate business here for many years, has failed. Liabilities so far as known, $70,000. The nominal assets are $7,000. The debts are principally due to farmers in amounts from $1,000 to $6,000.

Increasing Its Capital.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The American Cotton Oil company has filed an application at Trenton for permission to increase its capital stock from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. It was rumored in Wall street as indicating that the cotton oil trust interests were to be consolidated in the shape of a corporation.

Killed by a Jaguar.

HAMBURG, Oct. 19.—While one of the woman engaged at the Hamburg Zoological garden was cleaning out the cage of a jaguar the animal escaped. She fled in terror, with a jaguar at her heels, and reached the bars of an adjoining cage, where she was caught and killed by the frightful beast that had escaped after her.

A Big Russian Subsidy.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—The Russian government has guaranteed the subsidy of 5,000,000 roubles to the Russian Steam Navigation company for the establishment of passenger and freight steamship service between Odessa and Batoum. The latter port is the terminus of the Transcaucasian railway, which connects the Caspian sea with the Black sea. The Russian government has also granted a subsidy of 1,000,000 roubles to the Russian Steam Navigation company for the establishment of a passenger and freight steamship service between Odessa and Vladivostock, the Russian port on the Pacific ocean.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

Annual Report of Ex-Commissioner Tanner.

THE YEAR'S WORK OF THE BUREAU

The Increase in the Number of Pensioners During the Past Year—Secretary Noble's First Letter to Mr. Tanner—Other Washington Gossip.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The annual report for the fiscal year 1888-9 of the commissioner of pensions has been submitted to the secretary of the interior. The following summary of the report will show the more important details of the work of the bureau of pensions during the year:

Net Increase of the Roll.

There were at the close of the year 407,759 pensioners. There were added to the rolls during the year the names of 51,021 new pensioners, and the names of 1,734—whose pensions have been previously dropped—were restored to the rolls, making an aggregate of 54,675 pensioners added during the year; 16,509 pensioners were dropped from the rolls for various causes, leaving a net increase to the rolls of 37,166 names. The average annual value of each pension at the close of the year is shown to have been $121.76, and the aggregate annual value of pensions is $64,346,262.96. The amount paid for pensions during the year was $38,970,-113.98. The total amount disbursed by the agents for all purposes was $39,131,908.44.

Disbursements Since 1861.

The amount disbursed on account of pensions since 1861 has been $1,803,916,415.17. The issue of certificates during the year shows a grand total of 145,496. Of this number 51,021 were original certificates. The report shows that the work of the new pension division there was pending and unallowed 479,000 claims of all classes. Commissioner Tanner recommended the establishment of two additional pension agencies.

Mr. Tanner's Recommendations.

Mr. Tanner's recommendations are as follows: "The commissioner favors granting pensions to all soldiers who are disabled. He says: "As the war period recedes from us and appears in the softened affirmation effect the veteran who served his country faithfully and well a quarter of a century ago, it is a very serious question whether the government does him justice in limiting the application of the pension laws to those disabilities only which were contracted in the service and line of duty.

"I earnestly recommend that a pension be granted to every honorably discharged soldier and sailor who is now or who may hereafter become disabled, without regard to whether such disability is chargeable to the service of the United States or has been contracted since discharge therefrom." The commissioner also favors a pension for army nurses, and makes an earnest appeal in their behalf.

Secretary Noble's First Letter.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The following is the gist of an extract from Secretary Noble's first letter dated May 23, 1889, to Commissioner Tanner upon the subject of the rerated pensions of pension office employes. The cases were ten in number. The secretary says:

"The association together of these men whereby this preference in time seemed to have been secured and the subsequent allowances obtained by them in the order thus their purpose was to impose upon the commissioner. The further fact in each case, the increase was allowed prior to the surgeon's certificate in the monthly examination, and that the sums allowed aggregate over $16,000."

The List Referred To.

The following is the list: 1. Frank D. Butts, allowed and paid, $7,196. 2. James E. Smith, allowed and paid, $1,336. 3. Alvah H. Doan allowed and paid, $3,022. 4. William F. Davis, allowed and paid (May 27), $1,061; William F. Davis, allowed and paid (June 14), $737. 5. William J. Hilliges, allowed and paid, $184. 6. Silas Colgrove, allowed and paid, $1,822. 7. Joseph Dickinson, allowed and paid, $710. 8. John E. Carpenter, allowed and paid, $1,803. 9. Joseph C. Squires, allowed and paid, $1,564. 10. John L. Paine, allowed and paid, $2,307. Total, $16,735. It is in regard to cases of this kind that you have thought the commissioner alone can call a halt, and in regard to which the secretary thinks otherwise, and proposes to call a halt long enough at least for inspection.

Sharp Closing Words.

The letter closes as follows: "I write this that you may be fully advised of my views and purpose and my belief in my authority to control all abuses in this department by whatever means I deem legal and efficient."

The Marine Conference.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The marine conference resumed the consideration of article 7 of the international code. Mr. Ball, of Great Britain, proposed to amend the rule providing that lights on vessels anchored in that channel be placed three feet apart by inserting at the end of that rule the words "not less than three feet apart." Mr. Goodrich, for one of the American delegates, offered an amendment changing the rule and providing that the red lights be placed as near together as to provide for three red lanterns. Several other amendments were offered. All these will be printed, and considered at some future time.

The delegate from Norway opened the discussion on article 7, and was followed by Delegate Ball, of Great Britain, and United States Delegate Shackford, who moved to abolish the article entirely. The delegate from Sweden seconded the motion. Articles 8 and 9 were then taken up and discussed.

Against the Bowling Green Site.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The question of reopening the decision reached in the selection of the bowling Green site for the New York public building was again taken up by the committee on public buildings and grounds this morning. The delegation of merchants, ship owners and importers, who came on from New York last night, appeared before the committee and informally. They presented a petition signed by 600 firms (60 per cent. of the importers of New York), praying for a reversal of the decision in favor of the downtown site.

Free Trade in Chili.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The government has received official notification that Chili has placed nearly all articles, agricultural products, minerals, coal, copper, iron, etc., on the free list.

The Sun for the Prisoners.

PHOTOGRAPHER, N. J., Oct. 19.—The politicians were disappointed when Governor Green refused to pardon Mr. Lemuel Coffin, who was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hanged on Nov. 15. Coffin is a well-to-do farmer, and his friends have been working for his pardon. Governor Green has now granted a reprieve for thirty days, and has also ordered that the prisoners be allowed to walk in the sunshine for a few hours each day.

A Big Failure Anticipated.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 19.—The Bridgeport Manufacturing company, which has a capital of $1,000,000, and employs 1,000 men, has been in the hands of a receiver since last night when the rubber company, which is a creditor to the amount of $150,000, refused to sign a petition to withdraw the attachment which it had placed upon the property. The company has been losing money for some time, and it is thought that the failure will be a big one.

Lynched by Indians.

BISMARCK, N. D., Oct. 19.—Advices from Fort Berthold agency state that Mad Bear, an Indian, was lynched by his tribesmen for the murder of Bear Ribs, another Indian. Mad Bear was arrested by the police and taken to the agency jail, but was taken out by a mob and hanged to the flagstaff in front of the agency building. Mad Bear was a prominent member of the Gros Ventre tribe.

POPE LEO'S LETTER.

He Writes Cardinal Gibbons Regarding the Condemnation of Knights.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 19.—The Sun publishes the following translation of the letter of Pope Leo to Cardinal Gibbons with reference to the coming Catholic congress:

"That great love of country and for religion which you and our brethren, the bishops of the United States, have so often and so fully manifested to us again shines forth illustrated in the letter which you have recently addressed to us. From it we learn that pastors and people are about to assemble in Baltimore on the solemn occasion of the celebration of the establishment of the sacred hierarchy of the United States. On the same occasion you propose to dedicate the Catholic university which, with the generous help of the faithful, you have founded in Washington as a happy presage of future greatness for the new era upon which you are about to enter.

"It is truly worthy of your faith and piety thus gratefully to recall the benefits bestowed upon your country by divine Providence, and to erect, as it were, by the commencement of them a monument which will be an honor to yourselves and a lasting benefit to your fellow citizens and to the country at large. And, therefore, we, too, gladly join with you in returning thanks to God, the author of all gifts. At the same time we cordially congratulate you on the zeal with which you conduct the government of the Church, successors, faithfully treading in their footsteps, whilst ever widening the field opened up by their apostolic labors. Most joyfully do we bear witness to the example which you and the other bishops owe to us of your loyalty and devotion to the apostolic see. We desire in return to assure you that like our predecessors we shall ever be, and that too, bear an especial love toward you, our brethren, and the faithful committed to your care, and that we pray fervently for the increase of every kind of heavenly benefit, meanwhile, as has been the readiness of your people to co-operate in all manner of good work, from them the examples of wonderful virtues which are daily set before them.

"In regard to your wish that some representatives from this city should in our name be present at the approaching solemnity we assent to it; the more willingly because their presence will be an especial mark both of our affection for you, brethren, and of that bond of faith and charity which unites pastors and people to the supreme head of the church.

"In conclusion we earnestly pray to God, protector and guardian of the Catholic cause, that under the prosperous and favored public institutions by which you are enabled to exercise with freedom your sacred ministry your labors may redound to the benefit of church and country. And as a pledge of our special affection we lovingly impart apostolic benediction to you, our venerable brethren, the bishops of the United States, and to all the clergy and faithful committed to your charge."

ANNIHILATION.

Twas evening, and the rain was falling
In torrents, as it seemed to me,
As I was plodding home from calling
On her who's all the world to me.

At least, that's what I'd just been breathing
In language soft into her ear,
And by the smiles her face entwreathing
I knew she felt I held her dear.

Ah, just about a form was fitting
With airy grace the way she moved,
So I—for what could be more fitting?—
Outlook this theme of poet's song.

Beyond she was to the vicious weather—
Umbrella none had she to shield
That comfort, topped by fluffy feather—
It was my duty, unopposed—

I proffered her my stores defense.
She spoke her thanks in accents low;
My kindness seemed she to astonize—
This was a very jolly go!

We tripped along—I was in clover!—
Sweet speech was I 'bout to enter,
When she laughed out—my bliss was over!—
"Why, Harry, how gallant you are!"

Amend was I, but closer peering
I gazed into her sorry face,
And stifled, yet partly fearing—
The dense!—it was my sister Grace!

—George Chinn in New York Sun.

She Was.

A man who was driving on the north end of Bowdoin street the other day passed a man who was in his shirt sleeves, barehanded and bareheaded after a hard run. Two squares further down he met a woman with flushed face, bonnet on the back of her head and as to her hands—

"I know whom you are after," he said as she came up.

"Who?"

"The old man."

"You bet I am, but he's run me out of breath," was her hearty response. "Did you see him?"

"Yes, he's only two blocks ahead."

"All right—keep quiet!"

And she took the middle of the road, spit on her hands and braced up for a last effort.—Detroit Free Press.

Evidence to the Contrary.

Yelowly—Didn't you say the other day that Whitely was a man of remarkable intelligence?

Brownly—I did.

Y.—Then I think you are mistaken in your estimate of him.

B.—What makes you think so?

Y.—He has just been accepted as a juror in a murder case.—Boston Courier.

An Optimist.

An old peasant on the south shore of Long Island was telling his visitor how pleasant it was. "But," asked the friend, slapping him on his handkerchief, "don't you have a great many mosquitoes and sand flies?"

"Yas," said the man: "but, then, we sorter like 'em. They're company, like!" "Well," said you se, we feel so kinder good when they go away."—New York Observer.

An Unkind Cut.

Miss Sere—I suppose you have heard that Mr. Snort is paying his attentions to me?

Miss Prosh—Yes, I heard of it.

Miss S.—He has proposed.

Miss P.—Indeed!

Miss S.—Yes. Now I wonder if it is my money he is after?

Miss P.—What else can it be?—Boston Courier.

The Thought of His Creditors.

Lieutenant (over head and ears in debt, gaily dreamily at the hand of a wealthy heiress)—Ah, how many persons this charming little bowl is capable of making happy!

Lady—Many! I should think only one!

Lieutenant—Oh, if you bestowed it on me, I assure you a great many persons would be rendered happy!—Fliegende Blatter.

Vagus.

As esteemed contemporary heads an item, "A woman steps a child at the point of dying." This seems the very acme of cruelty, yet, from a physiological standpoint, is as delightfully vague as the announcement that one appeared in a Pittsburg paper to the effect that a dog had been "shot on the South Side."—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Way to Do It.

Perturbed Mother—Little Johnnie is bawling upstairs with the toothache.

Experienced Father—Take him to the dentist's.

P. M.—Where's the money?

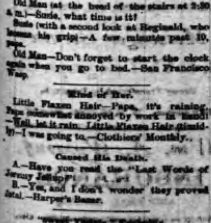
E. F.—Oh, never mind the money. As soon as he reaches the dentist's door his tooth will stop aching.—Boston Courier.

Equally Unpleasant to Contemplate.

"Father," said Mr. Skimphilt's eldest son, with blood in his eye, "that horse of ours is a treacherous beast. He'll be the death of me some time or I'll be the death of him."

"Then I'll s'y I him," replied Mr. Skimphilt, glowering. "A funeral would cost me every blamed cent the animal is worth."—Chicago Tribune.

In the Adirondacks.



Tourist—I thought you knew where all these ditches and gulleys were?

Guide—So I do. I've been in this ditch a dozen times before.—Life.

A Reminder.

Old Man (at the head of the stairs at 2:30 a. m.)—Susie, what time is it?

Susie (with a second look at Reginald, who yawns, his grips—A few minutes past 10, papa.

Old Man—Don't forget to start the clock back when you go to bed.—San Francisco Wasp.

Wide of Her.

Little Flaxen Hair—Papa, it's raining. You somewhat annoyed by work in hand? Tell 'at it rain. Little Flaxen Hair dismissed—I was going to—Clothiers' Monthly.

Caused His Death.

A—Have you read the "Last Words of Jersey Jerry?"

B.—Yes, and I don't wonder they proved fatal.—Harper's Bazar.

"Grand Vienna," Evidently.

First Hand Organ Man—How goes it, Garibaldi?

Second Hand Organ Man—Some of it's played.—New York Sun.

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

An Exercise Especially Valuable for People with Weak and Narrow Chests.

As an exercise for developing the chest and strengthening the lungs, great merit is claimed for the following, which is included among the movements of recent systems of physical culture, and is also advocated by leading vocal instructors:

Standing as erect as possible, with shoulders thrown back and chest forward, the arms hanging close to the body, the head up, with lips firmly closed, inhalation is to be taken as slowly as possible, in such manner that the extended arms are to be gradually raised, the back of the hands upward until they closely approach each other above the head. The movement should be so regulated that the arms will be extended directly over the head at the moment the lungs are completely filled. This position should be maintained from five to thirty seconds before the reversed process is begun. As the arms are gradually lowered the breath is exhaled slowly, so that the lungs shall be nearly freed from breath as possible at the time the arms again reach the first position at the side.

By these movements the greatest expansion possible is reached, for upon inspiration the weight of the shoulders and pectoral muscles are lifted, allowing the thorax to expand fully, while upon exhalation, in lowering the arms, we utilize the additional force of the pressure upon the upper thorax to render expiration as complete as possible. These deep respirations should be repeated five or six times, and the exercise should be taken several times a day. It is hardly necessary to remark that the clothing must in no way interfere with the exercise. In some cases this exercise is more advantageous when taken lying flat on the back, instead of standing. In this position the inspiratory muscles become rapidly strengthened by opposing the additional pressure exerted by the abdominal organs against the expanding lungs. And, on the other hand, expiration is more perfect and full on account of the pressure of these organs.

Restrain Yourself from Coughing.

The following is addressed to a doctor connected with an institution containing many children: There is nothing more irritating to a cough than to cough. For some time I had been a victim of a cough and that I recently determined, if possible for one minute, at least, to lessen the number of coughs heard in a certain ward in the hospital of the institution. I had promised rewards and punishments succeeded in inducing them simply to hold their breath when tempted to cough, and in a little while it was my self surprised to see how some of the children entirely recovered from their disease.

Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body; how long it is done the wound will not heal. Let a person, when tempted to cough, draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell, and soon benefit will soon be received from the process. The nitrogen, which is thus refined, acts as an anodyne to the irritated mucous membrane, allaying the desire to cough, and gives the throat and lungs a chance to heal. At the same time a suitable medicine will aid nature in her effort to recuperate.

What Real Rest Means.

Many women never rest. They seem not to understand what rest, real rest, means. To throw aside a book or a piece of newspaper or book is not rest; it is only a change of occupation. To sit down and keep the fingers flying over some sort of fancy work, as if one were pursued by a demon of unrest, is certainly not rest. But to lie in full length on a hard surface, arms extended at the sides, head back, with no pillow, eyes closed, all curves and wrinkles disunited, that is rest; this will smooth away wrinkles in the face and in temper; this will give an air of repose to the tired, anxious, overworked woman; this will take away many an ache and straighten out the rounded shoulders and craned necks.

Helps to Beauty and Comfort.

As a dressing in the bath, two quarts of water with two ounces of glycerine scented with rose, which will impart a final freshness and delicacy to the skin.

A pure and harmless cosmetic is a cold cream consisting of sweet almond oil, 3 ounces; spermaceti, ½ ounce, and white wax, ½ ounce. Heat the oil hot enough to melt the wax and spermaceti, and beat up well. Scent with five cents' worth of oil of lemon.

For diseased and inflamed gums, two parts of golden seal, one part of powdered borax, alum and myrrh, six parts of glycerine, made in a paste and rubbed on the gums, is said to afford relief and to strengthen the gums.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Comments on the Manners of American Men and Women—A Little Brief Advice.

America is the paradise of women, owing to the chivalry of the men. Such is the opinion of Mrs. John Sherwood, an acknowledged authority in social matters, who further says: From the captain of a western steamboat up to the president, it would be hard to find an American man who would be rude to a woman. If there is to be lagging of the best etiquette; for the power of a woman is in her gentleness and refinement. It is she who makes society; without her, men soon return to the savage state and the comforts and graces of home are exchanged for the misery of the mining camp. Now, having the splendid backbone of all grace, all courtesy and all chivalry in the character of our men, what have we to say of our women?

There is no doubt that the American girl is something of a spoiled child—perhaps she accepts too much politeness, and returns too little: perhaps she forgets to thank a man for his offer of a seat in a crowded car. She has received so much attention that she even takes it as a right. This is a great mistake. No woman can afford to be impolite. She is disregarding the solvency of her position. She must pay her debts. Etiquette is a knowledge of how to behave, first at home, then at a dinner, ball, private party, president's reception, at the drive, at the races, in the private circle of hospitality, at a wedding, everywhere, where we meet our fellow beings, so that we shall be most agreeable, most ornamental, most decent. That good old English word decent has been almost forgotten. The gents used to speak of "that decent flower, the violet." It is decent for us to show in our friend's house the respect we owe to him, and to ourselves.

Certain enfranchised women think they gain power and fame by abolishing good manners. This is a mistake as profound, as deep and so lasting that it will right itself without further comment.

A woman who diffuses too much, who is swimming in affectation, who dresses too conspicuously, who is too cordial or too haughty, is she who commits the most offense against good manners. A knowledge of etiquette would teach her to be quiet, receiving attentions with simple dignity, extending her cordial greetings with calm self respect. No lady should be ashamed to be poor, to dress plainly or cheaply; and to those fortunate days "appear like a lady" on very little money. Let her always be fresh, always sincere, always polite, and she always a lady.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

THINGS SAID AND DONE IN THE WORLD OF TODAY.

The Phenomenon of Nature's Intermittent Springs Explained—Chemistry Applied to "Sleight of Hand"—An Amusing Experiment Borrowed from Chemistry.

In nature springs are met with whose flow is spontaneously interrupted, and which begin again after a longer or shorter interval. This phenomenon depends upon the action of the syphon, and is readily understood by reference to the accompanying cut, which shows a subterranean reservoir fed by series of fissures in the earth. The channel by which the water flows out is on the left of the figure, and on coming to the surface it forms a spring.

AN INTERMITTENT SPRING.

The reservoir is represented as just being filled, and when the water rises to the height of the bend the syphon begins to act. If the fissures by which water is supplied furnish a smaller quantity than that by which it flows out, the reservoir, together with the channel, is gradually emptied and the flow then ceases. The reservoir gradually fills again, but the water cannot flow out until it has risen to the height represented by the dotted line, and the syphon has begun to work again.

An Electric Locomotive.

Will trains eventually run by electricity? The electrician is met by this question almost daily, and his only reply is that they will if the problem of their economical supplishments succeeded in inducing them simply to hold their breath when tempted to cough, and in a little while it was myself surprised to see how some of the children entirely recovered from their disease.

Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body; how long it is done the wound will not heal. America is the paradise of women, owing to the chivalry of the men. Such is the opinion of Mrs. John Sherwood, an acknowledged authority in social matters, who further says: From the captain of a western steamboat up to the president, it would be hard to find an American man who would be rude to a woman. If there is to be lagging of the best etiquette; for the power of a woman is in her gentleness and refinement. It is she who makes society; without her, men soon return to the savage state and the comforts and graces of home are exchanged for the misery of the mining camp. Now, having the splendid backbone of all grace, all courtesy and all chivalry in the character of our men, what have we to say of our women?

There is no doubt that the American girl is something of a spoiled child—perhaps she accepts too much politeness, and returns too little: perhaps she forgets to thank a man for his offer of a seat in a crowded car. She has received so much attention that she even takes it as a right. This is a great mistake. No woman can afford to be impolite. She is disregarding the solvency of her position. She must pay her debts. Etiquette is a knowledge of how to behave, first at home, then at a dinner, ball, private party, president's reception, at the drive, at the races, in the private circle of hospitality, at a wedding, everywhere, where we meet our fellow beings, so that we shall be most agreeable, most ornamental, most decent. That good old English word decent has been almost forgotten. The gents used to speak of "that decent flower, the violet." It is decent for us to show in our friend's house the respect we owe to him, and to ourselves.

Certain enfranchised women think they gain power and fame by abolishing good manners. This is a mistake as profound, as deep and so lasting that it will right itself without further comment.

A woman who diffuses too much, who is swimming in affectation, who dresses too conspicuously, who is too cordial or too haughty, is she who commits the most offense against good manners. A knowledge of etiquette would teach her to be quiet, receiving attentions with simple dignity, extending her cordial greetings with calm self respect. No lady should be ashamed to be poor, to dress plainly or cheaply; and to those fortunate days "appear like a lady" on very little money. Let her always be fresh, always sincere, always polite, and she always a lady.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

Remarkable Increase in Railroad Mileage in the United States.

Of the total railroad mileage of the world the United States now possess nearly one half. At the end of 1888 the aggregate length of all lines in the country was 156,069 miles, all built in sixty years, the average mileage per year being nearly 2,600 miles. But this record of sixty years, wonderful as it is, fades into insignificance when compared with the achievements of the past twenty-three years. The total mileage in 1865 was 35,085 miles. In the twenty-three years since then there has been constructed 121,000 miles of new road, an average of 5,260 miles per annum. During these twenty-three years this country has experienced three great waves of railroad construction, which were checked only by extraordinary financial revulsions. The first of these great construction waves occurred within the eight years previous to the panic of 1873, in which time the mileage increased more than 100 per cent. The depression which followed extended through the years 1874-1878.

During 1879 matters began to improve throughout the country, and this feeling was reflected through the railroads. In that year construction increased nearly 100 per cent. over the preceding year. In the third wave of construction, during the years 1886-88, the new construction aggregated 28,000 miles, or within fifty-eight miles of the extraordinary record of the three years, 1881-83.

A Great Fertilizer.

Where the Ganges rises, bursting forth from a Himalayan glacier, it is twenty-seven feet wide. It falls 3,500 feet in the first ten miles of its course, and it has an average depth of thirty feet 350 miles from its mouth. Its delta is 350 wide as the distance from New York to Washington, and hundreds of months run from this width back into a vast of pale hydrogram for 300 miles more before they unite. The water of the Bay of Bengal is discolored for miles by the mud brought down by the Ganges, and the whole country is fertilized by it. The quantity of this mud and thickness of pea soup, and the silt or mud is so rich that three vast plains use no other fertilizer. In this Ganges valley nature is always giving, but will never give the last atom of natural fertilizer, save this Ganges silt, is taken from the soil. Still-the land is as rich as guano, and it produces from two to four crops every year.

About Calcutta the alluvial deposit is 400 feet deep, and an experiment was lately made to get to the end of it. A well was sunk, but at the distance of 410 feet the water broke. At this point the end of the rich soil had not been reached. The amount of fertilizing material brought down by the Ganges has lately been estimated, and scientific investigation shows that some distance above the point where it unites with the Brahmaputra its annual burden is the enormous amount of 355,000,000 tons. A 1,000 ton ship is by no means small, and a fleet of 350,000 such ships could not carry this burden. The average freight cost is thirty-four feet long, and it takes a stronger ear to carry fifty tons. Suppose our freight cars each to be sixteen feet longer than they are. Load upon each 50 fifty tons of this fertilizing mud, and it would take a train of more than 7,000,000 such cars to carry the yearly fertilizing output of this great river.

Munchausen.

Although "Dictionary of Authors" accords the authorship of "Munchausen's Travels" to Rudolph Erich Raspe, a German, but intimation is made that the question of the authorship is unsettled. Perhaps the following note may be found interesting:

"There have been many conjectures concerning the origin and the authorship of the stories in 'Baron Munchausen's Travels.' Mensel in his 'Lexicon' says that Gottfried August Burger translated into English the well known Munchausen lies." Southey, from coincidences between two of the stories in a 'Voyage to the Moon,' a work published about 1720, thought that the English fiction must have come from the Portuguese, or that both must have come from a common but unknown other than either. The "Encyclopedia Americana" says they were the work of Burger, the German poet, who translated the tales of Munchausen from the English, when they were in fact the Baron Friedrich von Munchausen's own stories. Thomas Burger was a German who had some difficulty in consequence. William West, in his "Fifty Years' Recollections of an Old Bookseller," says that Burger translated the stories as they were told by the Baron Munchausen, "written by St. John, of Oxford, in a vein of irony peculiar to himself." Carlyle, in his "Life of Sterling," speaks in the text of his biography as if Burger were the author of the Munchausen tales, but in a note to the same page he "suggests" who the author may have been.

Sir Charles Lyell, in his "Principles of Geology," while professing to have read Burger's "Immortal Liar Munchausen," records him in a note as the author of "Baron Munchausen's Travels." Some body in The Gentleman's Magazine says they were the joint work of Raspe and Burger. Again, Mrs. Jameson, in her "Memoirs of Celebrated Females," makes a bad mistake when she says that "one of his accusers had a chaplain who was famous for drawing a long bow, and that his patron, the baron of Munchausen, revenged himself upon Hoadly, by making a collection of marvelous adventures, for the purpose of shaming the priest, for which laudable object he employed the services of the reverend gentleman." The other editions of the manuscript often, numbering altogether nearly forty, fell further and further behind, the rear being brought up with Glasgow, London and Gloucerron, in the order given.

A Big Dinner.

The greatest banquet ever known to profane history was that to which the mayors of France sat down in Paris on Aug. 19, in the palais de l'Industrie in honor of the centenary of the celebration of the events of 1789. Think of a formal banquet at which 13,000 people sat simultaneously down, and which required the provision of 30,000 plates, 52,000 glasses, 27,000 bottles of wine and nearly 1,400 waiters and assistants! It was a feast that paled old Rome and the Cæsars.

Heavy Engines.

There are six large locomotives which are said to be the heaviest ones ever constructed in the course of the smoke. The trick is easily accomplished. It is only necessary to pour previously into the glass two or three drops of hydrochloric acid and to moisten the bottom of the same with a few drops of ammoniac. These two liquids are unperceived by the spectators, but as soon as the smoker is placed over the glass they unite in forming white fumes of hydrochlorate of ammonia, which bear a complete resemblance to the smoke of tobacco.

Red Letter Day.

The same result is obtained in a course of chemistry in a more simple manner and without any attempt at trickery by placing the opening of a bottle of ammonia against the opening of another bottle containing hydrochloric acid.

BEAT BORROWED FROM CHEMISTRY.

Cigarette in the background while the glass as though by enchantment slowly filled with the fumes of the smoke. The trick is easily accomplished. These two liquids are unperceived by the spectators, but as soon as the smoker is placed over the glass they unite in forming white fumes of hydrochlorate of ammonia, which bear a complete resemblance to the smoke of tobacco.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

How to Train and Tame That Charming and Favorite Home Bird, the Canary.

Canaries are perhaps the most popular of cage birds, and this is probably as much due to their liveliness as to their sweetness of song. They are always busy every day birds living in the glare of the hot sun, or placed on a window sill with the window wide open and a strong draft over their shoulders. Delicate ladies, birds left out in changes of weather and till late at night when they have been made tender by housing; birds in cages swathed in mosquito netting, so that they can see out, but not out of them, and other abuses that tend to cause discomfort and disease.

All bird lovers will be interested in the method by which the wingers are trained by dealers in birds. The young birds, when through moulting, are taken away from the room above these is kept a nightingale, sky-lark or some other fine whistling bird, the best of his species, who acts as instructor for the young birds. From him they get those beautiful notes—the bow trill, the bell note, the flute, the water note, etc., which are so much admired.

The canary will become a most charming pet, but if you want it to be very tame and familiar you must have but one. No creature is more jealous or sensitive than a bird, and if you have several none will become very intimate with you.

It is easy, however, to win the heart of almost any single bird, and without starving him or making him hold to his name quickly won. Simply talk to him a good deal. Place his cage near you, on your desk or work table, and retain his choicest dainty to give to him yourself from your own fingers. Let him know that he can never have that particular thing unless he take it from you, and he will soon learn, if you are patient and do not disconcert him by sudden or sour upsetting him. After this he will more readily take it from your lips, and then, when you let him out of his cage, after the first excitement is over, he will come to you especially if you have a call you have accustomed him to and accept the dainty from you while free.

From that time nothing is needed but invariably kind and gentle treatment, never frightening him by a sudden movement or a loud noise. As soon as he has really become convinced that you will not hurt him, nor try to catch him, nor deprive him in any way with his liberty, he will give way to his boundless curiosity about you; he will pull your hair, pick at your eyes and give you as much of his company as you desire. You should keep out of the way of a tame bird such things as needles, rubber bands, bits of glass, small buttons and, in general, objects small enough to be swallowed. Whatever instinct he may have in his natural surroundings does not seem to avail him in a house.

A Popular Lamp Shade.

Lamp shades come in numberless designs. An example of a style very popular just now is shown in the cut. This form of shade is equally adapted to large and small lamps, and is much employed on the tall standing lamps.

AN ACCORDION LAMP SHADE.

The materials may be silk, cloths, or, best or still, colored paper diagonally striped and plaited in the collapsing style known as accordion plaitings. It is edged with fringe and supported over a wire frame.

Rice Boiled in Georgia Style.

To boil rice in the Georgia style, pick it over, wash in cold water, and boil into three times its quantity of salted boiling water, and boil it steadily for twelve minutes, without stirring it; then drain off all the water, cover it, and steam it for half an hour, and set it where it will keep hot enough to steam for ten minutes; it will then be ready to serve. Shake it out of the boiler in a heap on the dish, but do not use a spoon to remove it, and do not press it in shape; serve it as it is thrown lightly on the dish.

Linen Whitened with Potatoes.

A French laundry man is said to have discovered an ingenious method of cleaning linen without soap. He uses no soap, only lye, pure chlorine; but, in their stead, boiled potatoes, which he rubs upon the linen. This curious process, it appears, is much superior to those hitherto employed, and the work soiled cotton, linen or silk cleaned by this method are made whiter than they could be by the use of an alkali.

Amber Cream.

Amber cream is an easily made dessert, requiring butter milk, eggs and sugar, only half a box of gelatine. Soak the gelatine in a quart of milk for ten minutes. Let it come to a boil and stir in the yolks of six eggs beaten with seven heaping tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Cook until like soft custard. When it has been off the stove just five minutes, put in the beaten whites, flavor and mold.

An Open Apple Tart.

Stew some apples till quite soft; take out any hard pieces, beat them to a pulp, and to half a pound of pulp allow six ounces of sugar, five eggs and the grated rind of a lemon. Beat all well together, then add gradually five ounces of melted butter. Line a dish with puff paste, pour in the mixture and bake it at once.

Chocolate Cakes.

The whites of eight eggs, half a cake of chocolate, grated, one pound of sugar, six ounces of flour. Beat the eggs to a stiff froth, add the sugar, then stir in the chocolate and flour. Butter flat tins, and drop the mixture in small cakes; not too closely, as the cakes will spread. Bake a few minutes in a quick oven.

To Polish Marble.

To restore the polish to marble a person of experience recommends to wash the marble with soap and water, and when dry rub it with an old soft napkin, and when quite dry rub it steadily for an hour at least with white wax and a clean flannel rubber, the secret of success being in prolonged rubbing.

Leather trimming is once more in fashion—but it is not the old-time trimming. This is of a much more delicate, which is done and looks like fur and marabout—all are applied to dresses and cloaks.

TANNER STRIKES BACK.

His Interesting Reply to Secretary Noble's Letter.

HE WARMLY DEFENDS HIMSELF

And His Conduct of the Pension Office.

These Rerated Cases of Employes—His Administration Compares Favorably with His Predecessor's, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Tanner is out in a long statement in reply to Secretary Noble's letter of July 31 on the subject of rerating pensions of pension office employes. Mr. Tanner denies at the outset that he defied Secretary Noble on the subject of rerating or on the question of dominant authority in the administration of the pension bureau. "I did submit," Mr. Tanner says, "to him in an unofficial letter a question which arose in my mind as to whether the power to put to the test a pension which might be under suspicion of having been granted in excess rested in the hands of the secretary or of the commissioner, and I quoted to him the section of the Revised Statutes which had raised that question in my mind; but in submitting that question to the secretary for his decision I did it in the most courteous and respectful manner, of which I was capable."

Rerated Cases of Office Clerks.

Concerning the rerated pension cases of clerks in the pension office the ex-commissioner says:

"I do not propose, in any event, to have an honorable lifetime tarnished in the slightest degree at this period of my existence, and where I may find well founded reasons for believing that I have been imposed upon and misled I shall be quick to recommend the condemnation merited by the parties concerned. I simply desire to add furthermore, that in our intercourse in office hours last, I have made a comparison of action in these cases with that taken by my predecessor in a similar class of cases and I find that the comparison is entirely favorable to the present administration. I shall be happy to lay these cases before you at any time when it may suit your convenience."

Mr. Tanner then in commenting on the great stress laid by Secretary Noble upon section 4,698, of the law relating to rerating says: "It is proper that I should state that when I took office as commissioner I found that, on the question of rerating, the office was, and had been since March 3d, 1885, operating in accordance with a decision rendered by the Hon. George A. Jenks, then assistant secretary of the interior, who, in the case of Charles W. Watson, of Illinois, decision declared that 'if, in any case adjudicated under the act of March 3, 1879, the arrears of pension were not granted according to the pensioners' disability at the time of the act, or any subsequent provision of the law prohibits a readjudication of the case.' The claimant's contention was in part for pension on account of sunstroke, but he had no claim for that disability until fifteen years after his discharge.

In Favor of Liberality.

"The legal construction placed by these eminent gentlemen, Secretary Noble and the late Assistant Secretary Jenks, Mr. Jenks' ruling was law through the department until it was revoked, and I must say that in so far as it permits a man who has been disabled in the service of the country to prove that that disability and receive the compensation which the law provides, I am in hearty accord with it. If Secretary Noble sees fit to construe statutes so as to make them less liberal to the soldier than did his eminent predecessor, the responsibility for that must rest with him; and I am not willing that while so doing he shall, unchallenged, arraign me as operating without reason and beyond the rules of the law."

Mr. Tanner then relates the circumstances preceding the appointment of the committee to investigate the rerated cases, and which led up to it. Gen. Tanner holds that the secretary's suspicions were aroused as to the correctness of action in the cases of ten employes and that he had been instructed to investigate.

Mr. Tanner placed the papers in nine of the cases on Gen. Busey's table within an hour and those in the remaining case were sent over the next morning. "I then called his attention," Mr. Tanner says, "to the fact that several cases were disease cases, and it did not seem to me the right thing to have them reviewed by a non-medical man. I told him, as I afterwards told Secretary Noble, that when I first took office there was a mighty rush of business pressing upon the pension office, and I was thoroughly imbued with the belief of what we expressed in the press and on the stump in the late campaign as to the restrictive policy of the pension office on the soldier claims; and that I had thought that until I became familiar with the workings of the bureau, so long as I pursued the course I had done in the case of one of experience in the office, the last thing I was in danger of doing was of doing too much."

The Secretary's Scathing Rebuke.

Mr. Tanner says he at once ordered the rerated cases of employes reviewed in the pension office by office experts. Of the thirty-three cases they reported that there were simply increase cases, and not rerated cases; that the action taken in two of the others was right in part, and that in one case injustice had been done. Subsequently, and that he had not been granted enough. Six cases were reported as having been wrongly favored. All the rest were certified to the commissioner as correctly rerated. "I mentioned these things," Mr. Tanner says, "to the secretary and made a detailed report in him of the action taken in connection with the twenty-four cases, stating that I proposed to take the step the law prescribed to put the impeached cases to the test, and cause the refundment to the treasury of the money paid out, if the record did not stand the test prescribed by law, supporting thereby in my heart that I was committing myself to my superior by the oath I was exhibiting. To my surprise I received a reply from him under date of Aug. 1 in which he stated: 'You have endeavored to fasten by your own means to get a board to arrive at conclusions in anticipation of anything I might do. I consider this not only disrespectful but insubordinate to the last degree, and I therefore refuse to withdraw any cases I have under consideration, and in regard to which I have heretofore told you that I intended to act, from the consideration of any persons whom you have selected to antedate my action; and you will report your immediate obedience of this order to me. And you will disband any board that you have undertaken to form for the purpose of investigating business still in my hands, and upon which I am officially engaged.' I replied at once stating, of course, my obedience to his peremptory order, and totally repudiated all thought of insubordination, disobedience or the slightest disposition to proceed in any factious manner. People who are not extremely nervous will be able to judge whether, if I had desired so to proceed, I would have voluntarily reported in full to the secretary what I was doing."

The Investigating Committee.

On the work and report of the committee Mr. Tanner says:

"On the 29th of July came notice to me of the fact that the committee of investigation had been constituted. When they appeared a day or two afterwards I instructed the chief clerk to place the office and all it contained at their disposal. From that moment I had about the result of their operations was when the honorable secretary himself one day when I was in his office asked me if I had any objection to his making a visit to the operations of the pension bureau. I told him I had not been favored in that respect in the slightest degree. He replied that they would find that I had granted more pensions and paid out more money in the same time than my distinguished predecessor did. I replied that I hoped to God that charge was true in the second, for I had planned to indulge with promises last fall that that should be the fact if Gen. Harrison came into power as president. I never saw the report of the committee of investigation until the afternoon of the day I resigned, when I found it on the table in the White House and was there told by the president and the secretary that the report contained nothing which in the slightest degree reflected upon my integrity or impeached my honesty of action as commissioner.

Too Much Speed and Liberality.

"Granting all to be true that is charged in the report, it sums up too much liberality and too much speed. Of course I dispute the conclusion of the commission as a vast majority of the cases they cite, but in any case which was open to suspicion at all I was ready at any and all times to put them to the test under well established forms of law. Justice to the gentlemen in the bureau demands that I should state that very early in my experience as commissioner my attention was called to the Fowler case as a precedent. I have not the slightest desire to embarrass the honorable secretary, but he has a right in judging officials of the pension bureau to bear in mind that only four days before I took office they saw his personal friend, who had been his candidate for the commissionership, walk into the office, as I am informed, with a note of introduction from the secretary to the commissioner asking him to do all he could for his friend, Col. Powell. The colonel had a gunshot wound in the shoulder, for which he was a quarter pensioner. Had he been a private it would have been $12 a month; as he was a colonel it was $17.50.

The Secretary Arraigned.

"I am informed that a medical examination by the office board was suggested to him. He declined to submit to it. He had not been under the rule of the office a day before case was rerated then and there and his pension increased to full rate, dating back to the day of discharge, and Commissioner Tanner was called to the Fowler case as a precedent. Col. Powell a little over $6,300. It seems as if the pace on rerating was set after the secretary took hold and forces I got in."

MR. TANNER'S SUCCESSOR.

Gen. Green B. Raum, of Illinois, Is the Man.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The mystery surrounding the vacant pension commissionership has at last been dispelled. On Saturday the president sent to the senate the name of Gen. Green B. Raum, of Illinois, to succeed Mr. Tanner. Gen. Raum at once took the oath of office, and was officially presented to Secretary Noble.

Green Berry Raum, best known as an ex-commissioner of internal revenue, was born in Golconda, Pope county, Ills., Dec. 3, 1829. He received a common school education, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1853. In 1856 he removed with his family to Kansas, and at once affiliated with the free state party. He became obnoxious to the pro-slavery faction, he returned to Illinois and following year to Illinois and settled at Harrisburg. At the opening of the civil war he made his first speech as a "war" Democrat while he was attending court at Metropolis, Ills. Subsequently he entered the army as a major of the Fifty-sixth Illinois regiment, and was promoted lieutenant colonel, colonel, and brevet brigadier general. He was made brigadier general of volunteers on Feb. 15, 1865, which commission he resigned on May 6. He was appointed by Gen. Hall, 18, Rosecrans in the Mississippi campaign of 1862.

GREEN B. RAUM.

At the battle of Corinth he ordered and led the charge that broke the Confederate left and repulsed Price. He was with Gen. Grant at Vicksburg and was wounded at the battle of Missionary Ridge in November, 1863. During the Atlanta campaign he held the line of communication from Dalton to Acworth and from Kingston to Rome, Ga. In October, 1864, he re-enforced Rosecrans, Ga., and held it against Gen. John B Hood. In 1866 he obtained a charter for the Cairo and Vincennes Railroad company, aided in securing its construction and because its first president. He was then elected to congress, and served from March 4, 1867, till March 3, 1869. In 1876 he was president of the Illinois Republican convention, and in 1880 was a member of the national and national convention of that party in Cincinnati. He was appointed commissioner of internal revenue in 1876, and filled the office for one year. During this period he collected $850,000,000 and disbursed $30,000,000 without loss.

Burial of a Johnstown Victim.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 21.—The funeral of the late Charles Meeker, a victim of the Johnstown disaster and a former manager of the Newark baseball team, took place from the Fairmount Avenue Baptist church. The body was brought from Johnstown on Saturday, having been recognized by his widow two days before.

A Clergyman Struck by a Missile.

RED BANK, N. J., Oct. 21.—Rev. O. W. Hoddy, of 216 Canal street, Philadelphia, was seriously injured while sitting on the 4.30 express from New York. The train was passing through Morgan when a stone thrown through the car hit Mr. Hoddy in the face.

A Town Destroyed by Fire.

MASSENA, Ills., Oct. 21.—The little village of Curtiss on the line of the Central railroad, north of here, was destroyed by fire Friday. The loss will amount to at least $100,000. Curtiss is a town of between 300 and 400 inhabitants.

SHOT BY A POLICEMAN.

The Bullet Was Meant for a Footpad,

BUT IT STRUCK THE WRONG MAN.

The Reckless Shooting of a New York Policeman Likely to End an Innocent Citizen's Life—Another Incident of the Electric Light War.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—John Coleman lies at the Chambers Street hospital suffering from a pistol shot wound in the abdomen, and his death may occur at any time. Policeman Edward Walsh, of the Leonard street station, who is held responsible for Coleman's injury, was paroled in the custody of Capt. Sichert. This case seems indirectly to be due to the electric light war, for had it not become necessary to shut off the electric currents the policeman probably would not have made the mistake he did, and Coleman would be well at his home, No. 8 Hamilton street.

Traces of Footpads.

Since the shutting down of the electric lights Capt. Sichert has had men in plain clothes keeping watch in those parts of the Fifth precinct that would most likely tempt burglars or highwaymen to carry on their work. Policemen Walsh and Finken were doing this kind of duty. They found at 5 o'clock Cesar Townes, an employe of an electric lighting company, asleep on the steps of the pension office at Canal and Laight streets. When aroused he said he had been robbed of $15 and a diamond pin worth $100. His clothing was in such condition as to lead to belief that he told the truth. Two men walking in West Broadway were stopped by the policemen, but when questioned gave evasive answers, and finally ran away.

Shot by Mistake.

The policemen pursued them. They were captured, James Kane by Walsh and Michael O'Connor by Finken. Kane was grappling on Walsh when the latter fired at him, and Coleman, who stood at Leonard street and West Broadway, was shot. He was taken to the hospital in an ambulance. At the station Kane and O'Connor were recognized as men who had been prowling about the neighborhood for some hours. They said they lived in Trenton—Kane working as a bartender and O'Connor being employed by Cooper, Hewitt & Co. Coleman's condition is critical.

A BASEBALL BENEFIT.

"The Giants" Presented with the Pennant and a Fat Purse.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Broadway theatre was seldom seen so crowded as it was last evening, when the benefit performance for the victorious New York baseball club was given. After twenty prominent players had been called before the audience by their selections, "the Giants," all in evening dress, mounted upon the stage amid great applause, and stood in a semi circle while Jay Wolf, the ball player, on behalf of the "Five A's," presented Manager Mutrie with the pennant of the league. Mutrie replied in his jolly, well-becoming grace, and turning to the audience, made an impressive terms the efforts of his nine and the success which had attended them. His remarks were punctuated with generous applause.

Mutrie gave credit to Mr. Day, who backed the club when everyone else to whom application was made refused to do so. John Ward was loudly called for after Mutrie had spoken, and he responded briefly and pertinently. Among the actors participating in the benefit were Digby Bell, Wolf Hopper, Marion Manola, William Terriss and Sim Williams. The receipts were over $4,000, and each player will receive over $200.

In 1870 West murdered Martin in Hill county and fled. He was just lately discovered after living in the Indian territory for eighteen years.

THE FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

Members Now on the Ground Expect an Interesting Session.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—As members-elect to the Fifty-first congress reach the city gossip respecting the organization of the next house of representatives naturally increases. The concensus of opinion among members-elect now here is that the republican majority will go either to Maine (Mr. Reed) or Ohio (Mr. McKinley). Messrs. Burroughs (Michigan) and Cannon (Illinois) are both in the ground, however, and if they desire it will at least make the contest interesting before balloting begins. At this writing it would be a very difficult undertaking to pick out the strongest candidate from these last two named.

Maj. John M. Carson, of The Philadelphia Ledger, appears to have already practically captured the clerkship of the next house. He has been working for it all summer, and it is claimed by his friends that he has pledges sufficient to elect on the first ballot.

Col. Severin appears to have no rival for the position of sergeant-at-arms, while there are several candidates for the offices of doorkeeper and postmaster. Most of the senators and representatives now here expect a very important session during the coming winter. The tariff, trusts, the civil service law, the interstate commerce law, the educational question, a national election law and a subsidy bill will be among the subjects that will engage the attention of congress. What are recognized as the great questions of the day will, in all probability, be presented as party measures, and are likely to render the coming session a very important one.

Senator Dolph thinks that congress will take no step backward in the matter of legislation on interstate commerce and civil service reform. Both the interstate commerce law and the civil service law, he thinks, will probably be amended, but not so as to destroy their efficiency. Such amendments as are made to either will be for the purpose of rendering them more effective. The race question, Senator Dolph says, will undoubtedly be discussed in connection, with the contested election cases, and independently of them. It is a live question and will not down at any bidding. He feels confident that the tariff will be revised and the surplus cut off in some manner. Whether the measure not very dissimilar to the senate bill will be passed.

It is possible, he thinks, that some bill on the subject of trusts will be passed, but the subject must be dealt with in the main, the senator says, by the states. The power of congress over this subject is so limited as to render of little value any law which it may pass to prevent or control trusts in the states. Congressman Browne, of Indiana, regards a revision of the revenue system as the most important question, and as the first action of congress, and favors a repeal of the tax on tobacco and on alcohol used in the arts, and a reduction of the tax on sugar.

"Something will probably be done regarding the seal fisheries and also the Canadian fishery dispute," he adds. "These questions, however, will not divide the parties. I have no doubt that there will be some amendment to the interstate commerce law, and congress will unquestionably legislate on the subject of trusts, if it is possible to define a trust, but I am not to interfere with legitimate business."

Congressman Hitt, of Illinois, thinks it is rather too early to make any predictions about what congress will do at the coming session. No conference of even the most informal kind has yet been held, so that there are no means of judging of what other members are considering. Then the shifting of opinion on many important points is so likely that a judgment now is not very apt to hold when actual voting on questions begins in February next. Mr. Hitt is decidedly in the way of amendatory legislation to the interstate commerce law may be expected, he thinks, but the civil service law too many congressmen of both parties are pledged to its support to allow its repeal. The subject of trusts will probably be involved in the discussion of the tariff, which will, of course, come up next session.

Read the Bible and Was Shot.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Policeman Thomas Wehart, which sailed hence Friday for Norfolk, has returned for the purpose of handing over to the federal authorities a colored seaman named Burris Maddox, who on Saturday shot and probably fatally wounded the colored cook, George Phillips. Phillips was also landed and sent to a hospital. He is a very religious man, and Maddox ridiculed him for spending his spare moments in reading the Bible. Phillips, after hearing Maddox's abuse for some time, finally ordered him away. Maddox refused to desist, and shot Phillips. He claims that he acted in self defense, and that Phillips was about to stab him.

Deserted, She Sought Death.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Ollie Williams committed suicide here by cutting her throat with a razor. She was a stranger in the city, having come here a week ago with a man named Phillips. The couple came directly here from Council Grove, Kansas, where Mrs. Williams left a husband and two children. Phillips deserted her, and this is believed to be the cause of her suicide. The child was taken in charge by the local authorities and will be sent back to the father.

No Use for the Sugar Trust.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Claus Spreckles, the sugar refiner, will at once set to work to make preparations for opening his big refinery here. "As long as I live it is my intention to engage in business entirely upon my own account," he says. "I never have needed assistance from others, and I certainly have no use for the sugar trust. Those who refused to join the trust have fared very much better than those who were foolish enough to enter into such an illegal combination."

THE REWARD OF MERIT.

M. Quad Writes of a Friend of His Who Was Way Up on Cards.

When I stopped off at the Mammoth Cave some last fall to have a look at the big underground exposition, there were only a few guests in the house. Only one of these particularly attracted my attention, and he might not have done that had not introduced himself, borrowed a cigar, offered me a sip of his cough medicine and otherwise exhibited his desire to be friendly. When we finally got seated for an interchange of views, he proved to be Col. Henry Blanchard, late of a Tennessee regiment. That is, he was about twenty-five years late, having colonized the regiment during the last years of the war. I think he also told me which side he fought on, and that he was an awful fighter; but just at that time I was wondering about the cave and I didn't put down the figures.

I do remember, however, that the colonel told me that he was a millionaire, and I further remember that I managed to convey the impression that I had about three cents more at my disposal. Experience has taught me that it is better to lie about those things—no matter the size of the party. When a stranger has informed you that he can draw his check for a cool million, and you have replied that you would be glad if you could draw one for $25, the inevitable result is a coolness which soon grows up to opposite sides of the pasture of fat. I therefore make it a rule to let the other man fix his figures to suit himself and then I double them.

The colonel next informed me that he had arrived on the grounds with speculation in view. He had heard that the cave was for sale at a ridiculously low figure. The owner of it had got the idea that mammoth caves were going out of style and would soon be a drug in the market, and would therefore sell for a trifle—something like $50,000. Was I looking for an investment on which I could double my money in thirty days? I was. Would I take half of it? I would. If it had been a farm or a vineyard or a yoke of cattle I might have hesitated, but one never runs any risk in buying a cave. It is right there. It stands in any climate. It is always healthy and productive. If it should fail as a cave, going to some change of public sentiment, one can turn it into a cold storage, a state prison or a pirate's lair and reap fair interest on the capital.

It was agreed that we should walk over to the cave next day, and it was further agreed that we should say not a word on the matter as still as death. There were other millionaires there, and they might catch on. We were to set out at 8 a. m. so as to go slow and look for other caves on the road. The hours setting out I gave the landlord my watch and all my money but a dollar, and when ready to go I stepped off as light infantry. The colonel was awaiting me down stairs, and I noted at his directions I slipped quickly away in one direction, while he took another and soon joined me.

"We've got to work this thing mighty sly," he remarked. "Chances to make a million dollars don't grow on every bush, and if the fact that this cave is for sale was known to Louisville a special train of millionaires would be out here to-night."

Tagreed with him, and we took to the fields and made short cuts. We had gone some mile of the distance and were passing over a wooded ridge and chatting as friendly as two emperors, when I heard a click! click! behind me and the colonel sang out:

"Halt! Throw up your hands!"

I halted and turned around and was somewhat surprised to find that he had a great big revolver leveled on me at full cock. He also looked as if there was serious business on hand, and I felt it my duty to inquire:

"What's the matter, colonel—snakes?"

"If you don't do exactly as I order I will blow your head off!" he replied.

"But what's the order?"

"Shell out! I want everything you've got!"

"Is this a put up job?"

"It is."

"And you are not Col. Henry Blanchard, late colonel of a late Tennessee regiment in the late war?"

"Not any! Shell!"

"Would you rob an orphan of his all?" I asked, hoping to reduce his heart to a liquid state and then outrun him.

"I would, and don't you bother me too long!"

Then I began toshell. I shelled out a silver dollar and laid it on a rock. Then I shelled out a cigar case, two quill toothpicks, a match safe, a cigar, a pocket knife and a phial of peppermint essence which I used for toothache.

"Come down!" he yelled as I stood and looked at him.

"I have."

"I want your money!"

"There it is. I've got $23 and a railroad ticket to Detroit at the hotel, but you'll have to wait until we return there."

"Where's your watch?"

"At the hotel."

"You miserable, poverty stricken wretch, but you lied to me about your millions!" he shouted.

"But you lied first."

"Turn your pockets inside out!"

I complied and he saw their emptiness.

"That's a regular Yankee trick," he growled as he tried to hide his chagrin. "If I wasn't for the trouble of hiding your carcass I'd shoot you! Now, then, do as I tell you!"

"With pleasure."

"Go straight towards those trees, and don't stop until you reach them. If you look back I'll shoot you."

I picked up everything but the dollar, waited him good day and set out, and after reaching the trees I made a circuit and finally brought up at the hotel. When I told the landlord what had happened he exclaimed:

"Is it possible! And the crew you got for a week's board! What will happen next, I wonder?"

A week later I met the colonel in Lexington, Ky. I met him face to face on the street, and his embarrassment was so great that I felt sorry for him. In order to put him at his ease and prove that I had no hard feelings towards him I held out my hand and said:

"Colonel, you owe me a dollar, borrowed money."

"Just looking for you that I might pay it," he replied, and he went into his vest pocket and brought up my 1873 dollar.

Then we smiled and passed on.—Detroit Free Press.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE.

Account of the Thrilling Shenandoah Battles in 1864.

EARLY'S DEFEAT AT WINCHESTER

The Rout at Fisher's Hill—"Whirling Up the Valley"—The Wholesale Destruction of Lee's Supplies—Demoralization and Frantic Flight of Rosser's Command. Sheridan's Timely Arrival.

[Copyright, 1888, by American Press Association.]

The bold incursions of Gen. Early to the Potomac and across on northern soil had the effect of drawing a new system of warfare to the Shenandoah valley, or Valley of Virginia. From the beginning of the war this region so convenient for the shelter of a hostile force on the flanks of a Union army operating in northern Virginia had not been occupied by one good, consolidated force. Stonewall Jackson fought one army under Fremont and another under Banks on alternate days in 1862, and defeated both. After that Sigel had a command, Gen. D. C. Buell another, and Gen. B. F. Kelley another, all charged with looking after the Confederates in and around the valley.

Later, Milroy and Kelley and Frem[illegible] Union commands supposed to be available to prevent the Confederate occupation in force, but Lee made it a highway when he chose to, and used it for granary at pleasure. Hunter came Crook and Sigel again, and then Hunter—these last in 1864—and at the end of a hard summer's campaign Early held the valley, and Gen. Lee's army was composed of the remnants of these commands—the Nineteenth corps from the southwest and the Sixth corps from the Army of the Potomac—were huddled around the Potomac, with Gen. Grant on the ground devising some method to solve the problem of protecting Washington while fighting was going on along the James river. During the excitement of Early's raid to Washington in July, campaigning had been at a stand at Petersburg, and Sheridan, in command of the cavalry, was at Washington. An arrangement to have Hunter and Sheridan act together having failed, Hunter left the field, and the four old departments of the army, that of West Virginia and western Maryland, the Susquehanna (Pennsylvania), Washington, including eastern Maryland and Virginia around Alexandria, and the middle department of Delaware and Maryland—were consolidated and formed into the middle military division, under Sheridan.

SHERIDAN IN COMMAND.

The forces constituted an army. Beside the Sixth and Nineteenth corps Crook had two divisions of infantry in his West Virginia army; to the division of cavalry brought on to Petersburg by Sheridan was now added Wilson's from the same army, Averell's division from West Virginia, and a new brigade under Col. C. R. Lowell. Gen. A. T. A. Torbert, whose division had followed Sheridan from the peninsula, was made chief of the cavalry of the new army, and Gen. Wesley Merritt took command of Torbert's division. Sheridan was asked for cavalry to solve the question of holding the valley, and now he had three divisions and an extra brigade, led by Wilson, Merritt and Lowell. Two thirds of our cavalry and infantry were not all on the ground when Sheridan decided to set out to seize Winchester as the "key point" to the valley. To do this he must move southward, by the way of Halltown, to Berryville and vicinity.

Sept. 16, 1864.

Early, who had now only his own force and was near the Potomac, moved south and took up a position at Bunker Hill, Winchester. Meanwhile Gen. Lee had kept pace with the movements going on in his enemy's camps, and had detached Longstreet's corps, still led by Gen. R. H. Anderson, from the lines at Petersburg to help Early hold the valley while the fall crops were being gathered. This re-enforcement had not come up when Sheridan set out for Winchester, and the head of the Union column found Early moving off from Winchester up the valley toward Strasburg, to a strong position at Fisher's Hill, on one fork of the Shenandoah. Sheridan kept on his path until he reached Cedar Creek.

Early soon received his support in the shape of Kershaw's division of infantry, Fitzhugh Lee's division of cavalry and a battalion of three batteries of artillery under Col. Cutshaw. Having thus united his army at headquarters that Lee had sent troops from Petersburg to Early, Gen. Grant instructed Sheridan to be cautious and act upon the defensive.

Sheridan now began to withdraw from his advanced position and wrote to his chief that there was not a military position to be found south of Winchester. On the 16th, as that Gen. Anderson was marching to meet Early on the east of the mountains, aiming to pass through the gap by a ford, Sheridan drew near the Potomac, and Sheridan drew back as far as the old position at Berryville, sending cavalry to hold the mountain pass at Snicker's Gap and keep Anderson to the south of him. He also left a division of cavalry at Winchester, with one of infantry to support it. But Early began to threaten Winchester and Sheridan drew in these outposts to Berryville. The movements was not made too soon, for when Sheridan arrived Early placed his infantry in front of Sheridan at Berryville and sent his troops toward the Potomac above Shepherdstown. Averell's and Wilson's cavalry were sent at the same time, and the Confederates did not cross, and Early soon gathered all his forces and turned his back on Sheridan, continuing his march as far as across the Opequan Creek, when he drew off to the south of Kerr to the Opequan crossed much above its north and in Washington, but Sheridan, thoughtful as ever that it necessary to continue, still moved slowly. It shall I can manage this affair.

Grant now began urged Sheridan to move out and engage the enemy as far as the Winchester and Potomac. "You will be ready to assume the offensive," he wrote. "Carry off stock of all descriptions and secure, as far as practicable, all forage and subsistence in the country. Leave nothing for the enemy to subsist upon. If the enemy is to last another year we must put enough death valley to remain a barren waste."

The month of August was spent in these counter moves, and early in September Sheridan sent out his cavalry divisions in all directions north and west of Winchester. The movement made by Grant in August to get a lodgment at Deep Bottom, on the north side of the James, caused some alarm in the Confederate lines and led to the recall of Anderson and the division of Kershaw from the valley. Meanwhile Sheridan had come to Sheridan's camp at Berryville to consult about a plan of action, and Sheridan held been active in securing news from the enemy's lines.

A FEMALE SPY.

While the lines were so close at Berryville and Winchester some of the scouts and cavalry learned that an old colored man of the country had permission from the Confederate commander to go into Winchester and sell vegetables. Learning that the old man was favorable to the Union cause, Sheridan sent him to him. He was brought to his headquarters. There was known to Gen. Crook, who had often been in Winchester, a young woman, Miss Rebecca Wright, engaged in teaching school in the town. She, too, was friendly to the Union, and the colored man knew her well. A pellet of tin foil was made, so small that it could be swallowed in case of danger of discovery, and the note was rolled a note, on tissue paper, as follows:

MISS REBECCA WRIGHT.

Sept. 13, 1864.

I learn from Maj. Gen. Crook that you are a loyal lady and still love the old flag. Can you inform me of the position of Early's forces, the number of infantry and artillery, the strength of any or all of them, and his probable or reported intention? Have any more troops arrived from Richmond, or are any more coming or reported to be coming?

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

Major General Commanding.

You can trust the bearer.

Miss Wright was much alarmed at the peril of her situation, but firmly resolved to risk her life for the Union cause. It happened that she had learned the evening before from a Confederate officer that Kershaw's division of infantry and Cutshaw's artillery had started back to Richmond. These were the troops withdrawn by Lee to foil Grant's attempt against Petersburg at the James at Deep Bottom. The next day Gen. Sheridan received the following from the messenger:

Sept. 16, 1864.

I have no communication with the rebels, but will tell you what I learn. Kershaw and Gen. Kershaw and Cutshaw's artillery, twelve guns and men, Gen. Anderson commanding, have been ordered back to Petersburg by Richmond. They have not passed from Richmond. I do not know how the troops are situated, but the force is much greater than reported. I will take pleasure hereafter in learning all I can of their strength and position, and the bearer may call again.

Very respectfully,

Gen. Grant reached Sheridan's camp about the time he received this information, and the lieutenant presented to his chief a fully matured plan for immediate attack on Early. The response was the famous saying, "Go in!"

BATTLE OF OPEQUAN.

The Opequan river, a stream running due north between Sheridan and Winchester and Martinsburg, covered Early's lines. Early had divided his infantry, having his four divisions under Breckinridge, Ramseur, Gordon and Rodes, on a line, with Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry on the flank and Lomax, Jackson and Bradley Johnson on the other. Sheridan advanced Torbert's army of horsemen in three columns, led by Generals Merritt, Averell and Wilson, and followed up the attack with the Sixth and Nineteenth corps and Crook's command. McIntosh's cavalry brigade, of Wilson's division, marched a breastwork in front of Stanton's hill and held it against stubborn odds until the Sixth corps arrived. Early's main line, however, was protected by woods and deep ravines, and after advancing nine miles Sheridan found that he had to pass his infantry through one defile, and the time consumed enabled Early to concentrate his infantry at the point of attack.

MAJ. GEN. RUSSELL.

After getting his infantry on the field Sheridan formed the Sixth and Nineteenth corps, Wright and Emory, with Crook in reserve. Wright's division, led by Gens. Ricketts, Getty and Russell, and Emory's by Gens. Cavier, Grover and William Dwight. Crook had two divisions under Gen. Thoburn and Col. I. H. Duval. Getty, Ricketts and Grover advanced their divisions together against Ramseur, and were carrying the line when the two remaining divisions of Rodes and Gordon, marching up from the rear, struck the Union line at the junction of Ricketts' and Grover's divisions and threw them back. Ramseur's division of Wright's Sixth corps had been in reserve behind Ricketts, and Sheridan sent Upton's brigade, under Upton and Russell, to regain the line. Russell was shot through the breast by a bullet, yet he pressed on in the charge until a piece of shell passed into his heart, when he went down on the ground regained in the desperate attack. The gallant leader died in a few hours, afterward was that Early was drawn up around Winchester facing both north and east, and Sheridan with his infantry overlapped his left flank and rear and Early's line was moving down on the Martinsburg road against that facing north. Sheridan now placed Crook, who had been held in reserve, on the right of Emory's Nineteenth corps, and ordered a forward movement, in which the overlapping line—that is, the right brigades of Emory and Crook—swung around to the left and close in on two sides of Early. The attack was made with success, although the Confederates under Gordon and Breckinridge, who were posted on the crest, disputed the ground bravely. Averell, who had swept around to the rear, had kept off the Confederate cavalry, and Merritt's column, coming down the Martinsburg road, unopposed, broke through Breckinridge's line on a mounted charge. This put the whole northern line of the Confederates in confusion, and at the same time Wright pushed for the Sixth corps from the east and carried the positions of Rodes and Ramseur.

Early were some old breastworks close around Winchester, and there Early rallied his men for a last stand about 5 o'clock p. m. But Torbert had pushed his cavalry fairly behind Early on the left, closing all roads but the one south toward Strasburg, and after some hard fighting, at dusk, Early and Gordon, aided by darkness, that ever welcomed friend of the defeated, Sheridan entered Winchester at the head of his victorious

Plainfield Choral Society.

This organization held its first rehearsal at Vincent chapel last evening. It is composed of the best musical talent in our city. Mr. W. W. Howland, president of the Society, in his usual pleasing style made some well chosen remarks, bearing upon the object of reorganizing the chorus, and then introduced Prof. E. J. Pitsbugh, of Brooklyn, the Society's former conductor. The Professor who was received with hearty applause congratulated the Society upon the goodly representation for the first evening, and expressed his confidence of good musical results from the efforts this array of talent would put forth. There were eighty members present. They occupied the evening in rehearsing two choruses of the many fine selections that the Musical Committee have procured. The chorus will rehearse in the hire after every Monday evening at the Vincent chapel, which is admirably adapted for the purpose.

Our people can look forward to fine musical entertainments the coming season by the very able and talented Professor and his chorus.

The rest had been spent for clothing. Jennie Gibson made a full confession.

JUSTICE AS SHE IS.

THE TRIAL OF SULLIVAN FOR ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING.

The Jury Disagree. — Chief Carey Indignant. — He Pronounces such Justice a Farce. — He Says he is Done Fighting the Saloons, and Proposes to Resign.

CHAPTER I.

A SUNDAY FIGHT.—THE COMBATANTS NOT PUNISHED.

On Sunday, Aug. 4th, several women from the Boulevard called at the Police headquarters and appealed to Chief Carey to hurry down there and put an end to a terrible row going on in West Third street.

"There are a lot of men fighting and killing each other" said one of the women, "and for the love of God, come down and save us before any lives are lost."

Several of the women, though unacquainted with each other, arrived at about the same time, and all in a terrified manner told the same story.

The Chief hurried to the scene, but when he arrived every thing was quiet, and everybody he sought information of claimed to have no knowledge of any difficulty, acting as if in league with the offenders, who had received word ahead of the Chief's approach and suddenly agreed upon a truce, to escape arrest.

The Chief succeeded, however, in getting the names of four combatants, and he next day arrested for disorderly conduct John and William Sullivan, Moses Quase and John Collins.

They employed Borough Counsel Read to defend them, and he secured an adjournment.

Last Thursday the case was heard before City Judge Stillman, all the defendants escaped punishment on the plea that they were acting in self-defense against William Ross—four men pummeling one man and call that acting in self-defense ! ! !

CHAPTER II.

SULLIVAN ARRESTED LOVE-MAKING.—SUNDAY LIQUOR SELLING.

Chief Carey has a faculty of never letting up when he is satisfied that a man is guilty, until the law is vindicated, and at least so far as he is able to see that justice is done. He concluded that a conspiracy had been formed against Ross, and he left no stone unturned in his efforts to unravel it. The wife of Ross had interested herself in the matter, and to vindicate her husband forthwith came to the Chief's aid, especially as she desired to break her husband of his habit of frequenting saloons. Then the probable true story of the row came out.

It seems, according to Ross, that on Sunday, Aug. 4th, Joseph Sullivan, saloon-keeper—whom the Chief deems a man of bad reputation—wanted to go away with his girl friend and asked Ross to take care of his saloon during his absence, giving him the key.

Later Sullivan's two brothers, John and William Sullivan, together with Moses Quase and John Collins visited the saloon. They saw that Ross was under the influence of liquor, patronizing their brother's bar, while supposed to be acting as bar-tender. They demanded the key. Ross refused to surrender it, saying that he would restore it to the proprietor only. Then they undertook to take the key away from him, and the resulting row was the so-called "self-defense!" Ye gods, what a farce on justice.

Chief Carey arrested Joseph Sullivan for illegal selling, secured several unwilling witnesses to testify to the fact, and endeavored to bring the case to trial. Sullivan, who is only about twenty three years old, secured Mr. Reed to defend him. Several adjournments were had, under one pretext or another, but really with the object of getting the witnesses out of the State, according to the testimony of one of them.

Ross on the night that he was taken to Mr. Reed's office by Joseph Sullivan and Moses Quase, and induced by threats and bribes to leave the State, to remain away until after the trial. It was agreed to give him $10. He says he took the money, Mr. Reed's office, in Newman's on Third street, and there handed by that lady the $10, that he was then taken by the two men referred to to the Grand avenue station, where tickets were bought for all three of the party to Bound Brook. It was feared that Chief Carey would get hold of Dennis Murray of that place as a witness, so Ross stated, and the visit was to try and get him out of the way. Ross was then taken by the men direct to New York to Sullivan's mother's. The mother was to keep Ross until the Chief and with true motherly solicitude tried to do so.

The case was called, but Chief Carey had to ask to have it adjourned. His witnesses were gone. Then with all his well-known zeal, when thoroughly aroused, he set about to secure the witnesses. Ross turned him, and he forthwith surreptitiously visited his father's home at Elizabeth, doubtless for advice in his distress. He is a young man, about twenty-five years old. His mother is dead. His father is a respectable, hard working boatman. At that time Chief Carey secured the aid of Warden Poole, Mr. Carey's predecessor, and Mr. Dodd watched at Elizabeth, while Chief Carey arranged to take care of other points. When Ross visited his father's he was served with a subpœna, much to his surprise, and officers were taken to prevent his again leaving the State.

Notwithstanding all these precautions he failed to appear the next time the case was called until just after it was adjourned, when he ran up, as if in breathless haste, and not being arrested, fined and imprisoned for contempt. But Chief Carey was not the kind of a man to be imposed upon with pretenses. Ross realized it enough then and appeared when the case was called yesterday morning, and tried in the County Court House before Judge Stillman, and the following jury: Messrs. U. B. Crane, foreman, Joseph C. Allen, Edward Crater, John H. Doane, J. Harvy Doane, William Fine, John French, Ashton Horton, John J. Kenney, Henry Laible, James C. Pope and Julian Boyle.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Read, the defense.

The prosecution considered that they had made a clear case, and the defense after having failed to get rid of the principal witness, had expected de'eat, according to their statements outside of the court, after the trial. The case reached the jury about two o'clock, and they remained out until after ten o'clock last night unable to agree. Then they were discharged. It appears that they had taken sixteen ballots, and stood from the outset with but slight variation on one or two ballots six to six.

It seems that while the jury were deliberating, word was somehow got to them that Sullivan had been again arrested, the second time for passing counterfeit money, and some of the jury seem to have been influenced in the prisoner's favor by this information believing that he was being persecuted. The grand jury have also indicted Sullivan for illegal selling under the Wort's bill, and his case is to be heard Nov. 6th. All these facts appear to have become known to the jury.

While the jury were deliberating Sullivan in charge of special policeman Mattox was anxiously awaiting their verdict. He is subject to epileptic-fits, and finally when the verdict was reached the strain was too much for him. When he reached the sidewalk he fell in a spasm. Dr. Carman, who was near by was summoned, and administered such relief as was possible. Sullivan was carried into Laing's Hotel, where he remained last night, and was taken to his home this morning.

CHAPTER III.

COMMENTS ON THE VERDICT.—A NEW TRIAL PROMISED.

To-day the case was the topic of conversation every where on the streets. Some people rashly condemned the jury, accusing members of having been influenced by money to the last and the evidence, but rather showing a prejudice in favor of the criminal classes, and against the officers in trying to preserve order and respect for the law.

Members of the jury stated to-day that they knew nothing of the previous incidents of the case, and did not deem the evidence before them strong enough to justify conviction.

The most indignant of all was Chief Carey. He considered the was one of the cleanest he had ever had, and that any fair and intelligent jury would convict before leaving their seats. He says that if the law abiding people of the community are not willing to help him sustain the law, he might as well resign. He is not disposed to do anything more against the rumsellers, though everyone of them should sell without right.

He had several other cases again at Sullivan but he is not now in his anger disposed to press them. He considers justice as at present administered a farce. He points out case after case to sustain his position. For instance there is the Dady case, where four men a year ago on Eighth street, knocked down a man walking peaceably with his wife, took his wife away from him into the woods nearby, outraged her, and left her there senseless to die. While the scoundrels through what is considered practically the connivance of those supposed to deal out justice impartially, and with a view to securing the political favor of the saloons and the criminal classes against the next grand jury—but only four—are streets to-day unpunished, but one of them, Dady, for instance is actually peddling beer on our streets without hindrance to do more mischief.

Then there is the Watson case, the particulars of which have been already published in full in our columns.

The Chief also gave other equally outrageous instances, and concluded, that if after all the trouble he is put to, to capture criminals, they are to be sustained, he don't propose to be made a fool of or to be a party to such a farce as justice now is at present administered, corrupted by our Democratic rulers acting in collusion with the saloons.

Corporation Counsel Marsh, however, is not discouraged, and proposes to have a new trial against Sullivan begun at once.

But the only way we think Justice will ever be done impartially will be to hurl the Democrats from power and remove every Democratic appointee, whom there may reason to suspect, is toadying to the saloons and the criminal classes.

The Daily News for years past will show instance after instance where the criminal classes are not punished as they should be to inspire a respect for our laws and protect our homes. At present the saloons rule the roost, and will so long as Democracy rules, although there are many decent Democrats, but not enough to control the baser elements.

Court of Quarter Sessions.

There was a brief session of the court of quarter sessions held at Elizabeth yesterday morning, Judge McCormick presiding.

Prosecutor Wilson moved for an adjournment of indicted persons, and charged them as follows:

James Finlan, assault and battery, pleaded guilty, and gave bail to appear for sentence on Nov. 11.

David Lane, pleaded not guilty to the larceny of some poultry, and gave bail for trial on Nov. 11.

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

The suit of Harris Feinberg against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad for $5,000 for the loss of a consignment of cows, which were frozen to death during the blizzard of March, 1888, while in transit from Buffalo to Jersey City, was decided in the Circuit Court, at Jersey City yesterday, the jury giving the plaintiff a verdict for the full amount.

Patrick Ryan, of No. 24 Canal street, Jersey City, who was atrociously assaulted by two unknown men several weeks ago, died yesterday at his home. The cause of the assault says death resulted from pneumonia. The son is in jail.

James Bonnell, a Jersey City gas fitter years ago, when others were recently discharged from further service because of a reduction which Judge Lippincott said was not in accord with the evidence, has engaged counsel, and proposes to test the Judge's right to discharge him for such cause.

Edward L. Conklin, the newly appointed postmaster of Newark, received his commission from Washington on Saturday. Yesterday he was formally introduced to his subordinates. He paid a compliment to his predecessor, and said he not contemplate making any immediate changes.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

HAMBURG'S RIPPER'S SECOND VICTIM.

A Ten-Year-Old Girl Outraged and Murdered.

LONDON, Oct. 22d.—The body of another murdered girl has been found at Hamburg.

The victim in this instance was only ten years of age.

She had been outraged, and the body was horribly mutilated.

No trace of the murderer has been discovered.

It is suspected he is the same man who killed and mutilated the Mosener girl.

While it may not be that the fiend of Whitechapel, called "Jack the Ripper," has done the work, one certainly as terrible has begun operations at Hamburg.

THE DECISION CAME TOO LATE.

An Immigrant Sent Home Who Should Have Been Allowed to Land.

The Commissioner of Emigration yesterday received from Collector Erhardt a communication received by him from Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Batcheller in relation to the case of Mrs. Nellie Wilkie and her two children, who arrived at Castle Garden a month ago, and were permitted to land only on the ground that they were likely to become public charges.

On her arrival Mrs. Wilkey stated that three years ago she, her husband, Thomas, and one child came to Brownsville, Texas, and settled in Plainfield, N. J. While there another child was born. After its birth they determined to go back to Scotland. Her husband deserted her soon after their arrival, and on hearing that he had returned to this country she came on to find him.

The Commissioners reported the case to the Collector, and Deputy Collector McClelland, three weeks ago, wrote to Washington asking the Treasurer what to do. Not hearing from Washington, and the woman's means of the family to be returned, and a week ago last Saturday they were sent back.

The communication from the Assistant Secretary which was received yesterday says that the woman should be allowed to land for the reason that one of the children was born in the United States, and adds that a point may be strained in order not to separate mother and child.

As Mrs. Wilkey is near the other side now the Commissioners could do nothing but fill the communication. If she returns they say she will be allowed to land.

A Timely Hint.

"The Freeholders of Union county," says the New Brunswick Home News, "have given out contracts to the amount of $130,000 for the improvement of the public roads. It is proposed to time that the freeholders of Middlesex were taking some action in the same direction. They are at present upon the roads, and though they are in favorable of the opportunities, or possibilities of the case, the citizens freeholders of other counties wish to take advantage of the best road laws ever enacted in this State and have them properly executed. The next legislature is Republican, as is altogether likely, the law will remain, but if the Democrats keep in control it will be in the language of the Herald (Dem.) of this city, "be repealed or forgotten so as to make it inoperative." It is found to be universally that the very prospect of good roads made a material difference in the selling price of acres of acres actually appreciated values of farms adjacent to the roads; and there is no doubt whatever that the completion of these roads will enhance values from ten to twenty five per cent. That's the way the road law is working in Union, and before the next square yard of telford is laid the entire cost of the roads will be more than offset by the increased values of real estate alone.—Elizabeth Journal.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS

THIS IS DELIVERED BY CARRIERS TO ALL PARTS OF THE CITY AT TEN CENTS A WEEK, OR, IF PAID IN ADVANCE, AT $5.00 PER YEAR.

The long bearded old sinners who occupy the high seats in the Mormon church have held the sixtieth annual conference of the Latter Day Saints, and solemnly affirmed that polygamy is a "saving ordinance." The old fellows will certainly save Utah from being a state so long as they talk that way.

In some of the states a clean campaign, with no mud slinging, was promised to us. If the political contests, as far as they have got in those states, are to be called clean, one wonders what a real, old fashioned mud slinging campaign would be like.

Mr. Edward O. Leech, the new director of the mint, was once a noted baseball player. Numerous gentlemen, who have lately attained distinction, were once first class baseball players, several of them being clergymen. The health and energy they got from following the national game helped them to success on the field of life afterwards.

Still, 1889, the year of flood, disaster, of storm and cyclone, maintains its record. One day there come particulars of the floods and volcanic eruptions in Japan, in which many thousand lives were lost, the next day come news of the wrecking of thirty-five vessels in a cyclone in Mexican waters, while the third day ushers in a terrific gale throughout western Europe, attended with loss of life and immense destruction.

"Last Scene of All."

A strange, terrible event that was which happened in the Lyceum theatre in New York, when death suddenly laid his hand on the comedian of the play, Charles B. Bishop. He was a merry soul, genial, jolly and kindly, a favorite with the other actors. He went on the stage gayly and jauntily, made the audience roar ring with laughter and passed behind the scenes. There had been no intimation, not a word of warning, that he was ill. Suddenly he entered the stage manager's room. He felt a pain in his left side, he said. Help was summoned instantly, but when it came only a dead man lay there, clad still in the grotesque garments that had provoked many a round of mirth, with dead eyes staring above the painted cheeks and eyebrows. The comedy actor's soul had passed behind the scenes. Behind the stage the curtain had been rung down. A dread, mysterious hand had stopped the play, the hand that signals the end of all dramas, on the mimic stage and the real one.

The Yankee Wizard.

If ability is to be measured by what a man adds to human use and satisfaction, then it is hard to find a greater living man than Thomas A. Edison. He has been the lion of Europe this summer. He was royally entertained, European fashion. "It was nothing but dinner, dinner, dinner," said Mr. Edison on his return. It rather embarrassed the inventor, who is a very modest man.

He comes home anxious to resume work in that wonderful laboratory where he has already come. "I generally have thirty or forty inventions under way all the time, but many of them don't pan out, you know." On the whole, it is rather a satisfaction to know that even Edison fails in some things he tries to do.

One of the first things he will attempt is the transmission of sight over long distances. He believes that if sound vibrations can be transmitted over wires there is no reason why light vibrations cannot be sent on the same principle. If his invention is successful, we shall presently not only talk to our friends over wires, but actually see their faces. Edison says, also, that he has not yet given up the idea of obtaining electricity direct from coal. "I'm still working at it, and I shall get it one day."

It thus is plain that the wizard does not have his inventions come to him all in a flash, like an inspiration, but that he toils at them long and patiently, sometimes for years. Meantime, if he were to die to-morrow, he would still probably be the greatest inventor of the Nineteenth century. His finest achievement is perhaps the phonograph. Then there are duplex telegraphy, the divided electric light for illuminating the interior of buildings, and the stock indicator. His minor inventions are numbered by the score.

Edison says he had a "pretty tough time" with the Hungarians. They were too, however, that he thoroughly enjoyed, the one given in his honor in Paris by Buffalo Bill. In the menu were mince pie, peanuts, baked beans and watermelon. During his visit abroad, Mr. Edison received the decoration of a Chevalier of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, an extraordinary distinction for France to bestow on a foreigner. This dyed-in-the-wool son of America speaks of it in the following characteristic fashion:

"I got the grand cross a good while ago. Then at the last exposition I was made an officer. This time they raised the ante again, and I scooped the jack pot."

HORRORS OF SHIPWRECK

Thrilling Adventures of the Earnmoor's Survivors.

ADRIFT IN A BOAT FOR DAYS.

Sixteen of the Crew Were Drowned—Suffering from Hunger and Thirst—An Insane Sailor's Suicide—Left to Their Fate by a British Bark.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The seven survivors of the ill fated steamer Earnmoor, which foundered at sea Sept. 5 in a cyclone 300 miles off Turk's Island, while bound from Baltimore to Rio Janeiro, have just arrived here from New York, whither they were brought by the steamer Santiago from Nassau. They tell a story of great suffering. The Earnmoor struck a terrific gale on Sept. 4, which increased in force, and at 11:30 a. m. on the following day the vessel gave a lurch and foundered. As the steamer sank the port life boat floated off from the ship between the funnel and the mainmast, and the men clung to the boat and scrambled in—the second officer, second and third engineers, four sailors, three firemen and the cook.

Cries of the Drowning Men.

An effort was made to save the rest of the crew and a drag was made of the painter, but the boat was blown away and the cord was wrested from the hands of the men so that no more could be saved. The cries of the drowning men as they were hushed about by the monstrous waves were heard by the men in the boat, but they could not be reached and had to be abandoned to their fate, as it was impossible to put the boat back for them. By an oversight the boat had not been provisioned in anticipation of the calamity. Had this been done it would have saved the terrible suffering of the survivors. Fortunately the boat drifted into the Gulf stream and the air was warm, but this increased the intensity of their thirst.

The Horrors of Hunger.

"The horrors of hunger on the second day became awful," said Carl Crane, one of the survivors, "and it increased as time wore on. We managed to pick up some weed afloat in the Gulf stream which gave us a little nutriment, and on the third day a flying fish was caught. This was immediately cut up into a portion for each survivor, and devoured. We also captured a sea bat and sucked its blood, and then ate its flesh after it had been dried in the sun. The first mate to die was a seaman named William Robinson, of Baltimore, and the second was the third engineer, Thomas Hunt, of Philadelphia.

An Insane Sailor's Suicide.

"One night while we were all asleep except a Genoman fireman named Piaggi, who was on watch, he suddenly became insane and jumped overboard. We were too weak to save him. We were within a compass, and steered by the sun by day and the stars by night. Eleven vessels passed us—one, a British bark, we are certain saw us and deliberately left us to our fate.

Saved at Last.

"When 300 miles off Hatteras we were picked up by a schooner. I cannot describe in words our joy at the sight of this deliverance. We were so weak that we had to be lifted upon the vessel's deck, and one of our men, Edward Johnson, a Norwegian, fell prostrate and died on the deck.

The Earnmoor was largely owned in this city.

The Drowned and Saved.

The following is a list of those who were lost: Richard J. Grey, master, Philadelphia; A. Painter, first mate, Philadelphia; H. Soulas, first engineer, Philadelphia; W. Dunnington, second engineer, Stephen Perry, steward, Philadelphia; James Durand, mess boy; Robert Johnson, Carl J. Jurkinen, Edward Johnson, William Robinson, James Christofield, Amedeo Langerone, Heinrich Moss, A. Flagg, James Sinclair and Herman Fonges, all of Baltimore.

Those who were saved are: H. Stone, second mate, and Thomas Meterum, second engineer, of Philadelphia; William Wright, cook; William Davis, Ludwig Leder, Carl Grave and A. Foster, all of Baltimore.

Don Piatt's Law Suits.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 22.—A suit was filed in the supreme court in which Don Piatt, the noted newspaper writer, is the plaintiff, against David S. Honshell, an attorney who was some years ago employed by Piatt. The case comes up to the supreme court on a petition in error to the circuit court of Logan county. In the lower courts Honshell sued Piatt for $600, claimed to be due for services as an attorney. Several cases were referred to in the original petition in which Honshell was Piatt's attorney, and various amounts were claimed due for each case. One of the four sued for was for defending Piatt in the sensational action brought against him by his daughter, Nellie Piatt, who charged him with criminal intimacy. This case created much excitement, both because of the horrible nature of the charges and the prominence of the parties implicated. Piatt was at that time editor of The Washington Capital. The lower courts decided the suit for attorney's fees in favor of Honshell, giving him a judgment for $250. Piatt now brings the case to the supreme court, hoping to secure a reversal of the judgment.

A Suicide's Hidden Wealth.

WHONA, Minn., Oct. 22.—An unexpected sequel to a tragedy has just occurred here. May last, Lena Weinberg, for twenty-five years housekeeper of the old Huff house, committed suicide. Recently four trunks belonging to her were opened by the administrator to look up the heirs. The contents were of no value, but false bottoms were found in all of the trunks containing $11,116 in gold bank notes, English sovereigns and other foreign money. A great deal of the money is old and worth considerable premium over the face value. No heirs to this find are known.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—A writ of habeas corpus was granted in the supreme court directing the superintendent of the Butler house asylum, Staten Island, N. Y., to produce the body of Second Lieut. Amos Stone, U. S. A., in court on Oct. 23. It is alleged by counsel for the petitioner that Lieut. Stone is sane and of sound mind; that his removal from this city and confinement in another state was illegal and the result of a conspiracy; that its purpose was to enable Mrs. Stone to get control of the estate of Mrs. Wakefield, R. I., to obtain control of the lieutenant's property, valued at over $300,000, and that Rhoda Cross is now acting the property. The writ is not binding on a person outside this state and the superintendent may ignore it. In that case further proceedings will be taken. RELIGION AND THE NEGRO

Discussion of the Colored Men's Memorial Postponed

AT THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

Other Proceedings of That Body—The Bishops' Committee on Adjournment. Work of the Reformed Synod—New Jersey Presbyterians Meet at Asbury Park.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—In the lower house of the Protestant Episcopal convention the question was discussed: "What shall be done with the negro, who claims fuller recognition in the church?" The subject came up on the motion of Rev. J. J. Fenzie, of Indiana, who asked that the order of business be suspended in order that the memorial from the colored members of the church might be considered. Paulus Movot, the colored deputy from Liberia, used such combative language in support of the convention proceeding with the question that Dr. Hauckel, dreading a protracted debate, withdrew his resolution, but Mr. Fenzie pressed his motion emphatically. W. H. Kain, another colored deputy from Texas, spoke warmly for a fair and square expression from the lower house, which, he said, was anxiously awaited by seven millions of souls. Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, urged that the memorial be considered at once. It was carried. The motion failed by the close vote of 100 to 121.

No Change in the Church Name.

"The first gun of the battle which is, if the talk of Rev. Dr. Dix is to be taken as an assurance, to be fought out, viz: a change in the name of the church, was also fired. It came in the shape of a report from the standing committee on constitutional amendments. The report stated that the committee had received from a number of dioceses protests against the change. As no such proposal has been formally made at this convention thus far, your committee offer no resolution on the matter." The committee returned the subject to the convention and asked to be discharged from further consideration of it. The report of the constitutional amendments committee went upon the calender, and when it comes up it is expected a fierce skirmish preliminary to the battle to be fought out in the next general convention will probably take place.

"Minister" and "Priest."

When the subject of commendatory prayers for dying persons was introduced on a question of concurrence with the bishops there was a fierce breeze. The resolution was broken into clauses, and each clause was acted upon. One or two were adopted, such as the shortening of the commission of the sick in case of contagious disease, or where the person is very weak. In several clauses of the "communion of the sick the word "minister" occurs, and the bishops wanted to have the word "priest." This brought Dr. Huntington to his feet, and he moved in a brief but sharp speech to nonconcur. He declared that the word "minister" in connection with the sick was in general sense, and covered bishops as well as priests and deacons. The resolution went back to the bishops with a decided vote of nonconcurrence.

Change in the Marriage Service.

The deputies also non-concurred in a proposed addition to the exhortation in the marriage service by the bishops of Illinois to the effect that marriage "is an honorable estate instituted of God in the time of man's innocence, signifying the mystical union that is betwixt Christ and his church, which holy estate Christ adorned and beautified with his presence and first miracle that he wrought in Cana of Galilee." The house of deputies will not meet again until next Thursday next, as they voted to do. The bishops voted against them, and a joint committee will then up the matter and settle upon a date. In the house of bishops the new bishop of Michigan, Right Rev. Dr. Davies appeared and took his seat.

Committee on Adjournment.

The bishops decided as their members of the conference committee on adjournment the bishops of Quincy and New Jersey. Dr. Dix named the following deputies: Rev. Dr. Beatty, of Kansas; Rev. Dr. Roberts, of New Hampshire; Rev. Dr. Rossi, of East Carolina, and Mr. Speed, of Mississippi.

Arizona's Governor Says the Mormons Are Dangerous.

THE CHURCH ALONE IS THEIR LAW

Committee Appointed at the International Marine Conference—Late Presidential Appointments—Idaho Anxious to Try Statehood.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Governor Wolfley, of Arizona, has submitted his annual report to the secretary of the interior. Speaking of the Mormons, the governor says: "Morally and politically they are an unwelcome and dangerous element. Arizona had a law distranchising all who practised, taught or encouraged polygamy. The first legislative act signed by my late predecessor was the repeal of that act. I request and urge that congress repeal the repealing act and re-establish the above territorial law.

The Church is Their Law.

"Politically the Mormons seem to have adopted the plan of sending colonies or families to all surrounding territories in sufficient numbers to form a balance of power between the two political parties. They are willing to trade with either, but remain true only so long as the interests of the church are best served. The church is their law, and all others must be subservient to the orders of the church. They are, therefore, a most dangerous and unscrupulous factor in politics, without regard to party."

The Marine Conference.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—In the International Marine conference, Admiral Franklin, the president, announced the following committees:

Delegate Goodrich, of the United States, proposed the following: "Resolved, That it is the opinion of the conference no change shall be made in the use of the present masthead and colored lights." Upon reconvening, on Article 12, "Fog and Fog Signals," action was taken up. Several amendments providing for the duration of fog signals were offered and discussed.

Idaho Anxious for Statehood.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—George L. Shoup, governor of Idaho, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, gives the impression that the work of the constitution will be submitted to the people for their adoption on the 5th of November. The steady growth in population and taxable property, and the large increase in productions, the yield of valuable metals nearly doubling in the past year past, all show, the governor thinks, that Idaho is in the line of progress.

ELLENSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 22.—Thomas Dye, a prosperous farmer, some time ago leased a piece of ground to the Schofield brothers on which to erect a lumber shed. The lessees refused to remove the shed when Dye's son got into an altercation with Frank Schofield, striking him on the head with a piece of iron, inflicting a severe wound. The elder Dye went home, procured a musket, and invited a friend to see him load it heavily. He then told him he was going to kill one of the Schofields, and asked him to witness the act. He went to the shed and shot Edward Schofield with twenty-seven slugs, killing him instantly. Dye was arrested and is in jail in Harrisville.

Sam Crane Not Guilty.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 22.—Sam Crane, the well known baseball player, who was arrested in New York recently on a charge of larceny, and Hattie Fraunfelter, charged with adultery with Crane, were arraigned in court in this city. Fraunfelter, the woman, pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods. She admitted that she had received articles stolen by Crane, and as he is hiding in New York he could not answer when called. By direction of the court the prisoners were then discharged, and the jury and the costs put upon Fraunfelter.

Governor Forster's Condition.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 22.—Governor Forster's condition is still a matter of serious apprehension to his friends, although he is reported as convalescing. It is reasonably certain that he will not be able to fill any of his appointments for this week, and by some it is considered doubtful if he will be able to speak again during the campaign. He is suffering from a severe attack of nervous prostration, caused by overwork and a resulting cold, but there is not much improvement in his condition.

English Gold Invested in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 22.—Mendoza Cantim has sold the immense hacienda of Escapazola, in the state of Puebla, together with a silver mine, to a syndicate of English capitalists for $2,000,000. The sugar plantation is one of the largest in the republic, while the mine has produced between $3,000,000 and $3,000,000.

THE TABERNACLE FIRE.

SECOND DESTRUCTION OF REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE'S CHURCH.

Some Interesting Information Regarding the Burned Edifice—Points About the Decor and the Family of Which He is a Member.

Dr. Talmage, the world renowned Brooklyn divine, whose Tabernacle has just been destroyed by fire, has formulated a novel plan for the collection of a rebuilding fund. He will acknowledge every contribution, no matter how small, with an autographic receipt.

A representative of this paper saw Dr. Talmage within an hour after the destruction of his church. He was bright and cheerful and ready for the future.

"What will you do in the matter of the publication of the sermon that was prepared for your congregation this morning?" was asked.

"Well," he replied, after a little thought, "I shall give it to the papers. Although I reach thousands from my Tabernacle pulpit, I reach millions through the newspapers."

And so the sermon was given to its readers throughout the length and breadth of the land.

"History has almost repeated itself," said the reverend doctor sadly to a New York reporter, a little later, "for it was just seventeen years ago, and upon a Sabbath morning, that we had a similar visitation of fire. Myself and family, who had been alarmed, stood in the glass cupola surmounting the house.

THE TABERNACLE.

and saw our beloved Sabbath home moulder away. We could distinguish every arch, beam and rafter, and see them crumble before the terrible flames. Shortly after, I visited the scene myself, and it made my heart sad. The subject of my sermon was to have been, 'Looking Unto Jesus, the Author of Our Faith.'"

The old Brooklyn Tabernacle was dedicated Sept. 24, 1870, and destroyed by fire Dec. 22, 1872. The cause was a defective flue. It was a much smaller structure than the edifice just burned, circular in form, with five main entrances, a small tower and a parapet. Several of the members who worked on the burning building Sunday were also on duty at the previous fire. Curiously enough, Policeman John Baird, a veteran Brooklyn officer, who was on duty at the first fire, Oct. 13, acted in the same capacity when the old church was burned.

The Tabernacle just burned stood not far from Plymouth church. The building was constructed after the plan of a half amphitheatre, the speaker's platform being in the center, with the pews rising in semicircle around it. The pews on the floor would seat 2,600 persons, the gallery had a seating capacity of 1,800, and 500 more could be accommodated on the stage platform. The building was built in 1873, at a cost of $147,000, and contained a $34,000 organ.

Dr. Talmage is the son of David T. Talmage, a well known farmer of Bound Brook, N. J. Of the Talmage family there were seven boys and four girls. Only four are now alive—the Rev. Goyne Talmage, Mrs. Kate Cone, the Rev. John Talmage, and the present pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle. The Rev. John has spent most of his professional life as a missionary of the Reformed church in Amoy, China. The Rev. Goyne Talmage has a prosperous charge in Port Jervis. Mrs. Cone is a widow, living in Bound Brook in a homestead erected and built by her husband. She has a family of children which she is rearing and educating by her own exertions.

DR. T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

The Rev. T. De Witt, the baby of the flock, is now 38 years of age. He had yet another brother who was a clergyman, James, who died some years ago in Kingston. The best known one among the Talmage boys except the Tabernacle preacher was Col. Dan Talmage, founder of the great rice house in New York, at one time styled Dan Talmage's Sons, and now Talmage Brothers in Savannah, Charleston and New Orleans.

Dan Talmage was a famous politician in central New Jersey, an ardent Democrat, who worked for his party as if it was his bread and butter, and yet who would never accept an office of any sort until he was pressed by a governor he had done more than any one else to elect, when he became colonel on the executive staff, bought a number of gorgeous uniforms and spent hundreds of dollars in entertaining his friends every time he appeared in one of his gorgeous suits. He was warmly liked, and those who knew him mourn his loss today. He gave a great deal, in a quiet way, for charity, and it is said that his son, the present head of the firm, inherited this trait, and gives one-tenth of his income to the needy.

De Witt Talmage was a quiet and rather dull boy, who never gave a hint of what was in store from him until he was a well grown youth, far advanced in his studies in Columbia college. He took his turn with his brothers in minding the famous old tall gate, of which nothing now remains except a bit of wall at right angles with the road.

TREE SUPERSTITIONS.

The ash has always been associated with superstition, more of a divinatory character than anything else.

Among the ancients it was generally believed that lightning would not touch the bay tree.

In classic times the laurel, one of our most beautiful evergreens, was famous for its many virtues.

One of the most sacred trees in the east is the peepul, which is venerated alike by the Buddhist and the Hindoo.

The withering of the bay tree was considered an omen of the most dangerous character, and a sure presage of death.

To a belief that the whitethorn formed Christ's crown of thorns is due a French superstition that this tree utters groans and cries on Good Friday.

The old superstition, which refuses to give up the ghost, is that if the oak gets into leaf before the ash, we may expect a fine and productive year.

There is evidence that some virtue or significance was once associated with the box tree, by the discovery of twigs of this tree in some of the old British barrows in Essex.

The pine tree is one of the most useful and luxuriant of our forest trees, and in ancient days it received an amount of veneration amongst the Greeks and Romans, similar to the oak tree amongst the Druids.

It is believed that a twig of the hazel placed over the door of a dwelling house is an infallible charm against lightning; and various other supernatural powers, are attributed to this mystic tree.

From Mexico there comes a peculiar tree known as the "tree of little hands." It is thus called owing to the fact that its five particularly curved antlers bear some slight resemblance to the fingers of a child.

The holly tree has become an object of worship, like the mistletoe, and at one time new born children were sprinkled with water imbued with holly to ward off evil spirits.

The Brahmins believe that to dream of a mango tree is indicative of the coming of a friend; while to be in the shade of a mango will come with good news; if in fruit, with some rich presents.

The juice of the hemlock, which is deadly in its effect, was instituted by the Greeks; and, in cases of capital offenses, the criminal was given a dose if his crime had not been particularly heinous.

Arabia has a curious tree, the seeds of which, it is said, if pulverized and taken in small doses, will excite even the most sedate persons to perform all the contortions, facial and bodily, of a circus clown, for about the space of one hour.

It is stated that Charles Waltner received the sum of $34,000 for his etching of Rembrandt's "Night Watch," which is perhaps the largest price that has ever been paid for a single plate.

Third avenue in New York is to be fitted with cable cars to run every minute all day and every half minute during the morning and evening rush. They will give the elevated roads a severe blow.

Birmingham, Eng., employs 1,000 umbrella makers. One of them claimsto have invented a transparent umbrella that will allow the bearer to see whether he is about to run into as well as what is about to run into him or her.

A remarkable feat has just been completed by Julius G. Bringer, a cooper, of Allegan, Mich., making 10,000 barrels in forty weeks, working eight hours per day, which beats all records of barrel making in the United States.

Members of the Iowa tribe of Indians are very well off. They have been reduced in number to eighty-three persons and have 200,000 acres of rich farming land, which they are to sell to the government—an average of over 2,400 acres each.

Three members of the sophomore class of Yale college were about to be expelled for passing freshmen, when the class came to their assistance in a body and promised that if the sentence was not executed they would refrain from hazing for the present. On these conditions the sentence was changed to punishment until the next offense. The strain on the students in the meantime, however, is something intense.

ATCHISON PHILOSOPHY.

No one but a good man has a right to be humble.

The hardest thing in the world for a man to hold: his own.

People are bravest when they do not have time to be cowardly.

Was there ever a man who did not wonder why he was not better appreciated?

To be a great man brings your mother into prominence, and casts your father in the shade.

You sometimes doubt that wealth causes refinement when you have seen the children of the wealthy.

A sign that the honeymoon is waning: when a man begins to get down to his work earlier in the morning.

A sensible woman never frets if her new dress does not set anything at the table; she knows that he has probably been riding around town with the driver of a grocery wagon.—Atchison Globe.

A woman living near the line of Jefferson and Wells county, Ohio, is 7 feet 2 inches high, 25 years old, weighs 180 pounds, and can whip any man in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Schliemann, the wife of Dr. Schliemann, is a Greek woman. She is much younger than her husband, and is very fond of Greek as he is. She was a girl studying at the great female school at Athens known as the Arsakion, when Dr. Schliemann met her. She was the first student in her class, and knew the "Iliad" by heart.

A OAKEY HALL'S CAREER.

It Has Been an Exceptional One—His Suit Against James Bryce.

The Honorable A. Oakey Hall, who is the plaintiff in a libel suit against Mr. James Bryce, author of the "American Commonwealth," has been lawyer, local politician, mayor, actor, editor, and, as lawyer again, the time in London; and now he asks a British jury to vindicate him with a verdict for £10,-000 damages because Mr. Bryce had "stigmatized him as a associate of the Tweed ring."

Oakey Hall is of good old Knickerbocker stock, and was born in New York in 1832, but has not favored the public with the particulars of his early life. He first figured as an unusually active young lawyer, with a peculiar talent for getting at the secrets of the other side and reserving his own. Such a talent is too useful in New York city politics to remain unknown, and he soon became an active political worker. His ability was much to be desired. As such he was elected district attorney. His career in this office ended with Oakey Hall. He made a record for good works that stood him in good stead through all his subsequent troubles, and is still pointed to with pride by the faithful as the man who, when duty called, knew how to enforce the law.

A. OAKEY HALL.

Success admits that his action as district attorney was of great benefit to the city and his record without a flaw. He was next elected mayor of New York, and in that capacity he has ever since been studied.

It is, perhaps, too soon to give an impartial judgment on the affairs of 1869–71, or of medical skill for the men who were following the war. It was, all men admit, the era of waste and corruption. Many an honored name was blackened forever; the reputation of many a brave soldier and many a man high in the national councils was sunk in irredeemable blackness. The cities grew faster than lawmakers could pass reform charters to restrain them. The city chamberlain or treasurer, Connolly city comptroller and Tweed at the head of the street department, besides being supreme in the matter of public works, and the head still in the political organization which stifled all the city government. In due time the "ring" got exposed, Tweed went to jail, and in 1880 Hall, counsel of the state legislature the celebrated "new charter," which practically gave them control of the city. Their doings gave occasion for the so called "explosion of 1871," but need not be recounted here.

Suffice it to state that a clerk revealed the fact that "general fund" and "city liabilities" were forged which covered enormous stealings, estimated at from $9,000,000 to $15,000,000. A citizen's committee of seventy, with Samuel J. Tilden at their head, investigated, prosecuted and convicted. Tweed died in jail. Hall was tried and acquitted. He next tried his hand as a lecturer and actor; then for a few years as editorial writer on The World and afterward on Truth. He disappeared so completely from New York life that most people are surprised to learn that he is a successful lawyer in London, where he has taken the oath of allegiance to the British government. His new brings suit against Mr. Bryce for libel, and puts his damages at £10,000, because the latter has, in chapter 88 of "The American Commonwealth," described Hall as "a discouraging example of New York American.

R. W. Bok.

The career of Edward W. Bok, of Brooklyn, has been quite remarkable in some respects. He is a Hollander by birth, and is now 25 years of age. He was only 16 when he conceived a collection of autographs of famous persons. In three years the collection numbered 10,000 names, and received favorable notice from the press. He stated The Brooklyn Magazine when 19 years of age, and sold it to Mr. Bush, who made it Speak. He is a Hollander by birth, and is now 25 years of age. EDWARD W. BOK.

With the aid of Mr. Beecher he conducted "The Bok Syndicate Press," a powerful literary influence of New York.

During all these ventures young Bok was occupying a position with the Scribners. He has lately resigned, which is a step, as an important one, accepting the editorship of The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, at a salary, it is said, of $10,000 a year. This periodical has a circulation equal to any magazine in the world.

Joseph Pulitzer, Jr.

The laying of the corner stone of the new Pulitzer building for the accommodation of the offices of The New York World and the press is a notable event in the history of American journalism. The World newspaper paper be regarded. The structure is to be 309 feet 10 inches high, and, it is claimed, will be the finest and best appointed newspaper building in the world. The address was delivered by Chauncey M. Depew and Governor Hill, of New York, were present at the ceremonial of the corner stone laying of a private building, but not more is than the fact that the actual laying of the stone was performed by Joseph Pulitzer, Jr., son of the proprietor, aged but 4 years. A cut of the young gentleman is here given.

A Serious Runaway Accident.

Amos Gaddis, of Bound Brook, and Miss Carrie Benwood, of Schrieg's Mills, were driving to New Market in a horse and buggy last evening, when the animal suddenly shied at something and ran the vehicle into a telegraph pole. This further frightened the horse and he ran away throwing the occupants out of the buggy. Miss Benwood escaped injury, but Mr. Gaddis was painfully injured about the head. His nose is terribly swollen.

Only a Scare.

A colored man notified Chief of Police Carey last evening about seven o'clock that a mob was prowling about a house on Sixth and Spruce streets. The chief immediately responded to the place and after a thorough investigation failed to discover anything unusual.

THE SULLIVAN AND OTHER LIQUOR CASES.

The Effect of Not Making Offenders Pay.—The Misapprehension About Fees.

In view of the obstacles placed in the way of the police by some of those who ought to be foremost in the work in vindicating the law others of them besides the Chief were in a resigning humor yesterday.

Policeman Lynch, than whom there is no better officer in New Jersey, told a News reporter during the afternoon that he, too, had resolved to resign, as would probably others on the force, in case Chief Carey had resigned. The police appear to be all attached to their Chief, as he is to them, and they cheerfully perform extra duty without pay to help him out whenever he desires them so to do.

The Chief said that evening that there is no more loyal body of men in the State than those who aid him. They perform on an average about one-eighth more service each year than they are credited with, and do it without pay.

The following is the manner in which our cotemporary referred to the Sullivan case yesterday:

WHO'LL PAY THE JURY.

After being out some hours, yesterday afternoon, the jury in the Sullivan case failed to agree, being equally divided as to the guilt of the defendant, charged with selling liquor on Sunday. Shortly after the result was announced, Sullivan was taken very ill, and Dr. Dr. Carman was called to see him. The release from the strain the defendant was under during the deliberations of the jury, is believed to be responsible for his illness.

Mr. Charles Reed was Sullivan's counsel, and having saved his client from conviction, is looking to him to pay the jury fees, as is other costs. Officer Lynch was the one who "summoned the panel," and the jurymen are looking to him for their pay. But he declines also.—Press.

Sullivan has not yet been saved from final conviction. The question of his conviction or acquittal has merely been deferred for the decision of the next jury. When one jury disagrees the law provides for another jury, and if that disagrees, yet another, and so on until a jury is found that can agree, either to convict or acquit. As to the jury fees, it was only the courtesy of the city that enabled Sullivan to have a jury without paying the fees for its services. If this indulgence is abused, Mr. Sullivan may have to pay for the next jury before he gets it. The City Judge will try this case without a jury unless the jury fees are tendered in advance.

The object of this reference by The Press in this way is to advise the saloon gang to violate the law, and correspondingly discourage the police. The jury are allowed twenty-five cents per man. The Sullivan case occupied about ten hours, so that they were entitled to just two dollars and fifty cents per hour for disagreeing. The pay is, of course, only to make the contract binding. No policeman is "looking to the policeman", as alleged. They are reputable citizens. If even one of them was so small as our cotemporary tries to make it appear, we would get up a popular subscription to pay him the twenty-five cents, and then go to drum him out of town as one unworthy to be called an American citizen and especially a resident of Plainfield.

But there is a financial aspect to this case which may help to the gratification of the Chief. Rich liquor can costs him considerable money out of his own pocket, for which he has not reimbursement. He secures a conviction. Now it is not very pleasant to realize that the saloons form the fountain of the criminal classes, and also to have to foot the bills, and be dotted, as the Chief frequently is, by most every citizen he hour he is. If Sullivan comes a few days ago, it being confidently asserted that Wallace will get scot free on appeal, the Chief, Lynch, Gilbert, all convicted after trial in our City Court and fined $400, just as runmiller after him, the Chief's pocket-book would be thoroughly shaken, and the general cry has gone forth that it is impossible to convict a saloon-keeper. We appeal to justice to clear the case, because of the saloon influence.

Suing for $50,000 Damages.

Miss Abbie Van Doren, of Bound Brook, has brought suit in the Supreme Court vs. the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company of $50,000 damages. It appears that on Sunday, June 9th, Miss Van Doren, accompanied by her sister, crossed the track of the P. & R. Railroad at Bound Brook. An engine was standing near the crossing and as it commenced to move, it emitted a loud, frightened a horse being driven by a Mr. Washburn, which ran against the young lady, knocking her down and injuring her so that she was three weeks confined to her bed. DR. ATWATER ELECTED.

A Worthy Successor to Dr. Cook As Experimental Station Director.

The Board of Managers of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, which is connected with Rutgers College, held a meeting yesterday afternoon and elected a successor to Dr. Cook as Director of the Experimental station.

The man chosen is Dr. W. O. Atwater, who was one of the first scientists in the country to take an interest in agricultural experimental work, and who is now the director of one of the Connecticut stations, and the head of the chemical department of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and as the author of a series of popular articles on "The New Chemistry" in The Century Magazine last year.

Vindicating a Young Man.

John Collins, who was implicated in the scandalous Boulevard row, referred to yesterday, is a machinist, twenty-three years old, and feels very keenly the disgrace of his position, which he says he was got into innocently. He explained the matter thus: "I was taking an afternoon walk, and met Mr. Quast. We met two young ladies and were standing talking to them when the fight occurred two houses away. We were attracted by the rumpus and approached nearer as lookers-on, taking no part and having no hand in the row whatever. When I saw the first blow struck I turned and walked away."

Mr. Collins was accused of being one of the Sunday rowdies. We gladly give him the benefit of his statement. The appearance is certainly in his favor, and we wish to add that we hope all young men will look upon THE NEWS as their friend when striving to do right.

A Bridge Abandoned.

The Middlesex County Board of Freeholders held a meeting at South Plainfield Monday to consider what should be done about a bridge which was recently swept away near there. The bridge spans a small stream which issues from a mill pond, and it was the overflow from this pond during the recent freshets that swept it away. The Board decided to abandon the bridge.

There remains yet to be settled the dispute as to who shall repair the washout on the road near the bridge, the township, township, or the owner of the mill. This matter is to be settled in the courts.

Charged With Stealing Two Boilers.

About half-past ten o'clock Monday evening, Officer Wiest was informed that a man had snatched a two-dollar bill from the hand of John R. Severs, a resident of Dunellen, who was on the depot platform, at Elizabeth. The officer found the accused at Union street and arrested him, taking Severs to police headquarters also as complainant. The prisoner gave the name of John M. Gaffney and said he lived in Boston. Severs refused to make a complaint yesterday morning, and Gaffney was discharged. He denied his guilt.

The Disorderly House Case.

The case of Patrick and Annie Newell, who were arrested on complaint of Chief of Police Carey, charged with keeping a disorderly house at No. 320 West Front street, came up for trial before City Judge Sellman this morning at ten o'clock, but at the request of Gen. J. Augustus Fay, the defendants' lawyer, the case was adjourned over for one week. The defendants were bailed in one hundred dollars bail each for trial. James Muldowney became their bondsman.

Prohibition Mass Meeting.

The Prohibitionists of this city held a mass meeting in Reform Hall last evening. There was a poor attendance, scarcely one hundred persons being present. The meeting was addressed by Prof. Samuel Dickie, the Chairman of the National Prohibition Committee, and Mr. F. L. Mason, the candidate for Member of Assembly from this district. Mr. Mason is the Prohibition candidate for Governor, failed to put in an appearance.

Poor Satisfaction for Dead Mr. Roach.

A year ago THE NEWS exclusively published the fact that the cruiser Dolphin, which had been proposed recently to be sunk by some Democratic experts (?) in the employ of the Democratic Secretary of the Navy Whitney, had proved by an unbiased examination and trial, unusually strong. The vessel has recently returned from a trip around the world, and her behavior has utterly vindicated her builder, John Roach. Meanwhile, poor Mr. Roach died of a broken heart, grieving at the cruel treatment of the government under Democratic control, which carrying out its policy of trying to destroy home industries, had grossly misrepresented the business of Mr. Roach to such an extent that failure resulted. When THE NEWS first published the story it was denied in New York papers serving the Democratic administration in its shameful business. "A Plainfielder today sends us an article from which we make the following extract:

To none, perhaps, will the news of the glorious achievement of the little ship bring more joy than to the sons and the assignees of Mr. Roach. The record obtained by the Dolphin has strengthened their case against the last administration in no little degree. George W. Quintard and George E. Weed, the assignees of John Roach, propose to proceed before the next Congress to secure the great shipbuilder's vindication in a financial way also. It will be remembered that shortly after the Dolphin's shaft was broken on her first trial and that great expert in naval affairs, William C. Whitney, pronounced her a failure, the contract for her completion, and those of the Chester ship constructor failed. Whitney, by his persecution, and "Garland, by his decision that no contract existed between the government and Mr. Roach, succeeded in ruining the latter's credit. He owed $1,500,000 or more on his contracts. The governments, in the person of Whitney and Garland, having condemned his vessels, he was unable to secure further credit. Not long after that he died. He was in a thousand could endure such persecution as that of which he was the victim. Owing to his inability and that of his assignees to secure the necessary material, the work on the four cruisers was stopped. Secretary Whitney put his paymasters into the Navy Yard and sold them. The result was that they cost far more that if Mr. Roach had been permitted to complete them. The additional expense mounts up to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Whitney to square himself with the public made a desperate attempt to fail for the Dolphin, delegating $30,000 for alleged failure to meet certain details of the contract. In this very act Whitney, despite the decision of the Attorney-General, established the validity of the agreement made by his predecessor with Mr. Roach. That $30,000 now lies in the Treasury Department filed away as a penalty for the Dolphin's alleged structural weakness. It was supposed that Secretary Whitney would spend it in repairing the vessel with he had denounced as a fraud. As one really to be seen in a steamer as the report of Admiral Jouett and his associate, there has been no necessity for such an expenditure and the $30,000, therefore, belongs to the estate of John Roach. His assignees do not propose to lose it. Ex-Comptroller of the Treasury Maynard will be asked how he has disposed of Mr. Roach of $30,000. Following the one gives him by Attorney-General Garland, he decided even after the Navy Department had audited the bill, that there was no authority for the construction of the Puritan and the Roanoke. Admiral Jouett is strong in his condemnation of Maynard's action.

"Let me tell you", said he, "that the Puritan, when completed, will be the model fighting ship of the world. I would like nothing better, should war break out with any foreign nation, than to be placed in command of her. The power of concentrating her battery is not equalled, much less surpassed, by any man-of-war yet constructed. If John Roach required further vindication than that secured to him by the triumph of the Dolphin and the admirable performances of the Atlanta, the Boston, and the Chicago, it can be found in the model, the structural strength and the formidable fighting qualities of the Puritan. John Roach had been unfortunate enough to get away from ships of more formidable character, but armed with guns of such range and power that he was able to conquer, without suffering to a great extent themselves. As a man who has served before the mast and in higher grades in the navy of his country, as a man who has studied carefully every improvement suggested in modern ships of war, I say John Roach's memory is entitled to the love and to the veneration of every citizen who desires to see our navy invincible before any power on the globe." The Synod of New Jersey.

The sixty-sixth annual session of the Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey opened in Educational hall, Asbury Park, at 8 o'clock Monday evening by prayer and the delegates present. The moderator's desk was adorned with a beautiful column of flowers. The opening services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Chandler, of Asbury Park.

The moderator, the Rev. Rowland P. Kohlhaas, of Plainfield, delivered the sermon on holiness as an indispensable factor in the establishment of the church. The Rev. H. M. Storrs, of Morris, an Orange Presbyterian, was elected moderator. The Rev. William F. Whitaker was made clerk. Lovell's Supplement was acknowledged after the neurological report for the year was read by Rev. R. R. Cobb, of the Second Presbyterian church of this city.

The attendance yesterday was large and the service of great interest. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Chamberlain, of Bristol, and Rev. John Hall, of Newark.

—The Plainfield delegates who attended the Y. M. C. A. district convention at Rahway last week say that the address by President Gates, of Rutgers College, was one of unusual interest. He spoke on the subject of Christian Citizenship and was followed by Professor Gano addresses a Plainfield audience at the First Presbyterian church Thursday night.

Killed at Metuchen.

The Boston fast line on the Pennsylvania Railroad, train 37, killed two men at Metuchen yesterday morning. The accident at Mundy's bridge, about a quarter past two o'clock. The two unfortunate men were walking on the track, both going toward New Brunswick, and they did not hear the train, which rushed along behind them in the same direction until it was too late for them to get out of the way. The driver of the train did not see them in the darkness, and both were struck and mangled from the track, one toward the right and the other toward the left, and were instantly killed. Neither was much mangled.

Papers on the body of one of the men led to the identification as J. Nell, of London, England, a sailor, who had just been discharged from the steamer Lake Erie, recently arrived in New York. He was 23 years of age. The other man could not be identified, there being nothing on his person.

The bodies were found not long after the accident by train No. 73, and board and were taken to Metuchen, where they were examined by Coroner F. Norton and Dr. Alonzo Hunt, the railroad physician. Word was also sent to Dr. Stack, of New Brunswick, who prepared for burial, but no inquest was necessary and ordered that the bodies be buried. They were placed in the care of undertaker Ayres, who will enter them in Potter's field.

A Dastardly Insult.

The Mt. Holly Dispatch, Abbett organ, says:

"By a close observation it has been found that the majority of the soldiers that will vote for General Grubb this fall are those who did a little sweating in the streets of Harrisburg and for every drop of sweat they lost they demand from the government a pension."

How do the old soldiers of Plainfield like that kind of talk? Because they avow their intention of voting for their old comrade they must resent such insults as the above from a copperhead organ. Every old soldier should resent such an affront by voting for General Grubb.

The Story of Co-operation.

In The New Review George Jacob Holyoake, the veteran believer in the cause of union among working people, tells the history of the co-operative movement in Great Britain, while M. A. Milleraud, a member of the chamber of deputies, narrates its progress in France. Mr. Holyoake says that from the socialism of Robert Owen has grown among working people that co-operation which is not socialism, but something far better and more practicable. The first attempts were the co-operative stores that have grown to such enormous proportions in Great Britain. The principle of these is to buy the best articles, sell them at a very moderate profit and divide the surplus, not among the shareholders alone, but among the purchasers. Stockholders are allowed 5 per cent. interest on their investments. The idea was caught upon the current of popular favor and spread throughout Great Britain. In the United Kingdom are now nearly 1,400 co-operative societies and stores, with a little less than a million members. These divide among themselves a profit of $15,000,000 every year. For plain, ordinary working people, without educational advantages, and with no time for making plans to enrich themselves, this is not bad.

From distributive co-operation in stores, the next step is distributive co-operation in the workshop. The co-operative principle of labor is this: Interest is the rent of labor; wages are the rent of capital. Labor and capital are therefore partners. Profit is made between them and should be divided between them. There are now in the kingdom eighty-six co-operative workshops, although they come far below 1 per cent on account of the difficulty working men have in getting capital. But those established are thriving.

There is another kind of industrial partnership from which Mr. Holyoake hopes more than from the co-operative workshop. This is the industrial partnership, in which, after working expenses, interest on capital and a reserve fund are deducted, what is left is divided with the laborers. It will be known he is to share in the profits he has to do the workingman will naturally seek to make that profit as large as possible. Mr. Holyoake writes of this:

> Profit sharing will sooner make progress by employers establishing partnerships of industry with their workpeople. It will make employers' estate their best workmen. It is in the direction of industrial partnerships that co-operation wistfully looks.

In France, M. Milerand writes that many co-operative societies have failed through the inexperience of their members. They have also been much hampered through the red tape of clumsy, and in some instances actually hostile legislation. But in France co-operative societies for the sale of food and clothing have been brilliantly successful. M. Milerand gives some space to the communist of M. Godin, at Guise, called the Familistere. It is a community in which there is not a pauper or a criminal, in which no child of 6 is unable to read, and none of 14 is without the elements of a good education. In the factories at this co-operative community of Guise, there are 900 stockholders whose capital amounts to $250,000. France has eighty co-operative factories. The laws have been recently made less burdensome for them, and some of them are rich and flourishing, under the republic.

"Profit sharing is coming," says Mr. Holyoake.

Melinite.

While Secretary Tracy recommends the additional steel cruisers for the coming American navy, word comes from France of a deadly new explosive called melinite. What melinite is very few know, and those who do know guard the secret so well that it is impossible for other nations to find out. French fort, field and siege guns are now charged with it. Experiments in 1886 showed it to be possessed of a very high explosive power, while far more safe than gunpowder. The Germans and Italians are so eager to discover what melinite is that they have offered rewards for the smallest fragments and numerous spies from those nations have been captured in French camps while endeavoring to steal the secret, but so far it has been kept. All that is known is that the new explosive is prepared from melted picric acid.

Edison says we shall have to look out hereafter. Walls will, indeed, have ears as well as tongues. When we enter a house and begin a conversation, we can never know whether there is not a phonograph or graphophone concealed with in the walls—a terrible recording angel, jotting down every word we say, ready to repeat it all to a listening world with horrible fidelity. Very interesting this will be in breach of promise caste hereafter.

What was what Bismarck is reported to have said when he assured a deputation of working men that England meant to keep quiet and they could now go to their labors in peace. "Not long ago England still hesitated whether to act as a mad bull or as a fat ox chewing the cud. Today her resolution is taken, and I can assure you that the maintenance of peace is certain."

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

Meeting of New York League Democratic Clubs.

GROVER CLEVELAND'S LETTER.

Mass Meeting of Republicans at New York.

Senator Hiscock and Others Speak—The State Ticket Ratified—Various Political Notes of Interest.

New York, Oct. 22.—The second annual convention of the New York State League of Democratic clubs was held in the banquet hall of the Hoffman house yesterday. Among the prominent Democrats present were: President John Boyd Thacher, of the State league; Hon. Daniel E. Griffin, chairman of the state executive committee; Governor David B. Hill, Maj. John R. McMullen, Hon. Norton Chase, of Albany; Senator Jacob Sutter, Hon. Frederick W. Arnold, of the board of aldermen; Edward B. Whitney, William P. O'Mally, of Ontario; Walter N. Kernan, of Oneida; W. Parker Williams, of Hudson; Norman C. Lord, of Westchester; W. A. Prince, of Suffolk, and W. F. Lasher, of Herkimer. About 300 delegates were present.

President Thacher called the convention to order and introduced Hon. John H. V. Arnold, vice president of the league, who made a short address of welcome as president of the Young Men's Democratic club, N. Y. Thacher responded.

D. E. Griffin, chairman of the state executive committee was made chairman, and made a brief address.

Governor Hill Speaks.

Governor Hill then appeared and was greeted with long and enthusiastic cheers. In the course of a long speech he said:

"The campaign in which we are now engaged is a most important one. The democracy of the nation is looking to New York to see what we will do. They are looking with great anxiety and interest for the outcome of our campaign. Our platform has placed the party precisely where it stood one year ago. We have taken no step backward. We have given an assurance of consistency and good faith in our attitude before the American people. One year ago the democratic party made a definite pledge committing itself to tariff reform. We reiterate that pledge, and propose to fight it out on that line, no matter how many years it may take to win. Our platform distinctly says that we have never and do not now advocate free trade. The statement is an unwarranted one. We believe that sufficient revenue should be raised to meet the expenses of the government economically administered, and that the raising of greater revenue is unnecessary and unjust.

"A Democratic victory now will cheer the true friends of reform in every state in the Union. It will encourage every stalwart Democrat and clear the way for a national victory in 1892.

Compliments Cleveland's Administration.

"We believe that the surplus should be reduced. We believe in a strict construction of the constitution. We believe in the sovereignty of the states. We believe in the honest and economical administration of public affairs. If all these principles are true the longer it is in power the more clearly shown how wise, capable and just was the administration of Grover Cleveland. President Cleveland's administration is the pride of his party. He conducted the affairs of state with ability and for the public good.

The Political Situation.

"In my conversation with our southern friends I found them confident and hopeful. In Virginia I met the Democratic candidates for governor and lieutenant governor. They are making an active, energetic and hopeful contest, and to them and to the nation it is an important contest. It involves everything connected with their political life, and the best wishes of the democracy of New York is, I am sure, with them in their struggle. Our people in other states are active and alert. They are not downhearted, but are organizing for victory. In our own state the people fully realize the importance of the issues before them, and are preparing for that victory which I feel surely awaits."

Ex-President Cleveland's Letter.

The following letter of regret was received from ex-President Cleveland:

> NEW YORK, Oct. 21, 1889.

Bartow S. Weeks, Esq.:

DEAR SIR.—I am in receipt of your invitation to attend the convention of New York state Democratic clubs, to be held at the Hoffman house on the 22d inst. I am glad that you were considerate enough of my absence and feelings to give me an opportunity to infer from your letter that my failure to accept your invitation would neither cause great disappointment nor be misconstrued as indicating any lack of faith in the work which the clubs represented in the league have undertaken.

These organizations had their origin in the honest activity of a powerful sentiment which furnishes plenty of that enthusiasm upon which political organizations easily subsist. While they are certainly very useful at such a time, it must be conceded that the noise and excitement of a campaign are not conducive to the accomplishment of mission-ary work or to the effective dissemination of political truth. This most important work can better be done in more quiet surroundings, though usually it is not then so easy to maintain political enthusiasm.

It has been too often the case, if it may not be said to be the rule, that political clubs, whatever their declarations of perpetuity may have been, have only lived through the campaign in which they had their birth, and only performed temporary campaign work. I am very much pleased to learn that the League of New York Democratic clubs intends to make the organizations of which it is composed permanent agencies for spreading and illustrating the doctrines of the Democratic party at all times and in all circumstances.

In making this effort the league is to be congratulated upon the fact that the principles of Democracy are worthy at this time a larger place than they lately have in the consideration of the party. The study and propagation of these principles afford strong encouragement to renewed effort and, when better, these efforts are invested with a value and importance as great as the prosperity of our land and the welfare of its people.

I look to the ascendancy of the principles upon which the democracy rests for that which will be greatly aided by the activity of leagues such as yours to secure us from weakening extravagance, from demagogic pretense, from sectional bitterness and from the withholding of relief for our sufferings. Good labor and effort have greater or higher incentives than the accomplishment of these results.

Yours very truly,
GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Officers Chosen.

The committee on nominations presented the following ticket, which was unanimously elected:

President—John Boyd Thacher, Albany.
Vice Presidents—Walter N. Kernan, Oneida; W. P. Prince, New York; Barker Williams, Hudson; Thomas N. Wilkinson, Queens; W. P. O'Mally, Ontario.
Treasurer—J. Hampden Robb, New York.
Secretary—F. Kingsbury Curtis, New York.

Gist of the Resolutions Passed.

Extended resolutions ratifying the state ticket, reaffirming democratic principles, favoring the Australian ballot reform, commending Governor Hill's vetoes of the so-called Saxton bills, condemning political assessments upon candidates for judicial office, demanding the calling of a state constitutional convention, advocating home rule for cities, protesting against the alleged extravagance of the last Republican legislature, commending Governor Hill's administration, and renewing "Our congratulations to Grover Cleveland for the wisdom and bravery with which he fought the battle of 1888, and form our true Democracy in 1887 and 1888; and that, while by the greatest corruption fund known in any election in our state Republicans succeeded in securing a bare majority in the senate, Governor Hill's administration and the democratic party have been endorsed by a majority of the people of the state, as shown by the majorities for judges of the court of appeals and for the constitutional amendments."

Ratifying the State Ticket.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The Republican state ticket was ratified last night in the big hall of Cooper Institute by the Republicans. The hall was crowded when Elihu Root, chairman of the meeting, accompanied by Senator Hiscock, Col. John W. Vrooman, Hon. Frederick W. Arnold, James R. Angel, Mahlon Chance, Andrew B. Rogers, James M. Varnum, Bernard Biggin, Jacob M. Patterson, Charles N. Bulger and many others, took the platform. They were greeted with loud cheers.

Senator Hiscock's Speech.

Speeches were made by Elihu Root, Senator Hiscock, Martin W. Cooke and others. Senator Hiscock declared in favor of encouraging American shipping. He did not care whether it was called subsidy or what epithet was applied to it; he wanted American-owned ships to carry American vessels to whatever advantageous markets existed. Most of the senator's speech was devoted to an arrangement of the Democratic State administration.

Well Known Republicans Present.

Hon. Mr. Cook, of Rochester, nominee for comptroller, next spoke and commented on the campaign. His effort was in a very unfavorable manner. Gen. Ira M. Hedges and Hon. James M. Varnum, nominees for state treasurer and attorney general, also spoke. Among the well known gentlemen acting as vice presidents of the meeting were: C. M. Depew, C. N. Bliss, C. A. Seward, Howard Crosby, Noah Davis, Jesse Seligman, A. J. Cassatt, C. Vanderbilt, D. O. Mills, Samuel Sloan, W. W. Astor, Henry Clews, Sheridan Shook, Brayton Ives, J. Pierpont Morgan and E. D. Armour. There was much enthusiasm shown.

Political Notes.

The Republicans of the second assembly district of Queens county, N. Y., have nominated Henry C. Johnson, of Long Island City, for assembly.

In the Twenty-sixth Republican senatorial district convention at Ithaca, N. Y., Thomas Hunter, of Cayuga county, was nominated. Senator Patrick Keenan, of Seneca, was renominated by the County Democracy of the Fifth New York senate district.

The Democrats of the Fifteenth (N. Y.) senatorial district have nominated John M. Davies, of Fishkill.

L. W. Emerson, of Warrensburg, N. Y., was nominated by acclamation for senator by the Republicans of the Nineteenth district.

D. M. Kane, who was nominated last week as an independent Democratic candidate for assembly, has been indorsed by the Republican convention of the Third district at Elizabeth, N. J.

The committee of twenty-four of the County Democracy met at New York and appointed a committee to draft a reply to Tammany's refusal to co-operate in naming a ticket. It was decided to name candidates as follows: For mayor, Hewitt, a choice of two men being given in all but one case. For judge of general sessions, Assistant District Attorney Fitzgerald; for register, Patrick Keenan; for judge O'Reilly; for judge of common pleas, Roger Foster and Henry Beekman; for judge of city court, John Pickell and Joseph Newburger; for president of board of aldermen, Gen. Adelbert Campbell and Gen. John Newton. It was decided to leave with the district leaders the option of adjourning the senatorial convention until a meeting with the Republicans could be consummated.

Stabbed for a Seventh of a Cent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—If Jeremiah Lynch, an 18-year-old machinist, should ever recover he may well claim the distinction that his life was endangered over the payment of the smallest subdivision of a cent that ever served a murderer's ends. His assailant was an Italian fruit vender, Pasquale Cioia, whose stand is on Park row. Lynch stopped to buy a cent's worth of chestnuts, and after giving Cioia his penny was told to take seven chestnuts instead. The boy or Cotis suspected that he had taken eight and demanded the return of one chestnut. A war of words arose, in the course of which Lynch made use of a knife and plunged it into Lynch's side, inflicting a wound three and a half inches deep and penetrating to the lung. The doctors pronounce the injury serious, but not necessarily fatal. The Italian, who is 35 years of age, was arrested. He denies the stabbing.

Waiting for the Lord's Coming.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Oct. 23.—Considerable excitement prevails in the vicinity of Germanna, Orange county, among the Adventists' camp meeting in that county. Those gathered there predict that the world will come to an end certainly before the end of December, and a number of the people have left their homes, turned their stock out on the commons and are living at the Adventists' camp. Others refuse to work and only engage enough to keep them from starving. Many have also broken up their farms for the fall wheat on this account and say they will not put a single grain of seed in the ground, as the end is certainly coming this year. About fifty persons are living at the camp, waiting patiently and confidently for the end of the world.

Convicted of Assault.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 23.—Bernard Blaney and William Wilson were convicted of assault upon one Weisenfeld at Spotswood on Franklin park. Sentence was deferred. They assaulted Weisenfeld and a man named Vanderbilt, who came to his assistance. Weisenfeld was struck with a hammer and killed. Vanderbilt was also struck, but escaped.

THE FLOOD COMMISSION.

An Important Meeting Held at Philadelphia.

PAYING OUT THE RELIEF MONEY.

Settling Up with the Losers by the Great Johnstown Flood—How the Money Will be Distributed—Final Reports from Lewiston and Remove Districts.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—The state flood relief commission was in session in this city nearly all day. Governor Beaver was in attendance. After full discussion and examination of the records of the committee the commission adopted the report of the board of inquiry so far as it concerns the claims considered and classified. It was resolved "that our secretary is hereby instructed to pay out the money appropriated to classes 4 and 5 as follows: That on losses in class 4, as established by the board of inquiry on $500 and less, there shall be paid a sum according to the merits of each case, not exceeding $400; on losses of $400 and over $500 there shall be paid according to the merits of each case a sum not exceeding $600. On losses between $1,000 and $2,000 there shall be paid, according to the merits of the case, a sum not exceeding $900. On losses of $2,000 shall be paid a pro rata proportion of the amount appropriated to the class remaining after payment as above shall have been made, but no payment shall exceed the sum of $6,000."

No Payment to Exceed $3,500.

In class 5, no claim of less than $30 shall be considered. Losses as established by the board of inquiry shall be paid a sum according to the merits of each case not exceeding $300. Losses of between $500 and $1,000 shall be paid a pro rata proportion of the amount appropriated in the class after payment as above shall have been made, but no payment shall exceed the sum of $3,500.

The commissioners then adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

Secretary Kramer also stated that final reports had also been received from the Lewiston and the Renove districts, and that the accounts had been audited and appeared correct.

Amounts Thus Far Distributed.

After the adjournment Mr. Scott explained that the commission had distributed $420,000 of the $500,000 in the first appropriation and in addition to the balance of $60,000 thus remaining the commission had the sum of $1,000,000, and this is being distributed among the five districts. The first three classes comprise non-property owners, the fourth class includes those who lost all of their property and the fifth class is made up of clerks and others who lost more or less large sums.

The secretary reports that claimants in classes 1, 2 and 3 (excepting as to the amounts appropriated for those classes) be paid on the basis recommended by the board of inquiry, except in some cases where changes had been made after reference to the committee on classification and distribution.

TORTURED BY BURGLARS.

Postoffice Robbers Burn the Feet of a Night Clerk.

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 23.—Two men gained entrance to the Fargo postoffice during the night, bound and gagged the night clerk, Harry Milton, applied a red hot poker to the soles of his feet, and compelled him to give up the combination of the safe door.

In the vestibule of the vault were forty or fifty registered packages. While the burglars were opening these Milton released himself, secured a revolver and shot at the men, not, however, until they had time to blow out the light. They knocked him down and escaped, carrying away the registered packages, etc., in their hurry they left over $150 in money on the desk. They had opened only four packages when they were surprised by Milton. The latter's feet are burned, but not seriously.

Sir Knights at Hornellsville.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The city presents a scene of unusual activity, occasioned by being the seventy-sixth annual conclave of the Grand commandery of the Knights Templar of the state of New York. Commanders from Rochester, Buffalo, Binghamton, Elmira, Ithaca and Dunkirk are present and the remainder of the state commanderies are represented by large delegations. The Grand conclave opened at 10 o'clock in the afternoon in Opera House hall, and at 2 o'clock the Grand Commandery marched to the depot to meet the Grand officers. Just before the train arrived there was a collision on the Erie railroad between a freight and a passenger train, by which the engine of the latter was overturned and the baggage car and smoker badly wrecked. Fifteen persons were more or less injured, and their escape from death was almost miraculous.

Two Will Die.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 23.—While a train of coal cars was being unloaded and being hoisted up the Ashley plane yesterday the wire cable broke just as they had almost reached the top of the Wilkesbarre mountain. The cars started down, thundered the plane at frightful speed, and were smashed into fragments at the bottom. There were two men on the truck, W. H. Adams, John Soat and Hugh Fogarty. All of Adams was buried in the debris. Strange to say, the men were taken out alive, but very badly injured. Adams and Soat will die, while Fergason may recover.

Another Murder at Hamburg.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The body of another murdered girl has been found at Hamburg. The victim in this instance was only 10 years of age. She had been outraged, and the body was horribly mutilated. No trace of the murderer has been discovered. It is suspected he is the same man who killed and mutilated the Hamm girl. While it may not be that the fear of Whitechapel, called "Jack the Ripper," has come to the world, it certainly as terrible has bogus operations at Hamburg.

A Typhoid Epidemic.

WOODVILLE, O., Oct. 23.—Nearly one-third of the 500 people in this town are victims of typhoid fever and diphtheria. Last week there were ten deaths from typhoid fever alone, and nearly that number from diphtheria. Dr. Bennett, the leading physician of the place, has some fifty cases under his care. Great excitement prevails and business is entirely stopped. Woodville having no board of health, the epidemic was not noticed at the scourge until last week.

Smallpox in a Boot Car.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 23.—A chap named Marks died of what is supposed to be small pox about 10:30 o'clock in an east bound Jefferson street car. The car load of passengers, not knowing the nature of the child's malady was discovered.

THE GIANTS LOSE AGAIN.

The Brooklyns, Twenty Games More Defeats Than the New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—About 6,000 persons assembled at the polo grounds to witness the third game for the world's championship between the New Yorks and the Brooklyns. Hughes, "Mickey" Hughes was in the box for Brooklyn, while "Mickey" Welch did the honors for the Giants. The contest from the start was one of batting, both pitchers being compelled to retire, Welch in the fifth in favor of O'Day, and Hughes in the seventh, giving way to Caruthers. The great Brooklyn battery was the best for New York, Clarke donned the mask for the Brooklyns, and his work after the first inning, when two runs were scored on him, compared favorably with that of Buckley.

New York started the run getting in the first, scoring two runs on hits by Tiernan, Ewing, Connor and Richardson. Brooklyn tied the score in the second on a base on balls, a two bagger, an error and a sacrifice. In the third Brooklyn took the lead, getting three runs on Hughes' base on balls, Collins' two bagger and Foster's single. New York's turn in the fourth followed the fifth. Connor's hit safely and moved up to second on Richardson's base on balls. O'Rourke then lifted the ball over the left field fence, clearing the bases of their last half of the inning. Brooklyn tallied twice on two two base hits and a single, and making the score 8 to 5 in favor of Brooklyn.

New York reduced this lead in the sixth by making two runs on a three bagger, two singles and an error. This ended the run getting, though New York in the seventh tied the score, and perhaps have won, had not darkness put a stop to the contest. The ninth inning had been started and New York had three men on bases with only one out when the game was decided to call the game. The score was as follows:

New York	0	0	2	0	0	2	0	0	0	—7
Brooklyn	0	0	3	2	0	2	1	0	0	—8

Batteries: Welch, O'Day and Ewing; Hughes, Caruthers and Clarke.

A CRONIN JURY AT LAST.

A Dozen Good Men and True in Readiness.

OCCUPATIONS OF THE TWELVE.

A Long and Expensive Struggle Before the Trial Even Commenced—Thousands of Men Subpoenaed—What the Prosecution Will Have to Do.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The twelfth juror in the Cronin case was obtained yesterday afternoon. He is Benjamin F. Clark, a coal retail broker, who was tendered by the state and accepted by Mr. Foster, attorney for Bogge, after he had been unavailingly challenged by Mr. Forrest, attorney for Coughlin. The last four accepted veniremen—Messrs. Barlow, Bonneson, Bryan and Clark—were men in good, solid, the other eight jurors brought into court. State's Attorney Longenecker addressed the court, and requested two days' time for the preparation of the case. Mr. Forrest objected, and Judge McConnell decided that one day was sufficient and adjourned the court until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. It is understood that State's Attorney Longenecker will make the opening speech for the prosecution on Thursday morning.

An Unprecedented Contest.

Up to date 1,115 men have been summoned for jury service, of whom 957 were excused by the counsel for various causes, 176 having been excused by the judges. Not taking into consideration the time taken up with the jury bribing part of the case, the morning of the jury impaneled a trifle more than seven weeks, and the cost to Cook county is, in round numbers, $3,800.

Personnel of the Jury.

The following are occupations of the jurymen who will try Kunze, Burke, O'Sullivan and Beggs, are as follows:

John Culver, real estate dealer, American by birth and ancestry, and a Methodist.

James Pearson, a farmer, American, by Pennsylvania Dutch stock, and attends various Protestant churches, but belongs to none.

John L. Hall, architectural draughtsman, an American and a Methodist.

Charles C. Dix, cashier in an insurance office, an American and attends the Episcopal church.

Henry D. Walker, keeps an upholstery shop, a Yankee and a Protestant, though not a member of any church.

Frank Wilson, journeyman machinist, also an American and an unattached Protestant.

George L. Corke, drug clerk, American of English parentage, and a Methodist.

William L. North, president of the Union Sewing Machine company, an American and an active Methodist, Spring street church.

Charles E. Marler, iron merchant, of American parentage, and a Protestant, but not affiliated with any denomination.

Edward W. Sanford, clerk for a paper house, American ancestry, and a Protestant.

E. S. Bryan, employed at C. J. S. Myers & Sons, member of the Episcopal church, born in Chicago.

E. F. Cleffin, in the real estate business.

What the State Must Prove.

In the first place the prosecutions must prove that Dr. O'Sullivan is dead, the body found in the Evanston catch basin was Cronin. Then will follow one of the most important and sensational chapters of the trial. It will be simply a review of the history of the Clan-na-Gael in America from the time it was founded until the night the doctor was lured to the lonely Carlson cottage. The testimony of Alexander Sulli van in the class will be the text of the state.

CHURCH PEOPLE AT WAR.

A Barricaded Parsonage Stormed and Several People Hurt.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 23.—Three months ago Bishop O'Hara appointed Father Wargowski from the Polish Catholic church at Plymouth, and afterward unfrocked him for unbecoming conduct. The congregation split into two factions, one forcibly keeping possession of the church and parsonage building. Yesterday the bishop appeared at Plymouth to take possession of the property. He despatched Father Slack to aid him. Police protection was secured, and the party went to the parsonage. On being refused admittance the police battered down the doors and arrested six of the inmates.

While the prisoners were being removed a fierce fight occurred, the leader of the prisoners' party, Father Wargowski, seldom keeping in the struggle Chief of Police Michael Mahyin had his leg broken and back injured, and a number of other persons were hurt, none, however, fatally.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 23.—M. S. Robinson, of the Wonderland Museo, was in the police court this morning charged under section 343 of the code, which says that a person who maliciously publishes by means of a writing, picture or effigy which exposes any person, living or dead, to hatred, contempt, ridicule or obloquy is guilty of libel. The particular offense charged is that of causing the exhibition of wax figures representing the scenes in the Jack Diamond fever tragedy. Hearing was postponed for a week and Robinson was released on his own recognizance.

President Phillips May Resign.

EASTON, Oct. 23.—The Evening Record states, on what it terms the best authority, that President E. B. Phillips, of the Philadelphia railroad, will resign before Jan. 1, that his retirement is chiefly owing to ill health, and that he will probably be succeeded by ex-Gov. York Smith. President Phillips when called on by a reporter refused to either confirm or deny the report and refused to talk on the subject.

CLOSE CALCULATION.

How Lyle's Unerring Eye Aided Him in Saving the Paymaster's Car.

Among the recently invigorated liars of the town is a new man, returned from a season with cattle in Colorado. It was his first trip among the mountains, and he was much affected by the feats of engineering skill there manifested, as witness the following:

"I had heard of the curves on the Pennsylvania, where, according to the time card schedule, the engineer is obliged to lean out of his cab and exchange tobacco with the brakeman on the rear end, so as to give the passengers something to talk about, and I don't believe it. There was an old, honest, hairy landed miser who rode over the road out of Denver with me, and he told me some odd things. Once, while we were being jerked around the edge of the mountains and could look out from under the room of our car at the track opposite in the valley, he said to me:

"'That yere track down yan is the one we're into, but we won't tech it fer an hour. Warn't up the river an' down the side of the mountain an' double back. Down their is where Jim Lyle saved the paymaster o' the road.'

"'How?' I inquired.

"'It were this way: The paymaster's car was hitched onto the hind end o' the freight train, his own engine havin' had a little spree with it, an' bein' gone an' being abandoned for awhile up the road. Well, the train was 'mortin' and crawlin' around the mountain, when all of a sudden the head brakeman comes a-runnin' up and yells to me:

"'Pull out! Pull out! They's a gang o' robbers has caught the engine an' are humpin' other to! Pull!'

"Well, Jim Lyle noticed that. He seen at once that the engine had been fixed up, an' that the rustlers had took her to hatch him an' get the fund in the paymaster's car, so he pulled out right peart an' tried to outrace 'em, but it wan't no go. They keep' gittin' up on him.

"Pretty soon he struck the beginnin' o' this yere curve. He didn't slack a breath, an' the conductor came rushin' up an' believed:

"'By God's eating, I think we do! If we run this we will climb a rail.'

"'Sallright,' said Jim Lyle. 'If I calclate rightly that car is saved,' an' he gave her another pull out, an' just as we reached right here he jerked her wide open. Then we see what was what. Lookin' back, I, bein' on the train, seen the last coach go up into the air; there was a jerk; an' away over into the canon she went.

"'Well, where does the salvation of the coach come in?' I asked. 'I don't see any particular advantage in being spilled over a mountain side and being shot by train robbers.'

"'Sow don't git frisky,' said the old man. 'Ye talkin' this yere an' I ain't'i done. That there coach, as I say, sailed over offin the track just like the hind boy did when you used to play "crack the whip" at school. It floated down as nice as you please an' lit on the track below in the valley, an' with the force it was slung rolled ten miles to the next station. When we got there it was in on the ddin' an' we pulled by, an' when the light engine load o' rustlers come pullin' along the townspeople was waitin' for 'em an' the new paymaster was stood in good shape.'"—Omaha World-Herald.

A Heartless Beauty.

Joseph Jefferson—Then I'so going alone, an' if it sinks wid me, what will you do, Belinda?

Belinda—I will tank bebbens only dah fule was drowned.—Munsey's Weekly.

The Song of the Tramp.

I gather here and there a pie,
And here and there a biscuit;
I snatch a spoon when no one's by,
It always pays to risk it.
I sleep at noon where waters flow
To sooth the weary roamer,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on all summer.

I ride beneath the rushing freight
From Boston to Chicago;
I watch each chance to desecrate
The box of Wells & Fargo.
I sing each whistle as I go—
November'll find me lonely,
For in November falls the snow—
I walk in summer only.—Exchange.

Distressing Poverty.

Miss Pennycuick—Why not, Almiry! Miss P.—'Cause, when I was coming by their house just now I looked in the window, and I saw Alice actually sitting in the room with an old apron on painting a picture. If I couldn't afford to have artists paint all the pictures I wanted, I'd pull down the shades in the room where I was working, anyway.—Lawrence American.

A Bit of Indian Wit.

A certain bright lad in one of the Indian mission schools, while working at his bench, was accosted by a visitor who asked him a number of questions, to which he replied in the best English at his command:

"Do you speak English?" was the last sustaining interrogation.

"So; do you?" was the prompt reply of the lanky carpenter, as he turned again to his bench.—Lewiston Journal.

How to Form a Library.

"Say, Smithins, what a fine lot of books you've collected; you won't mind loaning me a few and then, will you? It's so awfully stupid down here in the country."

"I should be delighted, dear boy, but loaned volumes never seem to find their way back. For instance, every identical book on those shelves is borrowed."—Judge.

Might Have Been Saved.

A citizen of Chicago, who rejoices in the name of Nelson A. Schimischkiewitz, was dressed in a hole in the ice in the River Neva, in Russia, recently. Nelson should have taken the precaution to have died one of his name to a tree on the bank, before he trusted himself on the ice.—Springfield (O.) Republican-Times.

Judged by Himself.

McFingle—You are an editor, McFangle. Can you tell me how long it takes a man to become fully sophisticated in the profession?

McFangle—About six months.

"How long have you been at it?"

"Just six months."—Lawrence American.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

De Profundis.

You ought to see my lady paint
On leather, ivory, wood or china;
Her fancy knoweth no restraint,
The lightly gifted Albertina.
You ought to see the odes she writes,
The lovely, warm, impassioned stanzas,
And hear the star she dedicates
To your into her gay romanzas.

You ought to hear her thea dilate
Upon the ancient Magna Charta,
In animated nerves debate
Upon the fates of Homer or Sparta.
You ought to read the book she wrote
With such unwonted force and power.
You ought to hear her quote and quote
From Huxley, Kant and Schopenhauer!

And yet, to praise a learned wife
Is not the purpose of my ditty—
You know not all my inward strife,
So, gentle reader, give me pity!
I'm at the mercy of the cook
Oh, I am tempted oft to flee her—
My wife! She's on another book,
And nowadays I seldom see her!

—Mooney's Weekly.

It Was Not So in Her Days.

Old Lady (looking admiringly at her granddaughter's bonnet)—Amanda, my dear, where did you get that hat?

Amanda (severely)—Grandma, your acquaintance with the slang of the day surprises me!

Old Lady—Slang, my dear! Is "Where did you get that hat" slang?

Amanda—Of course it is.

Old Lady (gently and sadly)—I did not know it. But I am not surprised at your acquaintance with it, my dear.—Chicago Tribune.

Only One Word.

Poet—It often happens that the addition of only one word will spoil an article or a poem.

Unfriendly Critic—That is very true.

Poet—Take, for example, this little poem of mine. One word more would spoil it past reparation.

Critic—If one word only would spoil it, why have you used so many to accomplish that purpose?—Yankee Blade.

Her Eyes.

I cannot tell if they were brown or blue,
Their color was lost yet a dusky hue
Of evening's shadows hovered round the look;
And ever from their mystic depths a flash
Like moonlight quivering on a wooded pool,
Seemed to discover wondrous depths below.
I only know they thrilled me through and through
As when sweet music stirs some inmost soul.

As I said before.
I do not know what color they were;
But the eye her big brother gave me,
For winking at her on the sly,
Was most unmistakably Black!
—Binghamton Republican.

Fortifying Herself.

Young Mr. Sissy (who wants his pretty cousin at an evening entertainment)—Oh, Maude, I am so glad to see you, and I want to have a waltz with you all the first ma'am's I bowing you an ice, or something!

Pretty Cousin—No, not an ice, Charley; but you may bring me a little ether, thanks.—Harper's Bazar.

On the Boulevard.

"Do not forget the poor blind man, monsieur."

"But the last time I saw you you were deaf and dumb."

"True, monsieur; but you can hardly expect a gentleman to follow a profession forever in which he loses money."—Courier des Etats-Unis.

Out of the Woods.

Luxuriant verdure decks the plains no more;
The dog's "dead point" died alone.
The flies no more disturb the loving trains;
The organ grinder leaves the rural lanes;
The girls no more in hammocks doze or swing;
The angler has no more about his string;
The players from the diamond disappear;
The umpire's safe until again next year.
—Boston Courier.

Consolation.

Little Sister—Ma wasn't you, Sammy. Where's you been?

Sammy—Fishin'.

Little Sister—Did you catch anything?

Sammy (sadly)—Nothin't all.

Little Sister (reassuringly)—Oh! but you will when you get home.—Cleveland Leader.

An Unappreciative Audience.

Hostess—Won't you sing something, Mr. Greene?

Mr. Greene—There are so many strangers here, I—

Hostess—Never mind them; they'll be gone before you've got half through.—The Epoch.

A Little Solid Comfort.

Though we cannot but regret
The baseball season closed,
There's a little solid comfort
With our weight of sorrow blended
In the fact that we'll be free,
For at least six long months more,
From answering through the telephone,
"Say, mister, what's the score?"
—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Good Name.

Squeers—I want a name for my horse. What can you suggest?

Nickleby—Call him Money.

Squeers—Why?

Nickleby—Goes fast.—New York Sun.

Seasonable.

The rolling seasons in their round
Have brought us autumn still and serious,
And chestnuts in the woods are found
As well as in the funny joke-book.
—Boston Courier.

At a First Class Restaurant.

Diner—Can you give me oysters on the half-shell tonight?

Waiter—Yessir; but you will have to wait a few minutes. All our half shells is in use at present, sir.—New York Sun.

A Strong Combination.

New York has formed an octoo team,
That product to contest at length,
Its business men will not beam
Because in coion there is strength.
—Chicago Herald.

A Sweet Refrain.

She (at the piano)—Listen!—how do you enjoy this refrain?

He—Very much! The more you refrain the better I like it.—Chicago Globe.

The Approach of Winter.

The funny man sat at his desk all day,
And worked in a silent, industrious way;
And out in the woods the squirrel light
Is gathering chestnuts from morn till night.
—Washington Capital.

The Usual Way.

Stranger (to Kansan)—So you had a little story here, eh? How did you come out?

Kansan Man—Oh, everything passed off nicely.—New York Sun.

The Brave Drummer Boy.

His bag went down as the foundered ship,
But the drum over all was bold.
"Though," he cried, "I've lost my grip
I haven't lost my hold!"
—Harper's Bazar.

GASTRONOMICAL TID-BITS.

There is an impression that gastronomic luxuries, especially the imported luxuries, are to be higher this season.

Most of the Americans home from a tour in England are prepared to make an affidavit that home roast beef is the best.

In the line of fancy biscuit and crackers some new kinds have already appeared for the lunches and afternoon teas of the season.

Seasonable game is abundant and of very fair quality, although the man who cannot shoot any attributes it to the "wet summer."

Cheese, candies, sausages, ham and tongues, all made of candy, but a "real imitation of the genuine articles," is the latest in Parisian confectionery.

At one of the fashionable clubs in town where they gastronomically imitate the English, veal and ham pie is now a regular thing of the restaurant bill of fare.

An alligator near Micanopa, Fla., seized a horse's tail and dislocated it.

A dog at Greenwood Lake, Ga., is 21 years old and has killed in his life over sixty rattlesnakes. He has been bitten by these four times and still lives.

Among the aged domestic animals owned by Farmer Brown, of Tuscarawas county, O., are a dog 19 years of age, a cat that is nearly 17, a rooster of 13 summers and a cow of 22.

The owner of the ostrich farm in lower California paid $1,000 each for his birds, and he has gotten $1,000 out of them. Twice a year their feathers are plucked, and each picking is worth $300.

While the steamship H. A. Hartman was crossing the Atlantic on her last voyage the captain reports that the vessel struck an immense whale and cut it in two. The ocean for more than a mile was covered with the animal's blood.

A New Castle, Pa., woman mixed a mess of bread and set it near the open window. When she got ready to put it in the oven she was surprised to find a chicken sprawling in it. He had got his feet in the dough and was unable to extricate them.

A large American eagle flew on the ship William Starbuck, in the gulf stream, and after pulling a pin in an unfinished condition. The bird had a glass eye, with the undecipherable initial of the supposed owner's name in it. The bird's crew was entirely empty and it is supposed that it was carried to sea by the force of the wind and was unable to reach the shore.

Miss Emma Smith, of Norway, Me., has an aquarium. Near the pier of a wharf she has a school of tame fish. They consist of chubs, hornpouts and flat fish. They are so well trained as to eat beans out of a spoon. She has also a larger aquarium in the sea and calls them to her. Miss Smith has been feeding them for several seasons and they have grown to a large size.

ABOUT MARRIAGE.

Winter is the favorite marrying season.

Blessed is the bride on whom the sun shines.

The shower of rice is a prayer for fruitfulness.

Dec. 31 is a favorite wedding day in Scotland.

Never read the marriage service entirely over.

A bride should use no pins in her wedding clothes.

Sunday is the favorite wedding day in England.

There is an old superstition against May marriages.

A bride must wear nothing green—that color is emblematic of evil.

In Sweden and Norway Thursday or Thursday is not a propitious day.

The origin of slipper throwing is not known. It means, however, good luck.

To change the name and not the letter is change for worse and not for better.

A bride on her return home must be carried over the threshold by the groom's relatives.

According to the old Roman calendar Feb. 11, June 8, Nov. 9 and Dec. 1 were unpropitious days for marriages.

In Yorkshire the cook pours hot water over the doorstep after the couple have gone, to keep the threshold warm for another bride.

FADS OF THE QUEENS.

The Empress Frederick is a miser.

The queen of Spain is the proudest mother.

The delight of the empress of Russia is sketching.

And the queen of Greece is the finest swimmer.

The empress of Germany is a religious bigot.

The passion of the empress of Austria is riding.

Queen Victoria is never so happy as when sitting by a death bed.

Nothing delights the queen of Italy more than to hold another queen's hot necklace.

The queen of Portugal loves the same sport, but in a more rugged manner, and dashes into the fiercest brushers like a man. Indeed, several times she has been decorated for her bravery in saving human life.

The last named has a pond filled with pure white marble, rivaling the famous rose marble bath of Ismail Pasha, where Cora Pearl used to bathe in champagne and display her lovely form. In former times a favorite pastime of the 9 jean of Grande was to bar the doors of this enchanted garden, and, with her ladies-in-waiting and maids, act impromptu scenes from Greek mythology.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Rumors are extant to the effect that the Hon. Professor James Russell Lowell will never forsake his native land again.

John Burns, the English labor leader, is connected with the family of Robert Burns, and resembles the dead poet in his looks.

Rev. Mr. Spurgeon's admirers in London are disturbed by a rumor that he is seriously contemplating retirement from the pulpit.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the explorer of Greenland, will come to America next spring on a lecture tour, accompanied by his beautiful young bride.

Bellenburg never carries a stick or an umbrella when out walking, but he often fills his pockets with candy and distributes it to the children he meets.

W. H. Vanderbilt, of the Yale class of '55, is a son of Cornelius Vanderbilt. He has been elected captain of the freshman crew and has subscribed $100 to the same.

Walter Scott was the peculiar object of the late Wilkie Collins' worship, and he probably never passed a day without taking up one of the Waverley novels.

The health of Lord Tennyson is now completely restored, the warm and brilliant weather in England of the past few weeks having had a most beneficial effect.

Sir Edwin Arnold says that a man who is careful about his dress will be careful about his habits, and will not engage in any proceeding that would cast a stain upon his reputation.

Karl Gottfried Leopold Leitner, the eminent German poet, will be 89 years old on Nov. 18, but still retains his mental vigor. He has just completed a tragedy, "The Judge of Galway."

Thomas A. Edison has grown flashy of late. His hair is much grayer than it was two years ago, but his face is as youthful and his eye has the same cheerful character that it possessed of old.

Among the noted men of the day names sailing with "non" are unusually numerous. Herr Most, Robert Lee Stevenson, Tennyson, Murchison and others illustrate the truth of this.

Edward W. Bok, who started The Brooklyn Magazine when he was 19, has been made editor of The Ladies' Home Journal at the age of 25. He enjoys an income of $10,000 a year in his new position.

Professor David Peck Todd, of Amherst college, will leave in a few days for parts unknown to the United States to Mazatlan, on the Quanno river, in west Africa, to observe the eclipse of the sun which will occur on Dec. 22.

The Duke of Edinburgh has practically expatriated himself, and will hereafter visit England only occasionally. His disgust with the Prince of Wales for permitting the Princess Louise to marry the Duke of Fife is the cause.

Robert Bonner once paid Tennyson $5,000 for a poem which made only twenty lines in The New York Ledger. That was at the rate of $250 a line, which is a price that would almost seem beyond the value of any written production.

The empress and members of the aristocracy of Japan have given up the idea of adopting the western styles of dress for women. The Parisian models did not please the people in general, and the fashionists costumes will again be worn exclusively.

A Bismarck museum is to be opened at Berlin next April on the chancellor's 75th birthday. It is to contain every species of object relating to the prince's public life, including a large collection of poems praising, denouncing or ridiculing him, and an immense number of caricatures.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS.

Small diamonds encircling a star sapphire make a rich appearing and costly scarf pin.

Sugar tongs, the blades of which are formed of fancy figures of bowls cast in sterling silver, are handsome as well as unique.

Garnet jewelry, of American manufacture, is rapidly attaining the place in public esteem so long occupied by imported goods.

Among the latest novelties in silver watch cases is one in imitation of a chimney. The worn bricks are represented by oxidizing.

A fox's head, with emerald eyes, held between two chains, representing the legs of the animal, is an innovation in silver rings.

Winter jewelry, in the shape of diamond studded toboggan lace pins and variegated gold snow shoes, is beginning to make its appearance.

A variegated gold bracelet, in imitation of the bow of a tree, with the form of a green enamel diamond studded lizard creeping along the top, is a unique ornament.

Two crescent hearts, each encircled by small diamonds, surmounted by a cupid's bow, entwined in a true lover's knot, is a lace pin very attractive to a smitten youth.

Two bowling pins of gold, with narrow enamel bands, with three monograms in turquoise and diamonds, mounted on a scarf pin. The article is much affected by pliers of the pen.

A black enameled wire bracelet, with sparkling gilt ornamentation, set with a single greenish tinted diamond, is exceedingly modest, and sufficiently novel to command admiration.

An oddity in lace pins is a diminutive pair of gold scissors, with a small diamond representing the screw. The blades of the article are shown open, and between them is shown a bead of variegated cotton.—Jewelers' Weekly.

JOTTINGS.

—Bunch of Keys at Music Hall to-night.

—In another month the rabbits will suffer.

—Days of 1889 past, 307: days to come, 58.

—A Camden thief's latest steal is of a saw.

—Watches are now made entirely from paper.

—Thanksgiving Day will occur this year on November 28.

—Use of No. 7's horses has been disabled by running a large nail into its foot.

—The Republicans of North Plainfield will hold a rally in Spencer's Hall to-night.

—The Assembly convention for this district convened in Rahway this afternoon.

—The Stereopticon exhibition at the Westfield Presbyterian church last evening was well attended.

—Some persons keep scrap-books in which are pasted the cards of their more distinguished visitors.

—A watch-timer by which a time piece can be accurately regulated in very short order is a new invention.

—Don't fail to register next Thursday. It will be your last chance previous to the gubernatorial election.

—According to a law passed last Winter, the election boards have the power to adjourn one hour for dinner.

—The table cover no longer hangs around a table in large folds, but is simply large enough to cover the top and edges.

—The Democrats of this city have invited the Hon. John R. McPherson to speak in this city on next Wednesday evening.

—It was cold enough last night to freeze water left out of doors, and in several instances ice was discovered this morning.

—At "Werner's Mammoth One-price Clothing House," there is a boom in overcoats and Winter wear generally, suitable for the season, as elsewhere advertised with Mr. Werner's usual enterprise.

—The Court of Pardons will hold a special session at Trenton on Saturday next to consider the case of Joseph Hillman, who was sentenced to be hanged on November 15 next, for the murder of Herman Saltzman, at Woodbury.

—On Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 11th and 12th, a chrysanthemum show will be held at the residence of Mr. John C. Shaw, of Finderne, N. J. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of Bound Brook Congregational church.

—Secret Practices of Somerville, took Carl Smith, the tramp convicted of assault in Washington Valley, to State Prison on Thursday. Smith is will be remembered was the man who created so much comment on the streets of this city last July by his wild appearance.

—Several of the letter boxes in the city have been located in more convenient places. The mail matter will be collected from these boxes at 5:30 a. m. for the early morning mails and in the afternoon for the 1:45 and 5:30 p. m. mail. All Sunday collections are completed by 3 p. m.

—We note that the swell rum holes of New York and Philadelphia propose to raise the price of champagne from $3.50 to $4.00 per quart. It is a matter of sincere regret that they won't raise the price to $40 per quart. New Jersey farmers might then have a chance to press cider profitably. A man who is fool enough to pay $4 for a bottle of gassy cider might as well pay $40. He would at least be putting fool's money in circulation.—New Brunswick Home News.'

—E. H. Sothern will appear here to-morrow evening, in the greatest comedy success that New York has had for two seasons "Lord Chumley". Chumley is a type of Englishmen not occasionally who go through life with all their good qualities hidden from the world because the artificiality of their lives makes living such a beastly bore. Mr. Sothern blends the libertine and bored phases of the character in a thoroughly artistic manner and shows himself wonderfully clever in both.

—The Elizabeth Journal says that "a few years ago the idea of a county taking hold of its public roads and paving them at a cost of $6,000 to $10,000 a mile would have been considered chimerical, and the man who advanced the idea would have been looked upon as an impracticable crank. But to-day we have, in Union county, hundreds of men employed under contract, at the county's expense, building the very roads that a few years ago would have been laughed at. This is progress." Perhaps.

A TARGET EXCURSION.

Catholic Young Men Visit Plainfield to Enjoy a Shoot.

At 11:30 o'clock this morning a special train rolled into the North avenue station in this city. It carried the members of the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association of Morristown and St. Mary's Y. M. C. L. A. of Elizabeth. There were about 300 members in line. They came to Plainfield to enjoy a target excursion.

The visitors were met by a committee of St. Mary's Young Men's Society, of this city, headed by the Brown's band, of Elizabeth, and Vroe's First Regiment band, of Newark, they marched down North avenue to Park; to Seventh street; to Liberty; to Sixth. Here they were greeted by hearty cheers by the children of St. Mary's parochial school. Father Smyth, the pastor of St. Mary's church, delivered an address of welcome. The line was again formed and after a countermarch the societies paraded to Liberty street; to Front; to Somerset; to Green brook road; to Keller's grove, where rifle practice will be indulged in.

The young men as they paraded through our streets presented a fine appearance.

At the conclusion of the day's sport they will partake of dinner at Casper's Hotel. Several prizes accompany them. The society from Elizabeth carried a target, on the back of which was an oil painting of their building.

TWO MORE VICTIMS.

A Brakeman and a Tramp Killed Near Bound Brook.

The unidentified remains of a man lie at the morgue in Bound Brook, horribly mangled. The poor unfortunate was killed near the Greenbrook water-tanks on the Central Railroad yesterday afternoon by the passenger train which is due in that place at 5:00 o'clock. There is nothing on the body by which the remains can be identified and he is supposed to have been a tramp. He wore a full beard of a brownish color and he was apparently about forty-five years old. The hair is partially grey. The head and one of the legs were severed from the body. The remains were given in charge of Undertaker Patrick Bush and he will inter them in Potters field at the expense of the Central Railroad Company.

A brakeman named Young was yesterday afternoon thrown from the top of a freight car on the Lehigh Valley Railroad near the Bound Brook depot and was instantly killed. The remains were not mangled. The body still lies at the freight house awaiting the action of the coroner.

PERSONAL.

Mr. S. A. Haines, of Rahlenwood is enroute for California on a business trip.

Mr. William Craig, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, is at present in Texas.

Messrs. Lebbens Manning, Randolph Stelle, and Halsey Compton, will start Monday for Pennsylvania on a hunting trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Ruttman and their son Harry have returned to their Crescent avenue home from a trip to Holland.

Mr. John W. Benjamin, of Elizabeth, has received the Republican nomination for Assembly from the second Assembly District.

Miss Annie Monks and Mr. Adam Smith, both of this city were yesterday united in marriage in St. Mary's church by the Rev. Father Smyth.

Mr. N. Carroll Downs and Miss Lulu Fleming, of Westfield were last night united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. Owen, the pastor of the M. E. church. Mr. and Mrs. Downs left this morning for Washington on their wedding trip.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Gurdon S. Colt will take place from her late residence, 23 LaGrande avenue, to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock. Interment will be made at Greenwood Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

The funeral services over the remains of Harry Macy, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Brown, took place from the parents' residence on North avenue at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Interment was made in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield.

Manager John D. Mishler was in Plainfield to-day completing the arrangements for the appearance of Prof. George Bartholomew and his twenty-four educated horses at Music Hall next week. This entertainment is said to be refined, interesting and instructive, and will no doubt attract unusually large audiences.

A Collision on Somerset Street.

A horse and wagon driven by a boy employed by Mrs. Ulrich collided with a wagon belonging to Mr. Samuel Moore at the corner of Somerset and Pearl streets yesterday afternoon at about four o'clock. Mr. Moore was thrown from his seat and received painful injuries to his left side and back. Both wagons were more or less damaged and Mrs. Ulrich's horse was bruised about the legs.

—Over-gaiters buttoning around the ankle are now in great vogue among both fashionable men and women.

—Don't fail to attend the meeting at U. S. Grant Republican Club at their headquarters Spencer's Hall this evening. Good speakers have been engaged.

—In a communication the Young Crescents deny that they were defeated by the Green Brooks by a score of 9 to 0 in a game of ball and say that they defeated the club who claim the victory.

—Mr. Edison says the earth will be like one car in a few years. "It will be unsafe," he adds, "to speak in a house until you have examined the walls and furniture form concealed phonographs."

—"How can the evils of intemperance be most speedily and thoroughly eradicated," is to be the subject of a joint debate at Crandford Hall, Crandford, N. J., Thursday evening, Oct. 31st. Mr. Charles N. Fowler, of the Crandford Republican Club and Mr. Theodore C. Bergue, of the Crandford Prohibition Club are to be the speakers.

Mr. Reed Contradicts Mr. Ross.

Lawyer Reed who was counsel for the defendant in the notorious Sullivan Dunlap brawl and liquor case, naturally doesn't want an impression to go abroad that there was any suborning of witnesses in his office, as Mr. Ross, one of the plaintiff's witnesses, reported to Chief Carey, and as he informed THE NEWS reporter in quest of the particulars, and as we on his authority reported. To remove any impression of that character Mr. Reed sends us the following.

"Ross swore that he, Collins and Quest came to my office and that I said what he had to say about the case, but that he did not tell me much. That Collins and I then had a talk in another part of the room which he did not hear and that he then left. He did not say, when on the witness stand as any rate, that I was agreed to give him $10, or that he had been either bribed or threatened, or even asked to leave Sullivan when in my office. Neither did he say that Sullivan was present.

"As a matter of fact I never knew, nor even heard, that Ross had been either bribed or threatened, until I heard him testify.

"I do not know that Collins will have told Carey, but I do know that he is an infernal liar and utterly unworthy of credence."

Mr. Reed's option of Mr. Ross's veracity is that of an opposing counsel and the same opinion might be entertained by the other side, of the witnesses.

Collins stated to a NEWS reporter that he was not present at the interview referred to in the counsel's office as all, but that it was Sullivan, although it appears by the statement of Mr. Ross, Chief Carey and Sullivan's own counsel that he was.

Mr. Reed's own statements of the interview shows that a meeting took place, but that he was not a party to a suborning. We should not think such an able young lawyer would need to be.

To Help the Firemen.

Previous to the opening of the fair of Amoskeag Council Order of American Firemen, the committee in charge sent invitation to Gen. Grubb and Leon Abbett, inviting them to visit the fair. Yesterday the committee received a letter from Gen. Grubb, stating his inability to attend; but he sent his check for a liberal amount to help the cause along. Messrs. Bartalow & Dunn, the North avenue grocers have decided to give to the committee on the fair such a percentage of the gross receipts received from sales of Bland's Blended out loaf tea, during the fair week.

The committee have decided to keep the fair open this evening until after the conclusion of the performance of the "Bunch of Keys" at Music Hall. The Plainfield Cornet Band is in attendance every evening. Dancing is a feature.

Valuable Assistance.

The Republicans of New Jersey are hoping to have the early and able advice and counsel of Senator Quay, Chairman of the National Republican Committee, in the conduct of the campaign in Hudson county. His will be a helping hand, indeed, if it can be secured. He knows Abbett, and is familiar with the law which bears his name. If by his aid the vote of that county can be honestly cast, and honestly counted, the Republicans will have the grateful thanks of the entire State. That condition of things being given, the "usual" Democratic majority of Hudson will have taken a long stride toward the vanishing point.—Bridgeton Pioneer.

A Letter From Washington.

[From our regular correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24th, 1889.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—President Harrison is busy perusing his message to Congress, and, with the reviewing such an important document requires, will not be at peace until the Fifty-First Congress has assembled and received it. The Capitol shows signs of returning life, and even the old woodies who sniff the unmistakable pies in the corridors are waking from their Summer trance. Around the hotels the political camp followers are beginning to assemble in the vain hope of "getting into something" before the session fully opens. Every Congressman who appears is pounced upon by some old timer, whose power of hanging on to his victim would make a leech green with envy.

Members of both parties speak confidently, of course, of the outlook. The old time Democratic members, constitutionally delegated to go back into the minority, where he can be just as joyously miserable as he pleases, looks to obstructing legislation as usual, unless—as is possible—the rules be so amended as to render it impossible.

So far as tariff legislation is concerned, there is every possibility of securing Republican harmony. The Senate bill of the last session, with a few modifications that subsequent consideration has suggested, will probably be approved by the party in both Houses, and should become law by March or April at the farthest.

The speakership becomes more and more a leading topic of conversation as the assembling of Congress draws near. The presence of Messrs. Cannon and Burrows in the city has enlivened speculation, but really adds no new element to the fight. Only in the event of a deadlock between Messrs. Reed and McKinley can either of these gentlemen become available. There are an immense number of unpledged Congressmen and their votes will on first ballot probably go to Mr. Reed. As he was the candidate for speaker when it was but an empty honor, many members quite justly feel that their allegiance is due him now that the nomination is a substantial reward for services. But after the first ballot, should he fail of election, the majority of the unpledged votes would go elsewhere. And in view of the importance of tariff action during the coming session, and Mr. McKinley's strength with the manufacturing interest of the country, these votes would probably go to Mr. Kinley. The party wants a strong, tried man. Such a man is Mr. Reed, certainly, and such a man is Mr. McKinley, though not so great a parliamentarian. Outside these two Mr. Burrows has the best chance. Mr. Cannon is too unpopular personally to make a strong candidate. He has kicked over the party traces in times past, and that also hurts his prospects.

A stupendous amount of work faces the Fifty-first Congress. All over the country new members and old are contemplating starting the country with some thrilling act of statesmanship. Probably eighteen or twenty times as much will be introduced, as nineteen cases out of twenty only to be referred to some accommodating committee by which they will be immediately pigeon-holed.

Among the important subjects Congress will be called upon to consider, is that of coast defenses. The subject is trite, but public interest is waking on this subject. Aside from making provision for a few modern guns for coast defense, Congress has done practically nothing. Adequate defenses are demanded by public sentiment; and the surplus in the Treasury warrants the necessary expenditure. Piecemeal appropriation for a few guns at a time does not satisfy the demand, which is for a general plan of improvement with a sufficient appropriation available at all times to carry on work steadily, without the delay that an exhausted appropriation always occasions. Senator Dolph's bill introduced last session will be again brought forward, and its passage earnestly urged.

The ultimate fate of the Blair Educational bill would be hard to foretell. Its passage by the Senate is assured, but its treatment in the House is uncertain. There both non members of the Republican side who regard Federal aid to public schools as not only unwise but unconstitutional. Even if the rule should be so amended as to take from the minority the power to obstruct legislation, the question remains an open one as to whether the educational bill could be made to pass even with all of Senator Blair's generalship and influence with his friends in the House.

Neither the civil service law nor the interstate commerce law will likely be repealed. Both systems have been found to be inefficient in many respects, but being movements in the direction, they may be greatly changed, though they cannot be eradicated. The repeal of the civil service law at the present time might be disastrous. BORAX.

Sunday School Convention.

The annual convention of the Union County Sunday school association will be held in the Third Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, on the afternoon and evening of Friday, Nov. 8. The exercises will be of general interest, and many prominent Sunday school workers will address the meetings. The programme will be announced hereafter.

There was a representative gathering Tuesday evening at the Third church, attended by officers and teachers from most of the schools of Elizabeth, and the occasion was taken to sign for the proper entertainment of the delegates, and for making the convention an incentive to more earnest work in the Sunday school cause.

Cistern Water.

Mr. Samuel Stockton, of Lambertville, has been experimenting as to how to make the impure water in a cistern pure, and he has met with success in the following simple receipt, which he is anxious to give to the people: Throw into your cistern three-quarters of a pound of saltpetre, and do not disturb the water for ten hours afterward. At the expiration of that time the water will be found pure and sweet. Several persons have tried the experiment and all report good result.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

Professor E. J. Houston, of Philadelphia, has prepared a dictionary of electrical terms, which has been needed for some time. Electricity has not only changed our industries, it has added greatly to the words we shall have to learn the meaning of.

A shameful state of affairs exists in several of the largest cities of the Union. Hundreds and thousands of children are turned away from the school house doors to roam the streets, because there is not room for them. There is not money to provide school house accommodation, but there is always money to pay a host of petty political officials.

A writer says that a rattlesnake may be handled with safety, provided you will keep it in good humor and never touch its tail. So if a rattler bites you, summon all your will power, keep your head on, don't get frightened, and you will not die. Don't go out now and catch a rattler and begin fooling with him just to try it, however. The same writer mentions that a preparation of concentrated benzoin, applied immediately, will render a snake bite harmless. But don't go and get bitten only to try it.

"Looking Backward" Two Ways.

In the winter of 1889-1 a striking story was published in The Cincinnati Commercial. It came to the paper in manuscript form, and was written by a lady of that city. It was called "The Narrative of Vera Zarovitch," and was a prophecy of the civilization of the future. Many of our readers are familiar with the novel called "Looking Backward," by Edward Bellamy. "Looking Backward" was a very successful book, making both money and reputation for its author. But now comes the strange part of the story. Mme. Zarovitch puts forward the claim that in all its essential features, plot and all, "Looking Backward" was simply stolen from her narrative. Furthermore, she claims that Houghton, Mifflin & Co. published the book for Mr. Bellamy knowing this to be the case. The lady will bring suit at once to maintain her claim. If the courts support her, this will be one of the most celebrated cases of literary piracy on record.

Another Whitechapel Theory.

Dr. Lawson Tait, a London surgeon, has put forward a theory in regard to the fiendish Whitechapel murders which is ingenious enough to figure in one of Poe's weird stories.

He says first, the murderer is an epileptic maniac, and does the murders while the fit is on, being unconscious of the crime afterwards. Second, she is, not a man, but a woman, who gathers her splashed and bloody skirt around her waist under her shawl immediately after the act is done, and so escapes detection. Then, since women are always at the wash tub," she easily washes out the stains and is not detected. Third, the murderer is some one employed in a slaughter house, and familiar with the way in which animals are slaughtered in London. The Whitechapel victims have had their throats cut from behind, and have then been eviscerated in the exact manner in which a London butcher begins to dress a sheep. The cuts are long and slashing, unlike those made either by a surgeon or a novice. There are known to be women employed occasionally about the London butcher shops. It is here, according to Dr. Tait, that detectives should search for the true clew.

The First Chinese Railway.

A great event has happened in China. The son of heaven, that is to say, the emperor, has issued a decree that a railway shall be built from Pekin to Hankow. The road will be 700 miles long, and will pass through a portion of China into which the daylight of western civilization has never before penetrated. For many years the Liberal party of the country have striven to get government permission to build a railroad there, but in vain. All the old arguments used against the first introduction of the iron way into England were rehashed in China, with more effect, and in addition the peculiarly Chinese objection that the road would disturb the graves of their ancestors. Besides, an iron track, with black, thundering monsters rushing over it, would invade the sanctity of the earth, make it angry and cause earthquakes.

At length, however, the Chinese authorities have concluded to take the risks at once of the wrath of the earth and of their ancestors, and construct the road. Its first result will be to give an immense impetus to the internal trade of China and after that to foreign commerce. But that it will work any great revolution in Chinese customs and civilization immediately, is not likely, though it will do so ultimately. As to that, The London Spectator says: "A railway will no more make a mandarin honest than a telegraph will make him a Christian."

MR. GLADSTONE SPEAKS

He Addresses the Liberal Meeting at Southport.

ONE MENACE TO EUROPE'S PEACE.

It is the Complications Caused by Turkish Misrule in Crete—Inconsistency of the Tories to the People of Ireland—Other Foreign News.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The meeting of the Liberal electors of Southport yesterday afternoon, who gathered to listen to the great speech of Mr. Gladstone, proved the most enthusiastic and successful political event held in England for a long time. Mr. Gladstone was at his best, and for an hour and ten minutes he spoke to his auditors with all his old time vim and eloquence. The hall was beautifully decorated. The hall in which Mr. Gladstone spoke was crowded to suffocation fully two hours before the great Liberal statesman arrived. On entering the hall he was greeted with a storm of cheers and shouts, in which every member of the large and enthusiastic audience joined, and which was prolonged until the grand old man had reached the platform and waved his hand as a signal for quiet. After feelingly thanking his audience for the warm welcome accorded him Mr. Gladstone at once plunged into the business in hand by presenting to his hearers an admirable review of the work for the past twenty-one years of the great Liberal party, whose candidate he had come there to support.

One Menace to Europe's Peace.

He spoke of the condition of affairs on the continent at the present time, and expressed the belief that the one formidable menace to the peace of Europe was the complications growing out of the Cretan revolt against Turkish misrule. He could not deny that a crisis in European affairs was imminent, and paid a high tribute to the laudable anxiety of all the powers concerned to postpone it.

The Situation in Ireland.

Passing to a consideration of affairs in Ireland, Mr. Gladstone pointed out that the principles for which the dockmen in their peaceful strike recently were precisely the same as those for which the Irish tradesmen and tenantry sought recognition at the hands of a British parliament. It was absurd to give sympathy to the one and deny it to the other, for the two must stand or fall together. But this was precisely what the Tory government had done. While conceding the justice of the dockmen's claims to a decent living as the fruits of their labor, they crowded the Irish prisons with tenants who made the same claim.

Coercion a Miserable Failure.

He believed that an appeal to the people, if it could be made tomorrow, would rest it in a verdict overwhelmingly in favor of the Liberal party's policy to Ireland. The policy of coercion, he insisted, had proved a miserable failure, and if any proof were needed of the fact it would only be necessary to point to the one and only theory in the armory. He could not deny that a crisis in European affairs was imminent, and paid a high tribute to the laudable anxiety of all the powers concerned to postpone it.

The policy of coercion, he insisted, had proved a miserable failure, and if any proof were needed of the fact it would only be necessary to point to the one and only theory in the armory of coercion, with which it was proposed to pacify Ireland, the Tory government found it necessary less than a fortnight ago to propose new clauses in Ireland. The crime rate today was the same as it was in 1884, when the Tories declared that coercion was no longer necessary, and yet that policy remained the corner stone of the government's programme.

The Liberal Party's Policy.

Mr. Gladstone, in concluding, stated that it was impossible at this time to point out the Liberal policy of the future within the outlines already well known to the electors. At this time it was only necessary to present to the electors for their approval or rejection the living principles for which the Liberal party contended.

France and Turkey.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The Journal des Debats, commenting on the visit of Emperor William of Germany to Turkey and its effects upon the European situation, recalls the declaration made by Prince Bismarck that the eastern question was not worth the bones of a single Pommeranian grenadier, and the fact that Emperor William, during the banquet to the czar on his late visit to Berlin, toasted the Russian army which captured Plevna.

Under these circumstances, the paper points out, it would be impossible for the sultan to join the triple alliance. It also says that Turkey has an army which enables her to dispense with all allies. Nothing menaces Turkey, whose security is best assured by her independence. The French interests in the east are bound up with the interests of Turkey, and consequently there is no more decided a partisan of the integrity of Turkey than France.

France Kills Chinese Railroads.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 24.—It is stated here that the sudden and unexpected collapse of the Chinese bubble was due entirely to the attitude of the French government. The French have insisted on a rigid compliance on the part of China with the terms of a certain article in an old treaty, by which 40 miles of French were entitled to supply not only the material but the personnel of the management of any railroad thereafter to be built within the limits of the Chinese empire.

Strikers and Soldiers in Collision.

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—The striking weavers and spinners of Forst have been in the habit of becoming more and more violent every day, and the large force of police and military already in the district are insufficient to preserve even the semblance of order. Collisions between the strikers and the troops are of frequent occurrence. In one of these the people of the district have been fired and many of the malcontents were wounded.

St. Petersburg Flooded.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 24.—A sudden rise in the waters of the river Neva has flooded the whole lower part of this city and a large number of streets are under water. In many houses the inmates have been rescued only saved from drowning by rescuers in boats. The river is again falling. The damage to property along the water front extends for miles on both sides of the river and will reach enormous figures.

News from Stanley.

BERLIN, Oct. 24.—Word has been received from Capt. Wissmann stating that reliable news has been received to the effect that Emin Bey, Capt. Stuhlmann, Signor Casati and six Englishmen are all expected to arrive at Mpwapwa at the latter part of November. Capt. Wissmann also says that he defeated a force of insurgents near Bonane and killed seventy of them.

Father McFadden's Lively Trial.

DUBLIN, Oct. 24.—In the trial of Father McFadden at Maryborough for the killing of Inspector Martin, attorneys, jurymen and the judge himself came near having a fatal encounter, and Counsel Healy and two of the jurors were fined £20 each for contempt of court.

BROOKLYN WINS AGAIN.

A Large Amount of Kicking in the Fourth Great Ball Game.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A dark, dreary sky, and a decidedly cold day greeted the champions of the League and of the Association in the second of their fourth meeting for the world's championship. But 8,000 people had the hardihood to brave pneumonia to witness the game. Crane was very sorry on the grounds in the first, and in view of the former's fine work of last Saturday, an easy thing for New York was confidently expected. This proved to be a mistake, however, for the Brooklyns took kindly to his pitching when hits were needed, and piled up runs in almost every inning. The New Yorks were only able to get to the pitcher's box in the latter inning they began to bat Terry hard. O'Rourke led off with a two bagger and was advanced to third on Whitney's sale bunt. Brown Governor Jackson and Whitney across the rubber and earned the batter third. Gore followed with another three bagger, scoring Crane. Tiernan struck out, leaving his to the pitcher, who threw to the plate to catch Gore, who had started for home. Gore turned back and Clarke's throw to Pinkney, to catch the runner, struck Gore in the back and rolled into left field. Gaffney, to the surprise of the New Yorkers and the delight of the Brooklynites, called Gore out for interference. After a lengthy talk this decision went. Keeping the play got first and went to third on Ward's single. Ward started for second and Clarke made a bluff at throwing down to head him off. Instead he threw to third to catch Ewing, but the throw was wild and Ewing scored. Ward started in from second on the same play and O'Brien fielded the ball from left to head him off.

His throw in hit O'Rourke, who stood on the coachers' line, and Ward reached home. Gaffney decided he had not returned to the base, a prolonged kick followed. Ewing claimed that O'Rourke, as coacher, had a right to stand where he did, that the throw from O'Brien was not to the base, and that the ball would not have reached home in time to cause Ward's out. Ewing rather than obey Gaffney and order Ward back to third held on even after the latter had given the ball. Gaffney then tacitly admitted that he was in error by allowing Ward's run. This gave Brooklyn a chance to delay the game for darkness, and this they improved. Ewing and Gaffney and arguing for twenty-five minutes. He, however, held to his last decision, counting Ward's run, which tied the score. It was now almost too dark to play, but the game was resumed. Connor, the next batter for New York, struck out, retiring the side.

Crane, taking advantage of the darkness, began shooting them over the plate for Brooklyn's first batter, Corkhill, and he retired on strikes. Richardson fumbled Smith's grounder, and Crane sent Collins to base on balls. O'Brien couldn't see the ball and fanned out, but Burns, the following batter did. He lined out a single and the game was over. Brooklyn, by the rule, allowed to make the circuit of the bases on his hit, no one fielding the ball. Mr. Day says he will not play any more games under Gaffney unless he is more fair in his decisions.

Hocking Valley Miners Out.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 24.—At a mass meeting of union miners employed by the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron company, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That we, the members of the National Progressive union, working under the employ of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron company, refuse to work any longer until our grievances be presented by the said company, and the check off for all expense of the mine guaranteed to us as before May 1, 1889. It being understood that we do not ask the company to check off any miners' or mine laborers' dues by their own expressed desire." In accordance with the above resolution over six hundred miners employed by the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron company

Made Him Tired.

It had rained all the long, dreary day, and Miss Lord Fauntleroy's golden curls were limp and wet, and his nice collar hung like a rag, and his shoulders ached for they were so tired of sitting still, and his feet kicks at the cat which lay by the stove.

"Grandpa," he said, softly, as he came to the side of the man who was quietly sitting, smoking, and still wet, "I thought all brides were of the female sex."

"They are, my child; they are. Why do you make such an odd remark?"

"Because, grandpa, in looking over my geography lesson I came upon the Hebrides. They are female, too! And if so, why are they called 'he's?'" And the little lord pointed to his adolescence's face with an anxious, eager look in his gobelin blue eyes, which showed that in his desire to be informed he could not wait.

"Go away, child; you weary me," said the old man. And little Lord Fauntleroy crept softly away, and did not trouble again, even all the remainder of the day.—Albany Argus.

The Newer and Better Way.

The following form for the arrangement of pictures in the family album has been copyrighted. Persons adhering to it will save the stereotyped explanations usually given to callers as they turn the leaves:

No. 1—"Understood to be 'my father,' you know, now in his 70th year. Nice old man, but rather set in his ways."

No. 2—"That's grandma—65 years old and as spry as a cricket. Coming out to see us next fall. Didn't turn gray until she was 60."

No. 3—"Oldest sister, Mamie—lives in Cincinnati—five children—keeps three servants—estarace in the left eye."

4—"That's Oh, that's my brother Ben, the black sheep of the family. He's out in Denver now. We think he's engaged."

5—"My sister Jessie's four children in a group. Aren't they cunning? Jessie lives in Chicago. We don't think she is happy with her husband, but she never lets on, you know."

6—"My cousin Bella—lives in Wisconsin—rather conceited and uppish. We used to write, but don't now."

7—"My Uncle William, of Massachusetts. He's rich and we expect he'll leave us his money. Queer old duck, and we have to use him tenderly."

8—"Oh, yes! That picture doesn't belong in there. That's my Aunt Sarah, but she's dead. Been dead five years, but we kind of keep the picture around. She didn't amount to much. Just ordinary, you know."

9—"One of my girl friends. She thinks she's good looking, but she isn't. I'm mad at her just now, and I keep it in here for spite.

10—"Both of my babies. The picture is never as good looking as he is. We were engaged, but his mother broke it up.

11, 12, 13, 14 and 15—"Aunts, uncles, cousins and other folks who don't amount to much, but have been put in to fill up."—Detroit Free Press.

Surprised at Their Number.

A remarkable member of the house had watched the pages sitting up and down the aisles, and had indulged in considerable speculation as to why they were there. A day or two ago his curiosity became so great that he asked a fellow member:

"Say, John, who are them boys that play around the hall?"

"Why," was the reply, "they are pages."

"Good all-fired!" said the astonished gentleman. "Ye don't mean to tell me them's all them Page's boys, do ye?"—Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

WOMAN AND HOME.

HOW SHALL WE DEAL WITH THE REFRACTORY CHILDREN.

A New York Woman on the Boston Sheep Girl—About Dinners and Dining—Boarding Schools in 1703—Remedies for Sleeplessness—Good Fireside Reading.

Not long ago I overheard a conversation between two boys of perhaps 10 years of age, which struck me very forcibly. One said to the other, "Are you going fishing today?" "No, I reckon not," was the answer; "mother won't let me." "Fudge," said the first boy, contemptuously, "tease her and tease her, and if she won't let you go, lie down on the floor and kick. That's the way I do. Then she will let you go."

My first thought was one of indignation against the little rascal; my second, no, the child is not to blame. If he knows, he can get what he wants by teasing, why should he not tease? Or, if kicking upon the floor will change his mother's as into a yes, he would be a very foolish boy if he did not kick. If he did not know he could get what he wants by teasing and kicking he would not do it. The mother has only herself to blame for her boy's naughtiness. I believe that right here lies three-fourths of the trouble, anxiety and wear upon the nerves in the bringing up of children. Let your no mean no always and it will be accepted as final, but, if sometimes it may possibly mean yes, you may rest assured that you will not be the one to get the benefit of the doubt. But think before you say no.

Remember that what seems to you a foolish trifle may mean a great deal to your little one, and to be deprived of the pleasure will cause a bitter disappointment. When she comes to you brimming over with some anticipated scheme that promises such lots of fun, enter into the plans with interest, and be glad with her. If it seems to you not a feasible thing, do not say so, but tell her you must think it over. Then think it over carefully, and the difficulties may disappear. If not, and you find it would be unwise to grant her request, tell her so lovingly, giving her the reasons why it would not be best, and tell her how sorry you are that you must deny her. If you have taught her by your daily actions that her mother is her truest friend; if she knows that you love her so well that you will grant her every happiness that is in your power, if it is best that she should have it, she will accept the decision, because "mamma knows," and, though the lips may quiver and the eyes fill, there will be no "scene," no outbreak of temper such as all mothers dread.

A child brought up close to the mother's heart, with perfect confidence in the strong mother love, will give her unquestioned obedience when that obedience is necessary, because it will not occur to her mind to doubt the love in the demand. Share your children's joys as well as their sorrows, O mother. Be a child with them when you can, and the battle is half won.

In dealing with children a little strategy may sometimes be used with marvelously good result, and before the world I will plead guilty to what, when doing the point at issue has been so skillfully turned that she has done exactly what you wished her to do and forgotten to rebel over it.—A. D. Fogg in Good Housekeeping.

Painstaking Boston Shop Girls.

"I could not but notice during a recent visit to Boston," said a New York woman, "the difference between the saleswomen of that and my own city. I went into several of the large shops on Tremont and Washington streets, and was met everywhere with a cordiality of manner that was noticeable and pleasant. The girls seemed to take an individual interest in my purchases. In one place I wanted a dress trimming. When I reached the proper counter I found the saleswoman, who was a very intelligent, ladylike looking person, with eyeglasses, busily engaged with two others. They were also buying dress trimmings, and one was troubled to make a selection. The girl behind the counter entered into the matter with respectful interest, into the discussion, advising, suggesting and planning, with interest and intelligence. She finally capped the climax by proposing as a hesitating buyer to take a sample home to try by evening and daylight with the dress goods, thus indefinitely postponing a sale that seemed on the point of being consummated.

"The ladies concluded this was a good idea and withdrew. I then approached, and the saleswoman was just as interested in my behalf, although it is a way I could only appreciate, not resent. This was not the exception, but the rule, of the treatment I received at the hands of every saleswoman I encountered. It was indeed a different sort from most of those seen in New York stores. Their voices were well modulated and had a cultured ring, this latter no doubt due in a great measure to their native use of the short sound of a. I noticed, too, that generally their hands were well manicured and carefully kept. I have been wondering if perhaps the Boston shoppers had something to do with all this. I must add, though, in behalf of New York, that it is much too big a place for some of the Boston saleswoman's attributes. No shop girl here could spare the time to enter into the details of individual shopping. I am afraid I should be the first to complain of that if I were the waiting customer here."—New York Sun.

Boarding Schools in 1703.

To The Atlantic Monthly L. D. Morgan contributes a most entertaining article on "Ladies and Learning." The following extract will give an idea of woman's advancement in an educational line. He says: During this era a passion for fancy work of the most pernicious nature—decorative art of the most Brummagem type—seems to have filled the feminine breast to overflowing. Here is an advertisement of a school kept by a London "gentlewoman," taken from a gazette of 1703, which gives an idea of the way in which school girls passed their time, and I submit one shudder to think of the power they possessed to inflict such works of art on their friends and relations during the remainder of their unoffending existence:

"There is to be taught wax works of all sorts—fruits upon trees or in dishes, all manner of confections, shell work, fowls and anything that can be made of wax." (Here speaks the dauntless artist. Observe, too, the fine indifference as to the natural or artificial affinities of fruit and fowl.) "Painting on work of any sort. * * * Japanese work, painting on glass, scenes for windows upon garnet or transparent paper, straw work of any sort or no sort, birds' nests, shell work and in scenes or flowers, quail work, gum work, transparent work, pull work, paper work, tortoise work, gimp or bugle work, silver bandstring, a new work of the fashionable Japan" (be if the real Japan would not be bad enough), "tape lace, cutting glass, washing lace, pastry of all sorts, with the finest images that's used by London, boasting fowl without cutting the back, better work, conserving and candying all sorts of fruits, the whole, writing and arithmetic, making of the great seal of England, the whistle, quoit surprise, and several other things. Any whose desirous to learn the above may board with herself at a reasonable rate, or board themselves and come to her."

About Dinners and Dining.

Miss Julia Corson maintains that, if in an average company you select at random a dozen men and a dozen women, the masculine group will possess much the more knowledge of cookery, and the statistics she backed up in a recent conversation with many illustrations. Go into a restaurant, she says, with a number of men and women. Unless there should be present the chef or cook or a woman who has traveled extensively and observed much, you will never go wrong if you intrust the selection of the dinner to the gentlemen. Let some woman should reply that men are more used to restaurant and hotel fashions and feel themselves more at ease in ordering. Miss Corson is willing to go a step further. If it is a case of ordering a nice little family dinner at home, not an average American family dinner, which consists usually of a roast and a pudding but, say, a soup, fish and perhaps one side dish, the husband, she alleges, will commonly lay out the best bill of fare.

If he is a chieftain or a man used to camping out, he will cook it better than his wife; but whether he knows anything about the process of cooking or not he will show more ability in planning a good dinner. Being asked to define a good dinner, Miss Corson said that it must possess three qualifications: it must please the palate, satisfy the appetite and be easily digested. This culinary ability a man does not usually develop, she is of the opinion, until he reaches 35 or, say, 40 years of age. At that period of life she accounts for it on the theory that the woman pay more intelligent heed than do women to their food. The average woman cares comparatively little what she eats, as is shown by her common neglect of herself when she has no man to provide for, while the man who is actively engaged in business knows that if he is not fully nourished his work will suffer.—Brooklyn Times.

A Cheyenne Bureau.

A group of scenery stood in front of the Madison Square theatre the other morning telling stories. One of the number, a man whose name is familiar to all play goers, led the conversation.

"Do you know," said he, "that not many blocks from here there is a matronly old woman who earns a nice livelihood by chaperoning young girls and elderly women to theatres and other places of amusement? Her business has prospered, and lately she established a bureau where invalid single women can secure her services 'for a consideration'—a mother-ly looking woman to take them to the play and home again without fear of molestation. The bureau has become very popular, and the elderly women are supplanting the messenger boys as escorts.

"I had occasion to call at the bureau recently on a matter of business, and was very much surprised to find Mrs. —— there negotiating for a chaperone. The woman I refer to is married and is one of the best known actresses in this country. You would be surprised if I should name her, and I think you would all agree with me she is about the last one that needs any chaperoning. She is handsomely regarded and capable to take care of herself and of her husband, too, for that matter. She did not notice me approach-ing, and I heard her say to the bureau lady: 'She said she was about to start on a trip to California, and that she was desirous of procuring a nice, gray haired, motherly looking woman to accompany her there and back again. She expected to be gone several months. The woman that runs the bureau thought she could accommodate her, and talking Mrs. —— to address pointed to a good one of her chaperones around to her. I understand her charges are not modest and she has considerable business."—New York Evening Sun.

Remedies for Sleeplessness.

Such persons as are troubled with sleeplessness should bear it in mind that one of the most effective inducers to sleep is a warm salt water bath before retiring. This will almost always put a weak child to sleep if it is well, and if it is well fed after its bath. Sleeplessness in an adult is more difficult to contend with. A warm salt bath may not always succeed, but it is worth trying. If there is any tendency to cold feet put a warm bottle to the feet after bathing, and in many cases a restful sleep will follow. It is far better, but rarely ever done, to eat supper high to induce sleep before trying sleeping draughts. Sometimes a few crackers or something else eaten just before retiring will induce sleep when other remedies fail. For this purpose many people keep a cracker jar in their rooms. The thin water crackers are excellent for this purpose.

For the dry, burning sensations in the palms of the hand and soles of the feet, which induce sleeplessness, sponge them in ammonia and water or vinegar and water. The continued dwelling on a certain thought may be of value. A frequent remedy of this kind is to imagine an endless flock of sheep stepping one by one over the stile. The monotonous monotony of the imaginary movement will soon put a wide awake person asleep. A famous physician sent his sleepless patients to drowsy slumber by an arrangement by which they listened to the constant dropping of water, drop by drop, on metal. If a person is habitually wakeful at night, it is wise to give up tea and coffee at night, and drink in their place a bowl of fresh milk, heated quite hot. If the milk is not agreeable, a hot oyster stew may be substituted for it with the same excellent results.—New York Star.

Wasted Kisses.

Thus writes the author of "Girls' Gossip" in London Truth: Why can we not do as men do and write to each other only when we really have something to say? And why must we kiss each other every time we meet? Kisses are really not agreeable greetings to exchange. Very few women know how to bestow or receive them in a neat and satisfactory fashion. A slovenly kiss is a really detestable article and makes one dislike and despise the bestower. Of all my girl friends who kiss me when we meet there is only one from whose osculatory greeting I do not involuntarily shrink. Some have as the kisses with lips made into a hard ball for the purpose. Those almost give one the toothache.

Others bestow their dewy lips upon one's cheek in a way that makes the recipient grope hastily but furtively for a handkerchief. A third contingent kiss in a cold and chilling way that says plainly enough: "I kiss you because I suppose you expect it of me." I always sympathize with these and would gladly fall in with their views. Any, do let us make a non-kissing compact company and just nod to each other. Everybody will join it. The rules would not forbid a kiss after a long absence, nor would it interfere with lovers' kisses or anything of that sort, but only confine the custom of daily greetings by osculation.

I feel quite sure that women's friendships would be firmer and more durable if they would abandon all such saucy demands upon it. Do you agree with me?

Things to Let Alone.

In this world of frills and frivols there are some things that had better be left unbought, and homage a, few: Either green or red gloves; do not permit yourself to be surprised by any smooth tongued glazier into believing that anybody wears them—they don't.

Bustles: they were always bad form, and now they are recognized as not only being out of the line of beauty, but in extremely bad style.

Very short skirts for the house; they are very awkward, and belittle you from a mental as well as a bodily standpoint. Keep a pretty one gown with a bit of a train.

Yellow storm coats; choose instead very dark blue ones.

Unbacked chairs with handles that look as if the silver of the family had been put into the pot and boiled down for this purpose; they are worse than a green postage stamp so far as giving the lookerr on a cachet as to your good taste.

Colored letter paper; it died in the same year with hoop skirts.

Rhinestone jewelry; it should never be worn in the daytime, and people will think you are trying to pass it off for diamonds if you try to wear it at night.

Tarlatan; it "looks" ear looks better without them, and an ugly one should not have attention drawn to it by them.—Exchange.

Water Ices Growing in Favor.

"The taste of Washington people has undergone quite a change in the last few years," said in the matter of the use of ices and ice cream," said Mrs. McDermott to a Post reporter. "There is now twice as much water ice called for as there was three years ago, many people using it almost altogether in the place of ice cream."

"What has brought about the change?"

"I imagine it is the result of European travel. In Europe it is very rare that ice cream is used, and Americans going abroad become used to the habit there and bring it home with them. Water ices generally are looked upon as more healthy than ice cream, and no doubt it is more cooling for the warm weather."

"Has the taste of patrons changed in regard to the flavors they call for?"

"Peach has taken the place as the most popular flavor for the summer, a great deal more than vanilla, which was used. Vanilla and other creams are also in demand. The popular taste changes very much during the winter from what it was in the summer season. In the winter the great bulk of cream eaten is of a few standard flavors, while the cool weather brings on a demand for a greater variety."—Washington Post.

Effect of a Well Told Tale.

Nothing appeals so strongly to the imagination, the sensibilities, the moral nature of a child as a well told tale. They rebel against what is commonly called "preaching," but the greatest rebel of them all will yield to the softening influences of a tale that carries its lesson with it. Is that not enough? But the story does more. It broadens their views, cultivates their finer feelings, destroys selfishness, teaches them to appreciate their relations with others, and, above down the rough places that would fill their lives with friction. This much it does to them morally. A young mind must have recreation as well as food for study. The story brightens and refreshes it, brushes away the cobwebs that will gather even at a tender age, and fits it to return with fresh zest to its allotted work. More than that, it adds to the child's information by acquainting him or her with certain phases of life, with manners and customs that are not taught by mere history. By all means, then, let the children read stories.—Herald of Health.

Importance of Seasoning.

Too little attention is paid in many houses to seasonings. A lady who is noted as an especially good cook lays her success in a large degree to the skillful and seasonable use of spices, herbs and what seasoning this dish needs, or what flavoring that one must have to make it toothsome. The cook who depends wholly on salt and pepper to season every-thing she cooks lacks variety. True, these are the only things absolutely necessary to make the dish palatable, but that is not the mark at which the cook should aim. Some, but includes also the delicacies. The serving of a warmed over dinner, which is a necessity in household economy, is indeed the unpalatable thing it is, largely because, if salt and pepper are the only seasonings used, but under the touch of one who knows the secret of the science of seasoning, it becomes a meal wherewith the epicure can find no fault.—Lewiston Journal.

Culinary Maxims.

Live while you can, die when you must.

Keep out of the frying pan and trust to the broiler.

A silent tongue is an enemy to the feast.

The power of the kitchen is sometimes better than the taste.

Merriment at meat means a long face for the doctor.

Bridle the appetite with reason and save the stomach a toss in the ditch.

A lazy appetite bothers the rich man more than an active one does the poor man.

Work leisurely, unless you are anxious to die in a hurry.

No man can live happy with an unhappy digestion.

Let the burden of your table be a part of your religion.

Of all the sciences none is more essential to the welfare of humanity than cookery.—Exchange.

Humor the Ideal.

A friend was telling me, one long since, about an experience she had while ill. "I was so ashamed of myself," she said, "but I could not help it. My nurse had gone out, and I took the fancy that I wanted some cream toast. I asked my daughter, a girl of about 15, to make it for me. She did so, and when she brought it to me I felt just as hard as I could cry. She had put it on a plate that I particularly hated, and the very sight of it took away my appetite. The child was so distressed at my tears that I felt obliged to serve me. I could have boxed my own ears when I got better and thought it over, but it was a very serious matter at the time. However, it was a lesson my girl will never forget, and I am sure the next time she is called upon to serve an invalid, she will bring the best china plate in the house."—Sallie Joy White.

The Blackbird of Commerce.

The blackbird of millinery is not a blackbird, as a rule, says a Boston writer on fashions. "He is any and every kind of a fowl, sable died, and there is no use worrying about the kind of food used with it. The fowls most likely that he never had any worth mentioning. Here is a use for the English sparrow, and if the work of depopulating the sparrow forces has been carried on why not clear the common and the parks of a few hundred thousand sparrows?"—Exchange.

Indie Shawls in Dresses.

A new use to which Parisian modistes put the Indian shawls is in the costumes, where as a tablier or petticoat, it lends its eastern richness to carrying out a scheme of harmony when combined with some beautiful but neutral color. If a wrap of the rich Indian fabric can be afforded to accompany this costume, the scrupulous effect would be complete.—Court Journal.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

STYLES THAT ARE APPROVED IN THE WORLD OF FASHION.

All About the Wedding Toilets That Are in Favor with New York Brides—How the Dresses of Bridesmaids' Are Fashioned.

Autumn brides are allowed considerable license in the matter of their wedding dresses. They may select for its material ivory white satin lampas, Bengaline silk, crepe de chine, China silk or fine white wool fabrics, agnong which latter Irish poplin is a favorite.

A WEDDING TOILET.

The bridal dress shown in the cut is an important one. It is of cream colored Irish poplin, with Limerick lace draped on the skirt and looped with sprays of orange blossoms. The bodice is arranged to correspond with the skirt in style, being trimmed with Limerick lace. As will be seen on examination of the cut, the lace trimming of the corsage forms a sort of V shaped fichu. It will also be observed that the high standing collar has turned down points. Orange blossoms are placed high on the left side of the corsage.

Very high corsages are worn this season, especially for church weddings. Tulle is a favorable material for bridal veils.

At recent New York weddings, where little girls have acted as attendants, they have been dressed in white China silk or nun's veiling, with accordion plaited skirts, and large hats with garnitures of white plumes, and carry baskets of roses, lilies of valley flowers, as the bride may prefer.

Tulles and Laces for Ball Gowns.

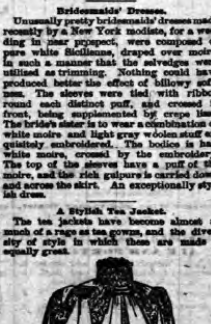
Tulles for ball gowns are embroidered with flowers in natural colors, and intended to be used for the fronts of dresses; others have tulle, with a design in lace, set in here and there. Some have the triple pea spots in chenille at distances and others large stars in silver or gold. Others, again, have light metallic grounds, dotted with spangles, which give them much distinction. Machlin net, in all colors and very wide widths, can be had at a low price, and are really more durable for young girls' use than the flimsy tarlatans of balls. The laces are nearly all of the Velasquez order this year—that is, arranged in distinct points, and some of the finest Lyons net and effective looking without being expensive. The patterns are of the Irish point order and prove effective when applied as garniture. A decided novelty in Chantilly lace has the pattern wrought in subdued colors instead of black. A great deal of ribbon is employed on evening dresses.

Bridesmaids' Dresses.

Unusually pretty bridesmaids' dresses made recently by a New York modiste, for a wedding in near Jersey City, were composed of pure white Sicilienne, draped over moire, in such a manner that the selvedges were hidden and unnoticed. Nothing could have produced better the effect of billowy softness. The sleeves were tied with ribbon round each distinct puff, and crossed in front, the ribbon terminating by crepe lisse. The bride's sister is to wear a combination of white moire and light gray woolen stuff exquisitely embroidered. The bodice is half white moire, half gray, with the embroidery. The top of the sleeves have a puff of the moire, and the rich guipure is carried down and across the skirt. An exceptionally stylish dress.

A Stylish Tea Jacket.

The tea jackets have become almost as much of a rage as tea gowns, and the diversity of style in which these are made is equally great.



A TEA JACKET.

The charming jacket here represented is of pearl gray pongee silk. It is trimmed with triangular tabs and bands in Mechlin lace, over pink silk. The sash ribbon corresponds in color with the silk. In front are two draperies of white lisse gathered at the neck and waist.

Fashion Items.

Beaver will be extensively used this winter for trimming street garments for little children.

The Continental waistcoat is still in high favor, and appears upon gowns of every description, adding greatly to the stylish effect.

The Catogan style of arranging the hair is most popular with young girls, and a second and more elaborate bow is tied at the top of the head, keeping back the front locks of hair.

—This is a French method of doing up lace: After having pinned them in several folds place them in a small linen bag and sew up the opening. Immerse the bag in pure olive oil. At the end of 24 hours take the bag out and put it in tepid water. After it has soaked for a good quarter of an hour rinse it in tepid water, and then pass it through a weak solution of mucilage and water. Take the lace out of the bag and iron. If it is desired to make the lace look like new place it on a frame covered with flannel until it is dry taking care to stretch it delicately on both edges with the aid of pins.

Elizabeth Wheelmen's Parade.

On Saturday evening the Elizabeth Wheelmen and their invited guests, will make their annual parade through the streets of that city.

Large numbers of wheelmen from various cities in the vicinity have been invited, and have promised to be present. The procession will be the largest ever held in this State. During the last few weeks the Elizabeth Wheelmen have accepted invitations to parade in other cities, and have found that the people on the line of march or ride have made demonstrations of welcome, burned red fire, etc., and it is hoped that all citizens will respond as cheerfully as they did when the last parade was given.

The line of parade will be as follows: Starting from the club house on East Broad street to Broad, up Broad street, to South Broad, to Grove, countermarch down South Broad street to Rahway avenue, out Rahway avenue to Grove street, countermarch to Cherry Street, through Cherry street to West Jersey, up West Jersey to Chilton, through Chilton to West Grand, down West Grand to Morris avenue, countermarch at Stiles street to club house.

Wheelmen from New York, Plainfield and Brooklyn, will be in line.

AN ENJOYABLE DAY.

Spent by Visiting Catholic Association in Plainfield.

The largest excursion which was indulged in by the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association, of Morristown and Elizabeth, yesterday was a thoroughly enjoyable affair. Upon arriving at Keller's grove, rifle practice was indulged in. There was a number of prizes offered for the best scores. Among them was a handsome silver cup, donated by Dr. O'Reilly, of Morristown. It was called "Morris' Cup" and was won by Mr. Collins Wier.

The prizes offered by the Elizabeth Association comprised one gold and two silver medals.

Mr. W. J. McCloud won the first prize, Mr. M. Byrnes, the second and Mr. Jos. Brown the third. After the prizes had been awarded the Association again formed line and marched to this city and sat down to an appetizing repast at Casper's Hotel.

The committees who had charge of the affair are as follows:

Morristown—Messrs. Eugene S. Burke, T. F. Dempsey, and M. J. Condon.

Elizabeth—Capt. John Campbell. James Brennan, T. J. Pierson, Geo. L. Dobner, Paul Carroll, jr., John Clogher, W. J. McCloud and Edward Nugent.

The visitors were received by a committee of the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association. They were as follows:

The Rev. P. E. Smyth, the Rev. J. A. Stafford, and Messrs George Tobin, E. B. Daly, Michael Whalen and John J. Hibbitts.

The visitors were very much pleased with Plainfield and with the way in which they were entertained by the members of the local Union.

Ex-Surrogate Gerber, Ex-Speaker John T. Dunn, Ex-County Collector Sheridan, City Treasurer Whalen and Assessor McGrath accompanied the Elizabeth Association.

The visitors left this city at about seven o'clock on a special train.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Mr. W. B. Wadsworth's Handsome Team Falls on Park Avenue.

As Mr. W. B. Wadsworth's team—a blue roan and a black—was turning from North avenue into Park avenue yesterday afternoon at half-past four o'clock it was startled by a passing train. The black horse, which happened to be on the left of the driver, began backing, much frightened, and while so doing slipped and fell. In its fall the horse's feet struck the roan with such force as to knock that animal down also.

The roan fell on the black, and in its struggles to get free got over on the opposite side of the pole. Both horses became, through their kicking, entangled with the traces and pole. Chief Carey happened to be near at hand, and quickly freed by the head the roan horse—which was uppermost—and kept both horses quiet, while ex Mayor Rockfellow and others cut the traces. The animals were helped to their feet.

Mr. W. B. Wadsworth himself was driving, and both he and his brother, ex-Councilman Chas. D. Wadsworth, who had taken a seat beside him a few moments before for a ride, escaped from the carriage, without injury. In fact, considering the frightful predicament of both men and horses, it is remarkable that both escaped without injury, though the pole was splintered beyond repair, and the harness cut. The whole affair occupied but a few minutes, and that all escaped so well is largely due to the prompt assistance rendered.

Mr. Wadsworth had arrived from New York on the train which frightened the horses as it rushed hissing by over the Park avenue bridge.

UNION COUNTY COURT NOTES.

The Four New York Burglars Arraigned.—They Pleaded Not Guilty.

The Union county court of Special Sessions convened at Elizabeth at 10:15 o'clock yesterday morning, Judges McCormick, Hyer and Wiley on the bench.

The four prisoners, Frank, alias "Butch" Miller, Charles Miller, alias "Charles Smith," Jacob Gasser and John Jennings, alias "Johnny the Kid"—were arraigned on two different counts, the robbing of the house of Mrs. Dr. Crouthers, on East Jersey street, and that of Mrs. Ross, on Second avenue, Elizabeth.

The whole four pleaded not guilty to both charges and their trial was set down for October 31st.

The prisoners attracted much attention, every eye in the court room being riveted upon them until they were led back to jail. It is thought that before their day of trial approaches they will retract their plea.

The Frazee Lee will contest was continued before Judge Van Syckle. It is thought that this famous contest will close this week.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Randolph Marsh, of Plainfield this morning sent to the NEWS office a small bunch of blossoms which he had plucked from a pear tree on his premises. This is the second time the tree has blossomed this year.

An evening sociable was held at the residence of Mr. Fitzgerald at South Plainfield last evening. Guests from Round Brook, Plainfield and New Market were present and danced to the music furnished by Prof. O'Reilly.

Respecting Mr. Ulrich.

Judge Ulrich's re-nomination at Rahway yesterday as Republican candidate for Assembly, coming as it did, was very flattering, and makes his re-election seem sure. The delegates promised that it would be larger than ever before. It will be his third time. When he ran the second time he received a larger majority than when he first ran, and in fact the largest majority ever given any Assembly candidate in the district. He is regarded as a strong temperance man.

—Michigan prides herself upon 250 Chautauqua circles, with 5,000 members.

INTERESTING MEETING.

THE TWENTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF THE Y. M. C. A.

Celebrated in the First Presbyterian Church Last Evening.—A Large Audience Present.—Much Enthusiasm and Interest Manifested.—The New Building to be Started in the Spring.

A large, intelligent and representative audience gathered last evening in the new Presbyterian church to show their interest in the Young Men's Christian Association of this city. After the preliminary exercises of good singing by a double quartette, scripture reading and prayer by Dr. Ketcham, they listened to the annual report of President Murray and an address by Merrill E. Gates, President of Rutgers college, New Brunswick.

President Murray's report was eloquent with facts and figures, more powerful indeed than were words or glittering generalities. It showed clearly what the Young Men's Christian Association is doing in Plainfield and that the Association was more fortunate than many associations of neighboring towns in that the people of the city recognized it as a public institution worthy of support, and while thanking the people for their generosity be assured them that the Association did not appear before them as supplicants for charity but as fellow laborers in the Master's vineyard. The fiscal year of the Association ends with May of each year. For the year ending May, 1889, the expenses were $3,917.28 and the income $3,535.44. For the current year ending May, 1890, the expenses and income are estimated to be about $2,450. The membership at present is over 500, of whom only 150 are sustaining, that is, pay $10 annually. By the constitution persons of ten years' association is derived entirely from membership dues, and thought that to carry on the aggressive work of the Association the number of sustaining members ought to be materially increased. He illustrated the value of the work of the Association by relating the conversation of two of the wealthiest citizens of Boston after listening to an address from Horace Mann in which he said that all the money spent for Reformatory institutions and so forth was well spent if it resulted in the saving of one young man "who you believe that", said one to the other "yes, I do if it were my son" was the reply. Following this came telling facts and figures. There were 15,000 visits to the rooms during the year. 2200 attended the young men's meeting, an average of 44, and 22 were benefited by the Workers' Training classes and services were held each week at two outposts. Four young men went to Mr. Moody's school at Northfield, last June and four boys attended the Boys' Camp at Lake Waywanda. There were 13 receptions, and talks on Astronomy, stamps and such like. The building fund now amounts to $29,550, not including the bequest of $3000 by Mrs. Latimer, six sets of plans have already been made by six competing architects one of which it is hoped will be selected for the building. Some change will however have to be made on account of the removal of the Chautauqua headquarters to Buffalo. It was expected that they would occupy a portion of the building. The Association now occupies four rented rooms—parlor, game room, reading room and hall which are used to the best possible advantage, although inadequate to the work. There were three educational classes in Mechanical Drawing and talks will be given during the Fall and Winter. The great work of the Association is the religious work and it is prosperous. Large and interesting meetings are being held every Monday evening—President Murray read a letter to the effect that he applied to us inasmuch as the Young Men's Christian Association was the only institution with which he was acquainted to whom he could apply for a boarding house under proper influences for a young man who was coming to this city.

It is needless to say that the young man was cared for.

Mr. Murray in closing urged a deeper and more abiding consecration on the part of those engaged in the work of leading young men from the kingdom of darkness to the kingdom of peace.

After more singing President Gates, delivered an , inspiring address. He emphasized at the outset that the work of the Associations was that of Christian young men for non-Christian young men. He dwelt upon the idea of co-operation so greatly developed in business operations of the day as being taken hold of by Christian young men in the religious sphere. He eulogized the training class work of associations and illustrated the practical result of it. He spoke of the conviction of the truth of God's word which association men held as like to that of the locomotive engineer in the pilot house with power at his throttle, the telegraph operator in a current of electricity to carry a message, or of a farmer that there is life in seed. Their faith is confirmed by the evidence of the power of the word of God in the regeneration of men. He referred to the inaugeration of the great work for the young men of India and Japan, undertaken by the associations of America and under the direction of the International Committee. Altogether, it was a most instructive and interesting address.

The double quartette sang an offertory entitled "Hark! Hark! My Soul" then followed the closing hymn by the congregation. Rev. Dr. Ketcham pronounced the benediction.

—The purpose of making envelopes thin on the inside is to prevent transparency—and scrutiny.

—A horse belonging to William Rockman, a milkman, became frightened this morning and ran away. Mr. Rockman was thrown out and the wagon passed over him, injuring his foot. A physician dressed the wound.

GAMES FOR ALL HALLOW EVE.

Superstitions Recalled When Roasting Apples and Nuts.

Next Thursday evening will be Hallow Eve. The following article from the Ladies' Home Journal will be of interest to those who wish to celebrate it:

The charming number, seven (so called by the superstitious) rules the evening. So the girl who catches seven nuts or any larger number, which is a multiple of seven, is considered most fortunate. The one who secures the largest number of all (if it can be divided evenly by seven) is declared the fairy godmother, and she becomes arbitress of the "chairs."

Seven baskets are brought, into which the nuts which have fallen upon the blankets are gathered.

Double nuts are said to signify an early wedding; clusters of three a legacy; four indicate great wealth; five, a voyage across the sea; six, fame as a public speaker; seven, the possession of the gift most desired by the finder.

The fires are now, probably, sufficiently advanced so that the roasting of nuts, apples and late planted corn may begin. So with long pointed sticks, some spear the corn and apples, while others bury nuts and apples in the hot ashes. Still others name the nuts and lay them upon a shovel above the redhot coals, watching with deepest interest what their behavior while roasting may predict.

If the nuts roast quietly, it foretells long life and happy wedlock. If they fly about sharply, a quarrel is prophesied. If one or more bursts, loss of money is to be expected. Those that keep moving are unstable, and such as fly off the shovel will remain single still another year.

The same mystical interest and meaning must enter into apple roasting. Apples are named, Rhewise, for those present, after which the apples must be turned seven times about on the palm of the hand before being consigned to the ashes. If an apple cooks evenly to the core without scorching, and the seeds number seven or fourteen, or possibly twenty-one, great good fortune may be expected. If the core proves hard or worm-eaten, and less than seven seeds may be counted, bad fortune is anticipated. If the apple bursts its skin and flies in pieces, it indicates great wealth; if it falls to cook at all, there is little hope of a wedding ring during the year.

Again, the corn roasting must go on under the mysterious influence of the fairy folk. The unroasted ears are placed by seven in baskets. Each person chooses one. If the kernels are full and run in straight lines the full length of the ear, a prosperous year is heralded; if the lines run unevenly, and the kernels are not found in full numbers and well filled out, bad fortune is at hand. If the kernels, however, number seven, or some multiple of seven, the evil omens may be overcome.

These letters do not stand for a new society or club or association, but for a series of special meetings to be held in all parts of New Jersey next month. They mean "November Simultaneous Meetings." These meetings have been planned by the Presbyterian Synod for the purpose of arousing a greater interest in the charter-duty of the Christian church, the duty of obeying Christ's last command, the duty of sending the gospel to the whole world. At these meetings the speakers will not depict the degradation of the heathen or dwell upon the triumphs of Christian Missions, or plead for a large collection. The one effort at every meeting will be to deepen the sense of individual responsibility for that work which the Founder of the Christian religion laid upon His disciples when He charged them to go into all the world and preach His gospel. These meetings will be held in every village and town and city of New Jersey where there is a Presbyterian church. All will have the same theme, and will be within one and the same week, Nov. 24-30, and that by a simultaneous gathering, from the Hudson to Delaware bay, attention will be directed to the Bible doctrine of foreign missions. The plan contemplates a sermon by every pastor on Sunday morning; a special missionary service for the whole school, for which a uniform order of exercises has been printed and will be distributed to all the schools of the Synod; and a popular meeting in the evening. Then, during the week, and on an evening, locally convenient, there will be a special service, with addresses by the ministers appointed or invited. The Synod's committee has prepared documents and data for the exclusive use of the speakers, and all hard at work upon the details. Further features of the plan will be announced from the pulpits. While the inauguration of these meetings is due to the Synod, there is no desire to make them exclusive. While seeking to enlist every one of its own churches, the Synod will welcome the sympathy and co-operation of other denominations. There will be no collections. The interest awakened, will result, in the case of other churches, in the furthering of their own work in the spreading of the Gospel.

THAT WASHOUT.

Testimony Being Taken on the Rule for a Mandamus.

On Sept. 20th Judge Scudder, on the affidavits of Alfred S. Manning and Isaac S. Callicher, of North Plainfield, issued from the Supreme Court a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued to the Middlesex County Board of Chosen Freeholders, compelling them to fill in the washout in the public road at South Plainfield in Piscataway township. The affidavits set forth that the washout is in the approach to the bridge and therefore a part of the county property.

Messrs. Jackson & Codington, of Plainfield, and ex-Senator A. V. Schenck, of New Brunswick, appear as attorneys for Piscataway township, and Counsellor H. B. Willis represents the Board of Freeholders. Yesterday's testimony was taken before Supreme Court Commissioner D. R. Boice. The township of Piscataway will endeavor to show that the county of Middlesex should repair the damage, and the freeholders will endeavor to show that the washout is a part of the approach to the culvert or bridge and that the county is therefore not liable.

PLAINFIELD ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAY.

Capital $70,000 in 1400 Shares of $50. Each.

It is intended to open the books for subscriptions to the stock and bonds of the proposed Company on Thursday, Oct. 24th, at the City National Bank, where a printed statement of the cost of the plant, probable earnings and other particulars may be obtained.

As it is necessary that the road be built as soon as possible, it is hoped that all those who are interested will greatly facilitate the work by a prompt response.

Rumors of threatened injunctions to restrain the Company from the use of the storage batteries having been circulated by a few hostile persons who seem to lack the courage to let their names appear, it should be stated that the batteries it is proposed to use are in daily service in almost all of the important cities of the Union, and are sold with an ample guarantee that they are responsible parties against loss or interference in their use.

There are cars in commercial operation every day using these batteries exclusively, and they are not enjoined simply because there is no ground for an injunction. Any further threats of this kind will be traced to their source and promptly disposed of as the law provides.

Great Cities and Great Men.

London has a population of over four millions and a quarter. Less than two-thirds of these are native Londoners. The rest are immigrants, either from foreign countries or from other parts of Great Britain. Dr. Cantlie, of Charing Cross hospital, has been making a study of vital statistics among native Londoners. He finds that the first generation of city born people show signs of physical weakness. In the second generation are stunted and dwarfed, while the family dies out with the third. In crowded districts of the city, born and bred London men grow only to an average height of 4 feet 8 inches. Almost without exception men who attain success and become distinguished in London life are those who came into the city from outside, usually from the country.

The history of London is the history of all great cities. Their vigor, their energy, their power of achievement, their population even, must be kept up from outside. Every season of human beings herded together drain all the ozone from the atmosphere, so that full mental and physical development is stunted. It is the rarest exception that city life produces a great man. It produces stunted, undergrown individuals among the poor, or idle, reckless young dudes among the rich, youths who throw to the winds the millions their country bred fathers laid up. Then some other country fellow, full of vim and hard sense, gathers up the millions in turn, while the former owners go to the dogs, and so the process continues.

No! it is in the country that great men are produced. They drift to the cities, their bodies full of nature's own electric life, their souls full of ambition to achieve. Cities are well enough as a field of effort for those who had their bringing up in the country, but they are not, they never can be, the cradle of greatness.

Connecticut Cider.

At her first election under the secret ballot system, Connecticut has taken occasion to defeat prohibition. Strangely enough, the fatal blow seems to have been struck by districts counted on as friendly to total abstinence, regions, in short, where the word is sometimes pronounced "pro-fy-bition." It was in the house of its friends, in the rural districts, they say, that it met its death.

Without considering Connecticut's favorite beverage, cider, the framers of the bill put together its clauses. Cider was rashly included in the list of drinkables forbidden. The election fell just when the Connecticut farmers were harvesting a most abundant apple crop. Their defamers do say that these farmers sell whole lakes of cider every year. What is more, they tuck away into their cellar, slander reports, anywhere from three to seventy-five barrels of it every year, to keep the cold out in winter, the heat out in summer, and to keep up the spirits in hay and harvest time, and at weddings and funerals. So, when the farmers found cider was to be prohibited, Connecticut gall rose in a tidal wave and wiped out prohibition. Cider is called "orchard wine" frequently. One agriculturist is said to have remarked:

"Suppose this 'ere law passes, what in Sam Hill be I goin' for dew for mince pies this winter? No cider, no pies, that's all."

They tell of another that he spoke his mind in this wise:

"They've just upset their best conserved apple sass. They can't work me for no damned old fool for go and bust up my business."

Another farm mortgage company has failed. Everything touches bottom at last. For many years agents in the west have been lending money to farmers in Kansas and elsewhere at 10 per cent. interest. The money was got from eastern capitalists at 5 and 6 per cent. On the margin between 5 and 10 per cent. the agents made their living, and both got their living off the farmer, who had to make it back from the crops he had not yet raised. Low prices, sickness, or failure of his crops, were all risks that the farmer had to take. Altogether, it is not strange that an eastern farm mortgage company or two have failed. It is probable some more may fail. Farm prices have been remarkably low for some years.

Boulanger is now that most grotesque of all objects, a hero without a cent of money. His friends refuse longer to furnish funds wherewith he may pose as a great man on a black charger. The dashing general may even be forced to work for a living. This would be a dire calamity, but the world could still survive it. The best thing for the defeated hero to do now is to come to America and be a floor walker in a great metropolitan dry goods store. For the display of both pomp and dignity, there is no profession to compare with it in the known world. Louis Philippe was a school master for a time. Let Boulanger, too, earn his living in adversity.

[MORNING NEWS.]

A FAMOUS TRIAL BEGUN

The Alleged Slayers of Cronin in Court.

JUDGE LONGENECKER'S SPEECH.

Reviewing the History of the Case—Allusions to the Clan-na-Gael Executed by the Defense—The First Witness Is on the Stand.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—After long weeks of struggle for a jury the trial of the alleged slayers of Dr. Cronin has at last been begun. After the prisoners were seated in the box and the list of jurors had been called, Judge Longenecker, the state's attorney, began his address. In the course of his speech he said:

"You have said here that you would not convict these men unless the state proved its case, and you have declared that you will presume these men innocent until they are shown to be guilty, but presumption is not evidence. When it is shown by conclusive proof that these men on trial are guilty, then that presumption is wiped away. These men are accused of the crime of murder, in killing Dr. P. H. Cronin. We expect to show that Dr. Cronin was killed and that these defendants killed him."

Reviewing the Story of the Crime.

The state attorney then defined circumstantial evidence. "Circumstances are facts, are truths," he said, "and, although the evidence in this case is circumstantial, we propose to show to you beyond all reasonable doubt that Dr. Cronin was murdered, and that these men killed him." Judge Longenecker then reviewed the story of the crime and said he would show it to be the result of a conspiracy, and prove that the accused men were in the conspiracy. To uncover the motive, the state would enter upon a history into the history of the United Brotherhood or Clan-na-Gael, but the jury were not to consider this organization in its deliberations. The conspiracy would be tried by the three members Sullivan, Feiy and Boland), and said the constitution and oath were changed.

Workings of the Clan.

Implicit obedience was demanded. "If a member was told to kill a man," said Judge Longenecker, with emphasis, "he had to do it." Mr. Forrest objected to any further allusions to the triangle at this stage of the proceeding, but the court would not interfere. Forrest asked that the record show that the defense excepted to the court's ruling and to every similar sentence in Judge Longenecker's speech.

No Speeches for the Defense.

The state's attorney concluded his address after the noon recess. In his peroration he said that if after hearing the evidence the jury had the slightest doubt of the guilt of the prisoners they should be given their freedom, but if on the other hand they were satisfied that they were the murderers, then he should demand that the highest penalty of the law be inflicted. Counsel for the defendants waived their opening speeches and the examination of witnesses was commenced without delay.

The First Witnesses Examined.

Capt. Wilkin, of the Lake View police, told of the finding of the bloody trunk, and the identity of the body was sworn to by Joseph C. Keefe, James Holland, a reporter, and Coroner's Physician Dr. Dean. Dr. Peter Iles, of the Ancient Order of Foresters; H. A. Which, the deceased's barber, and Morris Morris, a retired manufacturer, all of whom were among the last persons who saw Cronin alive. E. Rosech, the employe of the department of public works, who discovered the body in the catch basin, gave his testimony. The noon session was adjourned by Mr. Forrest for the defense with the view of scoring an admission that the cuts and bruises on the body might have been occasioned by rough treatment while taking it out of the catch basin. The effort, however, was futile. All the other witnesses were dismissed with nominal cross-examinations. The defense apparently having decided to admit that the body was that of the physician.

At 4:40 o'clock the court adjourned.

Lederer's Two Wives.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—George W. Lederer, the theatrical manager, who eloped with and married Lawyer Richard S. Newcombe's daughter a few days ago, was arrested in the Union Square theater on an indictment found by the grand jury for bigamy. Lederer pleaded not guilty. The indictment against Lederer was found on the testimony of two young ladies, Miss Clara Chester and Phoebe Newcombe, who were examined before the grand jury and swore that they both were the legal wives of George Lederer. Clara Chester swore that she had for some time been living with Lederer as his wife, which made them legally so under the laws of this state. Miss Newcombe detailed the circumstances of her elopement, and concluded by the statement that her marriage to Lederer was duly and properly performed on Long Island a few days ago. It was testified that Lederer married Clara Chester at Buffalo, Oct. 25, 1888. Lederer declined to make any statement and furnished $5,000 bail to appear for trial.

No More Benzine for Bailey.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 25.—A peculiar accident happened at No. 1716 East Eager street. It was a rainy day with Mrs. Bailey. She had been in the habit of putting a little benzine in the wash tub to save muscle. Her husband, William Bailey, came home with a wash tub for her. After filling it with hot water he poured the benzine into it, and immediately there was a terrific explosion. The concussion cut the back wall of the house like a knife, and tumbled it into the yard and split the side walls. Bailey was severely scalded and knocked senseless.

Indorsing the Citizens' Ticket.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The Republican county convention has indorsed the nominees of the reform citizens' convention for council and city offices. There was very little opposition. The County Democracy county convention also indorsed the citizens' ticket. Police Commissioner Voorhis and one or two others opposed the indorsement, but the vote was almost unanimous. The labor union party also indorsed the citizens' ticket.

Shot Himself Dead.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Silas O. Allen, aged 40, shot himself dead here. He had been in ill health for some time and his physician had told him that nothing could be done to improve his condition. He then bought a revolver and ended his life. He leaves a wife and a 6-year-old child.

Knocked Out in One Round.

BOSTON, Oct. 25.—Patsey Kerrigan, of Boston, and John Wallace, of Waltham, met with gloves at the Parnell Athletic club for a purse of $200. Wallace landed but one round, Kerrigan knocking him all over the ring.

TO FIGHT THE MILK EXCHANGE.

An Interstate Convention of Milk Producers at Middletown.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Fifty milk producers of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts are in convention here. Edward Bangs, of Stanfordville, Dutchess county, was chosen chairman, and T. E. Barlow, of Gardner, Ulster county, secretary. A resolution was adopted recommending that farmers organize "milk producers' union branches" at every shipping point from which New York and other large cities are supplied. In the afternoon a mass meeting was held at the Casino and was largely attended. W. F. Richardson, of Goshen, presided. Addresses were made by Walter S. Pierce, of Chenango Forks; E. G. Fowler, of Port Jervis, editor of The Orange County Farmer; H. Merick, editor of The New England Homestead, and others. There was great enthusiasm among those present, and the possibility of the farmers "getting even" with the dom of organizing local branches.

One of the best speeches was by Col. G. D. Wheeler, of Deposit, Delaware county, who advocated the organization of "milk exchanges" of Litchfield, Conn., gave a good report from the Nutmeg state, where local organizations are formed and ready to co-operate with those in other states. The Milk Producers' union was formed at Oxford, Chenango county, last March, after the pattern of the New England associations, and is gradually getting the prices of milk in hand. The constitution provides for local branches of a central union, and the object of the meeting here is to encourage "milk organization" in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts to unite in one central organization which will be powerful enough to fight the New York Milk Exchange on its own ground. Farmers in this locality have made many attempts at organization to resist the oppressions of the Milk Exchange, but all efforts proved futile. It is generally believed to believe that the plan of the Milk Producers' union is practicable. No attempt at regulation of prices will be made until localities supply 75 per cent. of the milk received by local organizations connected with the union. The delegates are satisfied that good results will follow.

The Electric Light Fight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The decision in the electric light injunction case will not be rendered before Monday. The Edison, Brush and United States companies appeared in court and complained that the board of electrical control refused to certify to the safety of their wires in place of many old ones and they proposed to use these. Counsel for the city denounced this as a breach of faith, but the companies pointed out that their application had been voluntary and they had a right to withdraw it. The court stated that he could not advise the companies one way or the other. They must act on their own responsibility. This closed the hearing.

Threatening Ex-Mayor Ames.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 25.—Ex-Mayor Ames, whose remarks about "priest ridden Ireland" aroused the indignation of the Irish societies, has received five different threatening letters—signed "Irishman," "Catholic," "Clan-na-Gael," etc. They warn him that if he doesn't leave the country he will suffer the fate of Dr. Cronin. There are said to be 800 Clan-na-Gael members in Minneapolis. Roger C. Vail, a well known lawyer, received a letter by Dr. Ames of causing the letters to be sent. He is also charged with being the chief of the local clan. Mr. Vail indignantly denies the charge, and says he knows nothing of the letters. Rev. W. J. L. Hanson, a Disciple minister, who has been outspoken in denunciation of Catholics, has also received a threatening letter.

Gould's Four Wives.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 25.—Chester S. Gould, an aged man, who has been sentenced by equity, was tried here for bigamy. He is 57 years old, and has four wives, whom he acquired respectively in 1859, 1870, 1884 and 1889, the last at Waterbury, Conn. The judge dismissed the case, stating that under the law of this state no prosecution for bigamy can be maintained unless brought within two years of the offense. This ruling was the first two cases, and the last was committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Pennsylvania courts.

Entertained by G. W. Childs.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—Mr. George W. Childs entertained the Farmers' club at his country residence, Wootten, yesterday. A number of New Yorkers came over in a special car, among them those who partook of Mr. Childs' hospitality were C. M. Depew, Joseph H. Choate, A. J. Drexel, George B. Roberts, Charles P. Mayer, Austin Corbin, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Cyrus W. Field, Judge Green, Chief Justice Paxson, Judge Biddle and C. A. Griscom.

No Eastern Connection Intended.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—President Sykes, of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, says the traffic agreement between that road and the Union Pacific is simply a local one, in the sense of either road refusing to handle the business of competitors. The arrangement does not extend east of Chicago, and Mr. Sykes says that the Northwestern and the allied lines intend to make an eastern connection.

An Embezzler Punished.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 25.—John G. Lundgren, who was cashier of the Swedish exchange of this city, has been convicted in the court of sessions at Mayville of appropriating $1,600 of the institution's money to his own use. Lundgren pleaded guilty to two indictments which had been found against him for larceny and false bookkeeping. The jury were out but half an hour.

The Girl Clerk Was Discharged.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 25.—A rumor that factory girls would not be admitted to the state house was the cause of a sensation a few days ago, but was denied by the clerk. FOR THE NEGRO

The Race Question Considered by the Episcopalians.

THE POSITION OF THE CHURCH.

It Is Said to Have Been Shown by the Fact That a Colored Bishop Had Been Consecrated and Colored Delegates Received—The Adjournment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The great Protestant Episcopal convention, which has been in session in St. George's church, this city, for the last twenty days, closed last night with the reading of the pastoral letter issued by the bishops, followed by religious services, in which the bishops, clergymen, lay deputies and a large congregation took part. The ecclesiastical legislature will meet again in the city of Baltimore in 1892.

Dr. Davenport's Attack.

The canon on deaconesses was slightly amended by the house of bishops was adopted. A standing committee, under the care of the presiding bishop, will take charge of the American church abroad. Rev. Dr. Davenport made an attack on Rev. Mr. Nevin's proposed canon in the debate, in which he said that Dr. Nevin was trying to erect a bishopric abroad, with headquarters perhaps at Rome. The canons of ordination as proposed by the joint committee on the matter went over until the next general convention.

The Negro and the Church.

The question of the canonical standing in the church and the proposed amendment of the constitution touching proportionate representation caused the fight of the day. On the former question there were two reports presented by the committee, the majority report of which was offered by Dr. Brooks, declaring that the canonical standing in the church of a bishop had been consecrated and that colored delegates had been received in the house of deputies, making them the peer of every clergyman in the body, showed to the whole world the position of this church. "Questions of jurisdiction and representation in the several dioceses have, under our constitution, been committed to them, and they are questions over which the general convention, as such, has no control," the report concludes.

Dr. Phillips Brooks Voted Down.

The minority report, signed by Dr. Phillips Brooks and two others, said that every ecclesiastical law imposed upon the black man must be imposed also on the white, and every privilege given the white man must be given to the black. There can be no such thing as an African church within the borders of the church. Dr. Brooks made a strong appeal for the minority report, but he was voted down, the majority report being accepted.

Seth Low's Plea.

Following this came the proposed canon for a missionary episcopate for the colored people, and Seth Low, of Brooklyn, advocated it to a certain extent. In the course of a long speech he cited the statement of a colored man whom he, when mayor of Brooklyn, had appointed to office, as follows: "This intelligent colored man had said that he first wanted all race distinctions wiped out. Then he wanted the right for colored children to be maintained, as the blacks did not wish to go to the schools of the whites. By having colored schools it would bring intelligence to colored men and women. He would abandon decidedly useful in that field in after life.

Mr. Low concluded by asking that the proposed canon be recommitted to the committee, and that that body be given time to consider the question in all its phases, reporting to the next general convention. It was so ordered.

Proportionate Representation.

Proportionate representation found a champion in the person of Rev. Dr. McVickar, of Pennsylvania. Dr. Davenport made a vigorous attack on the plan, and the report of the committee, to whom was referred a proposed constitutional amendment on the subject, touching its inexpediency, was adopted by an overwhelming viva voce vote.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

To Defend the Negroes.

TRINITY, La., Oct. 25.—A number of the best citizens of this section of Catahoula parish have decided to organize a vigilance committee for the protection of the negro laborers of the parish against nightly raids of armed bands of white and colored men who have been visiting the various plantations and driving away from there the negro laborers, threatening and otherwise terrifying the lives of the tenants, and shooting at them on the public highway, to the detriment of public good and to the good of the people of the parish.

MORE PENSION LETTERS.

Secretary Noble's Dismissal of Maine Agent Thompson.

HIS RESIGNATION WAS REFUSED,

And He Was Dismissed as an Insubordinate Officer—"I am Done Here," the Secretary Says—Mr. Thompson's Violent Reply to the Letter.

ALBANY, Oct. 25.—Secretary Noble, in a letter under date of Oct. 23 to Mr. W. W. Thompson, pension agent for the district of Maine, refuses to accept that gentleman's resignation, but dismisses him in the following language:

Mr. Noble's Letter.

"I beg to inform you that your intended resignation is not accepted; but as you are thereby shown to be both an insubordinate official and one having opinions of your own, I hereby dismiss you. I am to be honest and no man shall have to pay me month if I can find evidence to defeat him. No one appointed in the pension bureau shall be continued who is hostile to the rules, which, in my judgment, should be enforced. I consider all pension agents are unfriendly to such rules unworthy to be in the service of the United States. From your letter I am satisfied you have views independent of the decisions of this department. You are therefore dismissed. JOHN W. NOBLE, Secretary."

Mr. Thompson's Reply.

Mr. Thompson at once sent the following reply:

Hon. John W. Noble, secretary, etc.

DEAR SIR—Your favor just received. Your letter of the 23d is simply a curiosity and exhibits the writer in his true character. I feel free to say you are a puppet, personally and officially, a sycophant and a tickspitte. Believing I can be more useful to many persons in official station, and cannot afford to waste more postage and time with pen. I shall send all your letters to me and an account of your insolent conduct. I am not the president, and if he sustains you I shall be confirmed in the general opinion of all good people that you misrepresent the men who made it possible for him to occupy the white house. In that station by putting you in place and power, which neither your services or character can justify, and your continuance in office is a disgrace to every person of propriety. Should can be no usefulness in your further service, certainly no benefit to the people will be derived from your persistent slander of better men than you ever attempt to be, or ever have been. While dismissals are going on you are most conspicuously worthy of notice. The president would consult the public welfare by fitting you return to the obscurity in which he found you, and for which your talents best fit you. Very respectfully yours, W. W. THOMPSON.

PENNSYLVANIA'S SHIP CANAL.

Governor Beaver's Scheme—From New York Inland to the Gulf by Water.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 25.—The Pennsylvania and Lake Erie ship canal commission met in this city yesterday. Governor Beaver was elected president. Col. T. P. Roberts, of Pittsburg, was appointed on the commission in the place of Reuben Miller, Esq., who declined to serve. The permanent officers elected were John A. Wood, of Pittsburg, president; W. S. Shallenberger, of Rochester, Pa., treasurer, and Eben Brewer, of Erie, secretary. Governor Beaver said: "I would be delighted from a ship canal connecting Lake Erie with the Ohio river were discussed at length, and maps and charts of old surveys examined. The appropriation of $25,000 for the use of the commission is only $10,000, and it is not sufficient to meet the expense of a thorough survey of the proposed route. John W. Shorb, of Lancaster City, said, however, give their personal attention to the matter, and the commission will be able to accomplish the duty for which it was appointed.

Governor Beaver's idea is to make a continuous waterway from New York to New Orleans entirely inland by connecting the Ohio river and Lake Erie canal from Buffalo to Albany. He believes that it would be advantageous from both a commercial and military point of view. No committees were appointed and the commission adjourned to meet in Pittsburg at the call of the president.

Pittsburg Will Have a Club.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 25.—The statement made by Fred Pfeffer, of Chicago, that the Brotherhood would not locate a club in Pittsburg is denied by the latter. Washington and Indianapolis not being profitable baseball towns, will be discarded, and the members of the Brotherhood living in those two cities transferred to Brooklyn and Buffalo. While and Rowe will be permitted to play in Buffalo, and an attempt will be made to have Glasscock play with Pittsburg. Gillen made vacant by Rowe in the Pittsburg club.

HIS CHOICE.

The Tale of a Girl Who Asked Too Much and a Man Who Wouldn't.

"Harold," murmured the gentle girl, as they reached the latter of the spectacles that had lightly on her classical Grecco-Bostonian brow, "I will not deny that our soul communings, our interchange of impressions, our mutual exposure, not only spiritually poisonous but commercial and metaphrastic in a manner as well, have been pleasingly delightful. But you have taken advantage of a moment of perhaps unwonted soulfulness to endeavor to extort from me a pledge of eternal affinity. You seek to degrade—if I may be so strong a term—our essential purity to the ultimate level of mere platonic affection."

"Celestine," exclaimed the youth, "you astound me. I"—

"Hear me out, Harold," she persisted. "I have confessed that I feel drawn to you by certain idiosyncratic influences. But there are considerations. When two certainly not similate there must be no clashing vibrations no hygienic polemics. Harold," she continued in a trembling voice, "pardon the question—there is so much at stake—but do you defile your immortal nature by eating pie?"

The young man rose slowly to his feet and looked in a vague way for his hat.

"Seldom," he said, in a voice of tragic agony, "the bitterest hour of my life has been, but I cannot hesitate a moment. I couldn't give up pumpkin pie for the soulkind young woman that ever squawked! Good evening, Miss Tillowsilk."

The pale moon rose with the thrill, steamed down the river with she who always rises over Boston harbor, and her rays shone mildly and jovially on a young man with his hat pulled down over his eyes, who was striding down the street, going out of his way to kick mercilessly at every loose and friendless dog in sight, and talking volubly and recklessly to himself in the dialect of New York.—Chicago Post.

PLANS FOR IRRIGATION.

THE UNITED STATES PURPOSES A GRAND SYSTEM FOR THE WEST.

A Land Extremely Ancient—Great Variety of Methods—Moses Compares Egypt and the Holy Land—American Experience—New Mexico, Utah and Colorado.

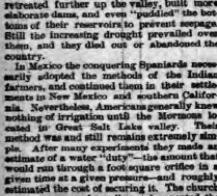
IRRIGATION antedates civilization. The oldest written records refer to it as a thing of course, and among the oldest drawings are those representing the Egyptian raising water for his fields. It is scarcely possible to imagine any system which has not been practiced in one or more countries, from the use of the rudest vessel to simply dip up the water, up through all the grades of common hand labor to the Egyptian "Shadouf," or from the simple bamboo wheel of the East Indian to the elaborate system of dams, flumes, canals and aeequias which once made Babylonia as the very garden of the Lord for abundance, and have lately been paralleled by the British in India and the Americans in Utah and Colorado. Equally difficult would it be to find any one feature as to water supply and its value, for in the United States alone is found every grade, from the rocky little troughs of the Mesquite of Arizona, by whom the water is husbanded as if it were golden, to the mammoth flume of Boulder, Colo., where a river is anchored to a mountain side and made to feed hundreds of artificial lakes, fish ponds and fountains.

Still further, it may be said that since the beginning of history little or nothing has been added to man's knowledge of the principle. The rudest savage could not fail to observe that his favorite plants withered in time of drought, and that the trees by the river-side were greener than those on the plain died, and thence to infer that water was the needed thing. In the oldest poetry the early and the latter rain are referred to as blessings, the Israelites and Arabs are pointed to regions of regular rain as to types of heaven; the very word "paradise" means a place where trees grow, and Moses, exhorting the children of Israel to hasten to the promised land, assures them that there they will not have to raise water with the foot (on the treadwheel as in Egypt), for the Lord waters that land by the hand of Him "the brook falleth not" is always the land of promise.

In the United States the area of arid and semi-arid lands is about 1,200,000 square miles. "Sub-arid" is the term applied by Maj. Powell to a strip perhaps two hundred miles wide along the eastern border of the region including much of Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and the Indian territory, and a very large proportion of Texas—a strip in which rain enough for good farming cannot be relied upon more than one year in three. Public interest in irrigation, however, has been of very slow growth, and it was only after twenty years' local agitation of the matter that congress appropriated money for a thorough inquiry. In America as in Asia there is no record of the beginning of irrigation, and the traveler through the far southwest sees many painful reminders of the struggles the semi-civilized Indians (Aztec or Toltec) made to hold their homes. In many valleys he will see that they were compelled to abandon their lowest and broadest fields, they retreated further up the valley, built more elaborate dams, and even "puddled" the beds of their ditches to prevent seepage. Still the increasing drought prevailed over them, and they died out or abandoned the country.

In Mexico the conquering Spaniards necessarily adopted the methods of the Indian farmers, and continued them in their settlements in New Mexico and southern California. Nevertheless, Americans generally knew nothing of irrigation until the Mormons located in Great Salt Lake valley. Their method was and is remarkably simple. After many experiments they made an estimate of a water "duty"—the amount that would run through a furrow, under a given fall, and of a given pressure—and roughly estimated the cost of securing it. The church engineer surveyed a valley and reported the number of cubic feet sufficient for the church selected them, named all their officials and sent them to settle the valley.

Where the stream issued from the mountain a simple dam was made, and from it the main canal was carried along the base of the hills inclosing the valley; from it small canals or aeequias crossed back to the original creek bed every quarter of a mile or so, and from these smaller ditches traversed the upper side of each little farm. From them in turn they rills flowed down between the rows of corn or potatoes, among the orchard trees or in shallow furrows through the wheat and grass. The Mormons never attempted to redeem the vast terraces of the larger valleys; they contented themselves with the simplest system, and to this day there are no grand engineering triumphs in Utah to compare with those in Colorado, and few, if any, artificial lakes, fish ponds or fountains.



THE SHADOUF.

Utility, and a very high utility, was the basis of all work in Utah, and as the church naturally tended towards communism, and every man in those days did just as the bishop told him, they solved the question of water ownership at the very start. The dam, canal and ditches belong to the community, just as the roads and school houses do, and are under the control of the official usually called the water marshal. Every man may be called on to work the ditches, just as in the states he may be called upon to work the roads or pay a commutation. Originally every man took as much water as he pleased and at any time, but in very dry seasons, and in some settlements every season, the water marshal takes control and directs the water by raising and lowering the head gate for a few hours to this section and then a few hours to that, and now for a long time when this land to go no any one thought. In Salt Lake City there is usually an abundance of water that is flowing down both sides of every street, being all the squares with crystal borders, and this feature it was which so charmed the early emigrants to California and caused them to write home glowing letters about the city's beauty. But there have been seasons when all those ditches were dry, as all the water was absorbed in the gardens and orchards.

When Salt Lake City was the only settlement between the Missouri and California its crystal streams and fruitful gardens made it seem a paradise to those who had toiled across the alkali miles of arid plains and mountains; but now settlements are numerous almost all the way, and Colorado has vastly outstripped Utah in irrigation works. It is estimated that by their present system 3,000,000 acres in Colorado can be irrigated, but not more than 800,000 acres are yet reclaimed, while canals in course of construction will reach all the rest. The San Luis park canal, waters, or is capable of watering, 400,000 acres; the State Land canal, 140,000 acres; the Citizens' canal, 100,000 acres, and the Del Norte and Saguache canal about 180,000 acres; and three of these get their water from the Rio Grande.

In Colorado two irrigations in ordinary seasons and three in dry are thought enough for most crops, but roots of all kinds require from three to ten times as much water as the black grow above ground. Of course experience has taught the Colorado farmer many points which might be of no value elsewhere, as to soak his land before plowing or not, as the indications may direct; to seed at the proper time after soaking, and to judge when and how much water is needed by the growing grain. It is claimed that with their extensive system the cost does not exceed $2 per acre, and is often as low as sixty cents per acre yearly, and that the crops range twice as great as in a country where rain is relied on. Forty bushels of wheat, 500 of potatoes, fifty of oats, two tons of wild hay and four tons of alfalfa are spoken of as common by the official figures of the state shrink these figures somewhat for the total average. The hard wheat of Colorado is noted, and Boulder flour already has a world wide reputation.

A ditch ten feet wide and two or three feet deep and it has proved best to have them wide and shallow costs an average of $1,000 a mile, and the first water companies in Colorado realized 24 per cent. on their investment, supplying water to cultivators at so much per "duty." The investments in ditches have increased, and many ditches in Wyoming were constructed by Colorado capitalists, but it is evidently only a question of time when all these ditches will be owned by the state. It was not long, of course, till a great many puzzling questions arose as to the ownership of running water, and now the congress and legislatures are fast building up a body of common law on the subject.

When the governor of Nebraska sent a message to the governor of Colorado protesting against the taking away of water out of the South Platte in Colorado, because it was drying up the Platte in Nebraska, it was certainly a startling novelty in interstate policy; but it was only the beginning, and the general government will doubtless have to fix a general rule. There are enthusiasts who say that all the waters of the Platte and many other affluents of the upper Missouri, will in a few years be shut off and soaked up by the arid lands; that they will in consequence roll no more mud and sand into the Missouri, and so it will contribute no more to the Mississippi, and hence that stream will have a uniform channel in the south and cease to do damage. "For every acre reclaimed on the Platte, Arkansas and Yellowstone," says one enthusiastic prophet of irrigation, "another acre will be reclaimed in Louisiana."

President Grant was earnestly besought to begin his administration with a request to congress to enter on the preliminary work for a comprehensive system of irrigation; but he unfortunately went a little too far and recommended a plan which alluded to feeble mills for western men. There was enough good land still in the rainy regions, and so the matter rested near nineteen years, when the congressmen of the far west combined and secured an appropriation late in September, 1888—$100,000 to pay for surveying and locating "storage reservoirs at the head waters of the streams of the 100th meridian" for the purposes of irrigation. It was a trifle, but it committed the government to the policy, and Maj. Powell, director of the geological survey, soon entered on the work.

He now estimates the arid area at 1,400,000 square miles, or four-tenths of the United States, excluding Alaska. Of this area he regards one-fifth as too rocky and rugged for cultivation, but nearly all other observers make the rugged area much larger, including in it, of course, those mountain top plateaus which are too elevated to produce grain. His estimate of 1,000,000 square miles of land "reaching only waiting to make it productive" is nearer the fact, but probably still too large. In 1880 less than 1 per cent. of this vast area had been redeemed, and with the most expensive and elaborate works not more than 20 per cent. can ever be redeemed by any process now known to man, says Director Powell. Nevertheless, if but 10 per cent. be redeemed, or 150,000 square miles, this increase the cultivated lands of the United States by nearly one-half, and at $20 per acre adds $2,880,000,000 to the national wealth.

Meanwhile the committee presided over by Senator Stewart, of Nevada, has completed a two months' hearing, over seventy witnesses, examining witnesses and viewing the sites for proposed canals and storage reservoirs, and 3,000 square miles of alleged irrigable land have been carefully surveyed by the engineers and the line of proposed canals plotted. So the work has become truly national at last, and must continue for many years to be a mere matter of learning over many square miles, and of course a fruitful source of political agitation, charges and counter charges.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

They Visit a Carpet Store and Bowser's Eyes Are Opened.

I regard Mr. Bowser as one of the kindest and most loving husbands in the world, and if any one has intimated that he fell from any of his high resolves forward that he is eccentric or given to bull dozing, such idea is radically wrong. He is simply the average husband after five years' marriage. The average husband is worth about fifty times as much as the average wife, but he regards it as his solemn duty to inform her of the fact on every possible occasion. If he happens not to make a remark which draws forth the information he could look down gracefully, but he won't. He's infallible or nothing.

We wanted a carpet for one of the bedrooms and I mentioned that I thought we had better get a velvet.

"What's the matter with tapestry?" inquired.

"It's too common and there's no wear to it."

"You talk as if you knew all about carpets. When did tapestry become common?"

"It always has been common. It's only one grade above ingrain."

"Oh, it isn't! Well, I take great pleasure in informing you that you are way off. What you don't know about carpets would fill a book."

"But you know all about 'em?"

"Certainly. Every intelligent man does, especially if he is married. Tapestry, as you might to have known for the last twenty-five years, ranks next to Axminster."

"It can't be."

"Didn't I say it did? If I didn't know, why should I say so? First comes hemp, then two ply and three ply ingrain, and the last is followed by Brussels, velvets, moquettes, tapestries and Axminsters. You'd better write this down."

"Mr. Bowser, you are wrong, as I will prove to you. Tapestry is below body Brussels in grade and price. I can buy tapestry as low as sixty-five cents per yard."

"Oh, well, it's no use to dispute with a bigot. You happened to misspeak yourself and get it that way, and as you are determined to stick it out. We'll drop the subject."

"Dare you meet me at the carpet store this afternoon?" I demanded.

"Dare I! I should say I dare! You can't bluff me in that way, Mrs. Bowser! I'll meet you there at 3 o'clock, and after you have been made to sing small I'll let you take the matter in hand and reap its benefits. Bring the measure of the room with you."

I met him at the hour named. He looked at me in a pitying way when I told him he felt sorry for me from the bottom of his heart.

"We want to look at some tapestry carpet," he said to the clerk as we entered the elevator.

We were carried up two or three flights, given seats by the windows, and as roll after roll of carpet was displayed the clerk said:

"These are all the new fall patterns in tapestries, and the prices are very low. I can sell you any pattern on the floor for sixty cents."

Mr. Bowser's mouth gave a twitch at the left hand corner, followed by a sudden contraction at the right, and he was a little hoarse as he observed:

"If these are only sixty cents then moquettes can't be over forty."

"I can sell you moquettes as low as $1.75, but you don't want 'em. You want one for about $2.50."

There was a spasmodic movement through Mr. Bowser's entire system as he queried:

"What is a velvet worth?"

"About $2."

"And body Brussels?"

"From $1 up."

"Do you mean to tell me," demanded Mr. Bowser as he rose, "that tapestry is the cheapest of the lot?"

"Why, certainly."

"Cheaper than velvet or moquette?"

"Of course. Tapestry ranks only one grade above ingrain."

"I don't believe it! You are certainly mistaken!"

"But I can't be. Any carpet man in town will tell you the same. Even your wife must know that."

That finished Mr. Bowser. The last sentence also finished me. He knew he was beaten, but he was determined not to give in. He therefore swallowed the lump in his throat and said:

"I beg still to differ with you. You have got the case turned end for end, but I am too honorable to take advantage of you. It is the tapestry which is worth $1.75 instead of the moquettes. Here's the pattern that suits me, and I want eighteen yards. Make the bill at fourteen shillings a yard."

They were given the puzzled clerk, and the carpet was laid and paid for on that basis, and it is down to last until worn out. On the half a dozen half friends drop in and incidentally inquire why we got such a cheap, shabby carpet, but they are no sooner gone than up bobs Mr. Bowser and says:

"There goes another gaumkull! It's mighty funny how we always have let carpets imposo on you for the last dozen years! If they'd tell you that red was black I suppose you'd believe it!"—Detroit Free Press.

Very Awkward.

He sitting at the piano—What shall I play, Miss De Tempo?

She—I wish you would play that favorite of yours—"The Races," I think it is called.

He—I don't understand.

She (innocently)—Why, Mr. Brown told me yesterday, when I asked him where you were, that you were out at the park playing the races, so I supposed you would be willing to play it for me.

He (under his breath)—Wait till I catch Tom Brown—New York Sun.

A Serious Loss.

"What's the matter, Eddie?"

"Willie Thornton has gone and moved out of this street, boo, hoo."

"Well, don't cry: there are plenty of other little boys in the neighborhood to play with."

"Y-yes, but he's the only one I could l-l-l-ick."—Life.

Looking Ahead.

Edward Bellamy, in "Looking Backward," says that 100 years hence the servant girl question will be solved, and housekeeping will be conducted without servants. This is encouraging, but 100 years seems like a long while to wait.—Norristown Herald.

JOTTINGS.

—Days of 1889 past, 299: days to come, 66

—The Latimer will case, it is said, will follow the Pearce Lee will contest now occupying the attention of the Union county court.

—Since Justice Vincent W. Nash has been appointed to the office of delinquent tax collector he has collected over $8,000 in back taxes.

—The old ties on the railroad in the vicinity of the North avenue depot has replaced by new ones and the road has been graded and spread with crushed stone.

—The properties used in the first act of "Lord Chumley" at Music Hall last night were furnished by Messrs. VanEmburgh & White, Powelson & Jones and Mr. Allen.

—A student's lamp exploded in Mr. Frank Lister's place of business, on Somerset street, at about five o'clock last evening. An employee threw it into the street, where the flames were extinguished.

—Contractor Jacob Hardy is rapidly pushing toward completion the work of altering the building, No. 5 East Second street, which is to be used by the Crescent League as a bowling alley and club rooms.

—Wetumpka Lodge 3401 will visit Alpha Lodge 209, Knights of Honor at 088 Broad street, Newark, Monday evening Oct. 28th, 1889. Members wishing to attend will take 6:45 p. m. train from Plainfield.

—The Somerset Court will meet at the Clerk's Office Friday afternoon and evening, and Saturday afternoon and evening of next week; also the following Monday afternoon and evening, to issue naturalization papers.

—Now is an excellent opportunity to purchase fur capes, muffs and trimmings. No such large and complete assortment has ever been shown in this city as is now being displayed at Edsall's. So says his advertisement to day.

—The green postage stamp which has caused so much dissatisfaction will soon be gone. In its place will be a smaller stamp, bright carmine in color and of new design. The contract for printing the new ones has already been given out.

—The Woman's Temperance Aid society will hold their adjourned annual business meeting on Tuesday afternoon next at three o'clock in Reform Hall. It is important that every member be present as officers will be elected for the coming year.

—Mr. Burdick is coming, and from the testimonials of his wonderful success in other places, it is thought that much good may result to Plainfield from his labors here. A mass meeting will be held in Music Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 10th, at four o'clock.

—At Major S. R. Flower's studio, No. 13 East Front street, special machinery has been added for making frames from any style of mouldings, of which there are a large stock, indicating the success which that talented gentleman well deserves. Both he and his wife are artists.

—The Republicans of the Borough of North Plainfield are arranging for a grand Republican rally to be held in Spencer's Hall, Monday evening. Joseph C. Garretson, the candidate for Assembly and John Ringleman, the candidate for sheriff, will be present and address the meeting.

—The Somerset County Teachers' Association will hold a meeting in the Public School building at Somerville on Saturday, Nov. 9d, at 9:30 a. m. Prof. A. C. Apgar of the State Normal school will give an address on "Our Enemies and Friends among Insects," and Mr. T. E. Hazelis will give a talk on "Music for Schools."

—The gunning season is nearly here, and with it will come the usual run of New York hunters, who, a day or two before the time, make the mountains echo with the sound of shot and gun. These New Yorkers should be made to feel at a home. Why not start a branch of the New Jersey Fish and Game Protection Society? The outsiders get the most game, because they take time by the forelock, and shoot a day or two before the law is up.

—The largest and finest audience of the season at Music Hall was that which greeted Mr. E. H. Sothern in "Lord Chumley," last evening. Those who remember his father in his famous "Lord Dundreary" will agree with us that the son is well able to sustain his father's fame. The comedy gave general satisfaction, and some in the audience declared that it was the most pleasing of all that have been presented. This of course is rather an extravagant idea. But it is safe to say that Sothern in comedy has not been presented there, and that it well deserved the large audience it had.

A Lunatic's Handiwork.

While John C. Leonard, a lunatic confined in the Union county jail at Elizabeth, was employed at his time making fancy articles out of cigar boxes, he made for his wife several specimens which he values very highly. Mr. George W. Moore has one of the specimens of his work in his bar room for exhibition in the window of his store on West Front street. It is a representation of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, with all the figures complete. The unfortunate man is insane on the subject of religion, and he is now confined in the lunatic asylum at Morris Plains.

A SPOILED DINNER.

HOW IT LED TO IMPORTANT ARRESTS.

The Misery Caused by Foolish People.—Scenes in Two Houses.—One Wife Afraid of Her Life.—The Other Wife's Part in Her Trouble.

A wife on West Third street had carefully prepared the family dinner last Sunday, and the feast remained on the table all the afternoon, waiting for the absent husband, who had announced his coming early in the day. It was a remarkably beautiful day, one of those balmy, golden October days that inspire poetic thoughts, and forces one to enthusiastic expressions of admiration.

It was on such a day that the husband returned to fulfill to get home in time for dinner. It was not the weather that had detained him. Shameful to relate, he had been drinking in one of the few remaining dens which defy our laws. Towards dusk the husband returned home in a drunken condition and was probably spoken to angrily by his offended wife. At all events he overturned the table, smashed the dishes, proceeded to wreck the furniture generally and then to assail his better half. She, in fear of her life, escaped from the house and hurried to police headquarters, where she met Chief Carey. After relating to him the facts, the following conversation ensued:

Wife—"Oh, Mr. Carey, come and arrest my husband, as I am afraid to go home: he will kill me."

Chief—"Were did he get drunk?"

Wife—"I don't know."

Chief—"Madam, I arrested your husband once before for beating you. After putting me to all the trouble you did to get him, you refused to appear against him, the next day, after we had had him in jail all night. Now, you know where he got drunk; so do I. You won't tell. Go home; I won't arrest him without a warrant. That is, unless he disturbs the public peace, so I won't have to depend on you for a witness."

Wife—"But, he will kill me."

Chief—"Where did he get drunk?"

Wife—"Well, I suppose it was at Newell's.

Chief—"Oh, you know it was at Newell's, and you don't believe he will kill you, or you would take out a warrant. I won't be made a fool of again, madam. Bring me a warrant and I will arrest him, but not otherwise."

The wife departed, and returned later with a doctor. Both appealed to the Chief, but he refused to make the arrest under the circumstances, without a warrant. He went home early last Monday night, and was undressing for bed when the ringing of the bell summoned him to the front door, where he saw Policeman McCue.

Chief—"Well, Mac, what's up."

Mr. McCue—"There is a gang of drunken toughs fighting each other on Third street. Come along and help me to tackle alone, and I've come for help."

Chief—"All right, Mac, I'll be with you right away, as soon as I can get on my shoes."

Soon after the two started for the scene, keeping in the darkness so as to come on the rioters unawares and arrest them. On the way they met Policeman Flanagan. He had been attracted by the noise. The row was located at Newell's, No. 200 West Third street. The place had become a nuisance to the neighborhood. The residents in the vicinity were principally composed of respectable mechanics employed at the Potter Press Works, most of whom own their own homes, and don't wish them depreciated in value and made undesirable as homes, by such places at Newell's. The Newells rent of a prominent citizen, and rioters say they have complained to him and threatened to sue him for damages to their property unless the Newells were ejected, for the peace of the neighborhood. Chief Carey has had frequent complaints against the place, but not in such shape as to enable me for evidence. "It has been a common thing", the Chief says, "to see men on Sunday and other days and nights going into the house sober and coming out drunk". Hence the inference that the Newells were carrying on an illegal liquor business. Some day the Chief expected to have the necessary evidence, but he had it not yet, when the row occurred there last Sunday night.

As stealthily and quickly as he and his assistants approached the house from different directions, the toughs who only a few moments before had been fighting on the street, were apprised of the officers' approach, and quickly scattered. When the police arrived no one was visible on the streets and quietness prevailed, excepting that a man, evidently in great pain, was groaning aloud in the Newell house, which was darkened, and all the shutters closed. The police had surrounded the house and remained in the vicinity for some time, but the Chief did not feel justified in breaking into the house without a warrant.

Early next morning he gathered the necessary evidence and arrested both Newell and his wife and lodged them in jail, on charges of disorderly conduct.

Soon after Mrs. Newell called the Chief to her cell, and angrily demanded that she be released, something after this manner:

Mrs. Newell—"I want you to release me at once, sir, and let me go home to my sick children."

Chief—"Why didn't you think of your sick children Sunday, when the men made drunk in your home were smashing each other's heads."

Mrs. Newell made no reply. A few hours later she again demanded to be released thus:

Mrs. Newell—"If you don't let me out of here, you will be responsible for the death of my two sick children."

Chief—"You ought to have thought of your children Sunday when the men drunk were hurting and smashing bottles about your rooms. You can't get out of here without bail."

A woman appeared later before Judge Sullivan offering bail. While he was preparing the bail bond, the Chief intimated that the woman seemed to be under the influence of liquor. The Judge concluding that she was refused to accept her bond. Some hours later ex-citizen-keeper James Mullowney appeared and was accepted as the bondsman for both the Newells.

They have had their case adjourned until next Monday, and if the usual tactics employed by this class of people are not successful they will be punished as the law provides, and the case will not stop at that. If they are not ejected from the premises the Corporation Counsel on complaint of the Chief will proceed against the owner for sustaining a disorderly house, while the property-owners in the vicinity threaten to sue the owner for damages, to reimburse them for the depreciation of their property by reason of the disorderly character of the place is fixed to.

Some of our leading citizens—Democrats and Republicans have called upon Chief Carey, and urged him against all notions of resigning, as he threatened to do a week ago, after the verdict in the Sullivan case, and have assured him of their readiness to furnish all the capital required—$10,000, if necessary —to prosecute every rumseller caught violating the law. He has been influenced to change his mind, and some of the few places whose proprietors suppose they are not known to be violating the law may be surprised when they are suddenly arrested and see the array of evidence against them. The Chief is more determined than ever. He says that the number of arrests this year is but little more than one-half that of last year.

There may be more beer drunk, as one would infer from the report we published of corresponding weeks in August, 1887, 1888, and 1889, of the amount of beer received at the depot, but that there is less drunkenness than was the case with the open saloon there seems to be no doubt.

Shake, Brother, Shake!

It is with much pleasure we welcome the bright and handsome Bound Brook Chronicle to the Republican ranks, and extend the right hand of fellowship. The able editor of The Chronicle will find more honor in fighting in a good cause, than in holding aloof. In such a battle as we have this year there would be glory even in defeat, but there won't be defeat, if all good citizens, regardless of party, conscientiously do their duty. The Chronicle declares itself dem.

Believing that the best interests of the people of New Jersey will be advanced this Fall by the election of a Republican Governor and Legislature, The Chronicle to-day places the Republican ticket at the head of this column. If as Patrick Henry said, "we are to judge the future by the past," we must look to the Republican party for ballot reform, temperance reform and every other reforms as the times demand. Leon Abbett and his party last Winter repealed the Republican Secret Ballot law, and defeated the Kean Secret Ballot measure. They also wiped out the Local Option law. If continued in power here we may look to expect better things of them! These are subjects which the voters should ponder well before depositing their ballots on the 5th of November.

County Bridges.

A News reporter this morning interviewed Freeholder Jones in reference to the progress of the work on the bridges now in process of erection, and that gentleman said that the abutments of the bridges on Bliss place, Grant avenue and Middlebrook were completed but that there seems to be considerable delay in getting the iron work from the factories. He said that the iron work on the bridge over Middlebrook would be shipped over on a week or two, but it had not arrived yet. The work on Stiles's bridge, at Evens, has been finished and travel has again been resumed over the bridge. The stone abutments for the bridge on Somerset street will be completed within a week or ten days.

Rev. D. W. Shellenger, of Dunellen will conduct the young mens meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening. Those who have heard Mr. Shellenger on former occasions need not be reminded that he is an earnest and magnetic speaker. Let every member of the Association strive to bring some young man with him to this service. Every man is invited to be present and to join heartily in the singing.

General Repairs.

For the past three weeks the oil cloth factory has been shut down for repairs. Two new engines have been put in, a new smoke stack has been erected and the old steam pipes throughout the buildings have been replaced by new ones.

Work will be resumed Monday.

24 Educated Horses.

Through a misunderstanding about a week engagement at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Prof. George Bartholomew and his 24 educated horses will appear at Music Hall next week. The entertainment comes so largely to persons found at the theatre only on special occasions that a week's large business is anticipated. The New York World of June 9th says: At the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon and evening Prof. Bartholomew's horses were exhibited. On Monday and last night, despite the warm weather, the immense display house was crowded. At present Professor Bartholomew and his intelligent animals to perform various feats the house broke into rapturous applause, which at some of the cleverest points grew to enthusiasm. The playing of "The Last Rose of Summer" on a set of chimes by one of the horses, together with their feats, as exposed, created the greatest impression of the many features of the entertainment. The horses are evidently the favorites of the audience, and continue the popularity which the big playhouse enjoys.—Advt.

Prof. Bartholomew's horses are the two largest cats in the world and will be sidetracked at the Central depot.—Advt.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

At 75 West Front street the meeting this evening will commence with a service of song at 7:30. These meetings are steadily growing in attendance and interest, and souls are being saved. All are welcome.

The meetings for to-morrow are also held as usual by the W. C. T. U. at 9:15 a. m. and at four p. m. These are continued every Sunday during the Winter at their rooms, and a welcome is cordially extended to all.

Although the change of hour from four to three o'clock seems still to be forgotten by some, there was a goodly number at the meeting last Thursday afternoon to enjoy the instructive paper which was read, followed by reports from the delegates to the State Convention, which was held in Trenton last week.

The next meeting will be a social gathering of the W. C. T. U. members and friends at their rooms, from three to six, next Thursday, at which the kitchen garden girls will be represented; it is hoped that, as it has been one, very many will enjoy the reunion.

An Objection from Mr. Ulrich.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In the article in last evening's NEWS about me, you stated that I am "regarded as a strong temperance man". I fear the statement is open to misconstruction, as I may be falsely placed before my constituency as posing as a Prohibitionist. I would much prefer to be spoken of as a Republican, as the people know what that means and when the Grand Old Party has accomplished upon all questions of temperance and moral reform.

JOHN ULRICH.

An Open Camp Fire.

Winfield Scott Post No. 72, G. A. R., will hold an open camp fire in their rooms on West Front street, Tuesday, evening. Songs, recitations, &c., will be features of the occasion. Gen. E. Burd Grubb, the Republican candidate for Governor, has been invited to be present.

PLAINFIELD ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAY.

Capital $70,000 in 1400 Shares of $50. Each.

It is intended to open the books for subscriptions to the stock and bonds of the proposed Company on Thursday, Oct. 24th, at the City National Bank, where a printed statement of the cost of the plant, probable earnings and other particulars may be obtained.

As it is important that the matter should be taken up at once those who are interested will greatly facilitate the work by a prompt response.

Rumors of threatened injunctions to restrain the Company from the use of the storage batteries having been freely circulated by a few hostile persons who seem to lack the courage to let their names appear, it should be stated that the batteries it is proposed to use are in daily service in almost all of the important cities of the Union, and are sold with an ample guarantee by entirely responsible parties as ainst loss or interference in their use.

There are cars in commercial operation every day using these batteries exclusively and they are not enjoined simply because there is no ground for an injunction. Any further threats of this kind will be traced to their source and promptly disposed of as the law provides.

The New Education.

Dr. Felix Adler is at the head of the society for ethical culture in the United States. In the October Century he gives a report of a profoundly interesting educational experiment that society has been making in New York. In 1878 Dr. Adler and his coworkers founded a free school and kindergarten. Workingmen attended the evening classes. In the day classes were their children, from 3 years old, upwards. They began with the kindergarten. The object of the training was not to fit children for any particular calling, but to educate them in an all round way, give them a development mental, moral and physical. This, in the judgment of Dr. Adler, is the ideal democratic education. Dr. Adler says:

It is the business of the school to cultivate every individual pupil as an individual; to develop, not some particular faculty, but, so far as possible, every power of his nature; to liberate all the powers of mind and heart latent within him; so to educate him that he may become, not a broad-brimmed man, not a narrow man, but a symmetrable broadwinner, but he will be much more besides. It is the business of the schools to produce the finest possible specimens of manhood and womanhood, just as the gardener aims to produce fine specimens of fruit or flowers.

Manual training is taught to children between 6 and 14. Clay, pasteboard, wood and metal are used for this purpose. Clay modeling, which is taught in the lowest classes, the children particularly delight in shaping the clay with their young hands. They never weary of this kind of school. Hand culture is regarded in this school as an important means towards brain culture. And a taste for beautiful objects is thus cultivated. It is not likely that boys educated in this school would wantonly mutilate and destroy beautiful works of art in public places.

The elements of science form a large part of the instruction, which is given by the laboratory method. Pupils are carefully trained in geometry and drawing. Manual labor alternates with mental, so that there come to the pupil neither headaches nor backaches. A very pleasant result of the system is that pupils who would be hopeless dunces at their books often lead the manual training classes. As far as possible the instruction is given without text books, thus going back to the system of Socrates. A plan of moral education has been carefully prepared, inculcating those moral truths on which all men are agreed.

Profoundly interesting it will be to watch the future career of these tenement house children, of whom the Society of Ethical Culture seek to make all-round men and women.

The Happiest Royal Family.

The Greeks have an ancient prophecy that when there shall arise in their country an emperor named Constantine, whose wife shall be Sophia, then shall be restored Christian rule to Constantinople and Christian worship to the mosques of St. Sophia. The name of the Duke of Sparta, heir to the throne of Greece, is Constantine, and by his marriage to the sister of the German emperor he gets a wife named Sophia.

Meantime, if the young Duke of Sparta is as happy in his domestic life as his father and mother have been, he will be fortunate and happy whether he ever fulfills the prophecy or not. A newspaper correspondent gives a delightful sketch of the simple democratic life of King George and Queen Olga. It is simpler in some respects than that of an American president. Their majesties walk about the streets unattended, as Lincoln used to do. They are devoted to each other, and seem as happy as the day is long. So far as known, not even a whisper of a skeleton in their cupboard has ever reached the public. They are handsome, healthy, and they love each other, and their people are devoted to them. King George and his queen are both fond of athletic and outdoor exercises, in which they excel. The king spends much time in his office, hard at work as any clerk. After office hours he frequently walks in suddenly on some of his heads of departments in the following fashion:

Good morning, Mr. Postmaster. I have come to see what you are about these foreign stamps. They don't seem to get distributed as promptly as they should. Or as the jail: Ah, Mr. Sheriff, how do you do? I am glad to see you. Are you having a good enough to eat. How about it? Just let me go in and see them at dinner, will you?

It is melancholy to read of Nevada, abandoned alike by rain, railroads and miners. There are towns in the state that used to have a population of 15,000. Now they have in some instances less than a hundred. When the price of silver goes up in the world's market, when the government's gigantic irrigation scheme covers her arid valleys with smiling green, then Nevada will awake, like the enchanted princess, and all the scenes of merry, busy life will be enacted over again.

The Hebrew Journal asks this question: Who ever heard of a Jewish vote? It then proceeds to remark that the Jew never mixes his politics with his race or religion. The race distributes itself among the different political parties. "We think we may say with pride that such a thing as a Jewish vote has never presented itself to our government. Outside of the synagogue we are citizens of the United States," says The Journal.

FIGHTING OVER THE BODY

Every Point Contested in the Cronin Trial.

THE DECEASED'S UGLY WOUNDS.

A Physician Proves That Cronin Was Killed Shortly After Leaving the Conklin Residence—Vigilantly Guarding the Jury—Cronin's Sister Summoned.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—An immense crowd attended the second day's trial of the alleged murderers of Dr. Cronin. Several witnesses swore that the body found in the catch basin was that of Cronin. Among them was T. T. Conklin, who said that for eleven years his family had consisted of Dr. Cronin, Mrs. Conklin and himself. He met Dr. Cronin in St. Louis where the doctor was practicing his profession. The doctor lived with them up to the time of his death. John F. Scanlan was next called. He said he had known Dr. Cronin since 1884 and during the last year had seen the doctor almost every day. He saw him last alive about 5 o'clock, May 4. He next saw his dead body at the morgue in Lake View. He recognized the body by the hair, the teeth, the forehead and general appearance. Under Mr. Forrest's cross-examination witness admitted that he had taken an active part in this prosecution. Mr. Forrest went deeply into the witness' history and business but brought out nothing except that Mr. Scanlan was something of a politician. Witness was a member of the Clan-na-Gael, but had attended only a few meetings. He knew Dr. Cronin's death. Witness had also belonged to the Fenians before joining the clan.

He Saw Cronin Ride to His Death.

Frank Scanlan testified to having seen Dr. Cronin alive a few minutes before the doctor left his home in the buggy drawn by the white horse, and to having identified the body at the morgue by the teeth, forehead, etc.

Mr. Forrest began his cross-examination of Mr. Scanlan by asking: "Is there any one you know better than you know Dr. Cronin?"

"John F. Scanlan for instance?"

"Yes." "Describe John F. Scanlan's teeth." The witness waited a moment, and then said: "His teeth?" but Mr. Mills objected, "that is an unfair test," said he, and the court excluded the question. Mr. Scanlan said he had noticed the doctor's teeth by frequently seeing the doctor's gags when witness visited the latter at his office.

Others Knew the Body.

David P. Ahearn, a tailor at Washington street, knew Dr. Cronin well, and recognized the body at the morgue by the imperial on his chin and the shape of his forehead. George Finiger, a German laborer, testified to having been present when the body was found in the catch basin and to its arrest. On his cross-examination he insisted that the body was handled with great care.

Patrick McGarry was the next witness. He had known Dr. Cronin about four and one-half years. He saw the body at the morgue and knew it was that of Dr. Cronin. On cross-examination he admitted that he was a member of the Clan-na-Gael.

Dr. Cronin's Dentist Called.

Dr. C. W. Lewis, Dr. Cronin's dentist, was called. He had known Dr. Cronin some six years. Saw his dentist and had frequently examined the doctor's mouth; had filled teeth for him and made him two sets of false teeth. He was certain that the dead body he saw at the morgue was that of Dr. Cronin. A plaster cast he had made of the doctor's mouth some time before fitted the mouth of the corpse, which he found to have filled teeth. Attorney Mills handed the witness a small plate with four teeth attached to it, one being broken. The witness recognized it as a plate he had made for Dr. Cronin. Dr. Egbert, the assistant county physician, then identified the plate and the teeth as the same he had taken from the body at the Lake View morgue, and they were offered in evidence and admitted by the court over Mr. Forrest's objection.

Cronin Was Quickly Killed.

Whatever doubts had existed regarding the fact that Dr. Cronin was killed within a short time after leaving the Conklin residence were set at rest when Dr. Egbert produced a number of jars containing the stomach of the murdered man. The food, he said, had scarcely commenced to digest, and had been taken in the stomach less than three hours before death. The contents of this were another wound, almost the same size, while back of the left ear was a ragged wound that pierced the brain. On the left of the back of the head there was another ugly wound two and a quarter inches long and a fourth of an inch wide, in the center of which was a gap of the skin of the scalp. This had been beaten into the thin layer of flesh on the skull by the force of the blow, and was attached to the remaining skin at the upper portion of the wound. The lungs were free from water, despite the fact that the head was below the surface when found and, as the physician testified in the most emphatic manner, that he was not the slightest doubt that Dr. Cronin's death was caused by the wounds he received.

The Mound on the Back.

Judge Wing and Mr. Forrest took turns in cross-examining the witness for nearly two hours, with the view of securing an admission that the wounds upon the body might have been occasioned by rough usage while getting it out of the vault. Dr. Egbert insisted, however, that they were inflicted prior to his death, and his testimony in other particulars remained unshaken.

Jurors Guarded Like Criminals.

If the Cronin jury is unduly influenced it will not be because the state does not take every possible precaution against it. Not only are the bailiffs as severe in their watch of the jurors as if they were so many criminals and liable to break away and run at the most possible chance, but there are scores of detectives that guard the sidewalk between the Criminal court hotel, where the jury stop, and the criminal court building. Whenever the jury is taken to or from the building.

Cronin's Sister Summoned.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Oct. 26.—Mrs. John Carroll, of this city, sister of the late Dr. Cronin, has received a telegram from State's Attorney Longenecker urging her immediate appearance in Chicago as a witness. Mrs. Carroll left for Chicago at once, accompanied by her husband.

NECK AND NECK.

An Eleven Inning Game Ties the World's Championship Series.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Another genius afflicted the players and spectators at the sixth game in the world's series, which occurred at the Polo grounds yesterday afternoon. The cold weather evidently had the same depressing effect on the attendance, and there were only about 9,000 persons present. The game was the best and most exciting one of the series, and was in anybody's game until Ward's hit sent Slattery home in the eleventh inning. Brooklyn scored their first and only run in the second, earning it on Dalrymple's two-bagger, Hanlon's out to Richardson, Terry and Corkhill. After this, and until the inning run was scored in the ninth, both teams settled down to work, and some of the prettiest fielding and pitching ever seen here followed.

The New York "rooters" had about given up hope after Thomas and Irwin had been retired in the ninth, but dying hope revived when Ward hit safely to center, and by some fine running and sliding safely to third. Big Roger Connor then came to the front and with a mighty swipe of his muscular arms sent the ball blazing past second, sending Ward in with the tieing run. Such cheering as followed seldom, if ever, is heard, the crowd actually going crazy with excitement. After ten minutes of this the game was resumed. Connor stole second and third, but was left, Richardson retiring to Foutz.

The tenth inning was quickly played, the batters being retired in order. The Brooklyns were blanked in the eleventh, but Slattery, the first to face New York, hit safely to left. Ewing sacrificed and Slattery reached second. Ward again came to the rescue, this time with a liner to left, which sent Slattery home with the winning run.

Each club has now won three games.

Electric Street Cars Stopped.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, has filed his decision in the motion of the Electrical Accumulator company for an injunction against the Julien Electric Traction company and the New York and Harlem Railroad company, restraining those companies or either of them from using accumulators or secondary batteries made according to any of the various modifications devised by the Julien company since the date of the prior injunction in April last. The present decision secures to the Electrical Accumulator company all the rules they have asked for. The immediate result will be to stop the running of all the storage battery cars now in operation on the Fourth Avenue Street railroad in this city. There are several other large battery companies in operation besides the Julien company, all of which will come under this decision. It is claimed by the officers of the Electrical Accumulator company that all known methods of making secondary batteries are now controlled by that company, Brush's experiment with a dry battery being insufficient to defeat the injunction, without first being allowed to settle having failed in producing any practical results.

He was then chosen speaker by the unanimous vote of his party, there being no opposing candidate in the caucus.

THE GALENA HOME AGAIN

Alleged Leaders of the Navassa Riots Aboard.

LODGED IN JAIL AT BALTIMORE

The Galena's Officers Say the White Houses Practiced Great Brutality Against the Negroes of the Island—Dr. Smith's Story Contradicted.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26.—The United States man-of-war Galena, Rear Admiral Gherardi commanding, arrived in the harbor from Navassa Island late yesterday afternoon and anchored off Fort McHenry. She had on board nine Havasso negroes, eight of whom were engaged in the murderous riots on the island of Navassa recently, six of them being the instigators and perpetrators of the murders of the white bosses.

Names of the Ringleaders.

The names of these latter six are: Albert Jones, the chief of the lot, whose home is on Fiewater street, Philadelphia; Amos Lee, of Georgetown, D. C.; Thomas Welch, Washington, D. C.; George Singleton Keys, Washington, D. C.; Henry Jones, of Greensboro, W. Va.; and James Phillips, of Baltimore. Robert Downs and William James, both of Baltimore, are also in the party, but they are not deeply involved in the trouble.

On the voyage from Navassa Admiral Gherardi kept these two separated from the six ringleaders. They will be used as witnesses.

The ninth man is George Ward, of Wilmington, Del., but he is in no way implicated. He was the cook on the island, and was taken aboard the Galena to look after the prisoners.

Lodged in Jail.

When word was received that the Galena was in port, United States District Attorney Thomas G. Hayes, United States Deputy Marshal Isaacs and several other officials boarded a tug and went to the warship, and after an exchange of the proper official papers the prisoners were put aboard the tug and taken up to the Baltimore jail. Lee, Keys, Henry Jones and Welch are accused of murder; Albert Jones and Phillips with mutiny and inciting to kill.

Great Brutality Practiced.

The story told by the officers of the Galena regarding the riot is much the same as that already published. One of them said, however, that the white bosses practiced great brutality against the negroes. When the Galena arrived at Navassa the British war vessel Forward was already there and had taken all the arms and ammunition away from the negroes.

Dr. Smith's Story Contradicted.

Robert Downs, one of the two negroes who are to be used as witnesses, contradicts Dr. Smith in one important point. The doctor stated that the first firing was done after he and his associates had taken refuge in the house. Downs holds a different theory, that the first shot was fired in the yard and that Smith fired it. He had directed Mr. Jones to take charge of James Phillips. The negro refused, and Dr. Smith drew a load of birdshot into his face. This was the beginning of the fight. The white men ran to the house, locked themselves up and continued to fight from the windows, using the fusillade with stones. Finally Amos Lee resorted to the use of dynamite. Downs says it was Keys who killed Mahon. This was after the whites had surrendered. He saw Keys shoot Mahon in the back and in the forehead. Downs says he was merely an on-looker, having no part whatever in the fight. William James, the other witness, admits that after the fighting began he threw rocks at the house. The ringleaders are keeping their own counsel. Admiral Gherardi says the brigs Romance and Alice, with 124 negroes aboard, may not arrive inside of a week.

Collom's Alleged Confession.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 26.—The "confession" of Collom is now the pivot on which the great forgery case turns. The prosecution has established the fact that Collom made it to four reputable witnesses. While the last witness of the four—W. B. Anderson, Blaisdell's son-in-law—was on the stand the defense sprung its great surprise. Before the cross-examination, as well as from a statement by counsel, it appears that the defense expects to prove that the "confession" was a prearranged scheme between Collom and Anderson to defraud Collom's creditors and save Blaisdell's property from impending ruin.

Indicted for a Serious Crime.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Ida J. Lane, of Salt Point, this county, has began suit against Jacob Snyder, a railroad contractor, for alleged seduction under promise of marriage, damages being placed at $5,000. Snyder was brought here from Johnsonburg, Pa., and lodged in jail. His friends say there is a conspiracy against him. His wife vouches on the ground floor, and at the time of his death was constructing the Michigan and Southeastern railroad, and was president of the corporation. He had served in both houses of the Vermont legislature.

The Weldon Extradition Act.

TORONTO, Oct. 26.—The Empire, a government organ, denies that the Weldon extradition act has been disallowed as charged by the imperial authorities. If the United States senate ratifies the new extradition treaty agreed to between Great Britain and the United States last summer, the necessary proclamation from the governor general will be issued to put the above act in force.

A MEAN MAN.

He Is Exercised His Talents on a Chi cago Cable Car.

"Do you know I believe I saw the meanest man on the street-car platform on a south street grip," said a friend of mine. "You can bet your whole Credit coal that he was one who couldn't come in from away out south when it was going on six Thirty-seventh street and not get on at the front part of the grip. And he'd be sure to be stopped by the conductor all over it.

"You'd better get out your conductor. I saw the Thirty-third street.'

The grippman said, 'All right,' and jerked his rope. Well, Thirty-third street came, the conductor, and the honest man got over to another car without paying a cent. He got up his little nickel. Right here is where he made a mean man got in his work. When he caught sight of that nickel he held out his hand. The man with a conscience recognized the act, thanked him courteously, dropped the nimble nick in his paw and got off. Then he ran across the road till he heard the conductor coming for the nickel, when he said:

"Well, sorry I can't stay with you always, but this is my street. By-by.'

Then with a graceful wave of his hand he was off the car. The force of what the grippman said would be lost in the necessary transfer, but I think if the grip coming from the opposite direction had scattered that man all along the block, everybody on the car would have been pleased. It wasn't that he had robbed the company that made every one mad. It was the small, low down way he took of doing it."—Chicago Mail.

It is one great cause of trouble in this world that the person who talks is thinking of one thing, and the person who listens is thinking of another.

"Have you, indeed! That's too bad. I am sorry for you, and here"—

"Oh, thank you, sir!"

"Here are my spectacles. They are a new pair, and very strong. I'll lend them to you to look for your nickel."

To his great surprise the boy took to his heels and disappeared among the trees.—Detroit Free Press.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP.

How the Ancients Regarded Lightning.

Their Superstitions in Regard to It.

In the great pagan world we find constant references to the state of awe and terror that was associated with lightning. Its victims were reckoned the accursed of heaven, and buried alone and apart lest the sanctity of others should be polluted by their presence. Even a spot of ground struck by lightning (Bidental) was hedged in, and no man allowed to enter it. Laurel is now regarded as the emblem of victory and triumph, but Suetonius informs us that the Emperor Tiberius wore a chaplet of laurel because he believed that lightning would not touch this kind of tree. In China the mulberry and the peach are regarded as preservatives against lightning. The Romans considered sealskins a protection, and it is curious to note that the shepherds who inhabit the neighborhood of Mount Cevennes, where some Roman colonies existed, cover their huts as a charm against storms with the skins of seals.

The emperors of Japan retired into a deep grotto and had a reservoir of water sunk in the center, in the fatuous belief that it could extinguish the fires of heaven. But as soon as the first rumble is heard, expel all strangers from their tents, and sit glum and immovable, immersed in profound silence. The contrast to the latest amusing between these potentates in abject terror and an old couple who were forced, in the great storm of 1756, into a cellar by the fall of a chimney, and there—I use the quaint language of an old tract—"digged up after 8 o'clock the next morning; it was well worthy of observation that the first question that the poor man asked was where was his breeches, in which were 50s. in money, and the woman demanded what was become of her trunk, in which were some pieces of gold, being not at all terrified, and minding their worldly concerns more than the danger."

Railroad Statistics.

The total number of miles of railroad in the United States at the close of 1888 was 156,082, of which 7,028 miles were constructed during the year—the rate of increase being 4.7 per cent. The share capital of the railroads outstand at the end of 1888 equaled $4,468,411,542, an increase over 1887 of $246,849,313, or about 5.9 per cent. The funded debts of all lines at the close of the year aggregated $4,704,475,035, an increase of $437,691,907, or nearly 9.5 per cent over 1887. The total share capital and indebtedness of all kinds of all roads making returns equaled $9,203,886,577, an increase in the year of $695,211,738, or about 8 per cent.

The cost per mile of all roads making returns, as measured by the amount of their stocks and indebtedness, equaled very nearly $60,732, against $58,609 for 1887. The gross earnings or receipts of all lines for which returns were received for the year equaled $903,256,730, an increase for the year equaling $39,165,593, or 2.14 per cent. The net earnings equaled $301,651,031, a decrease of $31,358,000, or 10 per cent. The amount of interest paid in 1888 equaled $207,124,288, an increase of $3,333,893, or over 1.65 per cent. The amount of dividends equaled $90,345,041, an increase of $1,000,000, or about 12.4 per cent. The number of persons transported during 1888 was 451,853,603, an increase of 28,128,132, or 6.4 per cent.

The number of passengers carried one mile equaled 11,190,013,079, an increase equaling 650,306,909 persons, or very nearly 6 per cent. The amount received per passenger per mile equaled 2.226 cents, against 2.276 in 1887. Had the passenger rates for 1887 been maintained, the earnings from this source would have equaled $255,054,064, a sum $14,691,319 greater than that received. The number of tons of freight transported equaled 589,398,247, an increase of 37,325,565 tons—about 6½ per cent. The rate per ton per mile moved in 1888, estimating its value at $25 per ton, equaled $14,623,957,925. The statement of rolling stock of all railroads in the United States shows 20,611 locomotives, 21,496 passenger, 6,627 baggage, mail and express, and 1,005,116 freight cars.

Instances of Memory.

The varieties of memory are as remarkable as its vagaries. There is, for instance, so wide a range between Niebuhr, the great statesman, and a certain divine, that one can scarcely recognize the same faculty in each. It is said of Niebuhr that he remembered everything he had read at any period of his life; and it is said of the reverend doctor that he forgot he had been married within an hour or two of the interesting event. John Wesley had a remarkable memory, and at 80, even, it was still vigorous.

Adam Clarke could repeat a poem of five hundred lines after hearing it read once or twice, could recite verbatim a sermon or speech, and enumerate the names of the shop signs from the temple to the end of Cheapside, with a description of the principal articles displayed in each shop window. Before the days of printing and of Gutenberg Woodfall used to attend the house of commons, and, after listening to a debate, would reproduce the whole without taking a single note. The same power was possessed by William Radcliffe, the hulk hand of Mrs. Radcliffe, the novelist. Both Macaulay and Sir Walter Scott had prodigious memories. The latter of them could compare with Beronicius, of Middleburg, who knew by heart the works of Virgil, Cicero, Juvenal, Homer, Aristophanes and the two Pliays.

Symbols of Saints.

In Christian art the various saints are symbolized as follows: Matthew, with an angel standing near him dictating the gospel; Mark, accompanied by a winged lion; Luke has an ox near him; John, writing his gospels or bearing a chalice from which a serpent issues; Paul, with a sword and an open book; Peter holds in his hand a book or scroll; James, with a sword, sometimes attired as a pilgrim; Andrew with the cross; Philip, bearing a long cross or a basket of loaves; Jude, a club or staff and carpenter's square; Bartholomew, a knife; Thomas, a builder's square, and Simon, with a saw in his hand.

A Saying.

"Acknowledge the corn" is an expression signifying an admission when denial would be utterly futile evidence of the fact. The significant phrase is said to have had its origin in Connecticut. A farmer had been much annoyed by depredations from his barnyard. Finding a thief making off with a sack of corn, the owner accused him of taking the other things. There was a denial, and when the corn was brought as evidence of the other thefts he was told to "acknowledge the corn, but not the other things."

Steamer Signals.

When two steamers are approaching each other one of them whistles once, which means that she wishes to go to the right. Two whistles denote that she wants to pass on the left. If one boat desires to cross the bow of another, she blows one whistle, and if the other desires the same privilege she answers with two whistles. When a steamer is in trouble of any kind and another is coming toward her, the first one blows five or more whistles, which means "I am disabled; pass me on either side."

A HALF HOUR'S PLEASANT READING FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

The Ancient Sport of Hawking—A Brief Review of Some Celebrated Falconers, with a Description of Their Attire—A Touching Story of Moving Day.

In ancient times hawks were the constant companions of people of rank and an essential part of a great man's retinue. A man, however high, thought it no scorn to feed and care for these birds, which were considered fit presents from one king to another. It was held dishonorable to part with this distinguishing mark of rank. Captives endured imprisonment rather than purchase relief by relinquishing their hawks, and the laws of Charlemagne expressly forbade that hawks should form part of a ransom.

A RUSSIAN FALCONER.

So inseparable were the birds from their masters that men chose to be represented with hawk on fist, and the ancient English illuminators have uniformly distinguished the portrait of King Stephen by giving him a hawk and its hood. In the Thirteenth century ladies adopted the sport of hawking, and soon became so proficient as to be considered equal with if not superior to their lords. The early English kings followed the chase with hawks, and Richard II kept his hawks at the famous Mews, at Charing Cross.

In 1662 the Russian ambassador brought Charles II, in addition to other gifts, some hawks. Covering his hand with a glove wrought with gold, he took a hawk upon his fist to show it to the king. The Russian falconers of that time were attired like the one represented in our cut. The equipment consisted of bow and arrows, a small hunting horn and a knife. On the right hand was worn a richly embroidered gauntlet. This ancient sport has been in some measure revived of late in foreign countries.

Some of the Foreign Capitals.

Great London is the capital of all our English cities,

Renowned for many a stirring tale in ancient days and duties,

Fair Edinburgh, Scotland's pride, thy treasured name we sing

Of Holyrood and Calton Hill and lofty Arthur's Seat.

And Dublin on the Liffey's shore—the greatest Irish town,

Where many a jaunting outside car is driving up and down.

And Paris is the city prized by all the land of France,

Where people love to sit outdoors, and laugh and sing and dance.

And Berlin is the capital of all the federation,

Which makes the German empire strong, a brave and mighty nation.

In Austria Vienna stands, above the rushing wave,

For merchants and her palaces the Danube's waters have.

And grand Madrid's a stately town, the Spaniards love it well,

The proud Castilians walk its streets with many a dark eyed belle.

And Lisbon, on the Tagus' shore, of Portugal the seat,

Its outlook on the crusted wave, its nest the Atlantic coast.

At Amsterdam the gallant Dutch have bade the waters flee,

Their dykes and dams have checked the waves of foaming Zuyder Zee.

Gay Brussels in the Belgian's land may art and pleasure rule,

While hearts of English travelers glow at thought of Waterloo.

Pitching at a Line.

This capital game may be played by two, three or four boys. A line about two feet long having been drawn upon the ground, the players stand at a given distance and pitch for turns, he whose coin falls nearest to the line is entitled to the first throw, and the others, when there are more than two players, follow him in rotation according to the position of their pitches. For the sake of simplicity we will suppose that there are only two players, and that they each play with two buttons.

The first player stands at the offing and pitches one button, and then the other, endeavoring to make them both fall on the near side of the line, and as close to it as possible. The next player then pitches his two buttons in precisely the same manner. The player who succeeds in pitching a button nearest to the line has the right side of it, claims all the buttons that have been pitched over the line as his property; the others he tosses into the air, and those that fall to the ground with the shank side uppermost he keeps; his opponent now tosses up the blanks, or those that lie with their shanks downwards, if there are any left, and he now claims those that fall shanks; in this way the buttons are tossed up by the players alternately, each keeping the blanks until they are all won, when the game begins afresh. When there are more than two players, each pitches but one button, and takes his turn at tossing up according to the value of his throws. The order of tossing up regulates the manner in which the players pitch at the line, when a new game is commenced.

Moving Day.

OH, DEAR, IT'S MOVING DAY.

I broke my cup,
I've torn my shoes,
My kitten's run away;
I guess I've lost
Blows children, too;
Oh, dear, it's moving day!

PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE.

Facts About Loss of Weight in Typhoid Fever—Use of Nitro-Glycerine.

Dr. L. H. Cohen has published an account of some interesting observations on the weight of the body in typhoid fever, the subjects observed being patients in Cochin hospital, where by an ingenious contrivance a large bed with mattress is daily weighed every day and the weight recorded on their charts, from the beginning to the end of the fever. Dr. Cohen's observations show that the loss of weight is not always the same in each individual. In reviewing the researches on the causes of the loss of weight he establishes the fact that the fabricians have at the expense of his tissues. The conclusions arrived at are as follows:

1. Typhoid fever presents two distinct periods, one of loss and one of gain; certain accidents or causes may modify it, but cannot affect their general character. 2. The daily loss is due to febrile combustion chiefly, and but little to abstinence. 3. The daily loss varies with individuals. 4. The losses in nitrogen and in weight are almost parallel with the march of the temperature, without always following it exactly. 5. The gain in the weight is chiefly due to the progress of convalescence. 6. The complications of the disease augment the loss of weight. The study of the loss of weight enables the physician to determine with precision the action of nutritive substances in fevers! 8. The loss of weight in a typhoid patient takes place each day in a uniform manner.

What Doctors Say.

Since children never expectorate, the phlegm when raised by coughing in bronchitis or pneumonia, says Dr. A. A. Whitfield, passes into the stomach, where it acts as a retarder of digestion if not ejected or passed into the bowels. The presence of masses of phlegm in the bowels often causes constipation, and sometimes calls for the exhibition of a mild cathartic.

According to Prof. da Costa, of Philadelphia, cold applications should never be used in the local treatment of gout. They may cause retrocession and dangerous symptoms affecting vital organs.

Dr. Squibb calls attention to the uselessness of sulphur or chlorine gas as a disinfectant unless there is considerable aqueous vapor in the atmosphere of a room. Another authority recommends that water be kept boiling in the room to be disinfected by either of these agents.

Sozoiodurin as an Antiseptic.

Sozoiodol is reported by a French writer to be a valuable antiseptic. A strength of 1 to 500, as an addition to mucilaginous and other solutions, prevents the formation of low organisms. Thus a valuable, inexpensive disinfectant may be prepared by simply dissolving saccharin in water, to the proportion of 4 per cent. A teaspoonful of this in a half pint of water forms an admirable antiseptic mouth wash. In cases of malignant or other disease of the stomach, requiring the washing out of that organ, a solution of saccharin of the strength of 3 per cent. will be found very suitable.

For Neuralgia.

Boil a handful of sage in a half pint of water, strain and add a teaspoonful of fine salt Wring cloths out of the liquid, very hot, and apply till the pain ceases, changing as often as they cool. Also wet a dry cloth for a while to prevent taking cold. Two large tablespoonfuls of cologne and two teaspoonfuls of fine salt mixed in a bottle make an excellent inhalent for facial neuralgia. Horseradish, prepared the same as for the table, applied to the temple or wrist, is recommended.

Glycerine for Coughs, Etc.

In severe paroxysms of coughing, either in coughs, colds or consumption, one or two teaspoonfuls of pure glycerine in pure whisky or hot rich cream will, according to Scientific American, afford almost immediate relief, and to the consumptive a panacea is found by daily use of glycerine diluted with the proportion of one part of powdered willow charcoal and two parts of pure glycerine.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Six Suggestions for Housewives in Search of Social Hospitality.

"Don'ts" appear to be the popular form in which many of the rules of etiquette are expressed, and Good Housekeeping furnishes six very important "don'ts" for the benefit of hostesses, which are, in brief, as follows:

First, and most important, is, "Don't invite company unless you want them to come."

2. Don't give general invitations, but if you do, don't recall them.

There is a most admirable custom in some parts of the country, but it is not known to the line is entitled to the first throw, and the others, when there are more than two players, follow him in rotation according to the position of their pitches. For the sake of simplicity we will suppose that there are only two players, and that they each play with two buttons.

The first player stands at the offing and pitches one button, and then the other, endeavoring to make them both fall on the near side of the line, and as close to it as possible. The next player then pitches his two buttons in precisely the same manner. The player who succeeds in pitching a button nearest to the line has the right side of it, claims all the buttons that have been pitched over the line as his property; the others he tosses into the air, and those that fall to the ground with the shank side uppermost he keeps; his opponent now tosses up the blanks, or those that lie with their shanks downwards, if there are any left, and he now claims those that fall shanks; in this way the buttons are tossed up by the players alternately, each keeping the blanks until they are all won, when the game begins afresh. When there are more than two players, each pitches but one button, and takes his turn at tossing up according to the value of his throws. The order of tossing up regulates the manner in which the players pitch at the line, when a new game is commenced.

3. Don't make hard work of entertaining.

There is a certain amount of labor involved in every visit received by or paid by good management and a right conception of what hospitality is, be reduced to the minimum. If we could once get hold of the idea that our friends do not want us to change our surroundings nor our loaded tables, but ourselves, it would do much to lessen the work of entertaining. Where the hostess spends her time concocting elaborate dishes that the cook could not manage alone, the guest must have a feeling that her coming has brought labor and weariness, and both will be inevitably tired, and perhaps secretly glad when the visit is at an end.

4. Don't try to manage your guests.

Some persons are born managers. With the best intentions in the world they so smother a plan than they seek to improve on it, perhaps to the upsetting of several contingent plans. Such hostesses are not to be agreeable as a less active kind. To promise during a visit to spend a few days with another friend in the same place. Your hostess says, "I can't spare you so now; you can go later." You appreciate her generous hospitality, but you are inconvenienced by it, notwithstanding.

5. Don't obstruct in the domestic machinery.

A wonderfully small thing will convey an impression that a wonderfully large amount of argument will not remove. Guests are sometimes made very uncomfortable by little remarks thoughtlessly dropped in their hearing in regard to household affairs. Your hostess speaks of her immense weekly washings, and you think of your own, of your towels and sheets that must be added to it. She remarks that chickens are scarce and dear, and you remember with dismay that you helped yourself to one at dinner.

6. Don't forget that the soul of hospitality is the welcome.

We cannot always entertain as we wish to. In this disconsolate country of ours we are poor often have friends who are rich. Shall we, on account of this, refuse to see them? We cannot entertain them in their way, deny ourselves the pleasure of entertaining them at all? Indeed, no. Let us rather give them of "the best we have in store" and with it a welcome that shall make amends for all deficiencies.

ALL AROUND THE HOUSE.

Some Practical and Timely Directions for Repairing Parasols and Umbrellas.

The majority of women have stored away in some neglected corner one or more dilapidated parasols or umbrellas which perhaps a handsome or favorite handle has preserved from being entirely thrown away. To recover them at home is a simple matter, for which the Good House-keeping gives directions that will enable any one of average ability to do it. The first step is to measure the parasol to find out the quantity of material required. To ascertain this measure the longest and largest part, taking half the given height, with half of one of the quarters for the amount required. Suppose, for instance, you measure three full yards around, the silk needed will be half that quantity, or one and a half yards; add a big half of one of the pieces, about one and three quarters. Having obtained the length, measure through the center of one of the sections—that is, from top to bottom—and the number of inches given, for required width.

Remove the cover carefully, so as not to draw it out of shape, for much depends upon this. Rip the sections apart. Select the best one for a pattern, and cut from the material as many pieces as are required. These pieces must be laid horizontally upon the goods, the broadest part at the selvage, alternating from side to side in order to economize the material. Lay a narrow hem across the selvage before they are basted together. Sew the seams up on the right side as narrowly as possible—just the merest baring of the goods. Turn the wrong side, and baste as closely and evenly as possible, then stitch again, allowing almost a quarter of an inch for the seam. When all are basted, draw a needle and stout cotton through each seam a trifle below the top and draw tightly together.

Cut a circle of silk six inches in diameter, make a small hem, run a cord and place the upper part of frame. With the cover still on the wrong side, put the sticks through the small opening and draw tightly together, wind the sticks with the small groove between them, which is at the top of the parasol. Turn the cover over on the right side and fasten to the small holes designed for that purpose. Cut off the ends to the ribs in two other places, to avoid slipping, which finishes the recovering.

Cleaning Clothing.

It is a mystery to many people how the scourers of old clothes can make them almost as good as new. Take for instance a shiny old coat, waistcoat or trousers, of broadcloth, cassimere or diagonal. The Analyst describes the process as follows: The scourer makes a strong, warm solution of soap, rubs the garment into it, souses it up and down, rubs the dirty places if necessary, puts it through a second soda, then soused it through several rinses and hangs to dry on the line. When nearly dry, he takes it in, rolls it up for an hour or two and then presses it. An old cotton cloth is laid on the outside of the coat and the iron is passed over it until the wrinkles are out; but the iron is removed before the steam ceases to rise from the goods, else they would be shiny.

Wrinkled shirt bands are obstinate are removed by laying a wet cloth over them and passing the iron over that. If any shiny places are seen they are treated as the wrinkles are; the iron is lifted while the full cloud of steam rises, and brings the nap up with it. In this manner we have known the same coat and pantaloons to be renewed time and again, and have all the look and feel of new garments. Good broadcloth and its fellow cloths will bear many washings and look better every time because of them.

Apple Batter Pudding.

Cover the bottom of a pudding dish with apple sauce, made by stewing one-half of a pound of apples till soft, rubbing through a colander and adding one-fourth of a pound of sugar and a little grated nutmeg. Pour over a batter of one pint of flour, one-half of a pint of milk, one small one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one saltspoonful of salt. Bake and serve with any good sauce.

Imitation Nicile Work on Glass.

This kind of work has been recently adapted for many decorative purposes on a small scale. Its general effect is that of silver inlaid on ebony. Any shape of panels, medallions and inlays generally, on furniture, easels, trays, screens, photograph frames, etc., can be carried out in this manner with an excellent effect.

The sheet of glass to be ornamented, after having been cut into the desired shape, is evenly covered on the back with a layer of black lacquer, composed of two parts of asphalt varnish, fifty parts of Frankfurt black and fifty parts of brown siccative oil. When thoroughly dry, the outlines of the reversed design are traced or transferred on the surface of the lacquer, and then carefully scratched out with a sharp but not too much pointed penknife. Defects can be repaired by painting them over with black lacquer.

IMITATION SILVER AND EBONY INLAY.

The asphalted part of the glass is then covered with tinfoil, which has to be firmly rubbed on, to prevent the silver from the design on the front side. Ultimately the decorated glass is mounted or inlaid, as the article which it is intended to ornament requires. The specimen illustrated is an inlay in a card tray.

Worth Knowing.

A good and cheap liquid bluing consists of one ounce of best pulverized Prussian blue and half an ounce of pulverized oxalic acid to one quart of soft water. The acid dissolves the blue and holds it evenly in the water, thus preventing specking.

Kerosene is used for softening shoes that have been hardened by water, and is said to result in them as pliable as new.

Olive oil mixed with camphor makes an excellent application for inflammatory swellings, also for rubbing rheumatic joints.

A long handled bristle brush is excellent for sweeping matting, as the soft bristles remove all dust and do not break or break the strands like a stiff broom. When necessary to wash matting use salt and water to prevent changing color.

Powdered soap bark is very useful for washing curtain lace. It does not fade them and gives a gloss and freshness almost like new. Pour boiling water on the bark and let it stand; then use the clear liquid in the water as you wash it.

Milk will take out all kinds of fruit stains from linen and cotton goods.

—"The Madison Weekly Eagle" has just completed the eighth year of its existence. It is a very creditable local paper, and its general tone indicates that Messrs. Bardou and Clift, the publishers, not only understand their business, but are also level-headed men, well deserving success. Such men are a blessing to any community, and we congratulate the people of Madison for knowing a good thing when they see it, as is evident by the hearty support they accord The Eagle, which must be very encouraging to the enterprising publishers.

—Spirits of camphor (spirits) applied to any red or pimply spots is excellent, if not used too often, and will generally remove any redness of the nose if applied at night. Half a teaspoonful of salt of tartar to three-quarters of a pint of boiled water makes a good lotion for the face. Also bathing the face in tepid water after using soap. Where the pimply spots are very large and obstinate it is a good plan to press them out between the fingers and immediately bathe the spot with hot soap and water. Spirit for a few days a lotion made of one teaspoonful of mercury.

TRAMPS FRIGHTENING WOMEN.

Three of Them Captured By Chief Carey and Special Officer Cooney.

Four tramps were annoying the residents of North Plainfield Saturday afternoon by visiting houses and insulting the ladies. At Mrs. Stanton's, on Prospect place, one burly fellow finding that there was no one at home but a young girl, tried to get into the house, but the girl promptly locked the door. The tramp then went to a window but was unable to gain admittance, and then withdrew. The tramps also visited Mrs. Ilnbarger's on the opposite side of the street.

On complaint of the people who were annoyed warrants were issued for the arrest of the tramps, and Constable Bauerachs made search for them. They escaped into Plainfield. Two of them were captured by Chief Carey on Washington avenue and one by special police man Cooney. They had showed fight to the Chief, but soon succumbed when they discovered that they had no chicken to deal with.

The fourth tramp had concealed himself behind a tree, where the Chief discovered him, and called to Mr. Cooney, another Thorp, of Van Front street to capture him. Mr. Thorp happened to be passing at the time and had his umbrella up to keep off the rain. He dropped it and ran after the tramp, who had started to run the moment he saw himself discovered, and Mr. Thorp was unable to overtake him. He disappeared, but later in the evening he was at the depot trying to borrow some money, to pay his fare to New York, but being unsuccessful, he jumped on the 11:28 p. m. train to beat his way through. His three confederates were lodged in jail, and this morning were turned over to Constable Hardy, by whom one of them, Jas. Wilson, was committed for thirty days, another, Jos. Brown, was committed for ten days, and the third man, Chas. Fox, was released for want of evidence against him. The Constable was to have taken them to the county jail this afternoon.

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Mr. T. V. Kissam Injured by Jumping from a Moving Train.

Mr. T. V. Kissam, of South avenue, Westfield, took passage on the "owl" train from New York Saturday morning for his home and during the journey between Jersey City and Westfield he fell asleep, not awakening until the train had left the Westfield depot on its way to Plainfield. Upon discovering that he was being carried past his destination he stationed himself on the platform of the rear moving train. He was thrown to the ground, his head and face terribly cut, and his shoulder dislocated. The unfortunate man managed to crawl to the house of a neighbor and Dr. Fred A. Kinch jr. was summoned. When the physician arrived he found that Mr. Kissam was very weak from the loss of blood. The wounds were dressed, and the man made as comfortable as possible. He was taken to his home later in the day. Later Saturday morning Mr. Kissam's hat and umbrella were found about one hundred feet from the scene of the accident. It was a wonder that he was not killed outright. His injuries will confine him to the house for some time to come.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Doremus, of Prospect place, have returned from the West.

Prior to starting on an extended tour Mr. George Thatcher was in Plainfield, yesterday, bidding his friends good-bye.

Lawyer John Ulrich is confined to his home by a severe cold, contracted several days ago, and is unable to attend to his business.

Artist Julian Scott's latest painting is entitled the "Cattle Mean," and is a study from the plains, that is likely to attract more than passing attention, at the National Art Exhibitions. It is up to his usually high standard in grouping and coloring, and a bit of humor that will be appreciated by all well-informed people.

A Lady Injured by a Runaway Horse.

As the wife of Mr. Edward Burke of Park avenue was driving from the depot Friday afternoon her horse took fright and ran along Peach street to Second street, where it ran into a fence. Mrs. Burke, who is in delicate health, was somewhat shocked and bruised, but was able to go home in a hack. Our North avenue correspondent reported that the accident was to the wife of Mrs. Samuel K. Schwenk, which was untrue. That lady was absent on a visit to friends at Washington at time and not within 200 miles of the accident.

The Overhead Check Rein Condemned.

It is stated that 500 veterinary surgeons in Great Britain have signed a paper condemning overhead check reins as painful to the horse and calculated to produce diseases that tend to shorten the life of a horse. If anyone will take the trouble to observe the carriage horses as they are driven through our streets, they will not need to be told that a vast amount of suffering is thus needlessly put upon this noble animal.

O. A. F. Fair.

There was a good attendance at the fair given under the auspices of Anoskeag Council, Order of American Freedom, in Dunlap's Hall Saturday night, and many articles were disposed of. The fair will continue this evening, when the prizes will be awarded. No admission fee will be charged. Music and dancing will be features of the evening.

BENJ. URNER SPEAKS.

MR. ABBETT TWICE REFUSED TO FAVOR THE AUSTRALIAN BALLOT REFORM BILL.

Condemned Out of His Own Mouth.—The Most Important Letter on the Ballot Reform Issue that has been Written in this Campaign.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

About a month ago the editor of the Journal addressed a letter to Benjamin Urner, now president of the Ballot Reform Association of this city, asking him to state for publication the conversation he had with ex-Gov. Abbett on the subject of ballot reform as embodied in the Kane bill. A few days before the request was made Mr. Urner had said in a brief conversation, that Mr. Abbett expressed himself as unfavorable to the Kane bill, and a newspaper controversy arising on Mr. Abbett's position on this subject the substance of Mr. Urner's statement was printed without giving the name of the author.

The facts in the questions, as the New York World and other papers, promise was made by the Journal that the name of the gentleman making this statement would be given as soon as permission could be obtained.

Mr. Urner was absent in the west when the letter was sent to his address in this city. He returned two days ago and his reply was received this morning:

ELIZABETH, Oct. 28th, 1889.

DEAR MR. MCBRIDE:—Referring to our last conversation I would say that you were quite right in having understood me as saying that ex-Gov. Leon Abbett had told me that he was opposed to the so-called Australian system of voting.

The circumstances of his making that statement were as follows:

While the Kane bill was pending in our Legislature last Winter, at a meeting in Newark of a committee which had been working to effect the passage of that measure, a question was raised as to the attitude of certain influential Democrats toward the reformed system of voting and conducting elections which is embodied. Some of the committee expressed the belief that Mr. Abbett would oppose the measure and use his influence in the Legislature to defeat it. I said that I hoped better things than that from Mr. Abbett; that I thought him astute enough to see that the prevention of bribery and intimidation at elections was an immediate necessity demanded by the people, and that it would be creditable to his party controlling the Legislature to secure it for our State by the passage of the Kane bill. But to test the matter I volunteered to call upon the gentleman and ask him to sign a petition which was then being circulated asking the Legislature to pass the bill.

Accordingly a day or two afterward, I called on ex-Gov. Abbett at his office in New York city, and said to him that I had called to ask him to sign a petition in favor of the adoption of the Kane bill pending in the legislature of our State which embodies the so-called Australian system of voting.

He replied at once that he could not sign the petition; he was opposed to the Australian system of voting. I asked him upon what grounds he opposed it, and he replied that it was in no sense a democratic measure. That in the Republican condition, and that he favored a secret ballot which this system did not provide for. I replied that I had understood the Australian system and understood it. He replied that he had studied it and understood it himself, and that he had also had it explained to him by his Jackson, and which had secured its adoption in Great Britain and practically throughout Europe. That it was not a secret ballot and had by that means in those countries prevented bribery and intimidation at elections; and asked how, under the operation of the system, was it possible for anyone beside the voter himself to know for whom he marked his ballot. He said that the officers of election would know by knowing what ticket the voter called for. To which I replied he was not sure of that, for after having studied the measure and understanding it, as he claimed, he did not know that it provided that the names of all candidates of all parties were printed upon a single ballot, and that all voters take from the election officers the ballot to be marked in private, folded and returned to the ballot box so that their private marks could not be seen. This question he did not answer, but said that our wily politicians would be able to beat the law in some way and pursue their old practices. I said that so far in the old countries they had not succeeded in doing so. He replied that the politicians were more far smarter than the foreigners in such matters, that not having had much to do with those foreigners he did not understand them as well as he did. To which I made answer that I had not the slightest doubt that he knew them better than I did, but if he knew them better than I did, but wished to know whether upon any other grounds he opposed the system, he said that he did not believe the State's printing ballots for its citizens; that it looked like interference with the right of the citizen to vote and cast his own ballot in his own way. To this I replied that it was clearly the duty of the state to protect the purity of elections, and that the system proposed did not disturb the citizen's right to vote for whom he pleased, and that it secured that right and in his individual power in elections if it protected him from bribery and intimidation. That now, under the existing system, while an honest man could vote but once another could cast as many votes as he had money to buy. He then said also that the state, under the Australian system, did not actually supply ballots, but only the blank sheets to be printed and ballots by the voter himself. I then asked whether he would not now sign the petition, and he again refused.

I then relieved the ex-governor by taking my departure.

Yours truly,
BENJ. URNER.

The Horses are Here.

Prof. Bartholomew and his horses arrived yesterday and begin a week's engagement at Music Hall this evening. There will be afternoon performances Wednesday and Saturday. The New York Times of June 9 says: A large and interested audience witnessed the opening performance of Bartholomew's Equine Paradox at the Academy of Music yesterday afternoon. The entertainment given by Mr. Bartholomew's phenomenally intelligent animals is certainly a wonderful one, and in point of thorough novelty has not been surpassed in this city for many a day. By years of patient and persistent training twenty-four magnificent specimens of bloodied stock have been taught a variety of tricks and evolutions, the execution of which evidenced a sense and reasoning power almost human.

The National Emblem.

The National flag now floats over nearly all the schools of Boston, the order having been issued by the board at the request of County Superintendent Willis, of New Brunswick, who proposes making the observance of it all the schools over which he has charge.

THE CENTRAL BLOCKS THE P. R. R.

Two Heavy Locomotives Placed Across the Path of the New Short Cut.

Work on the Pennsylvania Railroad's new loop across the Newark Meadows from Waverly to Jersey City, on which it is calculated to run all through trains, was brought to a standstill Saturday afternoon by the warlike preparations of the Central Railroad to prevent the Pennsylvania from crossing the former's tracks. For a week the 300 men employed in putting down the new track have been busy on either side of the Elizabeth branch of the Central, and have been making preparations to cross it. The Pennsylvania, or the Waverly and New York Bay Railroad, (which is the joint enterprise of the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley), has not asked permission to cross the Central track, and this little lack of courtesy has ruffled the feelings of the latter company.

Consequently the Central people have resolved to make the new road trouble. Some time ago a loop was built at the point the new road was aiming for. On Saturday the Central Company sent up two heavy locomotives on the Elizabeth branch and one Thorp, of Westfield, ran a construction train over the track just where the crossing was to be effected. The large iron monsters were taken off their wheels and allowed to sink into the soft earth, forming a barrier to all progress of the road as effectually as if a mountain had suddenly grown up there.

The Centrals trains were run around the novel blockade on the loop and a telegraph operator was placed there to keep the Elizabeth office advised how things were going.

Bills Favored by Labor Men.

The Federation of Trades and Labor Unions of New Jersey has prepared a circular to be submitted to all Democratic and Assembly candidates requesting their signature to a pledge to support the following five measures at the next session of New Jersey Legislature, providing they shall be elected:

One—Ballot Reform, a bill known as Assembly bill No. 30, same as introduced last session of the Legislature.

Two—A bill for the establishment of a Saturday half holiday in mills, mines, workshops and factories.

Three—A bill for adequate school accommodation in all parts of New Jersey.

It is intended to open the books for subscriptions to the stock and bonds of the proposed Company on Thursday, Oct. 30th, at the City National Bank, where a printed statement of the cost of the plant, probable earnings and other particulars may be obtained.

As it is important that the matter should be taken up at once those who are interested will greatly facilitate the work by a prompt response.

Rumors of threatened injunctions to restrain the Company from the use of the storage batteries having been freely circulated by a few hostile persons who seem to lack the courage to let their names appear, it should be stated that the batteries it is proposed to use are in daily service in almost all of the important cities of the Union, and are sold with an ample guarantee by entirely responsible parties against loss or interference in their use.

There are cars in commercial operation every day using these batteries exclusively, and they are not subjected simply because there is no ground for an injunction. Any further threats of this kind will be treated by their scope and promptly disposed of in the law proceedes. LEO DAFT.

Are our seas and salmon fisheries to be exhausted at length, like the rest of nature's bounties? The Alaska company report that it now requires many more skiles to fill a given number of casks than it used to. A similar story is told of salmon canning establishments. There are only 50,000 cases this year, against 100,000 last. We shall be lunatics and criminals if we let these splendid industries go down. When the country was first settled, old histories say that myriads of water fowl lined the banks of New England rivers and darkened the air above them. The streams were crowded with as many fish as could live in their waters. Shall we let the west become as the east is now?

Breathless Transit.

Here is a new idea sure. Recall to your mind the roller coaster machines you have seen at summer resorts, whirling down one incline and up another at fearful speed. Then recall again the toboggan slides you have seen or read about in winter and you will have the idea. Maj. Benjamin S. Henning, of New York, proposes to construct a passenger and light freight railway on this principle. The first experiment will be in the direction of securing rapid transit between the cities of New York and Brooklyn. A steep incline will be constructed on each bank of East river. Beginning at the top of the incline, the cars will shoot down it into a tunnel under the river bed. The momentum acquired will carry them across under the river and bring them to the foot of a similar incline on the other side. Here a grip cable will attach itself to them without the loss of a moment and drag them up the opposite incline. It is "estimated" that one minute will be required to make the trip from one city to the other.

What Shall It Be?

We the people who are interested in the World's fair of 1893 are trying to think of some feature which shall distinguish it. The feature must be something no World's fair ever had before, it must be something the ages will remember. Finally, it must be a device which will at once be a credit to the American people and make the spirit of Christopher Columbus feel proud that he discovered us. What shall it be?

In the national museum at Washington is a model of the only flying machine that ever flew. It will really rise in the air of itself, and make gyrations that are very suggestive of genuine aerial navigation. Undoubtedly in time an invention will be accomplished fact. Now, why cannot the inventor arise who shall bring it to us for the exposition of 1892? Rapid transit through the air across the Hudson, if the fair should be held in New York—this would be a greater wonder than the Eiffel tower. It is by no means an impossible scheme. Inventors, put your wits to work. Let us have a steerable air car for 1892.

A Reminiscence.

Lucy Stone recalls in The Boston Globe some history which will cause part of the world to smile, and another, a small part, to sigh. She writes of the Bloomer dress excitement forty years ago. Gerritt Smith urged his daughter, Elizabeth Smith Miller, to design and wear the dress. The skirt reached to the knee. Below appeared full Turkish trousers, extending to the ankle. Many women hailed it as the attire which was to emancipate them from dress bondage and, give them health, freedom and strength. Numbers adopted it in various parts of the country. They found it was all they expected, affording lightness, health and freedom of movement. Lucy Stone wore it among others. But wherever the women appeared they were greeted with howls and hisses.

On the streets of New York a circle of rowdy men and boys formed themselves around Lucy Stone and Susan B. Anthony so they could not move a step. There was shouting and howling. The crowd grew larger every moment and a mob was threatened. A policeman at length extricated the ladies, and they took refuge in a carriage. Susan Anthony is brave as a lion; the other women were no cowards. Some of them had faced mobs, bad eggs, dead cats and foul names in the anti-slavery cause. But after martyrizing themselves for three years attempting to popularize the comfortable and convenient short dress the women gave it up. "The large freedom they gained for their long bondage comparison to the bondage that beset their spirits," says Mrs. Stone. She writes:

> Those who wore the bloomer costume put it on in the hope that a dress at once comfortable and useful, in which you could walk up and down and step on your clothes, and down stairs and not be stopped on—a dress which was still clean after the longest walk, for we had learned to trip and use two yards of cloth in brush, would command itself.

Perhaps it is with a little trace of sadness that Mrs. Stone refers to the contrast between those days and the welcome extended to Jenness Miller and her aesthetic dress reform. And still the reformer has not come who will "unfetter the feet of women, save them from dragging skirts, wet ankles, and much consequent ill health."

ROYAL WEDDING BELLS.

Princess Sophie and the Duke of Sparta Wed.

KINGS AND QUEENS AS GUESTS.

Germany and Greece Unite in Wishing the Newly Mated Pair Bon Voyage.

Magnificent Gala Dresses That Fairly Blazed with Precious Stones.

ATHENS, Oct. 28.—The day was a most beautiful one, the sun shining as it shines only in Greece, and all the elements seeming to concur in happy auspices of the wedding of the Princess Sophie of Germany to the Duke of Sparta. A gorgeous procession, escorted by an imposing array of cavalry, left the royal palace at 11 o'clock Sunday morning.

The Royal Guests.

The guests occupying the carriages comprised the emperor and empress of Germany, the Empress Frederick, the king and queen of Denmark, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, Marie of Greece, and Victoria and Margaret of Prussia, Prince Victor of Wales, the prince of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, the hereditry prince and princess of Saxe-Meiningen and other members of the royal families, besides a goodly number of people of less exalted rank.

The Blushing Bride.

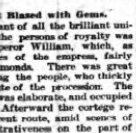
Following the line of carriages came a magnificent state carriage, drawn by six prancing black chargers, and containing Queen Olga, of Greece, and the blushing bride.

Robes That Blazed with Gems.

The most brilliant of all the brilliant uniforms adorning the persons of royalty was that of the emperor of Germany, while, as well as the robes of the empress, fairly blazed with diamonds. There was great enthusiasm among the people, who thickly crowded the streets in the procession. The wedding service was elaborate, and occupied an entire hour. Afterward the cortege returned by a different route, amid scenes of unalated demonstrativeness on the part of the populace. The marriage was then solemnized again, according to the simple Lutheran rite, in the king's private chapel.

Presents from the Czar.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Duke of Sparta brought his wife from the royal palace to his own palace, amid the cheers of the people.



PRINCESS SOPHIA.

The bride, pale, but smiling graciously, acknowledged the greetings of the throng with becoming grace. All the diplomats present in Athens were invited to the banquet in honor of the occasion in the evening at the duke's palace. It was a brilliant affair, and the display of wedding presents was a dazzling one. Chief among these were the gifts of the czar, consisting of a set of brilliants, a silver and crystal tea set and a captain's uniform of the Neva regiment for the duke.

Exciting Fire at Glasgow.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—There was an exciting fire at Glasgow early Sunday morning. A number of them were more or less bruised and hurt, but no serious casualty is reported. The loss on the market building and dwellings is heavy.

Egged by Conybeare's Friends.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—While the Unionist candidate was addressing a meeting at Camborne he was assailed with rotten and bad eggs and finally driven from the platform. PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—At the Walnut Street theatre in the ship scene of "The Great Metropolis," which is one of the most realistic nautical effects ever placed on the stage, the fire scene was also a thrilling climatic situation, one of the spectators in the orchestra, who, it is said, is an old sailor, jumped on the stage and gave the crew a helping hand. The audience rose and cheered vociferously.

A Chicago Fratricide Robbed.

STABBED FOR SULLIVAN.

A Fatal Affray Over the Champion Pugilist.

MURDEROUS WORK WITH A RAZOR

Sullivan's Friend Kelly Defends Him from Ex-Convic: Shea and Seriously Carves the Latter—Shea Was Anxious To Do Up Boston's Boy.

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—A stabbing affray of more than ordinary brutality occurred Saturday afternoon over Pugilist John L. Sullivan, and in his presence, at Barber Hagarty's shop. Sullivan was getting shaved when Tom Shea, an ex-convict, who had been looking for Sullivan all day with murderous intent, entered the shop, and seating himself in the bootblack's chair, commenced a volley of curses and insults, which the champion returned. In the shop was James Kelly, an old time light weight pugilist. He was drunk almost to insensibility, had been with Sullivan and had heard of Shea's threats.

Sullivan's Stinging Taunt.

Finally Shea put up his dukes in a scientific manner and boldly dared the big fellow to get out of the barber's chair and meet him in a rough and tumble set-to. Sullivan refused to fight a man so much his inferior in size, and accordingly taunting that Shea couldn't kill a mosquito and that any able bodied woman could "do him up."

Shea Dares Kelly.

Stung by the stinging remark, Shea replied with a volley of sulphurious expletives, and called Sullivan a very uncomplimentary name.

"Your friend Kelly there is a man of my size. Let him stand up and fight for you!" he howled.

Kelly's dull eyes flashed with rage at the insulting words and reeling across the shop, he picked up a razor belonging to Barber Joseph Allorio, examined it, and coolly felt of its edge with the ball of his thumb. No one paid especial attention to him, and no one imagined his intent. Shea meanwhile was sitting in the chair, with his head down and his hands upon his knees while Bootblack Samuel Williams polished his shoes.

Kelly's Murderous Work.

Before the horrified spectators could interfere or shout a word of warning to the doomed man, Kelly, razor in hand, was at Shea's side, and, without a word of warning, he plunged the blade deep into Shea's neck on the right side. A stream of blood spurted from a wound three inches wide at the broadest part, and covered the coat of William. Shea sank, face forward, to the floor, and Kelly deliberately as ever placed the razor back where he got it. This had all happened so quickly that no one fully realized what had been done until the colored bootblack cried out: "My God, he's murdered him!"

The Champion's Sorrow.

Wildest excitement prevailed at once. Some of the occupants beat over the wounded man and washed away the blood which welled up in a flood from the horrible gaping wound. John L. himself, his face white and covered with lather, sprang from his chair as the first inkling of murder and did what he could for the dying man. Blows was unconscious, but Sullivan tried to make him hear, and said: "I'm sorry, old man, I'm sorry."

Turning to Kelly, whose face was now deadly pale, Sullivan said: "What are you up to? You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Who asked you to defend me! Ain't I able to take care of myself? Better get right out of here. Now clear out."

Sullivan took hold of the murderer and hustled him into the street, locking the door on the inside. A big crowd quickly gathered outside, and a moment after the police of station 5 arrived and arrested the occupants of the shop as witnesses. Sullivan was not arrested, as he had nothing to do with the murder. Shea was removed to a hospital and is in a critical condition. His true name is Thomas F. Keefe and his record is a bad one.

"I had nothing to do with this affair and I want my friends to know it," Sullivan said to a reporter. "I'm sorry for Shea, even if he did try to kill me. I don't think he really meant to do it. He had a bad record, and everybody knows it, but that was no reason for Kelly to kill him. His trouble was Kelly on, but Kelly had no right to use a razor on him. Kelly is a fighter himself, and could have shut Shea up with his fists. Kelly thought he was doing me a service in attacking Shea, but I guess I'm able to take care of myself without calling on my friends. As I said, I'm awfully sorry for Shea."

Philadelphia's Tascott Unidentified.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—The check forger known as Albert Sutherland, suspected of being Tascott, the Chicago murderer, admits that his name is not Sutherland, but beyond writing that he has been known as his identity. His photograph has been mailed to the Chicago police. An ivory handled revolver, used as is mentioned in the Tascott descriptions, has been found among the prisoner's effects; also a deposit book of the National German-American bank of St. Paul, bearing the name of W. K. Milliken. G. A. King, a Chicago salesman, who knew Tascott slightly, has seen the prisoner and says there is a resemblance, but he cannot positively identify the man. There is a general resemblance between the prisoner's handwriting and specimens of Tascott's.

Baseball Gossip from Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—Frank G. Selee has signed a contract to manage the Boston Baseball club next season. It is stated that the alleged purchase by the Cincinnati club of the release of Nichols, of the Omahas, has fallen through, and that Nichols will sign with Boston. John F. Morrill, as agent for the Brotherhood, has secured a sixty days' refusal of a four acre lot on Huntington avenue for a new baseball park. President Soden says the Boston "triumvirs" are not backing the Brotherhood; that he is not at all pleased by Brotherhood schemes; that he would like to see Brooklyn and Cincinnati in the League, but no other Association cities; that he is inclined to think that the Brotherhood people will be legally held by the "reserve" rule, and that the Boston club will do business at the old stand next season with a strong club, Brotherhood or no Brotherhood.

Defeated by Outlaws.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 28.—Sheriff Morris, of Blount county, with a posse of forty men, surrounded Ruke Burrows, a noted outlaw and train robber, and one of his gang near Rosenville, Blount county. The outlaws killed Henry Anderton and Penn Woodward, of the posse, wounded six others and escaped. The sheriff and his posse were badly with whisky and pistols, while the outlaws had Winchester rifles of large caliber. They fired on the posse at a distance of 200 yards, and the shots from the officers, Burrows and Pickett, covered the man and his man had been in the vicinity for two days. They took to the mountains and made good their escape. Sheriff Morris came here after arms and assistance.

Dr. Talmage's Farewell.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 28.—Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who will sail for the Holy Land on Wednesday, preached his farewell sermon at the Academy of Music last evening. Ground was broken previous to the service by Rev. Dr. Talmage for the erection of the new Tabernacle at the corner of Greene and Clinton avenues. After he had driven the pick into the ground Dr. Talmage closed the service, and was followed by Revs. Edward P. Terhune, Lyman; Abbott, D. D., John D. Wells, D. D., and other clergymen. The Tabernacle choir also took part in the services. Nearly $5,000 has been received by Dr. Talmage toward the building fund.

A Scranton Tragedy.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 28.—Jacob Sontag, a well known and popular hotel keeper here, was murdered last evening by three Hungarians. The murder occurred in Sontag's own hotel. Being refused admission, the Hungarians attempted to force their way in. Sontag tried to close the door upon them, but before he could do so one of the men drew a stiletto and stabbed Sontag in the breast, causing almost instant death. The men then fled, but one of them, who has been identified as the murderer, has since been captured.

Passaic's New Catholic Church.

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 28.—The handsome new Catholic church here was dedicated Sunday with imposing ceremonies. Bishop Wigger preached the sermon, and the mission and common council were present in a body. Father Serapa's church was not completed in paying off a mortgage of $18,000 on the old church edifice and building the new church, the estimated value of which is $100,000, but has also built two houses for the sisters of charity and a parochial school.

I., Oct. 28.—In a little wooden church, heavily hung with black and relieved only by the colors of the ensigns of the United States and Portugal, a solemn service was held this afternoon in memory of a foreign tongue, over an empty coffin. An examination of his accounts, which was made Friday, revealed a shortage of about $400.

W. L. Scott's Coal Diggers.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—All negotiations have again been stopped between the coal diggers and W. L. Scott, proprietor of the mines here. At a recent meeting the workmen decided to stand out all together against the contract system. The signing of contracts is the only point at issue, but the probability of a settlement now appears remote.

A Sad Omission.

Mrs. Hodgkins—Don't you think, Jeff, now we are well fixed, we ought to have a library?

Hodgkins—No, mum; don't talk books to me. I got no use for 'em.

Mrs. Hodgkins—Well, all the neighbors have 'em.

Hodgkins—I takes no stock in 'em, I tell ye. I got a "History of Greece" t'other day, and I busted the bull thing through. Darned if I could find a thing about the lard renderin' business—America.

Better If Expressed Differently.

"This rain is really too disagreeable for you to venture out in, Mr. Boggs—remain and take tea with us, quite en famille, won't you?"

"Thanks, but it isn't so bad as that."—Figaro Bisetter.

Curing a Hiccough.

Mr. Smithkin had heard that a sure cure for a hiccough was a severe fright. One evening, sitting at his fireside after supper, he was taken with a hiccough, which continued in spite of all his efforts to check it.

Presently he got up suddenly from his chair, and called out in alarm to Mrs. Smithkin:

"I've lost my watch! I've lost my watch!"

Mrs. Smithkin hastened into the room.

"John Smithkin!" she said, "What do you mean! Why! you han't done any such thing. Here's your watch all right, in your vest pocket."

"Don't you think I know that?" said Mr. Smithkin. "I was just giving myself a severe fright, you know, to stop the hiccoughs!"—Chicago Times.

Chirographical.

A little 8-year-old girl came home yesterday from school, which she has only been attending a few days, and her mother asked her what she had been doing.

"Writin' M's and shake awful," was the child's reply, which meant that a long course of M's in a copy book had tried her nerves.

"Well, how do you make an M?" her mother asked.

"Oh, you go up a hill and down a hill, up a hill and down a hill, and stay there."—Pittsburg Journal.

Trying to Catch Up.

"How much is my bill?" asked a traveling man of the hotel clerk.

"Four dollars."

"But I merely spent the night here, I haven't had a meal."

"Yes, that's right."

"Well, give me my key again."

"Your key?"

"Yes. I'm going back to see if I can't sleep about two dollars worth more."—Merchant Traveler.

Yes, They Have.

"How things have gone on and improved since I was a boy!" exclaimed the old gent, as he laid down his pen and blotted his letter. "For instance, it wasn't thirty years ago that no one had any particular way of spelling 'sugar.' Now everybody spells it just as I always said it ought to be spelt."—Detroit Free Press.

One of a Different Kind.

A town child wandering over a farmyard with his father was greatly frightened at the sight of a good sized gobbler.

"Why, my boy, you don't mean to say that you're afraid of a turkey when you ate one only yesterday!"

"Yes, pa, but this one isn't cooked."—London Tid Bits.

Why Books Are Mutilated.

Jack—Why do you mark passages in new books when you merely skim through them and never read them?

Harry—I want to convince the fellows who will borrow them that I have read them carefully. That is the way to acquire the reputation of being a great reader and student.—Grip.

A Sound Sleeper.

"Does your baby keep you awake much at night?"

"Nope."

"Don't he cry?"

"Yep."

"How do you manage it?"

"I'm a night watchman."—Detroit News.

Dear Little Soul.

Mr. Honeymoon—Did you sew that button on my coat, darling?

Mrs. Honeymoon—No, sweetheart, I couldn't find the button—but I sewed up the buttonhole and it's all right.—Munsey's Weekly.

An Important Distinction.

Rev. Sermonbrief—You have quite a liberal congregation, I understand, brother Poundtext.

Rev. Poundtext—In matters of belief, yes, in respect to giving, no.—Burlington Free Press.

An Explanation.

"How does it happen that you have your hand in my pocket?"

"Oh, pray excuse me, sir; I am very absent minded. I used to have a coat exactly like yours."—Flegende Blaetter.

Had Hoped So.

"Did you read my last play?" inquired an aspiring young author of a friend.

"I have always hoped so since I read your last one."—Merchant Traveler.

She Showed Him State.

For every shooting star he claimed a kiss. He, seeing one, at first demurred to this; But he, perceiving, would not be denied Then for a length a flying meteor sped. And so, as evening grew apace, there grew To count the glittering aspect of the skies; And when a starting star made such an hue Say, it by chance a star escaped his view But he came to pass once that she Looked for a shooting star as much as he. Say, it by chance a star escaped his view But his grand'ling fancy to it too: When hopefully he counted each long kiss And called him on a passing lightning beat: And ever taxing her imagination, Her "stars" at last enabled her to find Three shooting stars in three short, fleeting hours Three dozen kisses whole meteoric showers. But when she did her last portent evinced, And was about to yield her tactics up, Then a policeman's lantern circling swung And put the fourth there to an abrupt stop.

YOUNG WOMEN OF RUSSIA.

PRESENT IDEAS COMPARED WITH TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

New Methods Employed in Their Bringing Up—An Improved and More Liberal System of Education—They Are Trusted Today as English and American Girls Are.

As to the manner of the bringing up of Russian young women, it must be said that for the last quarter of a century entirely new methods have prevailed. Previous to the series of liberal reforms introduced by Alexander II. in the sixties, Russian girls of good families were mostly educated in boarding schools and institutions supported by the crown, and were never allowed to go out, except in closed carriages for a drive, during the whole eight or ten years their education lasted. Since the female gymnasia have been instituted, however, the great majority of Russian girls of the "intelligencia" are receiving in them the same education as is given to the boys in the male gymnasia, preparatory to their entering the high schools or universities. Mindful of the drift of the times, even such exclusively aristocratic educational establishments as the Convent of Smolny, the crown institution of the highest prized boarding schools have greatly deviated from the strict rules of the former method of cloistered seclusion for young girls.

MODERN METHODS TO HEAD LETTER

In fact, former methods can no longer be enforced, for, out of hygienic considerations, little girls are on all sides encouraged to romp about as their brothers do. Indeed is even chided for being a tomboy, and they grow to dread the appellation of "kisseynaya baryshnia"—"ribbon-and-lawn young lady"—mockingly applied to an inanity pantry, eminently proper young persons.

Being brought up under very similar conditions, the young women and young men of Russia develop a great similarity of tastes and ideas. The young girls enjoy nearly, if not quite, as much freedom in Russia as in England and America, and are generally considered equal to the young men in their intellectual resources, strength of will and determination.

When such young people marry there is, of course, complete equality between husband and wife; this equality is enhanced by the laws of the empire, which makes any woman of 21 the complete mistress of her fortune, her income and her personal earnings, though she is not allowed to live anywhere apart from her husband, unless he voluntarily provides her with a separate passport empowering her to do so. In that last respect, however, few men are obdurate enough to resist the strength of public opinion—scarce any man of the educated class would brave public censure and expose himself to ridicule by keeping his wife by force where she desires to live apart from him, as, for instance, outside of France, where public ridicule kill or cure a person so speedily as in Russia.

Of course the perfect equality on which the majority of the Russian young women insist, has brought some drawbacks; they have heavier burdens to carry; they often have to face bad luck and difficult battles, according to profit by any chivalric offer of aid from the men. So much in principle; but in fact there are many and frequent deviations from the principle, where perfect independence. Still, no matter how strongly liberal minded girls adhere to the principle of personal liberty, they easily relax from their ardent iron principles when hotly urged; and though, moved by a sense of honesty, many young women assert that they cannot consistently vow that they will always love their husbands, still, appreciations are very few indeed, and nowhere are children more thought of and cared for than in the families of educated Russians who have grown to be men and women since the "sixties."

INSIDE OF SCHOOL MYSTERY.

The changes worked by time are apparent even in the most trifling details. Only a generation or two ago it was considered improper for girls of well to do families to take a step in the street without the escort of a governess or some trustworthy attendant; on every side one's eye was met by the ludicrous sight of a six foot servant in a cockaded hat and livery following at the rear of a couple of ladies out for a walk on the street or the boulevard. That would be considered a most unique sight nowadays. The most carefully brought up girls of the oldest noble families are free to go out alone on foot or in their carriage; they even would feel hurt—and justly, too, I think—at the distrust of them were they put under the obligation to account for every step they take, and forbidden to go out in the daytime except under escort. The young girls are very strongly tried on being trusted, and the liberty thus obtained makes them self reliant and is seldom put to unworthy uses.

Of course, even now, in remote provincial towns or in old fashioned Muscovy, there are some narrow minded mammas—female Rip Van Winkles—who, mindful of their own youthful experiences, insist on keeping their daughters under the same old regime; but then, the young women not being put on their honor, so to speak, indulge in many risky pranks, which the more lively girls, however, as willingly submit to the bother of an escort in the shape of a liveried flunkey are generally plain girls who love to imagine that they stand in danger of importunate attentions from men in the streets, or else they may turn out to be some squeamish antiquated maiden ladies who prefer to imply that they are still as young and unsophisticated as to be entirely at the mercy of any bad, bold man in the side, wicked world, were they supposed without the means of having safe escort, in the person of "buttons," a foreign governess or some dilapidated lady companion with cqnicrew ringlets framing her withered face.

Still, it must be added that, with all their pretensions to independence, none among the Russian girls would go to a ball without a chaperone, or even think of going to the theatre alone with any man not a near relative, and it is positively an unheard of thing in Russia for a young woman to receive presents from any male acquaintance other than in the shape of candy, fruit, plants or flowers.—Cor. New York Tribune.

Turkey Quills for Whalebone.

"Yes," said an exporter who was superintending the shipment of a number of cases of southern turkey feathers, "they manufacture dusting brushes in Europe of these feathers as we do here, but they are doomed with them. The large number of the quills are too heavy for that purpose, so they are ingeniously shaved into strips, finally put together and bound in cloth, to be used, I understand, for corsets and whalebone. In this form they are light, pliant and strong. Perhaps I should not have disclosed the fact, for some of your Yankee readers may utilize the idea."—New York Tribune.

W. E. Miller, of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., has in his possession a copy of The Boston Gazette, printed Monday, March 11, 1776, published by Edes & Gill, containing an account of the first four coffins manufactured in the United States by persons who made this a business.

Pins and Needles.

Ham should be broiled very quickly and just enough to cook through.

Tin cleaned with paper will shine better than when cleaned with flannel.

If mamfras lack is sprinkled among dried fruit it will keep out the worms.

Oilcloths will last longer if one or two layers of wadded carpet lining are laid under them.

Mrs. Sarah A. Barnum, who is now 72 years of age, owns and conducts a stock farm of 400 acres on Long Island. She is very successful, and it is her boast that she has never sold a colt born on her farm for less than $500, and many of them have brought $1,500 or more.

One of the latest social innovations, says an English provincial paper, is the female butler, a parlor maid in livery. A good looking girl in livery of dark blue, green and gold, or scarlet and white, looks very smart, and the waiting is, as a rule, done more quietly and deftly than by a man.

Mrs. Christine F. Halpy, formerly chairman of the business woman's committee of Borosis, has made a comfortable fortune out of the examination of inventions and patent claims.

Flowers can be kept fresh for some time if a pinch of soda or saltpetre is added to the water. Wilted roses will regain their freshness if dipped a minute or two in hot water.

Her thick woolen stockings saved the life of Mrs. Burton, of Middleburg, Pa. She was bitten by a rattlesnake, but the stockings absorbed the venom. The spot turned bright green.

Miss Agnes K. Murphy, a young lady barely 21 years of age, carries on a large and successful real estate business in New York city.

Miss Adolphi Heller and Miss Duffy are each of them the successful managers of large dry goods stores in Philadelphia.

English Bloomers.

The old English dinner table was a massive thing and was heavily loaded for dinner. There were huge joints, enormous game pies and carcasses of poultry. It was considered the correct thing for the hostess to carve and to press the guests to partake of these, while at the same time the praising of the viands, which used to be the practice, no longer became proper.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Limerick Lace.

Miss Forster, the adopted daughter of the late Irish chief secretary, has nearly succeeded in reviving the manufacture of limerick lace, an important Irish industry which has long been neglected. Miss Forster since her marriage with Mr. Robert Vere O'Brien, has lived near Limerick, and she recently turned her attention to reviving the lace industry, which now bids fair to resume its wonted activity. Assisted by a committee, she has opened a training school for girls, the pupils of which are making rapid progress in the art. All the necessary material has been supplied to the girls, who, in addition to their ordinary education, receive lessons at the local school of art in connection with South Kensington.—London Letter.

Hyacinths in Glasses.

An English grower gives the following directions for growing hyacinths in glasses: "Fill your glass with water, throwing in a small piece of charcoal, and let the lower part of the bulb just touch the water. Put them into a cool but not a damp place, away from the light, and leave them till the glasses are filled with roots and the leaves to begin to develop; then give them as much sun and light as you can, adding, if necessary, occasionally a little water. Unless the water becomes offensive never change it, but just put the pots and glasses into a cellar where the atmosphere is damp, or into a cupboard where there is no atmosphere at all. A spare room where there is no fire and plenty of air is best."

Get a Gondolick.

While attending the Maine state fair, a correspondent of The North Star noticed the fresh, bright countenance of the young miss who drove the trotting sleds, then called to mind the appearance of another young lady of his native town, who gets the air only while on her way to school, and who always keeps a novel on hand to read herself to sleep with at night; and, as a result of his reflections and comparisons, he remarks: "If these different conditions of life will produce such a marked difference in the development of two equally healthy and intelligent girls, I think it would be well for every miss to throw her novel to the dogs and get a gondolick."

Little Helps.

Plants will not thrive in a draft.

Sponge a shiny coat with ammonia and water.

Soak machine oil stains in cold water before washing.

Butter is tainted by any strong smelling odor. Therefore it should be kept by itself.

Have coffee pulverized. A third less will be required, and the quality much improved.

There is no economy in cheap soap. Get the best, when half the quantity will be needed.

Clothes dry out much stiffer when powdered borax is put into the hot starch just before using.—Mrs. W. H. Maher.

Too Many Adjectives.

When women begin to write, as most women do nowadays, for the public print, they often set spoil their work by a profuseness of adjectives. To the society reporter serving her novitiate every woman is "exhibiting beautiful." To the young describer all things are "dainty" or "charming." Only an old bird of a writer, tough and set, can afford to be a spendthrift in these particulars. Emerson began to talk to beware of italics and reminded us that "to few people would the occasion for the word intense come in a lifetime."—New Orleans Picayune.

The Harlequin Style.

A writer appeals to women to preserve the harmony of color in dress and says: "Our dress sometimes set a woman dressed like a harlequin, with a black hat, a brown jacket or gray; a green dress, yellow gloves and tan colored shoes, and this is no exaggeration." She is right; such hideous combinations are sometimes seen on Broadway in the richest materials. Of course no woman so attired looks well dressed. There can be no air of repose about her, and no matter how much she spends about her clothing—Newspaper.

Tea Jelly.

A dessert quite in fashion and much liked by all who are fond of "the cup that cheers but not inebriates" the tea jelly. It is the simplest thing in the world to make it. Soak half a box of gelatine for a little water until dissolved, then add a pint of boiling tea, one cupful of sugar; stir and strain into a mold. It is best served with whipped cream.

YOUNG FOLKS' COLUMN.

A HALF HOUR'S PLEASANT READING FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

A Brief but Entertaining Chapter About Camels—A Revised Edition of One of Mother Goose's Sonnets, with a Suggestive Illustration.

The fellow shown in the accompanying picture with two bumps on his back is a camel. Some camels have only one bump. A camel is just inside. Uncle John says, to travel on deserts. He's rode on camels himself. They jounce awfully. They step seven feet at once, and I should think they'd jounce. "The camel has broad feet that won't sink in the sand. "And they are cushiony. Then he can go a long time without drinking. And in deserts the wells are a great way apart; and sometimes they dry up, and the caravans have to travel and travel, days and days, without water. But the camel doesn't mind. He has a stomach full of little cells, and he fills these full enough to last him a week. And every time he comes to a well he fills these cells with water. He can go without food a long time, too. For his bumps are made of fat, and he lives on that, Uncle John says; 'absorbs' it, he says. And when he's been a long time without eating, the bumps grow and grow. Then, when you see he is made just right to travel on a desert,

A CAMEL.

"Camels can go eight or ten miles an hour, if their load isn't too heavy. The Arabs eat camel's meat and drink camel's milk. They make clothes out of the camel's hair and leather out of the camel's skin. So, you see, the camel is a very useful animal."

The foregoing interesting description of this patient, useful animal was especially prepared for Little Men and Women.

A Wicked Cat.

Oh! Pussy with the bushy tail,
Are you a wicked cat?
You growl and spit and claw upon a nail,
And walk as slow as any snail,
You are so very fat.

You wash your whiskers with your feet;
Your tongue is rough and red,
And looks as if it tasted meat;
Yet all I ever see you eat
Is pure white milk and bread.

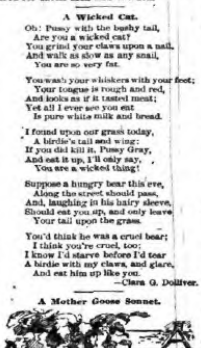
I found upon our grass today,
A birdie's tail and wing;
If you did kill it, Pussy Gray,
And eat it up, I'll call you naughty,
You are a wicked thing!

Suppose a hungry bear this eve,
Along the street should pass,
And, laughing in his hairy sleeve,
Should eat you up, and only leave
Your tail upon the grass.

You'd think he was a cruel bear;
I think you're cruel, too;
I know I'd starve before I'd tear
A birdie with my claws, and glare,
And eat him up like you.

—Clara G. Dolliver.

A Mother Goose Sonnet.



SIMPLE SIMON WENT A-FISHING.

A boy named Simon, adjourned for a dish.
Some said that he was simple, but I'm sure
That he was nothing less than simon pure;
They thought him out of his depth, forsooth, a whale
He tried to catch in Mother's water pail.
Ah! little boy, timid, composed, demure—
He had imagination. Yet endure
Defeat he could, for he of course did fail.
But there are Simons of a larger growth,
Who, too, in dishes aspire to fish for whales,
And when they fall they are "unfortunates."
If the small boy is simple, then are both,
And the big Simon more, who dares to bait
As what he calls ill luck or unkind fate.

—St. Nicholas.

Hope.

When Pandora's box was opened, all the vices flew out, but Hope remained inside. This is a roundabout way of saying that hope is always at hand. This is so true that I do not believe there ever was a human being in the world, in the matter how down and about (provided he had his senses) utterly without hope, says a writer in Golden Days.

The drowning man who catches at a straw, the shipwrecked sailor who launched mine, even the murderer on the gallows, clings to hope when every other human sentiment has fled. It is hope that keeps the gold miner digging at the hole that yields nothing but gravel and rocks, and it is hope that sends the emigrant into an unknown land.

Columbus "hoped against hope" as day after day and week after week the weird little fleet westward across the trackless waters until land appeared.

Very fortunately for us, hope is distinct from reason. If facts and figures could kill hope, we would lack many useful inventions. The wise men of England conclusively proved that Stephenson's locomotive could not perform the locomotive engine, and the reasoning was all against him, but hope made him persevere.

Goodyear hoped when all his friends despaired, and Morse saw a bright future for the electric telegraph when a whole nation sneered at his efforts.

The most frequent expression we hear is "I hope so," and the old adage assures us that "while there is life there's hope." So there is. Sunshine always follows darkness, and hope is the sunshine of life.

OVER AND OVER AGAIN.

Over and over again
My duties wait for me.
They ever come in monotonous round—
Breakfast and dinner and tea.
Smoothing the snowy white clothes,
Sweeping and dusting with care.
There is ever some task in my little home
To brighten it ever so there.
What may I claim for my duties' fee?
Are these endless rounds of tasks to be
Naught but monotony.
Over and over again!

Over and over again
The sun sinks low in the west,
And always over and over again
The tired mother goes back to her nest.
The robin sings to his loving mate,
Close, close to my cottage door,
The same glad song I have heard him sing
For many a day before.
What does the robin say to me?
If the heart is tuned to love's glad key,
No task can be dull monotony.
Though over and over again.

—Ada Simpson Sherwood in Good Housekeeping.

A PARIS BEAUTY DOCTOR.

Extraordinary Methods for Making Women Artificially Attractive.

A shrewd little business woman who keeps a beauty parlor in Paris, where oils, creams, balms, lotions, soaps, perfumes, powders and toilet articles are offered for sale, has this description over the door leading to the cabinet: "Trust me all in all or not at all." Keen eyed and close mouthed, wary as only a woman of the world can be, she brings to her profession the experience and intelligence of a medical career and the refinement of a lady. For reasons of her own she lives entirely within herself, is known as "madam" by her customers, and with the assistance of a young woman conducts a business which, while exclusive, is both remunerative and respectable.

No man is ever seen to enter the place, save as a messenger or collector, and, while any woman can buy goods, only a chosen few are admitted to the toilet cabinet for treatment, though it is from these few that her income is derived. She values her time at the rate of twenty-five francs an hour, but she is quick in treating those versed in prescribing, and in a fifteen minute talk one is often put in possession of most valuable hints.

The patron is seated in an adjustable chair and a hand glass placed on her lap. By degrees the shade is rolled down from the window, and madam looks her customer over and knows the thing to be done in an instant. A grimace or gay face is usually dealt with by steaming it, to open the pores and eruptions. Blotches and sorenèss of the lips are treated with sweet oil and cream. Inflamed lips are anointed. Wrinkles are ironed out, eyebrows shaped to describe pretty curves, and where there is a tendency to meet, the bridge of the nose is cleared of straggling hairs with an electric needle. The hair is taught to grow about the temples in the manner most becoming to the face, and "scrolding locks" and "ear pieces" are especially dealt with.

A poor complexion is made the subject of dietetic philosophy, and if necessary she will make out a bill of fare which, if adhered to for a year, will entirely change the bodily, not only to the face, but to the general health of the body. She has great faith in perspiration, and advises long walks, even in the hottest weather. Also a daily cold bath. Kitchen work is also prescribed. Not long ago a lady in society, who pays a cook $2,000 a year, was told to go into the kitchen and fell pass, all by herself, and knead bread for an hour every day to freshen up her complexion. Madame is an enthusiast on the subject of cleanliness, and argues that there is a degree of personal neatness equally as fascinating as beauty. Without actually cleaning the hair, she will direct the work and superintend an arrangement most agreeable to the lines of the face.

She has a hundred tricks to make lovely woman doubly attractive. For instance, any one can manicure a pair of hands, but few are able to clear away the skin and swollen veins. She advises muscular action. One woman is ordered to fan herself, a large opéra mounted on a rod of silver is suggested for another, so that when not in use the two highly colored members are piled on the tip of the rod, thus forcing the blood down from the head to a limb. A child is told to knit incessantly, and the writer has in mind two beautiful women pursuing this plan whose names are famous all over Europe. Of all the remarkable things done by this very remarkable woman, that of dressing a lady's arm exceeds everything else. Some otherwise beautiful arms are marred by a light growth of hair, so would sleeveless bathing suits and lace sleeved walking dresses have so largely conduced. One season of bare arms on the beach laid the lesson a society woman needs; after that she takes her coats dip in long sleeves, silk suits and a broad brimmed hat. But the mischief accomplished, it is necessary to pluck the arms before the fair creature can appear in evening dress.

In this operation the madame is an expert. She goes over the arm with a pair of tweezers like day of type opera, full or carpet party, and drawing out the darlior hair from shoulder to wrist, resorts to some delicate paste to conceal the down that remains. Of course this treatment has got to be repeated for each subsequent occasion, and these ladies who go in society a great deal find the low neck and short sleeve bodice a most expensive fashion. These visits are kept a profound secret, and are made by appointment. One lady pays madame £20 a year to dress her right arm only, doing the left herself. A well known singer's pretty mouth is kept free from the hateful shade of a dark mustache for £15, paid in monthly checks, and a few women of position and wealth go to the parlor to have their hair dressed and the thrads of silver pulled out or touched with bleaching fluid.—New York Press.

Try This Puzzle.

Open a book at random and select a word within the first ten lines, and within the tenth word from the end of the line. Mark the word. Now double the number of the page and multiply the sum by 5. Then add 20. Then add the number of the line you have selected. Then add 5. Multiply the sum by 10. Add to number of the word in the line. From this subtract 200, and the remainder will indicate in the unit column the number of the word, in the 10 column the number of the line, and the remaining figures the number of the page.—Exchange.

Some Hints to Parents.

If you say "no," mean "no." Unless you have a good reason for changing a command, hold to it. Take an interest in your children's amusements. Your share in what pleases them is a great delight. What are trifles to you are mountains to them; respect their feelings. Keep up a standard of principles; your children are judges. Be honest with them in small things as well as great. If you cannot tell them what they wish to know, say so. If you have lost a child, remember that for the one that is gone there is no grave to go to, but for those left everything. —Mrs. F. C. Prescier in Herald of Health.

The Congo district appears to be developing as a producer of rubber. Stanley, for instance, says that its haven are remarkably well adapted for cigars, being of exceedingly good flavor and very supple.

DEATH PARDONED HIM.

JOHN M. JACKSON, THE FIREBUG, DEAD.

He Died in Prison While Serving out his Sentence for Arson.—The Widow Claims the Body.

Mrs. John M. Jackson received a dispatch this morning informing her that her husband, who was serving out a fifteen years' sentence in the State prison, for arson and incendiarism, had died of consumption last night. He had been a sufferer for some months.

Undertaker Terrill went to Trenton this morning to bring the remains to Plainfield.

The date for the funeral has not as yet been decided upon, but it will take place from the Trinity Reformed church, either Thursday afternoon or Sunday. Jackson's life was insured for $108, and that money will be used in defraying the funeral expenses.

Mrs. Jackson, the wife of the deceased, had interested Hon. Alvah A. Clark and several others in her husband's behalf, and they were endeavoring to induce Governor Green to pardon Jackson on account of his health.

Mrs. Jackson told a NEWS reporter this morning that the papers had all been prepared and that they were waiting for the Governor's signature. She further stated that she had expected her husband home next week, as everything in reference to securing his pardon was working satisfactorily.

The following is from THE NEWS, of Friday, Oct. 4, 1889, relating to Jackson, and shows that his early demise was expected:

John M. Jackson the firebug is in the last stages of consumption. The doctor told a NEWS reporter, who in company with Councilman Dunham and Chief Carey, yesterday visited the State prison, that Jackson's life might be prolonged a few months if he were released, and received proper treatment, but it is very doubtful if in his poor circumstances he could receive nearly as good treatment as he would receive in the general hospital. Jackson, according to the doctor, will never again live to see the snow fly. He has aged very much in appearance since his imprisonment, and is very feeble. He is but thirty-nine years old. His hair has become gray, and he is quite bald. His eyes are very fierce-head and full and keen bluish eyes make him appear, in point of intelligence, above the average of the 1,000 or more convicts in the prison.

We published a likeness of Jackson at the time of his capture, on Aug. 9th. (Republished above). Even then he was intelligent looking, but he is so changed that he would not be recognized as the same man. His downfall is directly traceable to the saloons, he being one of their steady patrons. He began to get an appetite for strong drink, which ultimately brought him to his ruin. He inquired very kindly after Mayor Mak, desiring to know if he was still alive, and referring to him feelingly as "the good old man".

The crime for which Jackson was in, perhaps is of no recent occurrence and was so horrible that our readers have not yet forgotten the details.

John M. Jackson was one of a gang of firebugs who had infested this community for twenty years, destroying hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property and baffling all efforts to capture them until Detective Edwin S. Worsley, of Paterson, was employed under the direction of the Police Committee, of which Chief Carey was chairman. The then Chief of Police, Charles W. Dodd, had tried for years to capture the gang, but was unable to do so, and is doubtful if they would have been captured to this day had it not been for Worsley's cunning. Detective after detective had been imported for the work, and compelled after months of fruitless effort to give up the task. The rascals were too sharp for the detective until Worsley got among them. He was himself a tough, and had a bad record. Ex-Chief Dodd had worked with him until worn out, and his health was so impaired from watching nights that he was compelled to go away on leave of absence, visiting his old mother in Ireland to recuperate.

During his absence Chief Carey took entire charge of the plans, which within a few weeks resulted in the capture of Jackson and six others, Jackson in the very act of setting fire to a $16,000 dwelling on Union avenue. The NEWS performed perhaps the greatest feat of enterprise ever performed by any local paper in narrating the event with ample illustrations. The capture of Jackson was effected after midnight of Saturday, Aug. 24th, 1887, and early Sunday morning a number of others were arrested, while warrants were issued for never served, for the arrest of others, who are still free.

Jackson was sentenced Dec. 3, 1887, to fifteen years' imprisonment, and had, therefore, served less than two years at the time of his death. He was a native of Germany, Jackson. He preferred to give to the saloons even the little he occasionally earned, and allow his family to starve. He is like many others who frequent saloons, yet there are many who believe he never would have committed the crimes he did but for the other criminals who were arrested with him. They, it is claimed, led him on, and he had not will enough to resist the evil he was doing.

He has paid the penalty for his crimes, and if his life proves to have been a timely warning to the living, especially young men, to lead men to shun the saloon and the associations usually found there, Jackson will not have lived in vain. Excepting this, the world would be better without him. If he had any good traits we have never heard of them and cannot speak of them. But he is now past all further harm. He leaves a wife and five children, two of whom are twins, and were born a few months after their father's arrest.

Mrs. Jackson was rocking these twins in a cradle when a NEWS reporter called to-day at her poor home on North avenue, to announce that if her request for her husband's death was true. She struggled hard to save her husband before his arrest, and has recently labored hard to secure his pardon.

A REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Candidates Garretson and Ringleman Address North Plainfield Republicans

Spencer's Hall, in North Plainfield, was not large enough to accommodate the large audience that assembled there last evening to greet the Republican candidates for Sheriff and Assembly, who it was announced would be present. Mr. Charles A. Reed, the president of the U. S. Grant Republican Club, presided, and introduced the speakers.

Mr. John Ringleman was the first speaker, and in a few well chosen words thanked the party for doing him the honor of placing him in nomination for Sheriff and hoped for the success of the whole ticket on Nov. 5th.

Mr. Joseph C. Garretson, of whom the above is an excellent cut, was next introduced, and in a stirring speech predicted the success of the whole Republican ticket on election day. He pointed out imperative reasons why the party should succeed, and closed his remarks by hoping that the Republicans would turn out in force on Nov. 5th.

Mr. Garretson is a young man, bright, intelligent and witty. In commenting on his nomination The Somerville Unionist-Gazette says:

Joseph C. Garretson, Esq., of Bound Brook, the Republican nominee for Assembly, is 29 years of age, the son of the late J. Field Garretson, a farmer, who resided in Bound Brook and Middlebush, and grandson of Jeremiah Garretson, who was widely known, and lived in the same locality. Joseph C. is also the nephew of William N. Adair and Joseph Cain, of Raritan, and William Rue, jr., of Somerville.

He is a young man who has much push and many friends in and about Bound Brook. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, the Rev. H. B. Chamberlain, pastor, and Secretary of its Board of Trustees; also a director in the Bound Brook National Bank.

He will make an energetic, live, and we hope winning canvass and will secure the votes of even many right thinking members of the Democratic party.

Judge William F. Douglass and Mr. Jas. Chapman, of Jersey City also addressed the meeting which was brought to a close at about half-past nine o'clock.

A TRAIN RUNS INTO A HOUSE.

Several Persons Injured in a Railroad Accident in Rahway.

A fast freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad jumped the track at Main street, Rahway, last night. Several persons who were waiting in the street for the train to pass were injured by flying debris, three of them, it is feared, mortally. One car ran down Main street and into the residence of John Weldon, tearing its way into the parlor. Mr. Weldon' family narrowly escaped injury.

Fifteen loaded cars were wrecked. The tracks and roadbed were torn up, and the accident delayed travel twelve hours. The accident occurred about one hundred feet from the scence of the passenger train wreck two weeks ago.

Bowling Alley Notes.

Every Monday evening there is one of the happiest of parties at the Olympia Bowling Alley. It consists of Messrs. W. B. and C. D. Wadsworth, Jr., Harry Worsley, Charles E. Fisk, F. Fisk, C. E. Brooks, D. O. Tiffany, D. C. Irvine, W. S. Bloodgood, W. T. Kaufman and H. G. Runkle. All the party excepting Mr. Tiffany are married, and are accompanied by their wives, who enter with as much zest as their husbands into this exhilarating and invigorating sport.

They make even the boys who set up the nine pins so happy that they are always glad to see Monday night come around.

The scores run up as high as 200, which, considering that none of the party make any pretensions to being players, is rather good.

Chief Carey is said to be the strongest man, in the arms, of any who visit the Olympia. He will throw an eighteen pound ball, standing still, with greater force than other men will with a run to get momentum.

The Bicycle Club has the alley Tuesday nights, and it is the verdict of all who see them that they are a splendid body of young men.

Bowling is quite popular among fashionable ladies in Newark, who desire to preserve their figures well-rounded and a youthful freshness. The sport is latterly also becoming fashionable among Plainfield ladies.

Metuchen Improvement.

The Metuchen freight depot will soon be moved from its present location, nearer the railroad tracks, to give room for the roadway from Main to Holly streets, also an extra track to be used as a siding for freight cars. The freight building is a most complete building throughout, and when completed it will make a valuable addition to the appearance of the grounds owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad in this vicinity.

Plainfield Liquor Cases.

The trial of Patrick and Annie Newell, for keeping a disorderly house at No. 200 West Third street, is to come up to-morrow morning of ten o'clock, before County Judge Sullivan. The case in which Joseph T. Sullivan, is charged with selling liquor illegally will come up for trial a second time before the city Judge this afternoon and a jury Friday morning at ten o'clock. Sullivan has engaged Hon. Fred C. Marsh and Judge Gilkeckey, of Elizabeth, to defend him.

ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

URGING CAPITAL TO THE ENTERPRISE.

The Dati Franchise Threatens to be Lost Unless Immediate Co-operation is had.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The proposition for a splendid electric street railway in Plainfield is in imminent peril. It must fall unless our citizens promptly furnish at least one-third of the capital required to build and equip it.

Mr. Dati and his associates wisely and properly require this proof of a friendly and practical co operation by the citizens of Plainfield, to justify their proposed adventure. The controlling interest and a majority of the directors ought to be secured here.

Plainfield can be enriched some millions of dollars within the next three years through an enhanced real and taxable value of existing property and by the developments that a street railway will at once invite and justify. Quick and continued investments of outside and home capital will be induced, a spirit of enterprise will be stimulated, and our beautiful city become more congenial and attractive to wealthy and enterprising men looking for a place to locate homes outside of New York city and live in comfort.

Owners of open lots, and residences now practically unsaleable with, at low, on which a $2.15 tax rate must bear heavily, can well afford to subscribe for $25,000 or $50 000, to secure an influx of capital and first-class population that will increase the real value of Plainfield property from 25 per cent. to 200 per cent., where it ought to be now. These developments and increased valuations will not be confined to the streets on which the electric cars are run, nor to the neighborhoods they pass through. The proposed route is of course only a beginning. After the invigorating results are seen, our citizens in all directions will be anxious to have the railway extended to their localities.

Our local merchants, manufacturers and property owners could better afford to subscribe for and sink absolutely, every dollar of the required $70,000 capital, than lose the opportunity for increased business, greater comfort and appreciation of their property, which Leo Dati's proposed electric railway will bring to them without any doubt if now secured. The time for argument or supposition as to these matters has gone by. In all directions electric railways are being substituted for horses. Electric cars are in the long run more economical and productive to railway owners, because more comfortable and inviting to travellers, and unobjectionable to property owners. They secure greater patronage, and improve adjacent property more, and are thus doubly productive and beneficial. This experience is practically universal with electric railways of improved construction.

Investors can not reasonably expect dividends inside of two years except as individual, subsequently, however, if properly and liberally managed, the railway will not fail to reward its promotors, provided they are not saddled with an absurd tax upon its gross receipts, unjustifiable and ridiculous. The city of Plainfield could profitably present the company with $5000 or $10,000 and bond itself to raise the money, as against allowing this Electric railway proposition to fail, in consideration of the benefit it will derive, financially and socially, through an increase of taxable property and growth of population. The railway should be relieved from all taxation for three years at least. The "penny wise and pound foolish", advocates among our people, and in our City Government have retarded our growth, continued our discomforts, and kept real estate unsaleable at low prices while burdened with high tax rates long enough.

The people of this city want a street railway without delay now; obstructive members of council should be relieved from services unless they change their dilatory tactics, as illustrated by their recent proposal to tax the gross receipt of the railway, which they must know would be fatal to its existance.

It is a disgrace to this community of over 16,000 people that no street railway exists. As a constant traveler for twenty-five years, I do not know of a parallel case between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Do our citizens imagine that Plainfield can attract men of wealth and public spirit in large numbers from New York city or elsewhere, to voluntarily reside among us, under present conditions? It has not done so, and it will not rival its competing sister cities in this way, until the essential ordinary comforts and conveniences of civilization in rural city life are supplied.

A street railway and water works are immediately necessary to our financial welfare and personal comfort.

The street railway can now be had if our citizens will respond immediately to Leo Dati's published appeal, and the boon will be lost if they delay or refuse.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Good Country Roads.

The value of good country roads is coming to be recognized in all sections of the country. A correspondent of the Burlington Free Press notes the fact thus potatoes in that region had advanced to sixty cents per bushel on account of the bad state of the roads. Another Western newspaper stated recently that farmers could not afford to take their milk to the creamery by their teams because of the trouble and time necessary to carry it over the muddy roads to the factory, the farmers finding it more profitable to feed sweet milk to stock than to attempt its transportation.

When the people can be made to understand that it actually cost more in time and money to travel over a poor road than it does to travel on a good one, they will be less inclined to begrudge the first expense of good roads, and, what is of more importance still will be willing and anxious to put the business of road making into the hands of intelligent men who understand the business. Poor roads are expensive.—Newark Journal.

—The trial of criminal cases in the Union county court will begin on Thursday.

—For the cut in another column, of Mr. Garretson, we are indebted to The Bound Brook Chronicle.

A CO-OPERATIVE STORE.

Plans Discussed and a Committee Incorporation Appointed.

A meeting to further the project of forming a co-operative grocery store in this city was held in Laing's Hall last evening. Mr. W. T. Bartlett was the chairman.

The committee appointed at a previous meeting to draft a constitution and set of by-laws reported and was discharged. After considerable discussion it was decided to start such a store, and the following committee on incorporation was appointed: Messrs. W. T. Bartlett, Peter Kline, T. J. Gillies, Wm. Moore, Jas. Patterson, Smith Garretson, Joseph Sheppard, R. J. O'Neill, C. T. Henderson and C. F. Norman. The meeting then adjourned subject to call of the chair.

A Remarkable Performance.

If ever there was an entire audience in Music Hall delighted, it was last evening. It was a large audience of men, women and children, and it thoroughly enjoyed the accomplishments and intelligence displayed by Prof. Bartholomew's handsome horses, which do almost everything but talk. They do many difficult acts, but they do them with an intelligent understanding so different from other trained animals and they do so many things that no other exhibition animals have ever been taught to do. The horse, Caesar, the playing of "The Last Rose of Summer", the letter act, the court scene, the night in camp, the military drill, the battle, any one alone are worth going to see. No one need hesitate about seeing these equine wonders of the period, as the entertainment is refined, interesting, instructive and at times amusing. Among the delighted assemblage were several clergymen and their families. The horses will appear each evening this week and to-morrow and Saturday afternoon at two o'clock each lady will be given a handsome souvenir and all who desire will be permitted to go on the stage after the performance to closely inspect the horses and talk to the one who is said to be the greatest and most humane horse educator in the world, and the children can ride the ponies.

—Remember the last day of registry will be on Thursday.

—Mechanical drawing classes meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

LIVE WASHINGTON NEWS.

That Alleged Exposure of a State Secret.

WHAT BLAINE'S FRIENDS THINK.

The Family Will Not Notice "such a Sensational and Unjustifiable Publication."

Contracts for the New Cruisers—Consul Lewis' Trial—Other Capital Gossip.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—"So many false and ridiculous statements have been made about my father's illness," said Mr. Walker Blaine yesterday, "that the only comment I desire to make is that neither Mr. Blaine nor any of his family or friends will take further notice of any more such sensational and unjustifiable publication." Some of the friends of the secretary, however, are not quite so reticent. It is stated with positiveness that Mr. R. R. Hitt, formerly assistant secretary under Mr. Blaine, and other gentlemen now in Washington, as well as Mr. Phelps, now representing the United States in Germany, have in their possession bright, clear and coherent letters written by Mr. Blaine during the period when he is represented as being paralyzed, vainly struggling to write his name intelligibly and proclaiming to a strange physician in a foreigner in no way interested in his career, that he was "done for."

What Blaine's Friends Think.

The inconsistencies of the alleged statements of the doctors, one of them speaking of paresis and the other of some mysterious fluctuating disease, are said to be not at all the unknown observances of the medical profession, which are more respected in Italy, in regard to speaking of a patient's case to third persons, all these points are pointed out by Mr. Blaine's friends here as conclusively establishing the falsity of the publication.

Evidence of the Letter Itself.

It is further pointed out that Mr. Blaine's own letter to Chairman Jones, quoted in the article itself, refutes the statement made, because therein Mr. Blaine speaks of reasons given to Mr. Jones more than a year previously for declining the nomination, and the whole text of the letter, instead of being indicative of the gloomy forebodings of the hypochondriac, was buoyant with hope and confidence.

Mexico's Tariff on Meats.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—In an interview on Mexican import taxes the Hon. Thomas Ryan, minister of the United States to Mexico, said: "A decree has been issued removing live stock and fresh meats from the free list and imposing a heavy tariff. The tariff on fresh meats will be five cents a pound, which is practically prohibitory. The United States pays out $100,000,000 in cash annually for products which Mexico could furnish, and would take in exchange the product of our manufactories and enterprises. I believe that even a limit of reciprocity would in a few years open a Mexican commerce of $100,000,000 annually."

Warships to Visit Boston.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—John Mr. Brynman, president of the international marine exhibition, has obtained from Secretary Tracy an assurance that the European squadron will visit Boston on its return, for three days—probably Nov. 13, 14 and 15—on the occasion of the inauguration of the marine exhibition.

Consul Lewis on Trial.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The hearing in the case of William Reed Lewis, the consul general at Constantinople, United States to Mexico, said: "A decree has been issued removing live stock and fresh meats from the free list and imposing a heavy tariff. The tariff on fresh meats will be five cents a pound, which is practically prohibitory. The United States pays out $100,000,000 in cash annually for products which Mexico could furnish, and would take in exchange the product of our manufactories and enterprises. I believe that even a limit of reciprocity would in a few years open a Mexican commerce of $100,000,000 annually."

Contracts for the New Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Secretary Tracy has awarded the contract for building the new 300-ton cruisers to the Columbia Iron Works and Dry Dock company of Baltimore at their bid of $1,225,000. They were the lowest bidders. The contract for the third cruiser was not awarded.

To Release the Appraiser's Stores.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Assistant Secretary Batchelor, of the treasury department, has directed Collector Erhardt to renew for two years, from May 1, 1890, the lease of the present appraiser's stores in New York. The lease costs $64,000 per annum.

Fighting Over Bedell's Mortgages.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The first suit over the forged mortgages issued by Bedell, late president of the late firm of Bedell & Shipman, Barlow, Larocque & Choate, has been begun. The ground taken by the holders of the mortgages is that Bedell was the authorized agent of the mortgagors, though the latter may not have known of the particular mortgages in question. The holders therefore claim the right to recover by foreclosure the money loaned to Bedell. The trial will probably occupy several days. Bedell is in Sing Sing, but will probably be brought into court as a witness.

Canada Getting Even.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 29.—In the vice admiralty court Chief Justice McDonald delivered judgment in the case of the American schooner David T. Adams, seized for fishing and preparing to fish and buying bait within the three-mile limit three years ago. The decree confirms the forfeiture of the vessel. The decision is now unimportant as by the act passed by the Dominion parliament in 1888 American vessels are not allowed to enter Canadian waters except for wood, water, shelter or repairs.

Swindled Would Be Husbands.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Cleveland G. Arnold, who for the past two years has been in charge of a soda water fountain at a prominent drug store here, has been arrested by a post-office inspector for swindling through the mails. His method was to answer advertisements for wives, sending photographs of women, and in the correspondence which followed he would receive money from the fair-stant admirer to pay the supposititious young lady's passage to her correspondent's home.

Despondent from Ill Health.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 29.—James Watts, aged 65, superintendent of mule spinning at the Atlantic mills for many years, attempted suicide by shooting himself three times in the head with a 38-caliber revolver. He will probably die. Despondency, caused by poor health, prompted the deed. He is a prominent Odd Fellow and Elk.

Fatal Combat with an Ax.

MENDOCINO, Cal., Oct. 29.—John Clemmis and Andrew DaCosta, woodcutters, fought, and Clemmis cut DaCosta in the head with an ax. DaCosta then got possession of the ax and struck Clemmis in the face with it, killing him. DaCosta's wound will probably also prove fatal.

FIVE TO THREE NOW.

New York Again Defeats the Bridegrooms of Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 29.—New York won its fifth game in the world's championship series yesterday afternoon, by knocking Terry, the star pitcher for the Brooklyns, out of the box, and pounding his relief, Foutz, pretty freely. Both were introduced in the morning, and after having decided hundreds against going to Washington park. It cleared up a trifle after 1 o'clock, but not enough to entice the fair weather cranks out of their safe and comfortable seclusion. The army of confirmed cranks, however, put in an appearance as usual, and the customary 2,500 were on hand when the game opened.

The Giants were first at the bat. Slattery hit safe and went to second on Tiernan's single to left. Ewing followed with a sacrifice, which advanced both runners to bases. Then Ward batted safely and the bases were filled. Connor drove a two baser into right field and Slattery and Tiernan scored. Richardson's smashing single to left brought both Ward and Connor home, and Danny himself scored a few minutes later on O'Rourke's long fly out to O'Brien. The Giants increased their lead four runs in the second on Slattery's base on ball's, Tiernan's hit, Ewing's two baser, Ward's bunt and Connor's single.

Brooklyn scored two in the first inning on Collins' base on balls and Foutz's two baser, drive to deep center, but after this inning Crane had them at his mercy, and not a Groom crossed the plate until the "cyclone" let up in the eighth, at which stage of the game New York had a lead of thirteen runs. The score:

Brooklyn.....	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	—3

Base hits: New York, 14; Brooklyn, 3. Errors: New York, 3; Brooklyn, 3. Batteries: Crane and Ewing, Terry, Foutz and Visner. Umpires, Gaffney and Lynch.

Advocating National Divorce Laws.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Under the leadership of the National Reform association a public meeting to discuss the proposed reform of the divorce laws in the United States was called together yesterday afternoon in Association hall. The call for the meeting was signed by Felix R. Brunot, of Pittsburg, the president of the National Reform association. This body has been organized to promote the influence of Christianity in the government of the country. Among its vice presidents, whose names are attached to the call for the meeting, are many clergymen of note, the presidents of several of the largest institutions of learning in this state and a number of supreme court justices. The National Reform association urges all clergymen to instruct sound lessons from the pulpit regarding the moral laws underlying the family relation. Steps are also urged to secure meanwhile moral and beneficial laws by the state legislature to purify the social atmosphere in their respective states by bringing the present lax laws to a better standard of morality and endeavoring to attain greater uniformity in them.

Brown Will Stay in Canada.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—A Providence (R. I.) special to the Herald says that Col. Samuel P. Colt, one of the assignees of Brown, Steese & Colt, of Boston, says that nothing remains to be done to insure the payment to the creditors of concern. When asked if Mr. Gideon C. Brown was assisting in the adjustment of claims he said that Mr. Brown had been called upon to assist, but that he would not venture into the states on any promises held out by the assignees. Until a matter of several hundred thousand dollars' worth of social claims by different parties was adjusted, Mr. Brown would probably remain in Canada.

Injured in Selma's Ruins.

SELMA, Ala., Oct. 29.—Yesterday while removing the walls of the buildings burned on Sunday a veranda, on which Silas Taylor, a contractor, and a lot of laborers were standing, gave way, precipitating them to the ground and covering them with debris. The crowd standing by rushed at once to the rescue and dragged out Taylor and four colored laborers, all of whom were severely cut and otherwise badly bruised. One of the colored troopers, Reuben Jones, is not expected to recover. His skull is fractured.

His Head Was Severed.

COSTMAN'S JUNCTION, N. Y., Oct. 29.—A man sat down on the West Shore railroad track at Canajoharie at 5 p. m. as the express train was thundering along. The wheels took the man's head off clean, without mutilating it or the body. The head fell sixty feet away. Papers in the man's pockets showed that he was Amos F. Brown, of East Windsor, Mass. There was also a postal card from N. E. Bert, of Swift River, Mass., offering Brown a position. The suicide was about 45 years old.

A Game Fugitive.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—About 100 sports witnessed a bloody mill at Hammond, Ind., between George Allen, a colored man of Kensington, and Louis, the Belgian, for a purse of $200. It was to start on a foot race to finish. It took place in the beer gardens, and it took three hours to finish it, forty-eight rounds being fought. When it was decided in Allen's favor, it was found that he had fought forty-six rounds with a dislocated wrist, his right having been hurt in the second round.

Electric Wires Melted in the Air.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 29.—The wires of the Mount Auburn Street Railway company were melted about noon, and fell in a glowing stream to the pavement, long distance of several blocks. Thousands of people gathered to witness the novel sight, which inspired many with alarm. The cause of the singular occurrence is not yet learned, but it is supposed that the railway wires became crossed at some point with an electric light wire.

Cancer Drove Him to Suicide.

CLAREMONT, N. H., Oct. 29.—Caleb Dinsmore, aged 75, committed suicide by cutting the muscle of a gun to one of his eyes and firing the gun with a cane. He left a note saying that he must soon die from a cancer, and preferred not to suffer. He had made arrangements for his funeral, even to laying out a suit of clothes in which he wanted to be buried.

Stabbed Fourteen Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Frank Cava, boss of a gang of Italian laborers at New Hamburg, stabbed his wife fourteen times during the night. The woman, who was about to become a mother, is dying. She is being cared for by her mother in the box car occupied by the family. Cava is in jail.

Banker Steers Dead.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 29.—Henry J. Steere, aged 73, one of the owners in the Wanaskuck Woolen company and prominent in banking circles, died yesterday, aged 59 years, of bronchitis. He was noted for his benevolence, and was a liberal patron of the arts.

A Flurry in Oil.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—There was considerable excitement at the Consolidated exchange yesterday. Oil opened at 86¾, a decline of ¼, over Saturday's closing quotations, and closed at 86¾, and closed at 86¾.

"THE OLD WHITE HORSE."

The Man Who Hired the Animal Described.

MRS. CONKLIN ON THE STAND.

Trying to Fit the Noose About Iceman O'Sullivan's Neck—How He Acted When Mrs Conklin Accused Him with Complicity in Dr. Cronin's Disappearance.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—In the trial of the Cronin case yesterday, Napier Moreland, Patrick Dinan's hostler, testified in regard to the procurement at the stable of the famous white horse on the evening of May 4. The man who called said he did not want a gray horse, but under Dinan's instructions would be furnished the stranger with "the old white horse." The witness described the man as looking like a mechanic. He had a short, dark beard of about a week's growth. He wore a round slouch hat and a faded brown or gray overcoat, with the collar pulled up around his ears. There were no side curtains on the buggy, and the man asked for them, but did not get them.

The Return of the Horse.

The horse was returned to the stable between 9 and 9:30 p. m. The buggy was covered with mud and mud, and the horse warm and blowing hard, as though having been driven rapidly for a long distance. When the rig was returned the man did not come into the barn, but jumped from the buggy outside and walked rapidly away.

Mrs. Conklin on the Stand.

Mrs. Conklin followed Moreland on the stand. The audience began to take intensely interested while she gave her testimony. She told the now familiar story of the mysterious stranger who took the physician away in Dinan's buggy.

His Villainous Eyes.

She also identified the card of O'Sullivan, the iceman, that had been presented by the man. The latter's eyes, she said, were the most villainous she had ever seen. They had a kind of "don't-look-at-me-again" look about them. This description was ruled out upon objection of the defense. Continuing, she said that when she taxed O'Sullivan with the seeming connection between himself and the physician's disappearance he said that he would put one by R.

He was very nervous, kept twirling his hat and could not look the witness in the face.

She Identified the White Horse.

During this testimony O'Sullivan leaned forward and looked Mrs. Conklin straight in the face. His countenance was alternately pale and flushed, although he occasionally smiled. Mrs. Conklin went on to say that she positively identified Dinan's white horse as the one driven by the man that called for Dr. Cronin.

After Mr. Forrest had failed in the attempt to have the major portion of this testimony stricken out the witness was put through a rigid cross-examination. She more than held her own, however. Forrest compelled her to describe the horse a half dozen times with the view of bringing out her contradictions, but her story did not vary a word.

The Horse's Peculiar Gait.

In describing the peculiar motion of the animal's knees she placed her hands on her knees and with her arms imitated how the horse's knees showed the peculiar twisting motion of its legs. She emphatically denied that she had failed to identify the horse when it was brought before her by Capt. Schaack, and her evidence was eminently satisfactory to counsel for the state.

Confronted with O'Sullivan.

The cross-examination of Mrs. Conklin was resumed after the recess for lunch. She emphatically denied that she had told to a reporter of a morning paper a story that differed in many particulars from the evidence given at the morning session. At the request of counsel, O'Sullivan, the iceman, confronted the witness, and she said his manner was changed in color since she had interrogated him with reference to the physician's disappearance. At that time it was a little reddish in the center. Now now it was darker. An effort on the part of the counsel to confuse O'Sullivan with Mulcahy, one of his employes, failed.

Charles Beck, a reporter, testified to having taken out the white horse which was identified by Frank Scanlan and Mrs. Conklin, and Miss Sarah McEnerney and her sister, Agnes, both of whom were in the physician's office when he was summoned by the mysterious stranger, corroborated the evidence given by Mrs. Conklin. Both sustained their position on cross-examination.

Wanted as a Witness.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 29.—Assistant State's Attorney Baker, of Chicago, is here, urging Chief of Police McRea to go to Chicago as a witness in the Cronin case. He is also investigating the alleged confessions of Burke. One of the three prisoners to whom Burke is alleged to have confessed is now insane. Another is awaiting trial for forgery. The third may be available as a witness.

Left to Her Fate.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The Old Dominion line steamer Wyanoke, which arrived from Norfolk, reports that off Delaware capes Sunday she spoke the schooner J. G. Rowe, of Portland, Me., disabled and dismasted. The larger part of the schooner's crew had been washed overboard and the mate had died of exposure. The captain and two sailors were the only survivors. The Wyanoke offered to tow the Morse into port, but the captain refused. After many efforts were made for men to assist the schooner to make port. This the Wyanoke could not grant. An attempt was made to put provisions aboard the schooner, but the heavy sea nearly swamped the lifeboat and the effort had to be abandoned. The schooner was left to her fate. Two disabled Italian barks were sighted by the Wyanoke six miles further north.

CHIEF ARTHUR RE-ELECTED.

He Was the Almost Unanimous Choice of the Brotherhood.

DENVER, Oct. 29.—When the Brotherhood of Engineers met yesterday the nomination of candidates for grand chief was the first order of business. Ohio nominated Chief Arthur. This was followed by the nomination of Gen. Vrooman, of New York; Fields, Hoh.; Vedder, of Sedalia, Mo., and Bellows, of Mississippi. An informal ballot showed that Mr. Arthur had the convention almost unanimously. This gave evidence of the feeling of the delegates is supposed to by the result of the recent trial and censure of the grand officer Conover, of Chicago. The first formal ballot decided the question. The following is the vote: Arthur, 318; Vroman, 161; Vedder, 1; Bellows, 1.

The convention took a noon recess and on reconvening unanimously re-elected Joseph Sprague, of Canada, as third grand engineer. Six ballots were taken for second grand assistant engineer, Hayes of California and Hendrick of Pennsylvania being favorites, but no result being reached, the matter was then postponed until today. After an interesting address by J. J. Hannahan, of Chicago, Mr. Garrison was made a member of the Brotherhood of Firemen, who was present by invitation, and who advocated federation, the convention adjourned for the day.

Oliver Garrison's Suicide.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 29.—About 5 p. m. the dead body of Oliver Garrison, one of the oldest citizens of St. Louis, was found lying near a seat in Forest park, still warm and with a revolver beside him. The old man had shot himself through the head. He was 79 years of age and one of the most prominent business men of the city up to about four years ago, when he retired from active business on account of old age and ill health. It is believed that Mr. Garrison was temporarily insane when he committed the deed. Mr. Garrison, with his brother, D. R. Garrison, built the Convoy, the first steamboat to ply between St. Louis and New Orleans. Mr. Garrison served for twenty years as president of the Mechanics' bank. He was also receiver of the Missouri Pacific railroad just previous to the purchase by Jay Gould. Mr. Garrison has three brothers living—J. R. Garrison, of Boston; Abram, of Pittsburg, and D. R., of this city, besides a sister. Two sons and a large circle of more distant relatives.

Rube Burrows Kills an Officer.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 29.—A special from Oneonta, Blount county, says that Rube Burrows killed another officer yesterday. He has driven the detectives into a cave and is standing guard at the mouth of it. The name of the man killed was not learned. Burrows is still near the scene of the battle of Friday.

Twenty picked men and a fresh lot of bloodhounds have been sent to help the sheriff of Blount county in his search for Burrows. The two fugitives, supposed to be Burrows and his partner, are making toward the Tennessee river. They travel by the high road and sleep at houses to ask the way.

Shot Twice Through the Heart.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 29.—A shooting affray has just occurred here in which Harry Dowdal, of Fort Ancient, was instantly killed by Mike Curley, a section foreman of the Little Miami railroad at Fort Ancient. Curley had been working for Curley on the section. There were two shots fired, both penetrating Dowdal's heart. The party were at John Curley's farm, a few miles from Dinan's farm, where the shooting took place. A dispute and struggle occurred between them, and Curley took the revolver away from his antagonist and killed him. Curley surrendered himself to the officers.

The Western Union Is Ahead Now.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Judge Butler, of the United States circuit court, has filed an opinion in which he reverses the verdict of the jury in favor of the Gold & Stock company against the Western Union Telegraph company. The suit was to recover $13,005, with interest, as license fees for the years 1885, 1886, 1887 and 1888, at the rate of 1 per cent per mile and $2.50 for every mile of wire. The case went to the jury upon the evidence as a question of fact, with the point of law reserved as to whether the ordinance of councils is illegal on the ground that the license fees are excessive.

A Rise in Window Glass.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 29.—The price of window glass was put up 5 per cent yesterday by Pittsburg manufacturers, who have a new organization of their own, and the action has been agreed to by almost all the firms in the country. The advance makes the increase 10 per cent within a month. A glass manufacturer said the advance was partially due to the advance in the price of chemicals, which has just gone up $4 per ton within a few weeks, and to the demand for new window glass. But little foreign glass is sold on this side of the water.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 29.—A train conveying the state railroad commissioners on their way to Boston to attend the funeral of a Lowell mixed train at a curve near Ballardvale at 4 p. m. ALBEMARLE SUNK

Heroic Exploits of U. S. Naval Lieut. Cushing.

REMARKABLE FIGHT FOR LIFE.

Blockade Runners on the North Carolina Coast—Desperate Efforts of the Confederates—The Albemarle Built by Hand and Out of Fragments—Destroyed by Cushing's Force—His Perilous Trip.

(Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.)

The career of the Confederate ram Albemarle twenty-five years ago in the waters of North Carolina, beginning with her deadly sea fights with the Union blockading fleet and ending with her destruction by a torpedo at the wharves of Plymouth, was a most exciting episode in naval warfare. The coast of North Carolina was favorable for running in vessels from foreign ports carrying contraband goods. The numerous shoals prevented heavy draught war ships from hugging the coast, and the fleet little craft used in the trade, by taking advantage of darkness and fog, could elude the guard ships first and outsail them inward, making port and unloading before they could be overhauled. Down to the very last months of the war North Carolina remained the store house of the Confederates, and the supplies were foreign, coming by way of Bermuda and Nassau.

The port of Wilmington held out as a regular refuge for blockade runners until January, 1865. Other ports were made occasionally by vessels chased away from Wilmington by the Union cruisers, but the capture of Mattamuskeet, Roanoke Island and the adjacent region by Burnside's expedition of 1862 closed a long stretch of coast, as well as the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds and the mouth of the Roanoke river, to the Confederates. The conquests of Burnside were followed by occupation of Plymouth and New Berne by the Federals for the Union armies, and formidable Union fleets rode upon the sounds and rivers. The Confederate war vessels upon the waters were annihilated at a blow by Commander S. C. Rowan's squadron in connection with Burnside's operations, and thenceforth, until 1864, no Confederate flag was flown over the coast in broad daylight north of Wilmington.

The rule of the sounds by the Union fleet was by no means to the liking of the Confederates, and many desperate attempts were made to change this state of things. But the coast was too well guarded to permit any respectable war craft to get in the sounds that had been destroyed or captured, and there were no yards and shops at hand where they could be constructed. Union guns frowned from fortresses on the Plymouth and New Berne, and Union vessels rode in their harbors. With occasional attempts on the part of the Confederates to end this unequal state of things two years passed. Orders had been given to construct vessels in the upper waters of the state, but the work went on slowly, and in the winter of 1864 it was decided at Richmond to recover the ascendency North Carolina by the bold policy of capturing a navy from the enemy. An expedition to secure the largest Union gunboat at New Berne, the Underwriter, of 600 tons, 8 horse power engines and carrying four guns, was intrusted to Col. John Taylor Wood, an experienced naval officer.

Col. Wood had a force of 300 experienced sailors, well armed, and, with four boats and two launches, left Wilmington on the Kingston railroad, and, reaching a convenient point to New Berne, for a rendezvous. From Kingston to New Berne, a distance of thirty miles, the boats moved stealthily on the Neuse and Trent rivers to the New Berne harbor. Here Wood formed his boats in two divisions, and just as five bells, or half past 2, sounded on the Underwriter, the strangers were discovered by the sentinel on hailing out, "Boat ahoy!" No notice was taken, and Wood urged on his boarders. When the boats struck the ship's side grappling hooks were thrown and the Confederates clambered up, facing a musketry fire, and with cutlasses and pistols began the attack, many on board being killed. Underwriter's crew, after struggle on deck was sharp, the Underwriter's crew contesting every inch.

The commander of the ship, Joseph Wordervell, was killed at the first fire of the musket served were driven into the water and picked up by Wood's men, or were imprisoned below. The vessel was lying under the guns of the Union fleet at the mouth of Stevenson, and the commanders here opened fire as soon as the situation was understood, and one shell exploded on the ship's deck. Wood's men were ordered to cut her cables, but when the engine was examined it was found that the boilers were cold and she could not be moved. The wounded and prisoners were then landed on the Union side of the creek and applied at several points, and in a few moments the Underwriter was in flames.

THE ALBEMARLE.

The failure of this bold cutting out expedition turned the attention of the Confederates once more to their new constructions, three of which were under way in these waters. The Albemarle was on the ways on a farm up the Roanoke river from Plymouth. A general attempt was decided upon to secure the most important of these, also the whole coast, and a force under Gen. R. F. Hoke was directed upon Plymouth. The place was defended by Gen. H. W. Wessells, with about 3,000 infantry, and in the river were the gunboats Southfield and Miami, and an improvised war vessel, the Bombshell, mounting three pieces. Gen. Hoke began his attack on the 19th of April, and urged the commander of the Albemarle to harden down the river and assail the Union boats.

On the 18th the ram reached the obstructions of piles, torpedoes and sunken vessels that had been placed about three miles above Plymouth in anticipation of an attack from that quarter. The river was swollen by a spring freshet and it was found that there were ten feet of water over the obstructions. The next obstacle was Fort Warren, whose guns commanded the river, but the shot and shell made no impression upon the armored sides of the ram and she ran on until two steamers were sighted steering up the river. They were the Miami and Southfield, lashed together and directed by Fleet Commander C. W. Flusser. The fastenings of chains were severed so that the ram could be caught between the two. The commander of the Albemarle, however, shoved his vessel in head of the steamers, and they both turned out and plunged the iron prow into the side of the Southfield, ripping her sides so that she went to the bottom at once.

Many of the officers and crew went down in the wreck, some were captured and others were saved by the Miami. The Miami opened at once with 100 pound shot and threw into the ram, but they glanced off, leaving no impression on the heavy armor of the ram. Commander Flusser, on the Miami, fired one of the guns personally. The third shot, an eleven inch shell, rebounded from the ram, exploded, and killed the commander and wounded several men. The Miami was now nearly grounded, and on swinging into the middle current of the river the ram had become disentangled from the Southfield and was making for her consort, and the acting commander withdrew from the combat and steamed down into Albemarle sound.

The result of the Albemarle's victory was that Gen. Hoke stormed the Union works on the following morning and carried them, making prisoners of Gen. Wessells and his garrison.

The Albemarle at once became a sea monster equal in the eyes of friend and foe to the terrible Merrimac. Yet the predictions during her construction had been that she would prove a failure. Nearly a year before this combat the naval constructor at New Orleans had written to the admiral of the North Atlantic squadron describing a new ironclad battery which he had heard of as being under construction up the Roanoke river, a plan of the Merrimac. He closed the report as follows: "We are driving piles in the river and preparing to receive them. I do not doubt we shall whip them if they venture down." Admiral Lee expressed the opinion to the secretary of the navy that the sound needed ironclad defenders, but that they could not be finished and in the river before the ram had become disentangled from the Southfield and was making for her consort, and the acting commander withdrew from the combat and steamed down into Albemarle sound.

—The Philadelphia Press has the following commendatory comments upon one of the pet educational doctrines of President Merrill E. Gates, of Rutgers College: "President Gates of Rutgers College is wisely urging that room be made in the public school curriculum for studies that emphasize the demands which popular self-government makes upon the citizen. The colleges generally furnish instruction in such themes, but only a very small percentage of the voters ever reach the colleges or even the high school course. There should be elementary instruction in the principles of good citizenship in a grade reached by most children before they leave school. This is particularly needed in the cities, where a large proportion of the pupils are of foreign descent and can not be expected to get such instruction at home. It is a wise suggestion, and ought to be acted on in every city where such provision is not already made in the public schools."

A Plainfielder in Bad Company Comes to Grief.

George Green, of Plainfield, and a Mrs. Keeler, of this city, who is looked upon by the police as a woman of disreputable character, were arraigned this morning before Justice Heofield charged with acting in a disorderly manner at 2:30 o'clock this morning on Broadway, between First and Second streets, where they were arrested by Officer O'Loughlin. The man hung his head in shame, but the woman seemed to have no shame and looked defiantly at those about her.

The Justice disposed of her by committing her to jail for thirty days in default of a fine of $20 and costs, and the man for the same period in default of a fine of $10.

Green begged hard to be permitted to go, saying that he had simply met the woman and was talking to her, he had never seen her before and had no desire to ever set eyes upon her again.

"I have no doubt of that, Mr. Green," replied the Justice, "but then her character is too well known, and there is no excuse at all for you, a married man, being seen in such disreputable company at such an early hour in the morning. No sir, your will have to suffer, it would have been for you, had you said in Plainfield.—Elizabeth Journal.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING.

Addresses by Messrs. Bell and Mott Last Night.

It was an enthusiastic audience that assembled at the Republican headquarters last evening, the occasion being a Republican rally, given under the auspices of the Plainfield Republican Club. The Plainfield Cornet Band enlivened the occasion by furnishing appropriate music.

The meeting was called to order by ex-Councilman C. M. Goddard, and he read a letter from Hon. John Ulrich expressing regret at his inability to be present.

Mr. Bell, of Bergen county, a well-known orator, was then introduced and he addressed the assemblage in a highly pleasing manner. Impressing upon it the necessity of turning out in force next Tuesday. The Republican party want a pure ballot, said Mr. Bell. Put an end to this false counting and fraudulent returns. During Leon Abbett's career as a public servant Mr. Bell pointed out defect after defect; his opposition to the colored race; his opposition to Abraham Lincoln and numberless other mean traits. His speech was full of enthusiasm and was interspersed with several laughable anecdotes.

At the conclusion of Mr. Bell's address Mr. Wilbur B. Mott, the President of the State Republican League, addressed the assemblage. Mr. Mott is an able speaker and made an earnest appeal in behalf of State reform. He predicted the success of the Republican party on election day. He denounced the Democratic party as a party under the leadership of corrupt politicians, and he hoped they would be ousted; bearing out his arguments by statements of facts, and giving as one instance the dropping of Assemblyman Kane in Middlesex county because he had dare to introduce a measure in the last Legislature looking toward ballot reform. Mr. Mott closed his remarks by impressing upon his hearers the necessity of turning out in force on election day and casting their ballots for honest government and ballot reform.

THE NEWELL'S ON TRIAL.

Considerable Time Lost in Securing a Jury.

The case of the city vs. Patrick and Annie Newell, who are charged with keeping a disorderly house, at No. 200 West Third street, came up for trial before City Judge Stillman, at ten o'clock this morning.

The counsel for the defense asked for a jury and Judge Stillman adjourned the case until two o'clock, to enable the police to empanel one.

Counsellor Fay, acted the court to dismiss the charge against Mrs. Newell on the ground that the husband was responsible for her actions and he alone was the person to be tried.

Corporation Counsel Marsh argued that it was a question for the jury to decide as to whether the woman was a party to the crime or not, and Gen. Fay's motion was denied. Considerable time was lost in securing a jury and the case was not finished as we go to press. Seventeen Frazer's were excused from jury duty on account of old age, and Mr. E. R. Pope on account of being a fireman. The defense challenged Messrs. H. Mulford Estil, William H. Moore and Joseph C. Allen.

The jury are composed of the following men:

Messrs. George W. Cole, George Cook, Jas Hardy, James DeGraw, Edward White, George W. Moore, G. W. Monfort, O. M. Dunham, S. J. Neal, John Meeker, J. D. Spicer and J. C. Pierson, Jr.

PERSONAL.

The family of Mr. Ferdinand Fisk, of this city, have returned to New York for the Winter.

The opening reception of Prof. Haywoods dancing school took place at the hall of the Plainfield Gesang and Turning society last evening.

Mrs. Harriett C. Mowen, aged fifty-eight years, died yesterday of apoplexy at the home of Mrs Elsie O. Disborough, on East Front street. Mrs. Monson was a sister of Mrs. C. E. Clarke.

Miss Stella King, entertained a large audience at the Vincent chapel last evening by her reading and music. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton (nee Miss Carrie Jackson), returned last Monday noon from their wedding tour. During their trip they were feted wherever they visited. Their friends did all in their power to give them a right royal welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. MacIntyre, were tendered a receptoin at the residence of Mr. L. L. Mauning on West Seventh street last evening. A large number of friends was present and an enjoyable evening was spent. The music for the occasion was furnished by Prof. P. L. Conde.

Jackson's Funeral.

The remains of the late John M. Jackson, who died in state Prison Monday evening, while serving out a fifteen years' sentence for arson and manslaughter, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon on the 2:51 train and were taken to the home of his wife on North avenue. It has been decided to hold the funeral Friday afternoon, at 2:30 and it will take place from Mrs. Jackson's home. Jackson was a former member of an engine company in Plainfield and for that reason a number of firemen will attend the funeral.

A DEMOCRAT SAYS THIS.

GOV. GREEN'S INDISCREET SPEECH AT TRENTON.

Hon. I. S. Little Charges the Governor With Fraud.—One of Ex-Governor Abbett's Attorney Foes.

TRENTON, Oct. 29th.—When the Democratic mass meeting was held in this city last week Governor Green, in his speech, made a statement that Governor Abbett secured $400,000 in wages to the employes of the New Jersey Central Railroad, for which work he received no attorney's fees. He said that this was true in spite of what I. S. Little or "The State Gazette" might say. Mr. Little, who is one of the most prominent Democrats in the State, was at the time sitting on the platform. To-day he published an open letter in "The State Gazette," in which, among other things, he says:

"Had I known you contemplated the attack, there is not a seat in the Opera House that I would have preferred to the one I occupied, just next to yours. It suited me exactly that the large audience should witness your lack of official dignity. Attacking a man at a public meeting, where he can have no opportunity to reply, is taking an advantage that shocks that sense of fair play universal in the human breast. It is no better than shooting a man under cover of darkness. If you were not Governor, I would say it was a cowardly act. You may have noticed that I did kick all the little dogs that bark at my heels since I entered political life. If I had, I would have been worn out up to my present reduced to about your stature. A Governor fails within my vision, albeit you reached that position through that most glaring fraud that ever disgraced the State.

"I am afraid my taste is akin to Governor Abbett's, who declared right after you sat down that he liked to be attacked. I felt like proposing three cheers to him, but did not because the committee had omitted inviting me to speak. Certain it is you have drawn me into a controversy upon the truthfulness of a public statement made by me way back in 1883, which you offensively challenged. You consigned me to the same public audience and you did, in the only way possible, by this open letter. In 1883 it was unjustly claimed by the Democrats that the Governor (Abbett) now, that Judge Lathrop, the receiver of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, refused to pay his employes $400,000 of wages. [sic]

"Mr. Little said that, as president of the company at that time, he knew the imputations to be unjustly cast upon Governor, and he stated the facts in a card, with papers and vouchers, which was published at the time, all of which can be certified by the papers on file in the Court of Chancery. Judge Lathrop, finding that he could not pay the men without a special enactment, procured necessary legislation, and paid wages amounting to $401,262. All this was done without a thought of Mr. Abbett, who subsequently acted under powers of attorney and was paid $5,000 by the receiver for his services. The law forbade his taking money from the men.

GENERAL GRUBB'S ACT OF HEROISM.

When an epidemic of cholera broke out in the thriving city of Burlington, N. J., in 1866, General R. Burd Grubb, the present Republican candidate for Governor of New Jersey, was then President of the Common Council. With other loyal citizens, General Grubb did all in his power to quiet the fears of the people and check the dread disease, which, however, kept spreading.

The overseer of the poor, entering the Council chamber one evening in September, reported that an old shoemaker had died of cholera in a house in the suburbs, that the necessary arrangements for burial had been made, that a grave have been dug in the Potter's Field and every other preparation for the funeral had been made, but no one would put the body into the coffin and bury it.

"The dead man," said General Grubb promptly and decisively, "must be buried at once. If I can get any one to help me I will do it. Meet me at midnight and show me where the body is. In the meantime have a grave prepared in St. Mary's churchyard at my expense, I will not bury any one in Potter's field."

When the clock struck 12 General Grubb, with an old army friend named Bartlett, went to the lonesome house of death, wrapped the corpse in blankets and put it on a wagon. The General then drove to the churchyard. After the body had been lowered into the grave General Grubb, remembering that he had been commissioned in the Episcopal Church by the Bishop of New Jersey a by reader, so that he could administer the last rites of the church to any dying soldier who might want his services, went across the street to an old friend's house, borrowed a candle and prayer book, returned to the grave, and there, in the silent night, with uncovered head and in reverential voice, read the Episcopal service for the burial of the dead. Thus the poor lone cobbler, deserted by his friends and neighbors, was laid to rest in hallowed ground Over the grave to-day many a stone might be erected there by General Grubb, with the inscription:

AN OPEN ENCAMPMENT.

Winfield Scott Post Entertains Gen. Negley and Other Friends.

The members of Winfield Scott Post, their wives, and invited guests enjoyed themselves last evening at the Post room on East Front street.

The room itself is exceedingly cosy, the Post always keep the latch string on the outside for their friends, and carry their hearts in the right place, to make them, once in, feel at home.

Commander Brokaw presided, and the company were welcomed in an eloquent speech by ex-Mayor Randolph. Among the invited guests was Gen. Jas. S. Negley, who has recently become a resident of Plainfield, as already related in THE NEWS, and Mr. Randolph especially welcomed him. The hearty applause showed that all present heartily approved the words of welcome, and when Gen. Negley arose to reply he was greeted with vigorous applause. When it subsided he made an eloquent reply to the speech of welcome.

Among other things he complimented the Post on their handsome headquarters and on their manner. He mentioned that his first acquaintance with Gen. Winfield Scott was in the Mexican war, on the battlefield of Cherubusco, and spoke in high praise of Gen. Scott's soldierly qualities.

Gen. Negley had been a soldier since he was 18 years old, and has seen, not only the Mexican war, but also the war of the Rebellion; in which he greatly distinguished himself. Since the war he has been almost constantly in public life, having served three terms in Congress, and being at present president of the Madison Central Railway, and of the Mexican Investment Company. He ought to be therefore competent to judge of the character of the general after whom the Post is named.

Remarks were also made by Post Commander Atwood, now of Brooklyn, several songs were sung by Comrade Smith, recitations were given by Mr. John H. Carney, and Miss Dodge, and the guests were treated to rations of bean soup and hard tack, as they used to have in army days. All seemed to thoroughly enjoy them. Mrs. Dodge presided at the organ.

The Post have extended the use of their room to the Monument Memorial Committee, which is to meet there Saturday evening, and Gen. Negley has accepted the cordial invitation extended him to be present on that occasion.

NEW JERSEY NUGGETS.

Live News Notes from Various Parts of the State.

The sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Dodd was celebrated last night at the house of theirson, John K. Dodd, No. 44 New street. There was a large gathering of members of the family.

Edward T. Green, of Newark, the newly appointed Judge of the United States District Court of New Jersey, took the oath of office yesterday. A large number of leading members of the bar presented at the Barnard Horan, a tinsmith tramp, was shot yesterday morning in Olive street East Orange, by Mrs. Annie O'Riley. Horan and another peller came to the house and were ordered out. Finally Mrs. O'Riley seized a twenty-two-calibre revolver in each hand and fired two shots. One took effect in Horan's right arm, passing completely through it. Mrs. O'Riley, who is sixty years old and deformed, was arrested and locked up.

Ex-Captain John C. Archibald, of Engine Company No. 9, of Jersey City, was arrested yesterday on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The complainant in the case is Mrs. Helen Banfield, widow of Freeman Banfield. Archibald was engaged with $125 from the Firemen's Benevolent Society to give to the widow. He was charged with appropriating the money to his own use, and was dismissed from his company in disgrace.

People living in the vicinity of Fourteenth and Clinton streets, Hoboken, were startled on Sunday afternoon by hearing a loud explosion. It was found that some one had put a long iron pipe filled with powder and a lighted fuse in one of the ice wagons of W. T. Leis. A fuse was attached to the pipe. The wagon was loaded and placed near the stables. The explosion nearly demolished the wagon and broke glass in the windows of a neighboring house. The police have not been able to obtain a clew to the offenders.

There is likely to be another hitch in the construction of a new police headquarters and Fire Department building in Jersey City. The advertisement called for separate bids for the various work, carpenter work, plumbing, etc., and also bids in lump for the entire work. The contract was awarded to Joseph H. Cotter for the whole work, but it is now charged that he made up his bid while sitting in the lobby of the room where the bids were opened. The other bidders will make a vigorous protest against Cotter getting the contract.

LIGHTNING AND SNOW.

How a Fire was Started and Extinguished at New Brunswick Years Ago.

(From the New York Times).

One of the officers of Christ church parish, at New Brunswick, N. J., recently found among some old papers and documents, an interesting letter of Bishop John Croes which describes the burning of the steeple of the church and also a curious thunder and lightning storm, accompanied by snow and hail, in February, 1803. It was during this snow-thunder storm that the steeple was struck, near the pinnacle. It instantly burst into flames, and with the wind blowing a gale even the snow and sleet could not extinguish the fire. Inside the timbers were numerous and close and no one could approach within twenty feet of the fire. The wind was in the direction of the roof and so strong that none of the timbers could be saved, although it, and they could not throw a stream without getting to windward of the church, where the most exposed part could not be reached by water.

"We were, therefore," says Bishop Croes in his quaint language, "subjected to the melancholy and mortifying circumstance of consoling ourselves with removing the clock and valuable bell from the steeple and the organ, four, ornaments, etc., from the church, and seeing the steeple burn uncontrolled and undisturbed. In this critical situation, when it seemed impossible to save the church, a young Irishman mounted a ladder and approached on the ridge of the roof to the part in danger, and dashed a bucket of water on the fire. Others followed his example, quickly made a lane from the position he had taken to the ground, and handed him water. About this time arrived Captain Farmer, one of the wardens, formerly a sea captain, who lived a short distance from town. He immediately mounted the roof and relieved the Irishman, and continued within fifteen or twenty feet of the steeple, and under the burning timbers almost every moment falling at his feet, for more than an hour. Sometimes he and his associates were enveloped in clouds of flakes and sparks, and always exposed to the profuse playing of the engine, which was necessary, as well to extinguish the fire which fell on them as to preserve the roof.

"About this time, when the fire was raging with greatest violence, and when the prospect of saving the building was almost nothing, the sudden squall of wind and snow increased in violence and blew the flakes, sparks and burning timbers in such profusion over and over that part of the church, and between it and the river that not only was all hope lost of the church but the greatest apprehensions were entertained for the town. The men on the roof were obliged to turn their faces from the fire and cling to the roof and timbers to avoid being blown off. Such a scene you can have no conception of. It was about dusk. The whole atmosphere seemed on fire. Houses 100 yards distant were covered with sparks to such a degree that the roofs appeared like a mass of fire, and had it not been for the snow, which fell in great profusion, and the force of the wind, the general conflagration could not have saved the town."

The snow squall slackened about a quarter of an hour, the water began to freeze as it fell, the roof of the church became glazed with a coat of ice, and the danger was then over. Thus a fire that was kindled by a lightning was extinguished by snow and ice—one of the strangest of nature's contrasts. It cost £600 to rebuild the steeple. Bishop Croes, who gives the description of the event, was the first Bishop of the Episcopal diocese of New Jersey. He died during the cholera epidemic in 1832, and is buried under the chancel of the church.

How to Tell a Counterfeit Bill.

Take a United States bill of any denomination and hold it up to the light, and you will see two lines running entirely across it lengthwise. Upon examination you will find these to consist of a silk thread, a red one and a blue one. Every bill has this mark of genuineness. Without these marks a bill may be put down as counterfeit no matter how good the engraving on it. No paper mill dare make that sort of paper, and that is the government's only protection on its currency.

Our Diplomatic Blunders.

It is no use talking, we Americans are not an astutely diplomatic people. We can accomplish results by main strength and awkwardness that are not bad, but in the fine points of diplomacy we are "way off." We invited Pan-America to visit us. Our government decreed that the languages spoken at the conference should be the English and Spanish. Then somebody remembered Brazil, and added Portuguese to the list. Nobody, however, stopped to recall that the natives of the Haytien republic spoke only French, at least a sort of French, and that they would not understand Spanish or English. So, although, the world over, French is the language of diplomacy, French was not included in the official languages of the congress.

That was one blunder. Another is that our eloquent mayors and aldermen who make the speeches to the poor Pan-Americans are considerably mixed up in their heads in regard to history, and do not happen to know that Brazil is not a Spanish-American country, but Portuguese-American. Consequently, in their speeches, they universally allude to the delegates as Spanish-Americans, to the infinite disgust of our Brazilian guests.

There is still another blunder, so bad as to be a positive sin, against good taste. In each town they visit the unhappy delegates are corraled together in a place where they can't get away, and then the greatness, glory and almighty richness of the United States are poured down their throats. Wherever they go, they hear nothing but the grandeur of the United States. They will probably be so sick of it that they will go home and turn all the trade in their little countries over to the effete despotisms, just to get the taste of us out of their mouths.

There are several morals to the story, most of which are obvious.

Who Would Be President?

The question is often asked, Who would be president in case of the death of both the president and vice president? In January, 1886, after the death of Vice President Hendricks, a law was made fitting this case. If President Cleveland had died and been succeeded by the president of the senate, the spectacle could have been witnessed of a change of administration from Democratic to Republican, contrary to the will of the people, who elected a Democrat president. To obviate this awkward difficulty, to provide that the highest officer in the country should be of the political party that prevailed at the last election, a special law was passed.

It declared that, in case of the death or removal of both the president and vice president, the secretary of state should be president. In case of his death or removal, the chair will be filled by the secretary of the treasury, then by the secretary of war, and after him by the attorney general, postmaster general, secretary of the navy, secretary of the interior, in the order named. In case of the disability of all these, there would still be the secretary of agriculture, who was not a cabinet officer at the time the law was made. If, therefore, Harrison and Morton should both be removed, Secretary Blaine would be president. The nearest the country ever came to realizing the condition to be met by this law was in 1865, at the time of the assassination of Lincoln. If the plans of the conspirators had succeeded, president, vice president and secretary of state would have all been removed by the plot that killed Lincoln.

All the nations invited have sent delegates to the maritime conference, except five of the Central and South American countries. The most notable exception are Brazil and Chili. All the rest of the world but Africa, the dark continent, is represented. Even China and Oceanica are there.

CAMP 20, CLAN-NA-GAEL

Some Inside Workings of the Famous Order.

UNWILLING WITNESSES TESTIFY.

What Occurred at the Meeting of Feb. 9—Burke, O'Sullivan and Cooney, the Fox, Were Members, and Coughlin was Present that Night.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The court room was again thronged with spectators listening eagerly to every word of evidence given in the famous Cronin trial. They were destined to hear much of interest concerning the Clan-na-Gael. After Mrs. Herman, a neighbor of Conklin's, had testified to the interview between Mrs. Conklin and Seaman O'Sullivan, Tom F. O'Connor was recalled.

Surprise in Court.

"Now we'll hear about Aug. 20," said one of the counsel. O'Connor, a smooth faced young Irishman, said that he was a stenciler working for Messrs. Wadlake. He had been a member for six years of Camp 20 of the United Brotherhood, also known as Columbia camp.

"Right here on the threshold," interrupted Forrest, "I object to anything and everything relating to the history of the Clan-na-Gael." Then there was a surprise. Counsellor Foster arose. "On behalf of the defendant Beggs," he said, "we want the record to show that no objection is made in part to the introduction of testimony. Mr. Beggs does not want to infringe or impair the rights of the other defendants, but his position is that he invites the fullest and clearest investigation of his connection with the Clan-na-Gael, and he objects to the introduction of no testimony, material or immaterial that will forward such investigation. He made this assertion when this charge was first made and he repeats it now."

Has Beggs Squealed?

"What does this mean? Has Beggs squealed?" was asked of Mr. Mills.

Counsel for the people smiled. To the same question Counsellor Ames replied: "We will wait and see whether the state brings any charge of gravity against him. We claim they cannot. If they try it we will put Beggs on the stand."

O'Connor resumed his testimony. He had been a member of Camp 9 and was transferred to Camp 20. Beggs was senior guardian and Thomas Murphy treasurer. Witness' number was 126, that of Beggs 256. Martin Burke, Dan Coughlin, Patrick Cooney and Pat O'Sullivan (under the name of Sullivan) were members.

"Was Andrew Foy?" asked Longenecker.

"I don't remember."

"Have you forgotten since last night?" asked counsel sharply.

The Trial of the Triangle.

"I didn't acknowledge it last night," retorted the witness with a show of temper. He remembered the meeting of Feb. 9. Capt. F. P. O'Connor made a speech. He asked why it was that they had not received a report of the committee that tried the triangle, as he had heard it read in another camp. He said he would like to hear the name of the camp and who read it if we demanded it. Some one asked for it. I did not hear his reply. I heard nothing to mention one word, said witness. I understood the chair to say that Capt. O'Connor had named Dr. Cronin."

"Did not O'Connor say that there were spies among you, that you had come for investigate the triangle, that they were wasting or embezzling the funds of the order?" asked Longenecker.

Forrest and Foster objected, saying that O'Connor was being treated as an hostile witness. The fact was that O'Connor was recalcitrant and disposed to be anything but a willing witness. He answered in the negative. He was considerably rattled when a book was handed to him. It was the record of Camp 20 with the minutes in his own handwriting. The minutes showed that motions had been adopted calling for the report of the committee on the triangle, to call the attention of the district officer to the reports that were floating around regarding the trial of the triangle, and that a secret committee be appointed by the senior guardian to investigate these rumors.

An Unwilling Witness.

Witness denied several times that Foy made a speech suggesting the necessity of looking for spies in the order. The defense then tried to show that the motion to appoint a secret committee became inoperative by a decision of Beggs that no one camp could investigate another one, but that the district officer would have to act.

Replying to Mr. Donohue witness, after great hesitation and an embarrassed manner, said he had seen Capt. O'Sullivan at Kunz's at a meeting of Camp 20. The report of the trial committee referred to was that of the trial of the ex-executive by a special committee appointed by the convention to examine into the appropriation of funds by the ex-triangle, Alex Sullivan, Boland and Feely. On redirect examination O'Connor admitted that he had seen a man at a meeting of Camp 20 whom he afterward learned was Pat O'Sullivan. A copy of the constitution of the Clan-na-Gael was then offered in evidence.

Andrew Foy on the Stand.

Andrew Foy was called by the state. As he passed Burke he remarked: "Hello, Mart," but the prisoner's only reply was a contemptuous sneer. Foy proved a most unwilling witness, despite his extreme nervousness. He admitted that he had belonged to Camp 20, formerly Camp 9, for nine years. He reluctantly admitted that he spoke at a meeting.

"On Feb. 8 there was something said about another member of Camp 20 besides the effort that Le Caron, the informer, had been engaged by the executive body of the order for some purpose in England and Ireland, and that someone had been given to Le Caron by the executive. I don't know how much it was, but somebody said it was about $28,000. I can't tell the last time testifying before the Parnell commission. I said that if there were spies in the camp they ought to be driven out. What impressed me most was Coughlin's speech, that this informer, Le Caron, was a paid agent of the executive body, and that he had been paid a large sum of money—$18,000 or $28,000—to do certain work in England."

Accused Men Were Members.

Witness reluctantly admitted that Burke, O'Sullivan and Cooney were members of Camp 20 and that Dan Coughlin was present at the meeting in question. He said that he was very much excited because O'Connor by implication accused the triangle of embezzling the funds, but he could not remember that any committee had been appointed to try any one.

An Ex-Camp Officer Testifies.

Michael J. Kelly, formerly junior guardian of Camp 20, but who had severed his connection with the order after the murder, was the next witness. He testified that at the meeting in question he heard Foy and Beggs ask for the report of the executive committee and to the executive. Somebody remarked that a committee should be appointed to investigate the statement that the report had been read in another camp, and O'Connor said that it had taken place in Dr. Cronin's camp. Thereupon Beggs said that he would keep with the district officer and learn if the report was correct. Witness finally admitted that a committee was appointed in reference to the matter, but he did not understand that it was secret. Subsequently he was permitted to correct his testimony. Egan and Spellman, of Peoria, the district officer alluded to, when the matter was discussed.

Burke's Confession Encouraging.

State's Attorney Longenecker has received a dispatch from Frank Scott, his assistant, who went to Winnipeg to investigate the report that Burke had made important admissions to a fellow prisoner, and says it is of an encouraging nature.

Coal Barges Sunk.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—Between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 bushels of coal left this port yesterday for the Cincinnati and lower river markets. Late in the evening telegrams announced that the fleets had experienced much difficulty and considerable loss in passing through the obstructions in the channel at the Pittsburg and Lake Erie bridge. The steamer Charles Dalzell was forced against a false pier and two barges of coal sunk and others were badly damaged. A later special says that the channel at the bridge is blocked with wreckage, the Dalzell striking the false pier and sinking five barges. Twenty boats are tied up above the bridge.

Students for the Catholic University.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—There was a special service this morning in the cathedral for the Washington university. Richard C. Campbell, Richard C. O'Neill, Thomas E. Gallagher and George J. Lucas were ordained priests. Gallagher goes to the university as a student with nine others from St. Mary's seminary. O'Neill and Campbell will relieve Father Grant at the Immaculate Conception, Washington, and Father Fletcher at St. Patrick's, Baltimore, respectively, the two latter also entering the university for higher education. These are the first students selected for the university.

He Built Chicago's First House.

WHITEHALL, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Edward S. Ebbert, aged 80 years, fell in an open fire at his home in Shinnston, Harrison county, this state, and was fatally burned. Mr. Ebbert was a native of Pennsylvania and in 1829 he built the first house on the site of Chicago. In 1829 he built a small log dwelling where Chicago now stands and lived there until 1835, when he was disgusted over repeated Indian invasions and returned home, where he has lived ever since.

A Check for Mayor Grant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Judge Andrews, of the supreme court, has handed down his decision continuing, pending trial, the temporary injunction issued by him restraining the United States Illuminating company to restrain Mayor Grant, the board of electrical control and the commissioner of public works from interfering in any way with the subway wires, poles or plants. Mayor Grant is thus temporarily checked in his crusade against the electric light wires.

Mastiff vs. Bulldog.

NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 30.—In an old barn just over the line in Westport on Sunday fifty sporting men witnessed an exciting battle between Jim, a mastiff, owned by John Madden, of this place, and Jack, a bulldog, owned by Eli Lynch, of East Norwalk, for a stake of $300. The Norwalk dog weighed four pounds more than his adversary and was the favorite, but was defeated shortly in an hour and a half by the smaller dog.

R. P. Flower Gives a Dinner.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Congressman Roswell P. Flower gave a dinner at the Windsor hotel last night to a number of gentlemen who accompanied him on the return tour of the south, in honor of R. P. Howell, of The Atlanta Constitution. Among those present were Mr. Howell and Julius L. Brown, of Atlanta; A. Graham Yooll, of Buenos Ayres; M. Hoe, Thomas Rutter and H. H. Porter.

Three Men were Killed.

SCRANTON, Oct. 30.—Solomon Henry, engineer; John Moyles, fireman, and Thomas Doogher, driver, were instantly killed last evening by the explosion of a locomotive boiler at the mouth of Coal creek, a mile east of the Pierce Coal company's mines. The bodies of the victims were horribly mangled. The locomotive, which was old and defective, was torn to pieces.

Society People as Firebugs.

PRINCE ANNE, Md., Oct. 30.—Mr. Levin B. Hall and his sister Sarah, both prominent society people of this county, have been convicted of incendiarism in burning Coxe & Miles' warehouse at Princess Anne, Somerset county, a month ago. Sentence was deferred.

Stabbed Him to the Heart.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 30.—The Times-Democrat's Durant (Miss.) special says: Lee Birch was shot and killed at last time testifying before the Parnell commission. I said that if there were spies in the camp they ought to be driven out. What impressed me most was Coughlin's speech, that this informer, Le Caron, was a paid agent of the executive body, and that he had been paid a large sum of money—$18,000 or $28,000—to do certain work in England."

Accused Men Were Members.

Witness reluctantly admitted that Burke, O'Sullivan and Cooney were members of Camp 20 and that Dan Coughlin was present at the meeting in question. He said that he was very much excited because O'Connor by implication accused the triangle of embezzling the funds, but he could not remember that any committee had been appointed to try any one.

An Ex-Camp Officer Testifies.

Michael J. Kelly, formerly junior guardian of Camp 20, but who had severed his connection with the order after the murder, was the next witness. He testified that at the meeting in question he heard Foy and Beggs ask for the report of the executive committee and to the executive. Somebody remarked

BASEBALL CHAMPIONS.

The Fight for the World's Championship Over.

THE GIANTS ARE THE VICTORS.

Brooklyn's Gamey Bridegrooms Made a Valiant Struggle, but Were Worsted by the League's Heroes—New York Gets Six Games Out of Eleven.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The world's championship was decided yesterday afternoon on the Polo grounds, when the New Yorks won their sixth game from the Brooklyns. It was an excellent exhibition of ball playing and the Giants had to play hard to win, which they did, and well earned their victory. They outplayed the Brooklyns at every point of the game, and managed to make their hits just at the right time. Terry pitched exceedingly well, but O'Day carried off the pitching honors.

It Was a Good Beginning.

Brooklyn was first at bat and opened the game in a lively manner. O'Brien was given his base on balls and went to second on Hub

Collins' bunt. Then Tom Burns found O'Day for a tremendous hit to the top of the centre field bank, on which O'Brien and Collins scored and the batter reached second. From this point the Brooklyns made but two hits during the entire game and were unable to increase their score.

The Giants Declared Winners.

The New Yorks earned a run in the first inning on Tiernan's two bagger and Ward's three baser. In the sixth they tied the score on Ward's hit and steal, Connor's out, Ward getting to third on the play, and Richard. son's out-ground. In the eighth O'Day got his base on balls, but was forced out at second by Slattery's hit to Terry. Tiernan fouled out to Pinkney. Slattery stole second and scored on a wild pitch. The Grooms were quickly retired in the ninth, and the great game for which the Giants have been struggling since last April was theirs. The faithful cranks cheered them heartily and the season of '89 came to an end.

The Decisive Score.

The following is the score:

New York	1 0 0 0 0 1 1 0 x—3
Brooklyn	1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—2

Base hits—New York, 8; Brooklyn, 2. Errors—New York, 2; Brooklyn, 2. Batteries—O'Day and Ewing, Terry and Bushong. Umpires, Gaffney and Lynch.

BROTHERHOOD PLANS.

Only Three League Players Unpledged to Support the New Organization.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 30.—Secretary L. Johnson has made to a Press reporter the following authentic statement concerning the Baseball Brotherhood and its intentions: "On evening last summer Ed Hanlon called on me and asked if I did not have a ball ground on my street car line. I told him there were two. Then he spoke of how the League had broken faith with the players so often, and said that he, Ward, Pfeffer and Fogarty, on their trip around the world, had thought of getting capital in each city to secure grounds for them, for which they would allow a fair percentage for their risk, the players to receive a portion of the profits of the thing that they themselves were the real cause of making, and to try to liberate themselves from the tyranical rule of the League. I agreed to lend all the assistance within my power to help them accomplish their aim.

"At each visiting club came here we held meeting after meeting, until each League player had heard our views and had been given a chance to express himself, and suggested whatever he thought would be for the best interests of such an organization.

The Plan of Campaign.

"Our board of directors will be composed of one each visiting club of stockholders and players, the players' representatives being elected from the members making up the ball club in each city. While at first sight one may be misled into thinking that co-operation is against good discipline, we think, our interests being identical, that with strict rules there is a sufficient guarantee that in stead of preventing it will increase the chances of better behavior on the part of the men; and as we intend that the first club shall receive $7,000, the second $5,000, the third $3,000, the fourth $2,000, the fifth $1,500, the sixth $1,000 and the seventh $500, offering no inducement to the last, there will be even to the end of the season something more than empty honor, all at presently to play for.

Only Three Players Unpledged.

"I know of but three League players today who have not pledged themselves to support this organization. Feeling as I do after having heard all the encouraging things that have been said to John Ward and myself in Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn, where I spent quite a long time trying to organize and perfect this plan, I have every reason to believe that there is nothing but success awaiting us."

To Desert in a Body.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The Brotherhood of Ball Players will meet at the Fifth Avenue hotel on Monday at noon. The players will confer with the capitalists backing the United Baseball association, or whatever name may be selected for the new baseball league, and a statement will be given out as to the plans of the organization to which the players have pledged themselves to secede. The players simply transfer their services to other employers and will desert the National league in a body.

He Eloped with His Bookkeeper.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 30.—J. Alexander Harris, member of the firm of J. D. Harris & Co., fruit and vegetable canners, of Milford, has eloped with his bookkeeper, Miss Ella Wilson, to the amount of $10,000 and a wife and four children behind him. It has also been learned that Miss May Ellis, his former bookkeeper, a handsome young woman of 18 or 20 years of age, has eloped with him. In a letter to her father, Miss Ellis says she met Harris in Philadelphia, where they were married and started at once for Liverpool. Warrants have been sent in pursuit of the couple. Harris' wife has gone to her husband's brother's home in Pittsburg. Harris' debts are numerous. Farmers who sold him peaches and tomatoes. Merchants in town are also involved. Nearly all Harris' furniture in his house was secretly moved away.

Still Finding Bodies.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 30.—Government engineers have arrived here to ascertain the cost of widening and deepening the channels of the Conemaugh from this city to Saltsburg, and to erect temporary bridges over the same. The remains of Michael Lavell were recovered from the debris in Stoney creek yesterday. One body floated down the creek during the night, but was not recovered owing to the darkness. Twenty-three bodies were removed from the temporary to permanent graves in Grand View cemetery. Two were identified.

Verdict in the Feeks' Inquest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The coroner's jury in the case of Lineman Feeks, who was killed by an electric shock while repairing wires Oct. 11, have rendered a verdict that the fatal current passed to him through a live wire, probably belonging to either the Brush or the United States Electric Light company. The jury declared that the present system of overhead wires is a menace to the safety of lives and property of citizens. They recommend the extension of the subways as rapidly as possible, and specify many precautions that should be observed so long as overhead wires exist.

The Meyer Will Contest Settled.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 30.—It has been announced that the contest made by Mrs. Rebecca Meyer, widow of Christopher Meyer, and by his granddaughter, Mrs. Mollie Regensberger, of San Francisco, over the will of Mr. Meyer, has been compromised. The latter relinquishes all large sums from the millionaire's estate and withdraw from all litigation. The only contest to be made now is a formal one on behalf of the children of Howard Meyer, an insane son.

Why Subscriptions Come In so Slowly.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The world's fair guarantee fund now amounts to $1,053,146. The committee on site met to-day and decided to announce at the next meeting, Nov. 8, whether any part of Central park shall be used for the site. The uncertainty on this point is recognized as the reason why subscriptions are so slow. The representative of the drug trade has notified the finance committee that the trade would not subscribe until the park question was settled.

Disobedience Causes a Collision.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Oct. 30.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul limited express collided with a west bound freight train five miles east of this city. The engines telescoped and the express, baggage and smoker were burned. Engineer Dan Ginger on the passenger, was killed and Ansel Olliott was burned in the wreck. Several others were slightly injured. It is said the passengers had no warning to stop at Greendale, but the order was given at Greendale.

A Trusted Employe Goes Wrong.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Charles Thoelen, the trusted foreman in the meerschaum pipe manufactory of P. J. Kaldenberg & Co., 211 to 223 East Thirty-third street, has been arrested for the larceny of pipes to the value of goods from the firm. J. Steiner, a cigar dealer at 1,005 First avenue, has been arrested as an accomplice. Thoelen has confessed his guilt and given up 925 of the stolen pipes.

Fenelbles in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The State Fencibles, of Philadelphia, arrived here yesterday and were met by the Seventh New York regiment and escorted to the city hall, where they were reviewed by the mayor. The Fencibles gave an exhibition drill in the evening at the Seventh regiment armory, which was witnessed by a large audience of military people and their friends.

KING LEOPOLD'S UNHOLY AVARICE

A Romantic Story of Many Countries. Canon Bernard's Flight from Belgium with Ten Millions of Francs—Hounded by the King's Police and Imprisoned.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—There came up in the United States district court today a case which brings out in clear light a contest between the pope of Rome and Leopold II, king of the Belgians, as to their respective authority in the appointment of bishops, a dramatic contest between two bishops, the flight of the famous Canon Bernard to this country with some $1,500,000 in trust funds, his kidnaping and return to Belgium, his incarceration, and, all in all, a thrilling account of his strong devotion to his ecclesiastical superiors. The case is known as that of Leon Bernard against Peter Bowe, ex-sheriff of this county, and the suit is brought to recover $600,000 which the sheriff turned over to Francois Bourgeois in 1883. The account of Canon Bernard are Wilson & Johns, and for Mr. Bowe is Charles F. MacLane. The case came up on a demurrer to the defendant's plea of statute of limitations.

History of the Case.

Late in the year 1879, Edmond Joseph Dumont, bishop of Cotinea, Belgium, was succeeded as bishop of Namur by Mgr. Joseph Bruneau, an appointment by the pope. It appears that there was a fund amounting to several million francs belonging to the diocese, and of this strong devotion to his ecclesiastical superiors. The case is known as that of Leon Bernard against Peter Bowe, ex-sheriff of this county, and the suit is brought to recover $600,000 which the sheriff turned over to Francois Bourgeois in 1883. The account of Canon Bernard are Wilson & Johns, and for Mr. Bowe is Charles F. MacLane. The case came up on a demurrer to the defendant's plea of statute of limitations.

History of the Case.

Late in the year 1879, Edmond Joseph Dumont, bishop of Cotinea, Belgium, was succeeded as bishop of Namur by Mgr. Joseph Bruneau, an appointment by the pope. It appears that there was a fund amounting to several million francs belonging to the diocese, and of this strong devotion to his ecclesiastical superiors. Bishop Dumont refused to vacate the place and deliver the fund to his successor. No record is kept of such funds, for the law of Belgium forbids the maintenance of such funds by the Roman Catholic church, so that only by word of mouth does one bishop give to his successor a statement of the amount.

The Treasure Carried Off.

On Friday, Dec. 28, 1879, while Bishop Dumont was out of his palace, in the evening, five men and a locksmith forced their way in, and after a sharp struggle with the retainers of the place, took possession of the house and the treasure, put a new lock on the door, and thus barred out Bishop Dumont. The treasure was in two large safes. Canon Bernard was private secretary to Bishop Duroussaeu, and had been charged by his superior with the custody of the funds. He took the funds, which were securities payable to the bearer, and embarked for Canada. He landed in Quebec, where he deposited 1,800,000 francs with a safe deposit company, thence went to Boston and deposited some 1,000,000 francs more, and then to this city, where he deposited some 3,000,000 in francs, or the $600,000 now in dispute. The canon then went next to Mexico, and from there to Havana.

Pursued by King Leopold.

During all his wanderings Canon Bernard was pursued and watched by emissaries of King Leopold. It appears that the existence of the large fund of the diocese had been a revelation to the king of the Belgians. He claimed that in view of the Belgian law this 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 francs should escheat to the crown. At Havana Canon Bernard was seized by Leopold's emissaries, was thrown into jail and then, on the same charge of violation of law, he was put on board a vessel and finally landed in prison at Brussels. No one was allowed to see him.

Leopold then began suit against Canon Bernard to recover the $600,000 deposited in this city. An attachment was issued here, but it fell through. Bishop Dumont shortly afterward brought assistance to Belgium, and King Leopold slapped on another suit, intending that this time it should hold. In the Dumont suit judgment was obtained against both executors. Bernard was flung locked up in prison, and Francois Bourgeois, commissary of police at Brussels, was appointed receiver.

The King's Second Suit.

On July 27, 1882, in the king's second suit, brought in this city, a warrant was issued under which Sheriff Bowe seized the property in this county. Bourgeois then came over here and brought an action as receiver in the supreme court. Meanwhile, Bishop Dumont presented a claim here to the property, file and began a claim with the sheriff and demanded a trial by jury. With Bernard locked up in Brussels the bishop stood a good chance of getting the money, whereupon King Leopold, fearful that he would lose the boodle after all, induced the bishop, by some unknown influence, to withdraw his suit.

Landed in His Coffers.

Bourgeois then brought a suit here began a suit to recover the 1,000,000 francs under the name of Bernard. As Bernard appeared to be the plaintiff the funds were delivered to the receiver. Bourgeois then turned the money in his coffers of the king of the Belgians. Canon Bernard has brought suit in Boston as well as here. After Bourgeois returned here with the money the Boston suit by King Leopold discontinued his second suit, the warrant of attachment was thus annulled, and then Bourgeois claimed the securities as receiver and Sheriff Bowe delivered up the $600,000.

A Lawyer Locked Up.

As an episode in the fight Lawyer Goodhue, of Quebec, who knew of the 1,800,000 francs deposited in Boston, went to Belgium to aid in the matter, and the king promptly had him locked up. It is said that between the prison and the asylum he lost his mind. He was finally freed on the demand of the British government. He was found innocent of fraud. Canon Bernard was finally placed on trial in 1883 on the charge of embezzlement. He was acquitted by the jury, but that he took the securities by the direction of his ecclesiastical superiors, who had munimi possession and were the legal custodians. As soon as he was acquitted he was arrested. He was still followed by King Leopold and was indicted in 1884 on the charge of "trafficking in trust funds."

Canon Bernard, being still in London, was convicted, a thing, as Mr. Wilcox explained, which is beyond the pale of practice in other countries, and which he will bring the case demanded that the cause should be given ex. The British government, after examining the case carefully, refused to comply with the demand. The canon, therefore, remains in England, where he fills an important chair in a leading Catholic university in Dublin.

It May Yet be a Boomerang.

Sheriff Bowe gave an indemnity bond, through Coudert Bros., when he delivered up the securities to the bishop's second suit if Canon Bernard wins his case the claims will eventually revert against King Leopold. The case will probably be tried in April 19 just one week before the six years' statute of limitations had expired, as claimed by the canon's lawyers. Mr. MacLane claims the statute of limitations, and on a demurrer to this the case came up today.

Ingersoll to Fight the King.

An interesting feature of the case will be the appearance of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll as counsel for Canon Bernard. It is said he called on to thunder eloquence against the king of the Belgians in behalf of the pope himself.

Real Hospitality.

"I was down in Texas some years ago on government business," said a gentleman the other evening, "and had to travel with an escort across a piece of rough country. Numerous angur holes had been bored in the bottom of the wagon, and I didn't understand what they were for until we came to a stream. They were to let out the water which came nearly up to the seat. At one of the crossings a sudden jolt threw me from the wagon which was standing into the bottom of the wagon. Luckily I landed on my feet. We made a camp on the farther bank.

"'Wet ye fret, stranger,' remarked one of the escort affectionately.

"'Yes,' said I.

Polonius and His Lot Chances.

AN ELECTRICAL FIGHT.

NEW YORK CITY THROWN INTO A PANIC BY A LINEMAN'S DEATH.

Fine Events Have Shown That There Is Deadly Danger in the Wires, and the Public Demands That It Be Instantly Abated.

IN THE city of New York there is now in progress a grand triangular battle of law, science and popular indignation, which interests every city in the country, for every city has or hopes soon to have electric lights. New York has proved by horrible demonstrations that the system is very dangerous, and that other cities can well afford to wait till she finds the path of safety. She will soon do it, if it can be done, for the popular instinct of self preservation and the popular anger over recent deaths is bringing a pressure to bear which no officials can resist.

At noon one October day, as all the world knows by this time, Joseph Fecks, the lineman, was shocked, paralyzed and roasted to death at the corner of Centre and Chambers street, in the very heart of the business section. Thousands looked on and groaned in sympathy with his sufferings. And the tragedy was enacted in full view of the leading newspaper offices. If black fate had selected the spot for this electrical murder, with a special view to creating the greatest sensation and thus working up the people to fierce resolve, it could not have been better done. To add to the horror, the wife of Lineman Fecks was lying ill, and her child was born a few days later. Public sympathy took the form of a popular subscription. A box was fastened to the pole at the scene, and thousands of people contributed small sums to it. It was noted as a peculiarly affecting fact that hundreds of the poorest sort of people, the conductors of horse railways, bootblacks, street peddlers and mere infants gave their mites till the box was nearly filled with such coins, and the daily sums of the city amounted to $239.25. Other donations in petty sums have brought the popular relief fund above $1,000.

Every kind of organization took some kind of action. The labor orders especially passed indignant resolutions. Mayor Grant peremptorily ordered the electric power shut off until some system of safety could be devised, and for a night New York looked unnaturally dull. Then gas began to resume its old place; but the amount was scanty and the order went out that only private lights could be thus. Public places and many streets looked dismal, but soon many were heard to say that "but for the style of the thing we could get along just as well without the electric light if gas were plenty." Meanwhile the legal battle was found to be a very complicated affair.

First, the board of electrical control, a new body, of which the mayor is ex-officio a member, decided on the subway question. Some time before the popular uprising the board had been made by a subway company to prepare the tunnels or subways; the mayor wanted to hasten their completion by contracting with other companies, but the other members objected, and so nothing could be done till the law had decided the rights of persons. At the same time injunctions were issued by the courts, forbidding the mayor and all other persons to interfere with the poles. Some had been cut down. As the government of a rapidly growing city of 1,800,000 souls grew more and more complicated, and that of New York certainly not less so than is necessary, a mere detail of the legal actions and arguments would fill ten such columns as this.

The net result was to leave all poles and wires in position for the time being, but to shut off all currents, and so leave everybody safe and satisfied till the courts could straighten out the tangled contracts and decide whether "vested rights" or "public policy" is the right of the hour. Also whether "vested rights" have not been forfeited by failure to exercise "due diligence."

The scientific battle is scarcely less complicated, but New Yorkers can be enthusiastic in demanding that, if it cannot be shown to a certainty that perfect insulation can be secured or a perfectly safe subway system devised, that the electrical current adopt the method admitted to be safe by all electricians, namely, low tension, let it cost what it may.

In the meantime the board of health, under its general power of removing whatever is dangerous, has opened a flank movement which if it succeeds may end the battle. It personally explained. The interval of waiting is filled with all sorts of suggestions and comments from all sorts of cranks and some electrical experts, whose articles make two or three of the New York papers look like popular science publications. The New York World in particular is giving voluminous details, and from it are taken the annexed cuts, which show very clearly how the mysterious danger operates. The accompanying explanation is condensed from that of Harold P. Brown, the electrician, whose method is to be employed in killing criminals.

The first cut represents what may be called a safe arc circuit with an alternating current —that is, the current passes from the dynamo, D, in the direction of the arrow through the lamps, indicated by circles, and returns as shown in the cut. The man standing on the ground cannot of course destroy the current.

But the perfection of the circuit may be broken at any minute and at any point by a wire falling across it as in the second cut.

And here is where the danger to the servant of electricity lies in the destruction. Electricity flies to the earth as water flows towards the sea. The wire lying across the circuit and absorbing part of the current, to use a popular phrase, like a scientific term, may run for miles and at some place a man may supply the connection with the ground as in the third cut. The result, of course, would be fatal under those circumstances. Mr. Brown maintains that a ground connection at any point on an alternating arc circuit, as at G in the last case, would be fatal to both the dynamo station and horsed and removed.

Not so, he thinks, with an incandescent current, for such a circuit is not complete. A current in an incandescent circuit of 1,000 volts is given in the fourth cut. The dynamo is at D, while C C C C designate the converters and L L L L the lamps. The wires start from the dynamo and end in space, while running from each wire are short wires which connect with the converters and these in turn with the lamps. The main wires carry a deadly current, but the converters through which the minor current is carried into buildings reduce the voltage to a point of safety if they are in proper order.

In the fifth cut is shown a continuous incandescent circuit carrying as few volts as to be safe, that is about 100. In this case no converters are used, but the lamps are connected in the relay wires running from one to the other of the main wires.

The last cut presents Mr. Brown's theory of the current which caused the death of Joseph Fecks. It was an telegraph wire crossed with the electric light wires anywhere in that vicinity, and for aught any one knows the contact may have been at the extreme end of the city. Mr. Brown adds: "You will perceive that one of the telegraph wires runs to the ground, presumably at the Western Union office; another of the wires is crossed with a broken wire, which is in contact with one of the electric light wires, while the second one forming the incandescent circuit is crossed by another wire leading to the earth. When Fecks grasped the wire leading to the ground at the Western Union office and allowed some other portion of his body to come in contact with the wire which was connected with the electric light circuit by the first broken wire, the lineman became a part of the alternating current circuit, and the current flowed through his body as indicated by the arrows."

Within three days after the death of Fecks a corps of men, directed by the board of electrical control, had examined all the main wires in the city, and reported defects of all kinds and in so many places that the citizens who read the report almost wondered that they were still alive. The mayor gave it as his opinion, from a summary of the reports, that there were at least 500 miles of wire which should be cut down at once, and the large section was cut with the consent of the company and assistance from its linemen. The public has been led to believe that the electric light companies had some 500 men at work repairing. As they had previously agreed all complaints and acted as if perfectly certain that their lines were thoroughly insulated, this practical confession to the contrary gave the case a bad look. So New York is still in a panic, and does not know whom to believe, and a loose piece of wire on the street is avoided as if it were a gigantic cobra.

A Serious Charge.

Derivation of a Name.

"Gladys" is the Welsh form of Claudia, the feminine of the Latin Claudius. It probably means lame, "claudus," many of the Roman nomina being derived from personal peculiarities, often of a trivial description.

The New Commissioner of Pensions.

Green Berry Raum, who has been appointed United States commissioner of pensions, is a native of Colcondra, Ills., and was born June 3, 1829. He received a common school education, then studied law, and was called to the bar in 1853. In 1856 he removed with his family to Kansas, and affiliated with the Free State party. The next year he returned to Illinois, and settled in Harrisburg.

At the opening of the civil war he made his first speech as a war Democrat at Metropolis, Ills. He entered the army as major of the Fifty-sixth Illinois regiment, and was promoted to lieutenant colonel, colonel and brevet brigadier general. He was made brigadier general of volunteers in February, 1865, but resigned the commission in May. He served under Generals in the Mississippi campaign of 1862. At Corinth he led the charge that broke the Confederate left and captured a battery. He was with Grant at Vicksburg, and was wounded at the battle of Missionary Ridge in November, 1863. During the Atlanta campaign he held the line of communication from Dalton to Acworth and from Kingston to Rome, Ga.

In October, 1864, he re-enforced Rosecrans and held it against Gen. John B. Hood. In 1866 he obtained a charter for the Cairo and Vincennes Railroad company, aided in its construction and became its first president. He was elected to congress and served from March, 1867, to March, 1869. In 1876 he was president of the Illinois Republican convention, and in the same year was delegate to the national convention of the party in Cincinnati. In August, 1876, he was appointed second assessor of internal revenue, and retained the office until May, 1883. Gen. Raum is author of "The Existing Conflict Between Republican Government and Southern Oligarchies." He has practiced law for some years in Washington, and is a prominent Grand Army man.

WORLD'S FAIR SCHEMES.

SITES PROPOSED BY THE CITY OF CHICAGO.

Plan of A Degraff Hinsdale for a Monster and Novel Structure that Shall Completely Dwarf the Eiffel Tower that Has Been So Great a Success in Paris.

All the world in America is interested in the struggle for the World's fair between New York and Chicago. There is fitness for

1. Grant park. 2. Gross park. 3. River forest. 4. Graceland. 5. Colorado avenue. 6. Lake park. 7. Seventy-second street. 8. Auburn park. 9. Jackson park. 10. Pullman park.

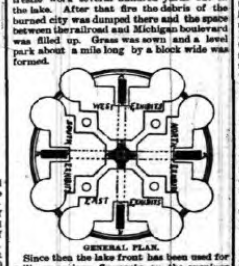
CHICAGO FAIR SITES.

this, for New York is the metropolis of the eastern states and Chicago is the metropolis of what should now be called the middle states, for Illinois and the states about it are no longer western.

Chicago has plenty of sites to offer. She is built on a prairie, and a level plain stretches south and west of her for hundreds of miles. There are sites north, west and south. Two have been mentioned on the Chicago and North western railroad, three more lie due west, while among her parks to the south ward are three more, with one at Pullman.

But there is one grand site, perhaps the most available of all, in the very heart of the city. This is what is called the Lake front. What the Lake front is it may be well to explain to those who have never been in Chicago.

The Illinois Central railroad enters the city from the south, skirting Lake Michigan from Hyde Park to the Union depot. From Twelfth street to the depot, about a dozen blocks, there is an open space, bounded on the north by Twelfth street, on the east by the lake, on the west by Michigan boulevard, and on the north by the depot. Before the Chicago fire this space was the margin of Lake Michigan, the railroad running on trestle work several hundred yards out in the lake. After that fire the debris of the burned city was dumped there and the space between Michigan and Michigan boulevard was filled up. Grass was sown and a level park about a mile long by a block wide was formed.



GENERAL PLAN.

Since then the park has been used for military reviews, fireworks on the evenings of gala days, and other like purposes. On one end of it stand the exposition buildings, where Republican national conventions have been held; where Garfield and Cleveland and Blaine were nominated for president. It is within a few blocks of the principal hotels and convenient to all the shops. It faces Lake Michigan for its whole length, and during the heated term, during a part of which the fair is to be held, will be fanned by breezes from the lake.

New York has come forth lately with a plan for a tower structure which is so made that it lays the Eiffel affair completely in the shade.

Mr. A. De Graff Hinsdale, a New York architect, has conceived a plan which he has copyrighted. It was first published in The New York Press, and his description is here copied by permission:

GENERAL VIEW.

"My plan contemplates the construction of an iron tower which from foundation to top of dome will measure over 1,900 feet. The tower would only be the central figure of the plan, however. It would be surrounded by four arches meeting at a point on the tower 1,100 feet above the earth. About 500 feet above the ground would be what I term midway arches, supporting an immense floor that could be used as a promenade and for divers purposes, such as concerts, restaurants, museums, or anything of that kind. The floor would be so large that it could accommodate at one time all the visitors who would be likely to visit the exposition in a day. I estimate the number at 300,000. The structure would be substantial and firm.

"The diameter of the ground space to be occupied by the tower—that is, from the foot of one outer arch to the foot of the opposite one—would be 2,500 feet, giving ample room between the bases of the arches and the tower for the construction of exposition buildings. At the ground end of each large arch would be a depot for passengers, who would be conveyed from the ground to the top of the arches, 400 feet up, in cars operated by means of a continuous cable system. In each arch there would be two up and two down tracks. The tracks will be above, necessitating the suspension of the cars. They will be so suspended that they will always remain level.

"At the summit of the largest arches there will be a grand palace, about the sixteen cars coming to the edge of a platform several hundred feet square. From this point the top of the lookout tower can be reached by electric special and independent elevators.

"The midway arches and grand promenade will have six separate elevators at the end of each arch, making forty-eight in all. In the center of the tower there will be twenty elevators running from the ground to the highest platform—1,900 feet above.

"The symbolical part of the design will be found in the position of the feet of the arches which would be north, south, east and west. In the northern quarter would be placed the exhibit from the north, and so on. At the top of the whole structure would be a statue of Columbus, with its face to the west, and at the base of each arch would be a small pedestal tower, with groups symbolic of the quarters of the globe which they respectively face. The whole structure would be lighted by electricity at night, making a magnificent sight that would be visible for miles.

"The cost of the tower and the arches complete, if built according to my idea, would be about $2,000,000."

Uncle Samuel has never seen any one do a big thing but that he has set out to do a big one. At the time of his first World's fair in New York in 1852 he "strained at a gnat and swallowed an elephant," but that was when he was a little boy. Now that he has grown to be a man and takes rank with his older brothers of Europe, there can be little doubt he will undo the Eiffel tower, and Mr. Hinsdale's plan is a foreshadowing of the fact.

THE LATE GEN. HARTRANFT.

Soldier, Lawyer, State Auditor and Governor of Pennsylvania.

In the death of Gen. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, the nation, his state and the veterans of the civil war have lost a strong man. John Frederick Hartranft was born in Montgomery county, Pa., in 1830. He was descended from a family which came to America from Silesia in 1684. When he was 14 years old his parents removed to Norristown, where he attended school. He then went to Marshall college, at Mercersburg, and from there to Union college, at Schenectady, N. Y., where he was graduated when he was 20 years old. At Union he studied engineering, and upon leaving college embraced the profession, but soon became deputy sheriff of Montgomery county, Pa. While in this position he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1860.

Hartranft early took an interest in military matters. Before becoming a lawyer he had joined the Morris City Rifles, becoming first a lieutenant, then a captain, and finally colonel.

J. F. HARTRANFT.

When the three months' men were called out in the spring of '61 Col. Hartranft marched to the front at the head of this regiment, the Fourth Pennsylvania militia. On the day of the expiration of its term of service the battle of Bull Run was fought, and its colonel went through the fight as an aid to Gen. Franklin. Then he returned and organized the Fifty-first Pennsylvania infantry.

Col. Hartranft, from this time forward, became no insignificant figure in the war. He took his regiment to North Carolina with Burnside, and was in at the final assault which carried the enemy's works at New Berne. There Reno's brigade, composed of regiments including Hartranft's, helped to cover the retreat of Pope's army. The Fifty-first, with Hartranft, was in at Antietam. A part of the Ninth corps under Reno was sent to Vicksburg. After the fall of that place, with the Ninth corps, it went to East Tennessee to join Burnside at Knoxville.

Next Hartranft was placed in charge of the Ninth corps in rendezvous for reorganization at Annapolis. The Fifty-first regiment, whose time expired while there, and Hartranft was soon at the head of a brigade composed of it and other regiments in Virginia. He was in at the second Bull Run, Chantilly, Maryland Heights, Fredericksburg, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and at the fall of Richmond.

He was made a brigadier general for gallantry at Spottsylvania, and brevetted a major general at the close of the war. He retired from the service as the "Hero of Fort Steadman," commemorative of his gallant attack upon and capture of that fort contrary to orders.

In 1865 Gen. Hartranft was elected auditor general of the state and reelected in 1868. He was then chosen governor, and has since been known as Governor Hartranft of Pennsylvania. When he retired from the office he was made postmaster by President Hayes; before his time expired was made collector, from which office he retired when President Cleveland was elected. He was major general of the National Guard of Pennsylvania at the time of his death.

It Grieved Him So.

Old Sol Baker, a celebrated wild cat killer of the Tennessee state, bragged around that he had killed a ton of cats. Some one doubted his story, and he sat down to figure. The total weight was only 1,750 pounds, including one very old cat whom he scared to death, and he was so grieved that he drowned himself. Had he been a coal dealer his ton would have been all right.—Detroit Free Press.

The Cincinnati Accident.

The accompanying cut gives a good idea of the great force with which the car sped down the incline to destruction in Cincinnati the other day when released by the breaking of the cable. There were only nine people in the car, and about half of them were killed. Had there been a crowd on board, as was often the case, the results could not but have been even more terrible.

Coupling Pins.

The loss of coupling pins is a mystery to railroad men. Where they all go to no one appears to be able to conjecture. Even in yards where the search is thorough they come in go cost again additional coupling pins are called for constantly. At the West Albany railroad yard the general foreman of repairs uses a car load of new coupling pins a month. It is safe to say that 1,000,000 pins are supplied the West Albany yard in a year.—Albany Journal.

FRAZEE LEE'S WILL BROKEN.

A Jury Gives the Miser's Real Estate, Worth $100,000, to his Uncles.

The fight over the wealth of the late Frazee Lee, hermit and miser, of Two Bridges, a place about two miles from Plainfield, ended yesterday in the Union County Court, after a trial occupying two weeks, before Judge VanSyckle and a stock jury. The contestants were David and Ezra Hatfield, uncles of the miser, each of whom is ninety years old. They attempted to prove the miser was not in his right mind, owing to the excessive use of ardent spirits, when he dictated his will and ignored their rightful claims on his property, worth about $200,000, by bequeathing it all to the Scotch Plains Baptist Church.

The jury retired shortly before noon yesterday and returned at 4:30 p. m. with a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for the real estate, amounting to about $100,000. Ex-Chancellor Runyon was counsel for the church and Lawyer R. V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, for the plaintiffs. The latter are satisfied with the verdict, from which the defendants may appeal.

Before the trial began Chancellor McGill stated a decree admitting the will to probate, but this act did not seem to have any effect on the minds of the jury.

It is very rare to have a will set aside in New Jersey. The only other case we recall from this vicinity, in which the contestants were successful, is the case of the will of Matilda Dunellen, of Dunellen. In that case, Craig A. Marsh, as counsel for the heirs, succeeded in obtaining the unanimous judgement of the Judges of the Middlesex County Orphans' Court, setting the will aside for undue influence and want of testamentary capacity. That case attracted a great deal of attention, because the lady to whom all the property was left by the will, was the wife of the former partner of the Chief Justice of the United States.

In the Lee will case, Chancellor McGill, sitting as Ordinary, sustained the will, as to personal property.

This gives the personal property to the church and other legatees named in the will. The verdict of the jury breaks the will only so far as the land is concerned. In other words, as the Lee estate is about half personal property and half land, the heirs will get half and the legatees under the will the other half. Judge VanSyckel can set aside the verdict of the jury and order another trial if he thinks that the verdict is against the evidence or the weight of evidence. If he should refuse to do so, the other side can appeal only on the rulings law made by the judge of the trial, and as Judge VanSyckel is one of the ablest of our judges and is considered to have taken extra care about his rulings in this case, the heirs have little apprehension that the will, will be reversed.

The effect of this verdict if not set aside by Judge VanSickel, will be to give possession of 40 acres at Two Bridge, valued at about $2,500, to the heirs, and led to their bringing other like suits for some 24 additional pieces of real estate, in all valued at about $100,000. It will in no way affect the decision of Chancellor McGill giving the personal property, valued at about $80,000, to the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and appointing Dr. Long and Mr. Jackson, executors. The ground for the verdict of the jury was the incapacity of Frazee Lee to make a will. No fraud or undue influence was alleged by the heirs.

Ex-Chancellor Runyon, counsel for the church, will at once apply for a new trial on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the weight of evidence.

DECLARED GUILTY.

THE WEST THIRD STREET DISORDERLY HOUSE NUISANCE.

The Jury out Three Hours.—Mercy Recommended.—Patrick Newell Fined $25.—His Wife Reprimanded.

It was after three o'clock yesterday afternoon before a jury satisfactory to the defense was secured in the Newell disorderly house case, referred to in yesterday's NEWS. Corporation Counsel Marsh then informed the jury briefly of the charge in the complaint which the city expected to prove, and called as the first witness Mr. Benjamin Hand, who resides next door to the defendants. That gentleman swore that noises of a disorderly character were a frequent occurrence in the house complained of and that they were of such a disorderly character as to cause great annoyance to persons living in the neighborhood. He further swore that oaths of the vilest sort were frequently heard emanating from the interior of the domicile. On the twentieth of October (Sunday) he said the noise was something appalling and attracted large crowds to the front of the house.

His testimony was corroborated by Messrs. Martin Cronce, Mr. Frederick Morris, Mr. Amos Andrews, Mr. Andrew Muir, Mr. Frederick Moore and Policeman Flanagan. The prosecution then rested and the defense called as witnesses Harry Clarkson, Maria Carroll, Mary Muldowney, Annie Newell, John Porter and Patrick Newell. After they had given in their testimony Gen. Fay summed up for the defense and was followed by prosecutor Counsel Marsh for the prosecution. Judge Stillman then charged the jury and at 7:15 o'clock they retired for deliberation in charge of Policeman Patrick Lynch.

Several ballots were taken. At first the jury stood 8 to 4 for conviction; but after several more ballots it stood 11 to 1. At 10:15 o'clock they agreed and filed into court with a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, it being the first offense of the defendants.

Newell and his wife, in company with their counsel, Gen. Fay, appeared before Judge Stillman this morning for sentence. That counsel begged the court to be lenient in imposing sentence, and promised that hereafter they would keep within the bounds of the law and live an §1.00-abiding citizens.

Corporation Counsel Marsh favored the judge in taking into consideration the jury's recommendation to mercy, but thought the court ought to impose a fine heavy enough to teach the defendant, Patrick Newell, a lesson, as he thought he was solely responsible for his wife's actions on this and previous occasions. He said that the complaints which led into consideration the large family dependent upon the father for support and thus recommended him to the mercy of the court.

Judge Stillman then said that the defendant had been convicted by a jury of twelve good citizens, and in consideration of the recommendation to mercy would be taken into consideration by the court; but warned the defendants if either of them were brought before the court again charged with any breach of the peace they must expect to receive the full penalty of the law. The judge then suspended sentence in the case of Annie Newell and imposed a fine of $25 on Patrick, the husband.

It is said that a family of seven children are dependent upon Newell for support.

The owner of the dwelling occupied by the Newells has decided to eject them to protect himself from suits for damages by small property owners in the neighborhood, who consider their property damaged in value by the disorderly character of the Newell house. Chief Carey was informed yesterday by the owner that the ejectment would be prosecuted with as soon as the Newells were convicted.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE PEOPLE.

THE PROPOSED ELECTRIC RAILWAY

Another Prominent Citizen Urging It.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—It has been a problem difficult of solution to many why Plainfield property, within easy reach of New York and possessing all the advantages which make a place attractive for residential purposes, should be so low in price as compared with property in other suburban places similarly situated. For it is a well known fact that in Orange, Montclair, Morristown, or any of the places favored even less than Plainfield naturally is, property is double and treble in value as compared with prices here. To those familiar with the tendencies which affect the real estate market, it would be strange, indeed, if it were not so, inasmuch as a lack of enterprise is doubtless the cause, and only cause. Is it doubted? Can any other reason be thought of or given? Are we not lacking in a proper spirit of enterprise? Or, are we broad enough in our ideas of progress and public policy? Plainfield is not lacking in wealth, nor is a generous people ever ready to assist in projecting charitable and other objects for the public good. There seems, however, to be a feeling existing that the city is exempt from certain wants which all other cities in the wide world have found to be indispensable to their health and growth. Hence it is somewhat surprising to hear worthy citizens assert that we do not need sewers, nor water, nor street railways, nor any of these improvements which most people deem requisite to the comfort, convenience and health of a city. "The place is large enough" we do not want to grow." Is an expression from the lips of a man whom I know to be foremost in contributing to charitable and other objects, but who ignores the fact that it is only proven that a good man may be all right in certain directions, and all wrong in others. Is it not a fact that the growth of Plainfield should have passed the creeping period and present a more stalwart form. As a matter of course, without money. Are we not to slow? Are we not altogether wrong in estimating the measure of our growth? Can we afford to ignore the ordinary means and methods to which all well regulated cities have to resource for the promotion of their own welfare. Who of us has not met many worthy people who declined to make Plainfield their home just because it lacked those improvements and facilities which they deemed essential. We may be content to rest on our oars in a calm of equity without becoming victims of short sightedness; but is it wise to wait until disaster compels us to put our oars out?

It is the experience of all the cities that important public improvements are strenuously opposed by their incredulous, the vision of which, when finally consummated, is generally admitted by all. It is not many years ago when Broad street, the principal street of Elizabeth, was bitterly assailed, because we ventured to assert our belief that the elevation of the Central Railroad through its streets would be for our best interests. The Railroad Company, through its president, offered and did make a present of its own expense, and yet one might have inferred from the intense excitement of its opponents that it was a calamity. Johnston, to whom Plainfield certainly owes a debt of gratitude which it can never repay, was denounced as a "carpet bagger" from birthright. Does it not seem strange now, in the light of subsequent events, that there ever lived a man who supposed this great improved the value and importance of which to our city can never be estimated.

Now, Mr. Editor, there is a proposition to give Plainfield an electric railway—first-class in all its appointments—to meet the wants of the people, and add to the convenience of our people. Once established the only wonder will be why we did not have it before. Is it within our grasp? Shall we have it? Or, must the verdict be that Plainfield is large enough—finished? that we do not wish to grow? that we are content to be a city of a thousand dollars, to be taken in the bonds of the company, which, unless all experience with similar enterprises is at fault, will be a paying property? Is the only power to say? Is the only power to say? Is the only power to say

A bouquet of women writers tells us in a newspaper letter what they would do if they were men. Some of their suggestions are so good that it is surprising they have not adopted them for themselves.

That was a graceful sentence in Mr. Blaine's welcome to the maritime conference delegates: "The spoken languages of the world will continue to be many, but necessity compels that the unspoken language of the sea shall be one."

There has been considerable discussion whether a barber who killed himself with morphine at Asbury Park was a Polish count. Well, they counted a great many empty whisky flasks and morphine and chloroform bottles, as well as numerous letters from married ladies, who would not have written in exactly the strain they did had they known the letters would meet the eye of a cold and unsympathetic world. All this evidence ought to count for something.

Senator Cullom has been having a jaunt around among his constituents. It is pleasant to record that he renders this verdict: "I do not believe the people of southern Illinois were ever before it such a prosperous condition as they are now. Crops have produced abundantly The apple crop beats anything I ever saw. A man with fifty good trees will take in from $300 to $500, and so it goes." Do Senator Cullom's constituents understand the art of making cider jelly?

The Real Discoverer of America.

A correspondent of The New York Sun writes to know who really did discover America. It seems that it was discovered fair ar' square no less than five times before it "took," as they say of vaccination. The gentleman who fills the chair of mediæval history in The Sun office replies as follows:

Well, if you want to know exactly, here goes. Buddhist monks from China discovered the western coast of America in the year of our Lord A. D. In 458 more Chinamen came over, and in 499 still more. The aborigines did not exclude them. In 795 monks from Ireland settled in Iceland. In 861 Bjarni, from Norway, sailed along Nova Scotia and Labrador, being the first Europeans to see the shores of the United States. Leif founded Vinland, a settlement in Rhode Island in 1000 A. D. In 1170 Madoc, Prince of Wales, made a settlement somewhere in the South, and in 1492 Columbus found the country. Columbus made the first practical discovery.

Forestry.

Without making too much fuss, the forestry congress has accomplished great good since its organization, some ten years ago. At the session just ended in Philadelphia, reports from all sections of the country showed how deeply interest in the subject is growing. Profoundly interesting were reports of young forests from the treeless plains of Illinois and Dakota. So much attention is paid to the subject that in some part of the treeless west, within the lifetime of some old enough to recall this congress, there will grow luxuriant forests.

The congress has done valuable work in ascertaining what trees can be acclimated in given localities. Among other valuable achievements too much cannot be said of the interest it has aroused among the school children on the subject of tree planting. Many school yards that fifteen years ago were as desolate as Sahara have been transformed into bowers of leafy shade under the kindly influence of members of the forestry association. Children have learned to love the beautiful and beneficent trees.

Talmage's Church.

From Maine to the four new states, from Oregon to Florida, sympathy and regret will stir the breasts of men and particularly of women at tidings of the burning of Parson Talmage's church, the Brooklyn Tabernacle. However the seasons of people disagree on politics or theology, they all read Talmage's sermons. He has reached the popular heart as no other preacher of his time, except Beecher, has done in this country. For years, regularly every Monday, good grandmothers all over the land have seated themselves, newspaper in hand, spectacles on nose, and read Talmage's sermon, every line and letter.

But the fire that consumed Talmage's church could not put out the fire in the dauntless parson's soul. His trustees announce that the church will be rebuilt immediately, not indeed on the same site, but farther away from the business center. It is rather remarkable that this is the second fire that has consumed Talmage's church in Brooklyn on this same site. The first one occurred in December, 1872. The present organization is not so rich as supposed. Hardly anybody is. The congregation were still burdened with debt for the building just destroyed.

Meantime the indomitable parson who has brought consolation to so many hearts, now asks consolation for himself and his people. Since he and his church have included the world in their Christian ministrations, they now appeal to the world to help them rebuild their Tabernacle. The person will himself acknowledge with his own hands all subscriptions sent to him, T. De Witt Talmage, Brooklyn. And newspaper readers will still have the Monday sermons.

MORE CLAN MEN TESTIFY

The Secret Committee Reported to Beggs Alone.

DID THEY MURDER DR. CRONIN

Interesting Testimony of the Camp's Financial Secretary—He Connected Cronin's Disappearance with the Secret Committee.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—A sensation occurred in the Cronin case when court opened, and Stephen Colleran, the Clan-na-Gael witness from whom much was expected, could not be found. Attachments were issued for him and for Edward Spellman, of Peoria, the district attorney of the Clan-na-Gael. Dennis O'Connor was called, and testified that he had been a member of the clan for twenty-one years. He was present at the meeting Feb. 8, and heard Foy and Capt. O'Connor speak. He could not remember what they said. He had been in Dr. Cronin's camp and heard read the minority report of the trial committee of the executive body. He did not know who the executive was that was on trial. It was a rule that members should not know who the executive committee were. After Capt. O'Connor's speech some one moved that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter alluded to by Capt. O'Connor.

A Secret Committee Was Appointed.

The motion was carried, but witness did not know whether or not the committee was appointed. It was to be a secret committee; the senior guardian always appointed committees ordered by resolution. The witness did not remember hearing Capt. O'Connor say that the funds had been embezzled by the ex-executive, and instead of looking for spies in the camp the ex-executive ought to be investigated.

Continuing, O'Connor half admitted that he remembered Capt. O'Connor saying that the ex-executive had sent Irishmen to England and there betrayed them, and they were then in English prisons. He might also have said that there were English spies in the camp; that Le Caron was one, and that his friends were in the order in this city. Cross-examined, he said he attended the meeting because he understood important business was to be brought up, and to hear about the minority report of the Buffalo convention that had been read in Cronin's camp.

The Missing Witness Turns Up.

Colleran was then brought into court. He said he and Burke had worked for the city, being discharged last December. The three visits paid by himself and Burke to Beggs's office were for the sole purpose of securing the latter's influence in getting them reinstated.

The Camp's Secretary Creates a Sensation.

Patrick Henry Nolan, financial secretary of Camp 20, was the next witness. He said Coughlin's number was 94, Beggs's 256, Cooney's 211, O'Sullivan's 356 and Burke's 282. He was not present at the meeting of Feb. 8, but at the previous meeting of Feb. 22 he heard the remarks made by Beggs in reply to McGarry and Powers.

He was sworn in 1881, and had understood that Beggs had appointed a secret committee. He had also associated in his mind the disappearance of Dr. Cronin with the appointment. This admission created a sensation.

An Important Witness.

The most important witness of the day was Capt. T. P. Ulrich, of Camp 20. On Feb. 8 Andrew Foy declared that things were in a bad shape in the order. Le Caron was testifying before the Parnell commission. He was one of four British spies in America. Foy urged that the clan should be dissolved and reorganized on straight lines, and then every one tainted with British affiliations could be thrown out. "Replying to that," said Capt. O'Connor, "I said I had positive information that the secret committee were betraying me and 'scoundrels; that they were betraying the order, and that they had squandered the funds of the order to the amount of $100,000, and sent some of the basest men into British prisons. I said that I heard a verbal report and had sent a closely written account of 400 pages containing the report of the trial of Daffady, Cooney, and Burke, with facts. Instantly there was a tumult, and a number of brothers asked me where I got my information. I said that the senior guardian demanded my source of information and would give it. There was more outbreak, and I again appealed to the senior guardian.

Dan Coughlin's Motion.

"Then Dan Coughlin arose in his place and moved that a committee of three be appointed to investigate my statement and find out where I got my information. There was more tumult, and finally I heard the senior guardian said: 'I will hear no more on this subject. I will appoint the committee.'"

"Who was the senior guardian?"

"John F. Beggs."

Beggs Said "Tell Everything."

The witness stated that one camp could try a member of another, for he had known it to do so. He had heard of the inner circle as another name for the executive. He saw Beggs at the time of the inquest and Beggs advised him to conceal nothing about the order, but to tell everything. Witness said he attended the meeting at which some one asked when the report of the secret committee would be made, and Senior Guardian Beggs replied that the committee would report to him alone. That meeting was held May 10, the Friday after the disappearance of Dr. Cronin.

Cronin Was Considered a Spy.

Henry Owen O'Connor gave some sensational evidence. He swore that Friday, March 1, at the first meeting after the retinue meeting, and after Coughlin, the senior guardian said: "I will hear no more on this subject. I will appoint the committee." Beggs replied that the committee would report to him alone. That meeting was held May 10, the Friday after the disappearance of Dr. Cronin.

WOMAN AND HOME.

SOMETHING ABOUT BEAUTIFUL AND FAULTLESS HANDS.

The Way "Sleep Slippers" Are Made. What Constitutes a True Wife—The Well Bred Girl—Women and Books—The Ways of Women Known to Fame.

A beautiful and faultless hand is a more rare and unusual gift than a beautiful face, and now that the fashionable young woman is exposed to the public gaze to a certain degree in regard of the delicacy and whiteness of her fingers and to blister and burn them through the summer months playing all manner of outdoor games guiltless of gloves, their ugliness presents quite a formidable problem when the return to the frivolities and fluff of civilization demands a sudden transformation from summer sunburn to winter snow and softness. A pair of brown strong hands clasped about a canoe paddle or wielding a tennis racket with strength and skill as well, present a more charming picture to the masculine mind than those same brown hands folded in idle grace over the frills of a dainty house dress and looking all the darker and coarser in contrast; and the tender touch of a woman's hand never could arouse any of the ecstatic thrills which the new school of novelists delight in depicting if the hand was hard with callouses, rough with half healed blisters, and the impression conveyed strangely suggestive of the caress of a grater.

No; a woman's hand, to be the thing of beauty the Creator designed it to be, should have a delicacy of coloring, a slenderness of outline and a touch like the sweep of a butterfly's wing against the breast of a rose. Besides, an ungainly, ill kept hand is like bad grammar—hardly reconcilable with the idea of gentility. It is hardly possible to materially change the nature of one's hand, but it is said that, if small, tapering thimbles be put upon a growing child's fingers each night and held in place by tight gloves of kid, that it will, if persisted in a number of years, make them slender and shapely. Few people, especially those young enough to be affected by it, would submit to this treatment, and it is hardly warrantable, as a writer in a London hand, with nicely polished nails, is a delight to the eye, while its shape may be and is an index to the owner's character which he who runs may read.

Of course every lady keeps her hands clean, and it is hardly necessary to mention that perfect cleanliness is the first requisite to a soft and white hand. The cleanliness is only brought about by two or three daily scrubbings with a brush, and with the vigor usually applied to remove the grime from the little face of the proverbially small boy. No matter how dainty may be your occupation, the water used should be warm, not hot, and the soap be generous in quantity and purest of the pure in quality. There are several effervescing remedies for whitening the hands used by their advocates and inventors. One is the use of lemon juice and glycerine; another which is very highly recommended is Indian meal and glycerine; and still another is the country girl's lotion, sour buttermilk, whose acid reputation as a complexion purifier, and whose oil is peculiarly beneficial in making the skin soft and smooth. Any preparation used at night is more efficacious if kid gloves are worn, and the fashionable shape and perfect process can be suggested than the careful cleansing through the day with warm water and castile soap, and the application at night of rose water and glycerine covered with kid or rubber gloves.

Handsome nails, which display a crescent of white at the base and a delicate pink tint throughout, are as much a gift as the poet's genius or the artist's skill, but one visit to the manicure will enable you to see how even the most ugly ones may be attractive and pleasing if they are kept free from dirt away the rough skin at the base, which should never be done without first soaking them in warm water, and shape them in a smooth curve, following the outlines of the finger tip, and to polish the surface every day. Probably an hour each week devoted to the care of the nails, with a little extra attention each day in polishing and cleaning them carefully, will keep them in nice order, and they should never be cleaned with any kind of a sharp instrument, as that tears the surface so that they retain the dust which drifts under them.

It is said by manicures in glove stores that a lady who can wear a No. 5 glove is as unusual as one who wears a No. 13 shoe, and that a large hand looks better smaller gloved in a mousquetaire of undressed kid, because of the loose ruffle that it makes at the wrist tight sleeves are as unbecoming to a large hand, whether gloved or ungloved, as low heels to a long foot.—New York Sun.

The Well Bred Girl.

Do you know many well bred girls? Oh, they can all easily be told.

A well bred girl thanks the man who gives her a seat in the street car, and does it in a quiet and not an effusive way.

She doesn't turn around to look after gamblers or posing actors on the street, and she doesn't think that her good looks are causing the men to stare at her.

She doesn't wear all her jewelry in the daytime, and she understands that diamond rings, earrings and bracelets were intended for the evening alone.

She doesn't go to supper after the theatre over alone with a man.

She does not declare that she never rides in street cars.

She does not accept a valuable present from any man unless she expects to marry him.

She does not talk loud in public places.

She does not speak of her mother in a sarcastic way, and she shows her the loving deference that is her due.

She doesn't want to be a man and she doesn't try to imitate him by wearing stiff hats, smoking cigarettes and using an occasional big, big D.

She doesn't say she hates women, and she has a good, true friends among them.

She doesn't wear boots without their bottom or a front that needs mending.

She doesn't accept the use of the needle, and expects some day to make clothes for very little people who will be very dear to her.

That's the well bred girl; she's the one that you want for your wife, who will be faithful through sickness and through health, through sorrow and, if need be, through shame; who will never waver in her love, and in whom the honor of her husband may safely trust.—Philadelphia Times.

Sleep Slippers.

Sleep comes readily enough, with her swift dart of a goddess "aloof with wool," to visit the pillows of young and healthful people. But there are many delays and hindrances to sweet sleep for the aged or the invalid. So for the grandmammas or aunties who are delicate and easily chilled we can make a pair of wool shoes in which they may lie down for half an hour. Indeed, any and all of our friends will find these simple and pretty slippers very acceptable. And a dozen pairs or three, in bright colors, would be a beautiful gift to send to a hospital fund; or to add through the year to one's stock of gifts made ready bottom for Christmas.

Simple as is the pattern, it has been carefully planned, and will be found to make a neatly fitting and comfortable shoe. A skein of Germantown wool, in white or some delicate or bright color, and a little Shetland wool or knitting silk for the ankle edge, are the materials required.

With a large crochet needle make a chain of eight stitches. Work, in short crochet, all around this chain, making two stitches in the fourth chain, so that there are fifteen in the row. Work two rows around this little oval, widening at each end and at the middle —where the first widening was made. After these rows, widen only at the middle until twenty or twenty-two rows are completed. Now work back and forth, omitting eleven stitches—five on each side of the middle stitch. These sixteen rows are crocheted alternately on the back and the front loops of the work, so that the stitch may resemble the rest of the shoe.

Crochet together at the heel, and begin the ankle. This is quite plain, six rows in short crochet, missing a stitch at the corners where the eleven stitches were left. This narrowing shapes a slender ankle.

Then work one row of double crochet, for a cord or ribbon to be run in. This row is not narrowed, neither are the two plain rows of short crochet which follow it.

Now with the Shetland wool or the silk make a row of scallops thus: one short crochet, miss one, five double crochet, miss one, one short crochet. Repeat.

If silk is used, be careful to fasten it strongly and leave an inch of the silk run in at the wrong side of the work. A crocheted cord, or, still prettier, a narrow white ribbon run in around the ankle and tied in dainty bows, finishes the pretty gift which may be accompanied with the most graceful expression of your good wishes for a "good night and happy dreams."—E. Cavazza in Wide Awake.

Pins and Needles.

Female students are now admitted to Wesleyan university.

The Crouse Memorial College for Women, a new institution at Syracuse, N. Y., gives promise of great success. It has very fine buildings.

It is worth while to paste light manilla paper over the back of every picture frame before it is put in position, as it effectually prevents dust from reaching the pictures. It is always done nowadays by first class framers.

There will be an effort made to break up the custom of having college seniors employed to assist or relieve the hostess at dinners and receptions. The abuse of it has suggested abolition of the "fad."

The Lyman Memorial hall, at Mount Holyoke, Mass., has a fund which is used to assist poor students. It is one of the oldest American institutions for the higher education of women.

No less highly polished brass free from tarnishing cover it with a thin coat of varnish made of shellac dissolved in alcohol. So long as the varnish remains the brass will continue to remain bright. The article should be warm when the varnish is applied.

There are many more applicants for admission to Smith College for Women at Northampton, Mass., than can be accommodated. It is a melancholy fact that nearly all the professors of the gentle sex at this college are unmarried.

Do not wash the head in well water, because the lime usually found therein renders the hair harsh and dry; also eventually kills the roots. Rain water is the best used of hair, in process of time, to a thin, wiry mass.

Do not use a fine toothed comb in order that your hair may not dirt out of your head; the fine teeth scrape the tender, young hair just as it is fairly started, thus ruining it. These same teeth may indeed draw out the head and tooth, but they also quite as surely irritate the scalp, destroy the "hair cells," and in the end produce a fine new crop of dandruff.

It is comparatively easy to exterminate black ants. The little red ants are, however, very hard to get rid of. At little powdered whiten sprinkled or scorched in sight will rule quickly exterminate them. Care must be taken in using the hellebore, and in brushing it away in the morning, as it is poisonous. Powdered sulphur will frequently answer the purpose.

Miss Hargous' Boudoir.

Here is a description of the beautiful Miss Hargous' boudoir: She is a dark eyed, Spanish looking woman, and the room was furnished with a view to forming a becoming background for her loveliness. The walls are of rough finished plaster, colored a pale, dull gold, with a frieze of dull, gray green flowers. The hangings and carpets are the same dull green and the curtains are embroidered with gold of a tint to match the walls. On either side of the deep tiled fireplace, with brass curbs, is a wide lounge. That on the right is covered with a tiger skin, the head of it lying on the floor and making a footstool for the occupant's slim, slippered feet. This and the opposite one, which is covered with a black bear skin, are heaped with cushions of a pale gold and a red that is almost black it is so dark. At the end of one of the lounges stands a tall scrolled brass lamp with a pale gold shade and underneath it a table of pierced copper work from Persia, whose forms are of Persian metals cups and saucers and an old Persian silver teapot for afternoon tea. On either side of the window stands a big dull red earthen jar, which holds a palm or fern, is almost hidden, and the two form an arch of green over the window. There is a long Louis Quinze table near the window, fitted up with all the appliances for writing, all over. There are book shelves, many deep, soft chairs and a Louis Quinze cabinet, holding some very rare and beautiful bits of Venetian glass, which, with the etchings that hang on the wall, are the beauty's special weakness, and into which all the money she can spare from her wardrobe is invested.—New York World.

The Sex and Books.

Why is it that the books in the house usually fall to the man? asked a correspondent of The Cleveland Press. Married women seldom accumulate them, but speak of the room used for reading as the wife's or "the library." And verily, it is his. The other rooms of the house the husband and wife enjoy in common, but in this the wife abdicates all right—stoops the rule to keep the books—has them in a shelf in some corner where she has tucked away a row of school books—a French grammar, a botany, and several hieroglyphics of one cook book or more. These she dusts carefully, and touches caressingly as she passes; opens one, perhaps, to the page where the four leaved clover is pressed. She was somewhat intellectual in this day. But where are the books she then planned to read, the novelists who were to amuse; the poets who were to soothe, the philosophers who were to help her to live nobly, the scientists who were to assist her in applying "classified knowledge" to every day affairs? They are not here—and she sighs as she passes by and dusts carefully.

Women have many temptations to spend their small change, not for tobacco or at the bar, but for bits of brica-brac, trifles for personal adornment, embroidery silks and table delicacies. Some women may shop three times a week and leave none of their money at the bookseller's unless they buy books for the table. To such books are silks. They care not for difference in quality of paper or way of print, and so long as the binding is pretty it matters not if it be not durable. The experience of buying a book to read would be quite novel with many women. The libraries of the city are filled to-day with ornaments for the library hours. Were they willing to sacrifice some of the luxuries which they have come to consider necessities—the extra gloves, the quaint bonnet, the expensive dress—and put the price into books they could shortly accumulate a library of fine quality if not of generous size. Surely one may be as proud of a classic poem as of an ugly Chinese jar.

A True Wife.

It is not to sweep the house, make the beds, darn the socks and cook the meals chiefly that a man wants a wife. When all he needs, a servant can do it cheaper than a wife. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a lady, send him into the pantry to talk with the girl, and the cook may send him to inspect the needlework and bedmaking; or put a broom in his hand and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quickly look after them. But what the true young man wants with a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and a man needs a wife to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortunes; he meets with failures and defeats; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has some hard battles to fight with poverty, enemies and sin, and he needs a true wife. When he puts his arm around her, he feels he has something to fight for; she will help him to fight: she will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel and cheer; her hand to his heart and impart inspiration. All through life, through storm and through sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and through favoring winds, man needs a woman's love.—The Lady.

The Cooking Clock.

The latest achievement in portable double action furniture is the cooking clock. It is made of white wood, stained cherry, and is constructed after the style of the old fashioned grandfather's clock. The lower part of this might ought to be of dimensions to contains a gasoline stove, which, when in use, is pulled out like a drawer from its resting place. Below the stove is a receptacle for kitchen ware, while above it is a china closet containing four shelves. Above all this is perched a calendar clock, back of which is attached a gasoline vapor tank, which is connected with the stove by a pipe concealed behind the case. To the left, and fitted securely to one side of the case, is an Argand burner supplied with gas generated by the gasoline vapor tank shown mentioned. When cooking is in progress the woodwork of the stove clock is protected by a sheet of asbestos paper, which is placed back of the stove. When the stove, china closet, etc., are not in use they are pushed back into the case, the front of which is decorated with a handsome mirror. Besides this arrangement of useful combinations the ingenious inventor has found room within the magical case for a writing desk and a drawer for writing materials.—New York Star.

Bleaching Little Heads.

One of the curious features of the present craze among women to have their young make lifeyoung resemble in appearance the good Little Lord Fauntleroy is their determination to make the poor child have blonde hair. It is true that nearly 50 per cent of the sweet little dears have attractive personal characteristic, but the proportion of them who wear long hair is very small. A fashionable hair dresser informed a New York Times reporter that he had recently received quite an impetus to his business by fashionable women who bring their children to him to have their hair bleached.

"These ladies are very particular, too," said he; "they stand over the chair at each dressing and see that we make no mistake in the shade. To prevent any such unpleasant consequence, a card on which are samples of the various tints we can obtain in the bleaching process. It costs from $25 to $40 to have the hair colored to the desired shade, and the process is very simple. Two ounces of peroxide of hydrogen applied with a stiff brush will turn very dark hair into the most beautiful Titian red, and repeated applications make the color so that one may graduate the shade very accurately.

Loads a Dual Life.

Miss Jeanette Gilder, the editor of The Critic, leads, as it were, a dual life. At home and in society she is entirely feminine, and talks wool and any other stuff that a sweet tempered woman would be. She is passionately fond of children, and is devoted to the pretty infants of her brother. But in her office her whole manner changes. She is a thorough woman of business, and during office hours works very hard. She suits her attire to her work, and wears a linen collar, cuffs, neck, throat and arms, she has adopted a costume almost entirely masculine. On the street in winter she wears a long, dark ulster, with a white handkerchief folded under the edges. In her office she wears dark skirts, kilted plainly to the waist, with no overdress; the waist is a half fitted sack coat, with the cuffs of the throat the same kind of a man, and with the same pockets. Under it is a close fitting waistcoat, in which are watch and chain; a plain standing collar and cravat complete the outfit.—Cincinnati Star. She even wears wide cuffs with heavy link buttons and a seal ring. Her brother, Richard Watson Gilder, is the editor of The Century.—Chicago Herald.

She Could Make Toast.

At a Woman's Exchange in a neigh boring city a lady thrown upon her own resources applied for employment and was asked what particular article of food was her specialty or in what style of fancy work she excelled. The applicant hesitated a little nervously.

"I don't do any fancy work," she replied, "and I do not recall any special success in the kitchen unless," she finished with another blush of shame, "My family have always praised my toast."

The manager was kind hearted, and there was a restaurant attached to the exchange.

"Go on hand for a few hours and see things," she said, "and we will try your toast." It was tried and found to be the perfection of the article, crisp yet tender, and of an even golden brown—something of a feat, as in fifty seems able to serve. Any one who took it upon ordered it again, and presently the exchange found its lunch room had a reputation for toast, and its maker was permanently installed.—Exchange.

The Latest in Chairs.

The latest thing of all in the way of chairs is the parlor suite made out of real Wilton rugs, much stuffed, or French tapestries may be employed for the covering instead. Plush, you know, is quite gone out of use for such purposes. Dainty French tables, with three or more shelves, inconceivably light, are a novelty; the shelves are shaped like shells, in pearl and abalone, and the legs are like twisted rods. French cabinets, too—you see the Parisian is in favor at present—will be all the rage. Some of them are astonishingly stable, too, with gold trellis, and bronze lattice, and hand painted panelling. — Washington Star.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

FASHIONS FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

School Dresses for Large Girls and Dresses and Slips for Small Girls—Pleasing Styles in Petticoats—Hints to Men on the Subject of Clothing.

Scotch and French plaids in dark colors, made with plaited waists and skirts, form desirable school dresses for girls of 12 to 14 years of age. The waists are usually finished with velvet plastron, collar, etc. For more dressy occasions young girls' gowns are made of cashmere, light weight cloth or other wool fabric, and trimmed with braiding, passementerie, embroidery or velvet ribbon. A favorite mode is an Empire waist and gathered skirt.

DRESSES FOR LITTLE GIRLS.

White dresses may be laid aside for wool ones, on the approach of cold weather, for little girls of three years and upward. These dresses are made with high, round waists and straight, gathered skirts; a sash of same material, or of silk, is tied at the back. In the illustration of two dresses, suited to girls of 6 and 7 years of age.

One of these dresses is made with a low bodice and skirt in tartan cheviot, and ornamented with braces and strawers in velvet ribbon of the dark shade of the pattern; similar velvet encircles the full sleeves, which, like the pleated front in plain material, matches one of the light tints of the checks. The remaining dress is of Brocke woolen, set off with cuffs and yoke of dark velvet. The full sleeves are gathered at the wrist, and the yoke is covered with surah silk, which is framed or bordered with pleated braces, likewise of surah silk.

Gentlemen's Clothing.

Double breasted sack coats will be fashionable for gentlemen's business suits this winter. These are made of black broad-ribbed diagonals or black Thibet or Cheviots, with a vest of the same, and colored trousers, either in checks or stripes. Business suits made all of one material are mostly of checked or striped Cheviots or tweeds, with either the new double breasted sack coat, the simpler single breasted sack or else the cutaway walking coat. Plain slate gray worsteds are also used for entire suits. Rough goods and the plain goods, such as dark blue or black Cheviots, are especially liked for the new double breasted sacks to be worn with slate gray or dark blue striped trousers that are cut straight and are of fair width. The extremely wide trousers of last year have given place to those of medium width for all but full dress.

Frock coat suits are considered the correct day dress suits, and are usually worn by the groom, best man and ushers at afternoon weddings. The coat is made of serge, and the striped trousers are now worn of quite light lavender or bluish gray shades.

Full dress suits, worn only in the evening, are little changed this fall. They are made throughout of fine diagonals and Thibets, and they may have an additional vest of white cashmere, trimmed with a slight vine of embroidery borders the white and the black vests. The swallow tail dress coat remains of the usual length, and is rolled low, with the shoulder seams well filled under the edges. In her office she wears dark skirts, kilted plainly to the waist, with no overdress; the waist is a half fitted sack coat, with the cuffs of the throat the same kind of a man, and with the same pockets. Under it is a close fitting waistcoat, in which are watch and chain; a plain standing collar and cravat complete the outfit. She even wears wide cuffs with heavy link buttons and a seal ring. Her brother, Richard Watson Gilder, is the editor of The Century.—Chicago Herald.

Silk Petticoats.

The fashion which prevailed to a considerable extent last winter of wearing silk petticoats under walking dresses in place of white muslin skirts, is a very sensible and convenient one, and this mode favor signals this season. These petticoats are made in a variety of styles, but are especially designed for warmth; a thin layer of cotton wadding being placed between the outside and the lining. This wadding is held in place by quilting.

SURAH SILK PETTICOAT.

In the cut is shown a somewhat elaborate affair, designed for show rather than for warmth. This petticoat is made in alternate stripes of surah silk and lace insertion. The plaited border around the bottom is edged with lace flouncing. The pointed bels is of silk, and the ribbon bows and ties match the silk in color. The petticoat is usually made of cardinal, cherry, pink or one of the shades of blue colored silk.

Fashion Notes.

Black costumes are again considered stylish and fashionable.

Astrakhan is a favorite trimming for tailor made coats and jackets.

Brocade is in favor for trains to dinner and reception gowns.

Velvet capes of cloth and of fur are largely worn.

Some of our young ladies are reviving an old fashion in hair dressing. Little curls are arranged around the face and head, being kept in place by side combs with fancy tops, the rest of the hair being combed upwards, and plaited or coiled in a crown at the top of the head.

Feather trimmings will be used the coming winter in every imaginable way. Marabout feathers and uncurled ostrich plumage will be especially favored.

Hot Air Inhalations in Consumption.

Science states that from experiments in a number of cases, Dr. B. L. Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., concludes that (1) the therapeutic values of hot air inhalations in phthisis is doubtful; and (2) the evidence obtained by careful observation of the cases of consumptives treated does not confirm the assumption that inhalations of heated air can either prevent the growth or check the progress of the bacilli of living individuals or diminish the virulence of the microbe when it has gained access to them.
